SIMPLE SILENCE

When His Eyes Opened

Chapter 1

It was the day of Avonsville socialite Avery Tate's wedding, but there was no groom in sight.

The groom, Elliot Foster, had been in a vegetative state since a car crash half a year ago. His doctors said that he was not going to make it until the end of the year.

In a grief-stricken act, Elliot's mother decided to arrange a marriage for her son before he met his untimely end.

The Fosters were one of the wealthiest families in Avonsville, but no socialite in her right mind would want to marry a man who was knocking on Death's door.

Avery sat at the vanity with her slender figure gracefully dressed in a white wedding gown. With her elegant makeup that brought out the exquisiteness of her pale complexion, she looked as delicate as a budding red rose.

Yet, there was an uneasiness in her almond-shaped eyes.

There was only another 20 minutes until the ceremony, and Avery was frantically sliding her fingers across her phone screen, anxiously awaiting a text message.

She had a boyfriend before she was forced to marry Elliot, and it was a terrible coincidence that he just happened to be Elliot's nephew, Cole Foster.

However, they had never made their relationship public.

Avery had texted Cole the night before in hopes that they would escape Avonsville together and elope. She had stayed up all night waiting, but she never got a reply.

She could wait no longer.

Avery rose from her seat, clenched her hand around her phone and made up an excuse to leave the room.

She hurried down the corridor and froze in her tracks as she walked past one of the rooms.

Avery heard the sound of her sister, Cassandra giggling delightedly through the slightly ajar room door.

“I bet my dumb sister is still waiting for you to go to her, Cole! Maybe you should go and butter her up a little more. What are we going to do if she changes her mind and decides to back out of the wedding?”

“Do you think she has a choice now that things have come this far?” Cole said as he held Cassandra in his arms and nuzzled his thin lips against her neck. “Even if she tries to back out now, the guards will drag her down the altar by the neck!”

Cassandra snickered wickedly, then said, “Avery will lose her mind if she finds out that you’ve been spending every night with me!”

Avery felt a violent buzzing in her head. She took a step back and almost lost her balance.

She clenched her fists around her gown and held back the tears in her eyes.

Her father was admitted into hospital when his company went under.

Her stepmother, Wanda Tate, turned on Avery and forced her to marry into the Foster family so she could reap the benefits. She had made it sound like the marriage was for the good of the Tate family, but Avery knew that this was Wanda’s way of getting rid of her!

What was least expected, was the fact that the boyfriend who said he loved her would turn around and betray her!

It was no wonder Cole urged her to carry on with the wedding. He said that he would marry her once Elliot died, but it was all a huge lie!

All of her hopes and dreams were crushed, and she could barely breathe.

As the voices in the room intensified, Avery clenched her fists, and her eyes turned ice cold.

For years, she endured her stepmother and stepsister's bullying for her father's sake. She suffered through all kinds of injustices for the sake of the family.

She was too stupid and naive.

Now, she would no longer allow them to take her for a fool!

She would take back all that was hers!

The wedding ceremony began shortly after.

Dressed in her wedding gown with a bouquet of flowers in her hands, Avery walked down the aisle as soft, romantic music played in the background.

She said her own vows and put on her own wedding ring.

The crowd looked puzzled, but she paid them no mind.

From now on, she was Mrs. Foster, and she was untouchable.

However, her new husband, who used to hold Avonsville in the palm of his hand, did not have much longer to live.

That night, Avery was sent to Elliot's mansion.

It was located in the heart of the city's affluent district and cost over 150 million dollars.

Before Avery could properly take in the mansion's layout, Mrs. Cooper had dragged her to the master bedroom.

Her eyes were immediately drawn to the man on the large bed. She slowly walked over and carefully watched his face.

Elliot's deep-set features stood out on his chiseled face, and he exuded a majestic aura of nobility.

His skin was unusually pale from spending all that time indoors, but his handsome face made one unable to take their eyes off of him.

If he were not sick, Avery would have never become his wife.

Before he had been bed-ridden from the car crash, Elliot was a powerful figure in the country of Aryadelle. Sterling Group, which he headed, was one of the country's top ten corporations.

He was rumored to be ruthless and tyrannical and had a legal business as well as deals with the underworld. Anyone who crossed him was bound to pay a hefty price.

Avery never thought that she would marry a man like Elliot.

The bedroom door opened while she was lost in thought.

It was Cole!

"I'm sorry, Avery! I was too busy today and just managed to come to see you," said Cole as he approached Avery with feigned sincerity on his face.

"I just married your uncle," Avery snapped coldly. "Do I need to teach you how to address me?"

"I know you're mad. I didn't elope with you because I didn't want you to suffer a difficult life. Uncle Elliot is practically a dead man, so you don't have to lift a finger while married to him. Once he's dead, I'll get a good lawyer and make sure you get his whole estate!"

Cole eagerly grabbed Avery's hands and said, "When that happens, everything he has will be ours!"

Avery recalled the earlier scene she had witnessed between Cole and Cassandra, and she felt a surge of disgust.

"Let go!" she yelled as she violently shook his hands off.

Her sudden cry took Cole by surprise. Was this the Avery he knew?

Avery was always gentle and kind, and she would never raise her voice at him.

Could she have found out about something?

Cole felt a hint of guilt and moved closer to Avery in hopes of explaining things to her.

The next moment, his eyes shifted to something behind Avery. His eyes widened in disbelief as if he had just seen a ghost.

"He... He..." Cole stammered.

Elliot, who was lying still in bed, began to slowly open his eyes.

Chapter 2

Under the lights of the crystal chandelier, Elliot's obsidian black eyes were deep, magnetic, and dangerous.

As always, it was a gaze that sent a chill down one's spine.

The color disappeared from Cole's face as he stumbled a few steps back.

"Avery... I mean, Aunt Avery... It's late, so I won't bother you and Uncle Elliot!"

Cole was drenched in a cold sweat as he frantically fled the room.

Avery's heart tightened as she watched his panic-stricken escape, and her body began to tremble uncontrollably.

Was Elliot awake? Was he not about to die?

She wanted to speak to him, but she could not find her voice. She wanted to take a closer look, but her feet were glued to the ground.

A wave of terror washed over her, and she could not help but back away, and she ran toward the stairs.

"Mrs. Cooper! Elliot's awake! He opened his eyes!" Avery cried.

Mrs. Cooper rushed up the stairs upon hearing Avery's voice.

"Master Elliot opens his eyes every day, Madam, but it doesn't mean he's awake. Look, he's not responding to anything we're saying right now," Mrs. Cooper said. She then sighed and added, "The doctors said that there's a very low probability for someone in a vegetative state to wake up."

Avery still felt a lingering uneasiness and said, "Can I leave the lights on at night? I'm a little scared."

"Of course," Mrs. Cooper said. "Go to bed soon. You have to visit the old mansion tomorrow. I'll wake you in the morning."

"Okay," Avery responded.

Once Mrs. Cooper walked off, Avery changed into her pajamas and got into bed.

She sat stiffly next to Elliot and watched his striking features. She stretched her hand out and waved it in front of his eyes.

"What's on your mind, Elliot?" she asked, but there was no response.

Avery felt a sudden pang of sadness. Compared to what he had to go through, her own pain was nothing.

“I hope you wake up soon, Elliot. If that scumbag Cole gets his cold sleazy hands on all your money, you won’t be able to die in peace.”

Elliot slowly closed his eyes after that.

Avery stared at him in shock as her heart began to thump violently in her chest.

Some people are conscious even when in a vegetative state. Could he have heard what she just said?

She lay down next to him, still feeling unsettled. After a while, she heard the sound of her own sigh.

She was officially Mrs. Foster, and no one would bully her— for now.

How would the Foster family deal with her once Elliot was dead?

Avery’s heart tightened at the thought.

She had to use her position as Elliot’s wife to get back everything that she had lost while he was still conscious!

Everyone who had wronged her before would pay the price!

At eight in the morning the next day, Mrs. Cooper took Avery to the old mansion to visit Elliot’s mother, Rosalie Foster.

The whole Foster family was in the living room when Avery arrived, and she proceeded to greet and serve drinks to each family member.

Rosalie looked pleased with Avery’s manners. An obedient child would be easier to control.

“How did you sleep last night, Avery?” asked Rosalie.

Avery’s cheeks flushed as she said, “Quite well.”

“How was Elliot? He wasn’t a bother, was he?”

Avery recalled Elliot’s handsome but unresponsive face and said sympathetically, “He didn’t move at all. It didn’t bother me.”

He might have been unmoving, but his body was warm. While she was deep in sleep, she held him like a pillow.

She was startled when she woke up in the middle of the night and realized what she was doing.

“I have something for you, Avery,” Rosalie said as she opened up a purple gift box and passed it to Avery. “This bracelet complements your skin tone. Do you like it?”

Avery did not dare to reject the old woman in front of the whole family and immediately accepted her gift.

“I do. Thank you.”

“I know things are hard for you, Avery. With Elliot the way he is now, he can’t treat you well. However, there’s a way for you to benefit from all of this,” said Rosalie as she began to reveal her plan. “Elliot is running out of time. He was always busy with work and never had the time to date. He didn’t even have the chance to have a child of his own...”

Avery stiffened upon hearing Rosalie’s words.

A child of his own?

Was Rosalie thinking of having her give birth to Elliot’s child?

“I’d like you to give Elliot a child and continue his bloodline,” Rosalie finished.

Avery was stunned, and everyone else in the room had an equally shocked expression on their faces.

“Mother, Elliot has been sick for a while. It’s possible that he’s infertile,” said Elliot’s eldest brother, Henry Foster.

Elliot was not dead yet, but everyone already had their eyes on his estate.

Rosalie chuckled and said, “I have a trick or two up my sleeve with the doctors, of course. With Elliot’s vast estate, how could he not have an heir? I’ll have Avery give Elliot a child. Even a daughter will do.”

At that moment, everyone’s eyes immediately fell on Avery.

Chapter 3

Avery felt restless and uneasy.

“You’re still in school, right, Avery? Your studies will be affected if you get pregnant now,” said Henry’s wife.

Henry immediately agreed and said, “That’s right! Avery is still young. I doubt she’s willing to give up on her studies and raise a child at home!”

Rosalie knew what her son and daughter-in-law were thinking. This was also the reason why she was adamant about ensuring Elliot had an heir.

“Are you willing to have Elliot’s child, Avery?” Rosalie asked Avery. She did not hold back. “You should know that you and the child will inherit all of Elliot’s estate in the future. It’s a fortune large enough for you and the child to live a comfortable life.”

“I’ll do it,” Avery responded without hesitation.

She was willing to try anything to ensure Cole did not get a dime of Elliot’s money.

Besides, even if she was unwilling, the Foster family was powerful enough to force her into it.

Rosalie beamed from ear to ear after hearing Avery's answer.

"That's wonderful! I knew you were different from the other stupid women out there. They thought that they wouldn't be able to benefit if Eliot was dying! Ha!"

Once tea was over, Avery walked out of the old mansion and prepared to return home.

Cole stopped her before she could leave.

The morning sun was shining, and the cicadas were chirping.

Avery felt sick to her stomach at the sight of Cole's face.

"Please take the gifts home first, Mrs. Cooper," Avery said.

Mrs. Cooper nodded, then walked off with the gifts.

Cole made sure no one was around, then said, "You're breaking my heart, Avery! You never let me touch you the entire time we were dating, but now you've agreed to give birth to Uncle Elliot's kid!"

"Giving him a child means getting his estate. Why wouldn't I do it?" Avery snickered as she deliberately chose words that would hurt him.

Sure enough, Cole was agitated.

"It's not a bad idea, but you can have my kid instead and say it's Uncle Elliot's. It would still be a Foster. Even if my grandmother gets angry, she would never make you abort it."

The sneer on Avery's face instantly vanished.

“It’s good to be ambitious, Cole, but ambition without brains can be a dangerous thing,” Avery warned. “I heard that the people by Elliot’s side are a ruthless bunch. As long as he’s breathing, his minions will be waiting for him to wake up. Do you really think they’ll let you go if they find out that I was pregnant with your child?”

Avery’s words were like a wave of ice-cold water, chilling Cole to his core.

He knew better than anyone how heartless his uncle’s people could be.

They kept a low profile after Elliot’s accident, but it did not mean that they were gone.

“I’m just kidding! Whether it’s his or mine, the kid will still be a Foster. When Uncle Elliot dies, I will definitely treat his child like my own,” Cole said as he desperately tried to defend himself.

Avery sighed, then said, “Your uncle’s child would be your cousin.”

Cole looked like he had just swallowed a fly.

“What if he never dies? Will you wait for me forever?” Avery retorted.

Seeing him speechless, Avery chuckled mockingly and said, “I’m off. Your grandmother’s sent a doctor to see me to your uncle’s place.”

...

When Avery returned to Elliot’s mansion, she was immediately taken to the hospital for a medical checkup by two doctors.

If she was ovulating, they would extract the eggs from her body. Otherwise, they would give her a shot to stimulate ovulation.

“There’s no need to worry, Mrs. Foster. This might hurt a little, but once you give birth to Mr. Foster’s child, your position in the Foster family will be secured,” consoled one of the female doctors.

Avery lay on the bed as her heartbeat quickened.

“How long will it take to make that happen?”

Chapter 4

“It’s hard to say. If we’re lucky, it would take three to four months. Otherwise, it might take forever,” said the doctor. She paused, then added, “You’re young, so I’m sure this will go smoothly.”

Time flew by in an instant. An autumn shower later, fall had arrived in Avonsville.

Avery emerged from the bathroom after a shower.

She sat by the bed, took out the new face cream she had bought that day, and massaged it onto her skin.

“Hey, Elliot, do you want me to put some of this on you? The weather has been dry lately,” Avery said as she walked over to Elliot’s side.

She sat on the edge of the bed, then spread the cream on Elliot’s face with her fingers.

Elliot’s eyes suddenly shot open. His eyes were a deep shade of amber, and they shone like gemstones.

The sparkle in his gaze shocked Avery so much that her breathing turned heavy.

It was not unusual for her to see Elliot open his eyes every day, but she was still startled every time it happened.

“Am I rubbing too hard? I’m not using that much pressure, though!” Avery said as she continued to gently massage his face.

At the same time, she began to mumble to herself.

“I read online that the reason you’ve never had a girlfriend before must be because of your body... But I don’t think you’re that bad! You have strong arms... and these muscular legs...”

Once she was done putting the cream on him, she tapped her hands on Elliot’s arms and legs.

Her touch was light and was not enough to get a reaction out of anyone.

However, Elliot’s reaction made her eyes instantly widen.

This was because... She thought she heard the sound of a man’s voice.

“Was that you, Elliot? Did you say something just now?” Avery exclaimed as she sprung off the bed. Her almond-shaped eyes fixed themselves on him in an intense stare.

Elliot stared back at her.

There was something different about his gaze. When he used to open his eyes before, they were lifeless and empty. This time, the eyes staring at Avery had emotions in them, even if those emotions bore a hint of anger, hatred, and suspicion.

“Mrs. Cooper!” Avery cried as she rushed downstairs like a cat whose tail had been stepped on. “Mrs. Cooper, Elliot’s awake! He just spoke! He’s really awake!”

Her cheeks were flushed, her heartbeat was irregular, and her chest rose and fell rapidly.

Elliot was awake.

Avery was sure that he was awake. Not only were his eyes open, but he had also spoken to her.

Even though his voice was husky and he spoke slowly, it was threatening.

Elliot had asked her who she was.

Avery's mind instantly went blank.

Everyone around her had told her that he was going to die soon, so she had never thought about what she would do if he ever woke up.

Mrs. Cooper, the doctor, and the bodyguard rushed over upon hearing Avery's cries.

The mansion was filled with people half an hour later.

Everyone was in shock. None of them thought that Elliot would ever wake up.

"I knew you would wake up, Elliot!" Rosalie exclaimed through tears of happiness.

"It's good that you're awake now, Elliot," said Henry. "You have no idea how worried all of us were, especially Mother. She was so upset that all of her hair turned gray."

After the doctor was done checking on Elliot's condition, he turned to Rosalie and said, "This truly is a miracle! There were no signs of recovery when I checked on him last time. Now that Mr. Foster can speak, we just have to follow up with rehabilitation treatment, and he will be back to normal in no time."

The good news came so suddenly that Rosalie could not bear it. Her legs buckled, and she fainted from shock.

Henry caught his mother and carried her out of the room.

The doctor, Mrs. Cooper, and the bodyguard remained in the room while Avery stood at the door in stunned silence. She was too afraid to enter.

The chilling aura that Elliot exuded upon regaining consciousness was terrifying.

He was sitting up with his back against the headboard. His eyes were as sharp as a hawk's as they shot an icy glare at Avery.

"Who is she?" he said in a deep, intimidating voice.

The doctor was so scared that he barely had the courage to take a breath.

Mrs. Cooper bowed her head and explained, "Master Elliot, she is the wife that Madam Rosalie arranged for you while you were sick. Her name is—"

Elliot's thin lips parted slightly, and his voice was dull and indifferent as he spoke, "Get her out of here!"

Chapter 5

Avery was so startled that she could not help but take a few steps back. Elliot was like a savage beast that had awakened from a deep slumber. There was nothing scary about him when he was asleep. Now that he was awake, however, there was a menacing air of danger around him.

Mrs. Cooper walked out of the room and shut the door.

She saw Avery who looked like a deer caught in headlights and said gently, "Don't be afraid, Madam. Master Elliot just woke up, so he might not be able to accept the news yet. Let's get you to the guest room for tonight, and we'll talk in the morning. Madam Rosalie loves you, so she might just be on your side."

Avery's mind was in a frenzy. She had thought about how Elliot might die any day, but she never thought about the possibility that he might regain consciousness.

"Mrs. Cooper, my things are still in the room..." Avery said as she glanced at the door of the master bedroom, hoping to enter and take all of her belongings.

Judging by the vicious glare that Elliot had aimed at her earlier, she had a strong feeling that he was not going to accept her as his wife.

She needed to be ready to leave the mansion at any time.

Mrs. Cooper let out a sigh and said, "Let's leave it there for now if it's nothing too important. I'll get it for you tomorrow."

"Okay," Avery responded, then asked, "Are you afraid of him?"

"I've worked for him for a long time," said Mrs. Cooper. "He may look scary, but he has not made things difficult for me."

Avery grunted in response, then spoke no further.

She might be his wife, but strictly speaking, this was their first meeting. It was understandable that he might act hostile toward her.

Avery did not sleep well that night. Her mind was filled with a million chaotic thoughts.

Elliot's recovery had completely disrupted the pace of her life.

At eight in the morning the next day, Mrs. Cooper retrieved all of Avery's belongings from the master bedroom and sent them to the guest room she was in.

“It’s time for breakfast, Madam,” said Mrs. Cooper. “Master Elliot is already in the dining room. You should go there too! Talk to him and get to know each other a little.”

“I don’t think he wants to get to know me,” Avery grimaced.

“You still need to have breakfast. Come on, now! He didn’t even get mad when I told him that Madam Rosalie likes you! His attitude might be a little better today,” said Mrs. Cooper.

When Avery arrived at the dining room, her eyes fell on the wheelchair-bound Elliot.

He was able to move his arms thanks to routine muscle training.

He sat up straight despite being in a wheelchair. He would surely be tall and strapping if he stood up.

Filled with uneasiness, Avery sat herself down at the dining table as Mrs. Cooper set up a place for her.

Elliot did not say a word even as Avery picked up her fork.

She could not help but sneak a peek at him, which immediately garnered Elliot’s attention.

His eyes were like bottomless black holes that could swallow a person whole.

“Hey... I’m... I’m Avery Tate...” Avery stammered anxiously.

Elliot picked up his cup of coffee and leisurely sipped at it. His voice was dull and indifferent as he said, “I heard that you might be pregnant with my child.”

Avery’s heart tightened, and she immediately lost her appetite.

“Do you prefer a surgical or medical abortion?”

His tone was calm as he said those cruel words.

The color disappeared from Avery's face, and her mind went blank.

Mrs. Cooper felt that the topic was too eerie, so she forwent etiquette and said, "Master Elliot, the child was Madam Rosalie's idea. It had nothing to do with Madam Avery."

"Don't use my mother to pressure me," Elliot snapped as he shot a glare at Mrs. Cooper, causing her to lower her head and shut her mouth.

"Elliot—" Avery began to speak but was cut off by Elliot.

"Who gave you permission to say my name?"

Avery was taken aback, then said, "What should I call you otherwise? Should I call you 'Honey'?"

Elliot pursed his thin lips and rage seeped into his eyes.

Before he could lose his temper, Avery quickly tried to calm him down.

"I'm not pregnant. I got my period. Ask the cleaning lady, Mrs. Wilson if you don't believe me. I asked her for a tampon this morning."

Elliot remained silent. He picked up his cup of coffee and took a sip.

Avery felt her stomach ache and began to eat her breakfast without a second thought.

She finished her meal hurriedly, then got up to go get her bag from the room so she could get out of the house.

Being under the same roof as Elliot made her uncomfortable.

"Get your documents ready. We'll be divorced soon," Elliot said coldly.

Avery stopped in her tracks, but she was not surprised.

“Are we going right now?”

“In a couple of days,” Elliot replied.

Rosalie was so shocked the night before that she had to be admitted to the hospital for hypertension.

Elliot wanted to wait until his mother’s condition was stable before discussing the divorce.

“Okay, just let me know when,” Avery said before she rushed back to her room.

She reemerged with her bag about five minutes later.

Unexpectedly, she saw a familiar silhouette in the living room.

It was Cole.

He looked like a scared dog with its tail tucked between its legs as he stood respectfully by Elliot’s wheelchair.

“Uncle Elliot, my parents are visiting Grandma at the hospital, so Dad had me come see you,” Cole said as he placed a box of supplements on the coffee table.

Elliot shot a look at the bodyguard next to him.

The man understood his employer’s signal. He picked up the goods from the table and tossed them out.

“Uncle Elliot!” Cole cried in a panic. “These are the best supplements and vitamins, but I can get you something else if you don’t like them... Please don’t be mad!”

As Cole finished his sentence, another bodyguard kicked the back of his knees and sent him kneeling on the ground.

Avery was so petrified that she held back her breath.

She did not know what was going on, but Elliot was treating his own nephew with such violence.

“My dear nephew, you must be disappointed that I’m awake now,” Elliot said as he held a cigarette between his fingers.

The bodyguard pulled out a lighter and lit it for him.

Avery was dumbfounded!

He had just woken up the night before, but he was already drinking coffee and smoking cigarettes the next morning. Did he think he was invincible?

Cole’s knees were in intense pain. He began to sob and said, “Of course, I’m happy that you’re awake... I always hoped that you would—”

“Are you contradicting me?” Elliot said as he raised his thick brows. His tone might seem nonchalant, but every single word was filled with murderous intent. “Aren’t you going to admit to bribing my lawyer?”

He deliberately flicked the ash of his cigarette onto Cole’s face. He then snapped coldly, “Leave! If you p*ss me off again, I’ll feed you to the dogs!”

Cole was a panic-stricken mess as he stumbled out of the house.

Avery could not settle down after witnessing the scene.

She was scared.

She was terrified of Elliot.

Even a man as despicable as Cole looked like a buffoon next to him.

Avery did not dare get on Elliot’s bad side, and she did not want to attract his attention either.

She clutched her bag and hurried out of the house.

She was going to the hospital for a checkup that day.

Her period had arrived late, and it was an unusually small amount of blood.

It was the first time this had happened to her.

Avery arrived at the hospital and explained the situation to the doctor who then arranged an ultrasound for her.

She received the results of her ultrasound about an hour later.

The scan showed no signs of bleeding in her womb.

It also showed that there was a gestational sac inside of her... She was pregnant!

Chapter 6

Measures had to be taken to save the baby because of the bleeding. The news hit Avery like a ton of bricks. She was in a panicked frenzy.

“Doctor, what if I don’t want to keep the baby?”

She was about to be divorced from Elliot, so now was not the time for her to be pregnant with his child.

The doctor looked thoughtfully at Avery, then said, “Why don’t you want it? Do you have any idea how many people can’t have babies even if they wanted to?”

Avery lowered her gaze as she fell silent.

“Why didn’t your husband come with you?” asked the doctor. “Even if you don’t want the baby, you should discuss it with him first.”

Avery's brows furrowed.

Seeing her reaction, the doctor picked up her medical records. The doctor looked at Avery and said, "You're only 21? You're not married, then?"

"I... I might as well not be!" Avery said. They were about to get a divorce anyway.

"Surgical abortion isn't a simple procedure. Even if you want to go through with it, I can't fit you in today. Go home and really think about it. Whatever your relationship with your boyfriend is, the child is innocent."

The doctor passed Avery's medical records to her, then said, "Now that you're showing signs of bleeding, if we don't do something about it, it's hard to say if we'll be able to keep the baby anyway."

Avery's heart softened. "What do we have to do to save it?" she asked.

"Didn't you want an abortion? Have you changed your mind?" said the doctor. "You're a pretty girl, so your child is bound to be a beautiful baby. If you want to keep the baby, I'll prescribe some medication for you. You'll need bedrest for a week, then come for a follow-up after that."

The blazing sun made it difficult for Avery to keep her eyes open as she walked out of the hospital. Her back was drenched in a cold sweat, and her legs felt heavy.

She felt lost. She did not know where to go, nor did she know who to talk to.

The only thing she was certain about was that Elliot could not find out about this.

Otherwise, he would make his bodyguards drag her to the operating table.

She had not made up her mind about keeping the baby. Her mind was a mess, and she wanted to make a decision after she calmed down.

She hailed a cab and made her way to her Uncle Ron's house.

Since her parents' divorce, Avery's mother, Laura Jensen, had moved into her brother's home.

Ron Jensen's family was not as wealthy as the Tates, but they were still considered well-off.

"Avery! Did you come alone?" said Ron's wife, Miranda Jensen. Her expression instantly turned cold when she noticed Avery had arrived empty-handed.

"I heard that you brought a whole bunch of high-end gifts the last time you visited your father's home. I suppose etiquette isn't important when it's not your own home that you're visiting."

Miranda had planned to properly entertain Avery when she had arrived, but seeing her guest show up empty-handed made her turn frosty.

Avery was taken aback. "I'm so sorry, Aunt Miranda. I didn't mean to. I'll make sure to prepare something the next time I come over," said Avery.

"Forget it! From the looks of it, you've pretty much been kicked out of the Foster house," Miranda said mockingly. "I heard that Elliot Foster is awake. If he cared about you at all, you wouldn't be running over here crying for your mommy, would you?"

Avery's cheeks flushed as she was chastised.

Seeing her daughter getting bullied, Laura immediately said, "Even if my daughter was kicked out of the Foster family, you should not mock her for it."

“I was just speaking the truth! Do you really need to be so touchy, Laura?” Miranda snapped. “Don’t forget whose house you’re living in. Go ahead and move out if you have what it takes!”

Laura was livid, but she knew she could not win against Miranda.

Avery’s heart twisted in her chest as she watched the scene before her.

She knew that Uncle Ron’s home was not as ideal for her mother as living at the Tate house, but she figured it probably was not too bad.

She had no idea that things were so unpleasant between Laura and Miranda.

“Maybe you should move out and rent a place somewhere, Mom? I have some money on me...” Avery insisted earnestly.

Laura nodded, then said, “Okay, I’ll go pack my things now.”

Avery and Laura emerged from Ron’s house in under half an hour and got into a cab.

“Don’t worry about me, Avery,” Laura said with a bitter smile. “I managed to save up some money over the years. I only stayed there because your grandmother was sick and wanted me to take care of her. If it weren’t for her, I would have moved out a long time ago.”

Avery lowered her gaze, then said after a moment’s pondering, “Aunt Miranda wasn’t wrong, you know? I’ll be getting a divorce from Elliot in a couple of days.”

Laura was stunned, then she immediately began to console her daughter.

“It’s okay. You haven’t graduated yet. Now, you can properly prepare for graduation after the divorce.”

“Yeah,” Avery responded as she rested her head against Laura’s shoulder. “I won’t go back to the Tate house after the divorce. Let’s live together, Mom!”

She had no plans to tell her mother about her pregnancy.

Laura would be worried sick if she found out.

When Avery returned to the Foster mansion that night, the large living room was engulfed in pin drop silence.

Mrs. Cooper suddenly appeared out of nowhere and scared Avery into a cold sweat.

“Have you had dinner, Madam? I left some food for you. I also got you some tampons.”

“Thanks, Mrs. Cooper. I already ate. Why is the house so quiet? Is he not home?” Avery asked before walking into her room.

“Master Elliot hasn’t returned. The doctor told him to rest at home but he wouldn’t listen,” Mrs. Cooper sighed. “He’s always had a mind of his own. No one can order him around.”

Avery nodded slightly.

She had a deep impression of Elliot despite the few encounters they had shared.

He was rebellious, ruthless, and insufferably arrogant.

The small iota of sympathy that she felt for him when he was sick had vanished completely after he regained consciousness.

Avery tossed and turned in bed that night.

She thought of the child growing inside of her. Not only did she not feel calmer than she felt at the hospital earlier, but she was feeling even more restless.

The next morning arrived in the blink of an eye.

Avery did not want to bump into Elliot, so she did not leave her room for a while.

Mrs. Cooper knocked on her door at 9.30 a.m. and said, "Master Elliot has just left, Madam. You can come have breakfast now."

Avery did not expect Mrs. Cooper to know exactly what she was thinking, and her cheeks turned red.

She received a phone call after breakfast.

It was a classmate from college who was offering her a job translating manus.

"I know you're busy with your graduation thesis right now, but this manu should be a piece of cake for you. The pay is really good, but they need it done before noon today."

Avery was short on money, so she agreed after only a moment's contemplation.

She finished translating the manu by 11.30 a.m. and was about to send the file to her classmate after checking it twice and making sure there were no mistakes.

Suddenly, her laptop screen began to flicker.

Avery stared in horror as the screen turned blue, then black... Her laptop completely crashed!

It was a good thing she had saved the file on a USB drive.

She sighed in relief before she pulled the USB drive out of the laptop.

She needed to find another computer to send the file on the USB drive to her classmate.

“Mrs. Cooper, there’s something wrong with my laptop, but I’m in a hurry. Is there another computer in the house? I just need to send a file.”

“There is, but it’s Master Elliot’s.”

Avery felt her heart freeze.

She would not dare use Elliot’s computer.

“It’s just one file. That shouldn’t take long, right?” When Mrs. Cooper saw how anxious Avery looked, she said, “Master Elliot might be scary, but he’s not all bad. Since you’re in a rush, I doubt he’ll blame you.”

Avery took a look at the time.

It was already 11.50 a.m., and she had to have the file sent out before noon.

Elliot’s study was located on the second floor of the mansion.

The whole time that he had been bed-ridden, apart from the cleaning ladies, no one else entered his study.

Avery was terrified of getting caught by Elliot, but at the same time, she really wanted to get that easy money.

She needed the cash.

If she decided to get an abortion, she needed to save up enough for the surgery.

The child was not hers alone. It also belonged to Elliot.

Borrowing his computer could be counted as her contribution to the medical fees.

Avery entered the study, walked straight to the desk, and turned on the computer.

Just as she was wondering what to do if the computer was password protected, the screen lit up in a flash.

Chapter 7

The computer was not password protected, and it started up in no time. It was so quick that Avery's heart skipped a couple of beats.

She took a deep breath, plugged in the USB drive, then logged into her email.

Once she was logged in, she quickly sent the file to her classmate.

It was strange how smoothly everything went.

She managed to successfully send off the file before noon.

Avery did not dare linger another moment in the study. While she was about to shut down the computer, her hand trembled and she accidentally opened up a file.

The file suddenly popped up on the screen, and she stared curiously at the contents with wide eyes.

Avery emerged from the study five minutes later.

Mrs. Cooper let out a sigh of relief and said, "See? Didn't I tell you that Master Elliot wouldn't be back anytime soon?"

Avery was a mess of emotions. It felt like she had discovered Elliot's dark secret.

She should not have used his computer in the first place.

"Are there surveillance cameras in the study, Mrs. Cooper?" Avery asked.

"There's one outside the study," replied Mrs. Cooper.

Avery's face turned pale.

"Then he's sure to find out that I was in his study."

"Just tell him about it yourself when he gets back later. You took less than ten minutes. I don't think he'll be mad," consoled Mrs. Cooper.

Avery's phone beeped, and she pulled it out to see a notification for a wire transfer.

Her classmate banked in three hundred and twenty dollars to her account.

She did not expect the pay to be that high. It only took her two hours, and she already made three hundred and twenty dollars!

The money instantly calmed the anxiety in her heart.

She did not want to use Elliot's computer, and she did not mean to see what she saw on it.

She should explain everything to him when he got home and prayed that he would not be angry.

She already agreed to the divorce, anyway. Once that was over, their paths would never cross again.

Whatever secrets he had would have nothing to do with her.

Avery returned to her room after lunch and shut the door.

She sat in front of her vanity, glanced down at her flat belly, and whispered softly, "I don't want to get rid of you either, little one, but your life will be much more difficult than mine is right now if I keep you..."

Perhaps it was due to the drowsiness that came with the pregnancy, but before long she had fallen asleep at the table.

Frantic footsteps outside the room jolted Avery up from her sleep that afternoon.

Before she could pull herself together, the room door burst open.

"Madam," Mrs. Cooper said with a fearful expression on her face, "Did you touch something on Master Elliot's computer?"

Avery's heart was in her mouth.

"Is... Is he home? Did he find out?"

Mrs. Cooper was a nervous wreck as she said, "Didn't you say you were just sending a file? Master Elliot said you touched something else. He's throwing a fit in the study right now! I really don't know how I can get you out of this, Madam!"

Avery was so anxious that her heart thumped violently in her chest.

There was only one thought on her mind at that moment: She was dead!

At this rate, she might not even need the divorce because Elliot was probably going to kill her.

Avery's eyes welled up with tears.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Cooper. I didn't mean to mess with his stuff. My hands were shaking when I tried to shut it down, and I accidentally opened it up. I swear, I only took one look then shut it down..."

Mrs. Cooper believed her, but there was nothing she could do.

“He blew up at me just now. I might not even be able to keep this job for much longer.”

Avery’s heart was racing. She was willing to accept her punishment, but she could not drag Mrs. Cooper down with her.

She walked out of the room and decided to explain herself to Elliot.

At that moment, the elevator doors opened on the first floor, and a bodyguard pushed Elliot’s wheelchair out.

The mansion only had three floors, but they had an elevator installed.

Avery cautiously watched the wheelchair-bound Elliot. His expression was dark and terrifying, and there was a raging fire in his eyes.

She had guessed that he would be mad about what happened, but she had not expected him to be this furious.

“I’m sorry, Elliot,” Avery said through the lump in her throat. “My laptop stopped working this morning, so I used your computer without permission. This had nothing to do with Mrs. Cooper. She tried to stop me, but I didn’t listen to her.”

She put all of the blame on herself.

The bodyguard stopped pushing Elliot’s chair when they reached the living room, and Avery raised her gaze to look at him.

Elliot’s eyes were slightly reddened. It looked like she really ticked him off.

Avery’s voice was nasally when she spoke again, “I’m sorry.”

“You saw everything, didn’t you,” Elliot said in a low and deep voice that chilled her to the bone.

His hands were clasped together, seemingly relaxed, but his knuckles had turned white.

If he were not stuck to the wheelchair at that moment, he might just break her neck.

This stupidly reckless woman!

Did she really think she was the mistress of the house?

How dare she enter his study and touch his things?

D*mn her!

Avery nodded before violently shaking her head and saying, "I barely remember any of it now. I only took one look then shut it down! I honestly didn't mean to breach your privacy. I was just so nervous at the time. I don't know how I somehow opened the file—"

"Shut up!" Elliot scowled. Hearing her excuses disgusted him even more.

"Go to your room! Don't take one step out of there until the divorce!"

Avery swallowed back the explanations she was about to give.

She turned and quickly returned to her room.

She could clearly feel the loathing that Elliot felt for her.

Once Avery's door was shut, Elliot's adam's apple rolled in his throat.

"No meals for her," he said to Mrs. Cooper.

Was he putting her on house arrest and starving her to death while he was at it?

Mrs. Cooper felt bad for Avery but did not dare disobey.

At the Foster house, Elliot's word was the law of the land.

Two days later, Rosalie's blood pressure was stable, and she was allowed to be discharged from the hospital.

She immediately made her way to Elliot's mansion.

"How's your health, Elliot? What did the doctor say? When will you be able to stand up again?" Rosalie chirped in high spirits as she smiled gently at her son.

"The doctor said I'm recovering quite well," Elliot replied. "There's something I'd like to discuss with you, Mother."

The smile on Rosalie's face died a bit as she said, "Is this about your marriage? I was the one who arranged it. Avery is a lovely girl, and I like her quite a lot... That's right, where is she? You didn't chase her out, did you?"

"I didn't," Elliot said, then signaled Mrs. Cooper.

Mrs. Cooper instantly headed in the direction of Avery's room.

It had been two days since she had had anything to eat or drink. Mrs. Cooper wondered how she was doing.

Chapter 8

Rosalie stood looking into the room from the open door. Avery was curled up in a ball with her arms around her knees as she leaned against the wall.

Her hair was down, and it was a mess.

She looked up in a daze when she heard the commotion at the door.

“Avery! What happened to you?” Rosalie exclaimed. When she saw Avery’s face, which was white as a sheet of paper, her blood pressure instantly shot up.

“How did you become like this? Was it... Was it Elliot? Is he abusing you?”

At this point, there was a slight tremble in Rosalie’s voice.

Avery had lost a lot of weight.

Her face was void of any color, and there were faint cracks on her dry lips.

Her chest rose and fell unsteadily. She wanted to speak, but she could not find her voice.

Mrs. Cooper walked over with a glass of warm milk and passed it to Avery.

“Have a glass of milk first, Madam. Don’t be afraid. Now that Madam Rosalie is here, you can eat.”

Rosalie’s brows furrowed furiously as she said, “What’s that? Elliot isn’t letting Avery eat? How did she get so skinny? Is he trying to starve her to death?”

The incident shocked Rosalie to the core.

She stormed over to the living room and stood before her son.

“Elliot, Avery is the wife that I arranged for you. What would you have me think if you tormented her this way?”

“She should be punished for her mistakes. If it weren’t for your sake, do you think I would have allowed her to stay until now?” Elliot said in a cold, nonchalant voice.

The way he saw it, starving her for two days was a lot more merciful than breaking her arm.

She touched something she was not supposed to. She crossed his line. How could he easily forgive her?

“Mistake? What did Avery do?” asked Rosalie.

In her eyes, Avery was a sensible, well-behaved, and observant girl. She would never be stupid enough to deliberately anger Elliot.

Elliot pursed his lips and did not answer his mother.

“I know... I know why you never wanted to get married and have children,” said Rosalie. “Elliot, it’s because I know too well exactly what you’re thinking that I can’t allow you to do this. Avery is a good girl. It’s fine if you don’t love her. You just have to stay together, even if you’re only husband and wife in name!”

At this point, Rosalie’s eyes welled up with tears of agony.

She became even more worked up the more she spoke, and her eyes turned bloodshot.

Elliot was about to retaliate when he noticed his mother’s condition. He signaled to his bodyguard to hold on to her.

“As long as I’m sure, you can’t chase Avery out! Divorce isn’t out of the question... You just have to find a girl you like. I will not allow you to spend the rest of your life alone!” Rosalie said as the bodyguard helped her to the couch. Her head was spinning even more.

She could feel herself running out of breath as she said those last words.

Thirty seconds later, Rosalie’s head tilted and she fell back onto the couch.

The old Mrs. Foster, who just had been discharged that morning, was then rushed back to the hospital.

Elliot did not expect his mother to be so stubborn. He also did not expect her to be so furious.

He had thought that the matter with Avery could be settled quickly, but it seemed that there were some obstacles.

He did not only hate Avery, but he also refused all women.

It was impossible that he would find another woman for the sake of divorcing Avery.

In the guest bedroom, Avery sipped on the glass of milk as her condition improved slightly.

She heard everything that was happening outside the room.

Elliot did not say much, but he still managed to provoke his mother to the point of fainting.

Mrs. Cooper brought Avery a bowl of oatmeal. She then picked up a brush and began combing through Avery's disheveled hair.

"Did you hear that, Madam? As long as Madam Rosalie is around, Master Elliot won't kick you out," consoled Mrs. Cooper.

Avery had starved for two days. She was tired and out of energy, but there was one thing she was certain about.

"I want a divorce," she said in a husky voice, but each of her words was clear. "Whether he wants to or not, I will absolutely divorce him."

She did not want to linger in this hell hole for another second!

She never wanted to see that devil, Elliot Foster, ever again!

"Don't be upset, Madam," Mrs. Cooper said awkwardly. "Have some oatmeal. I'll go and take a look at what's going on."

When Mrs. Cooper arrived at the door, she saw the bodyguard pushing Elliot over in his wheelchair and immediately said, "Madam's condition isn't stable right now, Master Elliot."

Elliot's expression was no different than usual, but his eyes were as cold as ice.

When Mrs. Cooper moved aside, the bodyguard pushed Elliot to the room's entrance.

Avery's head shot up suddenly, and her eyes met his.

It was as if there was the crackling of sparks in the air.

"Let's get a divorce, Elliot!" Avery said as she put down the bowl of oatmeal.

She picked up her luggage and walked over to him.

She had packed her things two nights ago and was prepared to leave the place at any moment.

"Go marry someone you actually like!" she said in a much tougher tone.

Elliot's eyes narrowed as he said, "You hate me that much. Do you not think you were wrong?"

"I was wrong. I shouldn't have used your computer," Avery said as she tried to control her breathing. "I've already gotten my punishment, so we should be even. Do you have the divorce papers with you? If not, I can go get them made right now..."

Seeing the way she could not wait to distance herself from him, Elliot drawled, "Did I say that your punishment was over?"

Avery was stunned. It was as if she just took a blow to the head.

“Since it’s so agonizing for you to stay by my side, you’ll continue to be Mrs. Foster!”

Elliot’s tone showed that the matter was not up for discussion. It was an order.

“We will get divorced, just not right now,” he added before his bodyguard pushed him away.

Avery watched his back as she gritted her teeth in distaste.

Who was he to tell her whether to go through with the divorce or not?

Did he think that just because he would not, she would not find a way?

Avery was hit by a sudden dizziness. Her ankles went weak, and it felt like all the energy was sucked out of her.

She immediately went to lie down on the bed.

Once she was lying down, she slowly began to calm down.

It was not like Elliot said he would not divorce her. His mother was not well, so he was just holding back for now.

If that were the case, she just needed to be patient and wait.

Avery recovered a week later.

She went to the hospital for a checkup after breakfast.

She had a strong feeling that she had lost the baby.

Elliot had starved her for two days. She did not have a bite to eat and only had tap water to drink when she was thirsty.

Under those circumstances, she could only try to survive. The child in her womb was sure to have starved to death by then.

When she arrived at the hospital, the doctor ordered an ultrasound scan for Avery.

She was dejected during the ultrasound examination.

“Doctor, is my child gone?”

“What makes you say that?” the doctor asked.

“I didn’t eat anything for two days... The baby’s condition was already not great...”

“Oh, not eating for two days is fine. Some pregnant mothers have such awful vomiting spells that they don’t really eat for a whole month,” responded the doctor.

Avery’s heart tightened.

“Congratulations! There are two gestational sacs in your womb. You’re having twins.”

Chapter 9

There was no sign of two gestational sacs during the last checkup.

Avery could not believe that there were two babies inside of her a short week later.

She held the ultrasound scan in her hands as she sat in a quiet daze on one of the benches in the hospital corridor.

The doctor told her that the probability of being pregnant with twins was extremely low.

If she had an abortion now, she might never be able to have twins again.

Avery chuckled bitterly. All of this was the work of the Fosters' private doctors.

When they had implanted the fertilized eggs into her, they had not mentioned that she was going to have twins.

Perhaps in their eyes, she was nothing but a birthing tool for the Fosters from the beginning.

When she began to bleed the week before, she thought that her period had arrived. When the Fosters' doctors found out, they thought that the procedure had failed. When Elliot said that he would divorce her after he had woken up, the doctors had never seen her again.

The decision to give birth or not was now solely on her shoulders.

Avery's phone rang in her bag. She had been in the hospital for over an hour.

She pulled out her phone, stood up, and walked toward the hospital's exit.

"Avery, your father's dying! Come home right away!"

Her mother's hoarse voice came from the other side of the line.

Avery was stunned.

Dad was dying? How could this be?

She knew that her father had been hospitalized after his company got in trouble. He could not even attend her wedding.

She did not know that his condition was this serious. Avery's mind was a mess.

She did not have a good relationship with her father. She could never forgive him for having an affair.

However, her heart stung painfully upon suddenly hearing the news of his serious illness.

The living room of the Tate house was a chaotic mess when Avery arrived.

Laura took her straight to the master bedroom.

Jack Tate was lying on the bed. His breathing was shallow and his eyes were barely open. When he saw Avery, he raised his arm in her direction.

"Dad, why didn't you go to the hospital if you're this sick?" Avery said as she held her father's cold hand. Tears welled up in her eyes.

"That's easy for you to say! Where would we get the money to take your father to the hospital?" Wanda snapped frostily.

Avery's head shot up as she said, "Didn't you get a large sum of money from the Fosters? Why didn't you use that to help Dad?"

Wanda pouted and said, "We used that money to pay off the debts! Do you know how much money your father's company owes? Don't look at me like I ate your money up, Avery! Besides, your father's illness can't be cured! He's better off dead!"

After saying such cruel words, Wanda heartlessly stormed out of the room.

Cassandra did not leave with her.

At the end of the day, Jack was still her father. He had always loved her, and she did not want to lose her father.

"Don't be mad at her, Dad. It's not that she didn't want to get you treated, but the family really doesn't have much money," Cassandra sniffled as she stood crying by the bed. "Dad, I really hope you get through this..."

Jack turned a deaf ear to Cassandra's words.

Instead, he looked at Avery with eyes filled with tears. His lips trembled and his voice was low as he said, "Avery... My darling girl... I've failed you... I've failed your mother... I'll make it up to both of you in the next life..."

The large hand holding hers suddenly let go.

A shrill cry tore through the house.

Avery's heart throbbed in pain.

Overnight, her world underwent an earth-shattering change.

She was married and pregnant, and her father was gone.

She felt that she was still far too young—a child at heart, even—but life swept her up and pushed her into a lonely, hopeless corner.

The day of the funeral was a gloomy and rainy one.

Not many people attended the funeral as the Tates began to fall.

After the service, Wanda went to a hotel with the guests.

The crowd scattered like a flock of wild birds.

Before long, Avery and Laura were the only ones left at the cemetery.

Their moods were as dark as the gray skies.

"Do you hate Dad, Mom?" Avery asked as she stared at her father's gravestone through teary eyes.

Laura lowered her gaze and said in a dull voice, "I do. Even if he's dead, I will never forgive him."

Avery did not understand.

"Then, why are you crying?" she asked.

"Because I loved him," Laura sighed. "Relationships are complicated, Avery. It isn't just a matter of love or hate. It could also be a love-hate relationship."

That night, Avery dragged her worn out body back to Elliot's mansion.

From the day of Jack's death to the end of the funeral, the process had taken three days.

She did not return to the mansion at all during the three days.

Nobody from the Foster family contacted her either.

She did not tell anyone in the Foster house about her father's passing.

Her relationship with Elliot was colder than ice and frostier than snow.

When Avery stepped into the courtyard, she noticed the mansion's lights were lit, and the living room was filled with guests.

Everyone was dressed to the nines and chatting away merrily with wine glasses in their hands.

Avery paused in her tracks.

"Madam!" Mrs. Cooper noticed her and rushed over.

Perhaps it was because Avery's cold and pitiful expression stood in stark contrast to the liveliness of the living room, but the smile on Mrs. Cooper's face tensed as she hesitated.

"It's raining outside. Come on in!" Mrs. Cooper said as she held Avery's arm and pulled her into the living room.

Avery was dressed in a black trench coat with her slender, fair calves peeping out from underneath the hem. On her feet were a pair of black, low-heeled leather shoes.

Her aura was chilly, which was different from her usual demeanor.

Mrs. Cooper brought her a pair of pink, plush house slippers.

Avery changed into the slippers and inadvertently glanced at the living room.

Elliot's guests were evaluating her with meaningful eyes as if she was an animal in a zoo's enclosure.

Their eyes were bold and disrespectful.

Avery used the same gaze to look at Elliot, who was sitting at the center of the couch.

He was holding a lit cigarette between his fingers, and he was surrounded by smoke. Behind the veil of smoke, his stone-cold face looked almost like a dream.

The reason she looked at him was because there was a woman sitting next to him.

The woman had a beautiful head of long, black hair. She was dressed in a body-hugging white dress with a face of exquisite makeup. She looked gorgeous without being vulgar.

The upper half of her body was stuck closely to Elliot as she held a cigarette between her fingers.

It was obvious that this woman's relationship with Elliot was anything but ordinary.

A few seconds after Avery's gaze fell on the woman, her brows furrowed slightly.

"You're Avery Tate, right?" the woman said as she got up from the couch and provocatively walked over to Avery. "I heard that you were the wife that Madam Rosalie picked for Elliot. She has pretty good taste. You're quite pretty, just a little small... Oh, I didn't mean your age. I was talking about your body..."

Avery pursed her lips and said, "You're beautiful, and you have curves. Everything about you is better than me... So, when is Elliot marrying you?"

Her nonchalant tone drove the woman into a furious rage.

"How dare you talk to me like that? Do you know how long I've been by Elliot's side? Even if you're his wife, if I slap you in the face right now, he wouldn't even bat an eye!"

Just as the woman finished speaking, she raised her arm.

The sound of glass smashing filled the air.

Avery had picked up an expensive bottle of wine and smashed it against the coffee table!

Bright red liquid splashed and trickled down the edge of the table, dripping onto the carpet underneath.

Avery's eyes were bloodshot as she clenched her fingers tightly around the bottle, pointing the jagged edge at the arrogant woman.

"You want to hit me? Come on! If you dare touch me, I'll kill you!" she yelled as she approached the woman with the broken bottle.

Everyone in the room was dumbfounded.

It was said that the eldest daughter of the Tate family was a low-profile introvert, but it turned out... She was insane!

Elliot's hawk-like eyes narrowed as smoke escaped his thin lips.

His fiery gaze was fixed on Avery's pained but ruthless little face.

Chapter 10

The living room instantly fell so silent that one could hear the sound of a beating heart.

Avery stormed back to her room and violently slammed the door shut.

The loud bang rumbled through the entire mansion.

This woman dared slam a door in Elliot Foster's house. She must not fear death.

Everyone turned their gaze to Elliot. He looked calm and composed as if he was not angry at all.

Normally, if anyone were to make a sound louder than 60 decibels in front of him, he would definitely frown.

The sound of Avery's slamming door was at least 90 decibels, so why was he not upset?

More importantly, the bottle of wine that Avery had smashed was nearly three hundred thousand dollars. They had not even had the chance to drink it yet.

She broke it without even batting an eyelid.

"D*mn, I heard that Miss Tate's father passed away a few days ago. Seeing as she showed up in black, she must have just returned from the funeral!"

Someone had mustered up the courage to break the silence.

The woman in the white dress was a senior manager at Sterling Group's PR department, Chelsea Tierney.

She invited Elliot's friends to drink at his house, not only to celebrate her birthday but also to celebrate his recovery.

Her earlier altercation with Avery was a huge blow to her pride.

Chelsea noticed Elliot's unbothered expression, but she knew him well enough to know that he could blow up at any moment.

She returned to his side and apologized cautiously, "I'm sorry, Elliot. I didn't know her father had passed away."

Elliot snuffed out his cigarette in the ashtray. He smoothly picked up his wine glass with his long, slender fingers and downed its contents in one swift gulp.

He placed the empty glass back on the table, then said in a low, sensual voice, "Happy birthday."

Chelsea's ears turned red as she responded, "Thank you."

"Also, Avery Tate isn't someone you can touch," Elliot said as he adjusted the collar of his shirt. His voice carried a hint of warning. "Even if she were just a pet in the Foster household, I'm the only one who can push her around."

Chelsea panicked.

"But you're about to divorce her, so she would be even less than a pet by then!"

Elliot's gaze instantly turned ice cold.

"Even if I am going to divorce her, I still won't watch as someone puts her down."

At that moment, Mrs. Cooper walked in to clean up the shattered wine bottle and take away the dirtied carpet.

Someone filled up Elliot's wine glass.

"Don't be mad, Elliot. Chelsea didn't mean to do that. She won't actually lay her hand on Miss Tate," the man sitting on the other side of Elliot said as he tried to lighten the mood.

"That's right! Chelsea, hurry up and take three shots as punishment! You may be the birthday girl, but you did go a little too far!"

Chelsea picked up her glass and prepared to take three shots.

Elliot glanced to the side at his bodyguard who immediately walked over and helped him up.

"You guys go ahead!" Elliot said before he left.

Chelsea watched Elliot's back with reddened eyes as he left the room. She gulped down three shots of wine and walked away in her stilettos.

"D*mn! Both the stars of the night left. Do we keep drinking?"

"Of course! It would be good for Chelsea to give up, too. Otherwise, she keeps thinking she'll become Mrs. Foster one day!"

"I doubt what happened tonight would make her give up! Elliot is still planning to divorce Miss Tate, anyway."

"Speaking of Avery Tate, she's quite beautiful, but she has a bad temper.

How does Elliot put up with it?"

In the guest room, Avery held her knees in her arms as tears quietly streamed down her face.

The dam that had held her tears for the past three days had been completely destroyed.

Her father's apology before his death constantly echoed in her head.

All of the hatred that she had felt for him vanished without a trace.

She sobbed until she fell into a deep slumber.

When she woke up the next morning, her eyes were swollen and aching.

Avery changed into a clean nightgown and walked out of the room.

She had not eaten well the past few days, and now she was so hungry that her stomach ached.

When she arrived at the entrance of the dining room, she saw Elliot's back and stopped.

Mrs. Cooper saw her and immediately greeted her, "Breakfast is ready, Madam! Come over and have some!"

In the past, Avery had avoided Elliot like the plague. She had been scared of offending him and suffering the consequences.

Now, the thought of him delaying the divorce gave her a boost of courage.

She chose the seat furthest from him and sat down. Mrs. Cooper placed her breakfast in front of her, and she was about to eat when Elliot spoke.

"That bottle of wine last night costs two hundred and eighty thousand dollars."

His voice was indifferent.

Avery's hand tightened around her fork as her mind went blank.

Two hundred and eighty thousand dollars for a bottle of wine?

What kind of wine was that expensive?

Was he expecting her to pay for it?

Did he think she looked like she could afford it?

She felt a pang of pain in her stomach. Her back was drenched in a cold sweat, and she had lost her appetite.

Elliot glanced at Avery's tired and pale face and said, "This is a warning. If you break something in my house again, you'll pay for it to the penny!"

Avery's stomach stopped hurting upon hearing this, and her appetite returned.

Many women suffer side effects during the early stages of pregnancy, ranging from vomiting to being bed-ridden.

Apart from the occasional bout of nausea, Avery had yet to throw up.

However, when she saw the pieces of meat on her plate, she suddenly felt uneasy and picked them out.

"Is it not good, Madam?" Mrs. Cooper said anxiously when she saw Avery's behavior.

Avery shook her head and said, "I've been feeling like having vegetarian meals recently."

"Alright, I'll keep that in mind," responded Mrs. Cooper quickly.

After breakfast, Avery returned to her room and changed her clothes.

Jack's lawyer had made an appointment to see her today. He did not say what it was about, but she had an inkling.

Once she was changed, she grabbed her purse and walked out of the room.

Coincidentally, Elliot was also about to head out.

He had a bodyguard to escort him and a chauffeur to drive him.

Avery glanced at the time. She had agreed to meet the lawyer at 10 a.m., and now it was already close to nine in the morning.

She took long strides as she walked out. It was about a ten minute walk from the mansion to where she could hail a cab.

The rain the day before caused the temperature to drop by a few degrees.

Perhaps it was the cold wind, but Avery felt a surge of nausea after walking a short while.

A silver Bentley drove out of the neighborhood and was about to speed up when the driver noticed Avery.

"It looks like Madam Avery," said the driver as he slowed down the car.

The driver had seen Avery walk out of the house, so he remembered what she was wearing.

Elliot had his eyes shut but suddenly opened them up upon hearing the driver's words.

"It looks like Madam's throwing up, Mr. Foster," said the driver who had a better view from the driver's seat.

When Avery had her breakfast just now, she was secretly glad that her morning sickness was not severe. She did not expect herself to be vomiting uncontrollably now.

She held onto the trash can. After she had done puking, she planned to head home to wash up.

She was faced with Elliot's car when she turned around.

The luxury sedan sparkled under the bright sun.

The driver had stopped the car next to her and rolled down the back seat window.

Avery saw Elliot's deep, cold eyes staring at her.

Her cheeks flushed a crimson red.

Could he suspect something?

She frowned, then walked to the back seat window and said, "I think I ate too much at breakfast."

Chapter 11

Elliot reached his arm out through the car window.

Clipped between his slender fingers was a pack of tissue.

Avery was stunned. She was about to decline but ended up uncharacteristically accepting it.

"Thanks."

The warmth of his palm still lingered on the tissues.

Elliot quickly averted his gaze from her face and rolled up the window as the car sped off.

It was ten in the morning at Tate Industries, and all of its employees were working away at their respective stations.

It had been a month since the company had paid wages. However, Tate Industries was an old player in the industry. Even if all kinds of negative news were circulating on the internet, its employees refused to give up until the very last moment.

If she had not known about the company's many debts, Avery could not imagine that the calm atmosphere in front of her was an illusion.

She entered the meeting room with the company's vice president, Shaun Locklyn.

The lawyer went straight to the point when he saw Avery and said, "I'm very sorry for your loss, Miss Tate. Your father entrusted me to announce his will, which I will do now."

Avery nodded lightly.

The lawyer opened up a file and said firmly, "Your father had six pieces of real estate which are respectively located in... Here is the file. Please go through it."

Avery took the document and examined it thoroughly.

"Your father also had three parking lots," said the lawyer as he passed another document to her, "as well as eight shop lots, and twelve vehicles."

Avery knew nothing about the family's fortune.

First of all, she had no interest in it.

Second of all, her father had never explained it to her.

Now that the lawyer was describing her father's fortune to her, she could not help but feel a sense of unease.

She had no idea that her father was this wealthy.

Since he had all these fixed assets, why did he not sell them and use the money to treat his illness?

"Apart from the aforementioned assets, there is also the company in which we are sitting right now," said the lawyer. Then, after a brief pause, he added, "Your father planned to leave the company to you, but the company is currently operating at a loss."

Avery glanced at the lawyer and said, "By how much?"

Shaun adjusted his glasses and chimed in, "The current deficit is a hundred and twenty-five million. If you take over your father's company, you would also inherit his debt. You may have to sell off all of the properties and cars that were mentioned just now in order to make up for the loss."

Avery was stunned.

A hundred and twenty-five million!

Even if she sold off all of her father's assets, it still would not cover a hundred and twenty-five million!

"You can choose not to accept this, Avery. That way, your father's debt would not fall on you," Shaun said with a sullen expression. "However, I hope you will seriously consider this. This company is your father's life's work. Do you really have the heart to watch it shut down?"

"What about Wanda and Cassandra?" Avery asked after taking a deep breath.

"Don't even mention your stepmother! It's partly her fault that the company is in dire straits. She arranged for her brother to join our finance department a few years ago. He embezzled a lot of money from the company through the years. We don't even know where he's run off to now," sighed Shaun.

Avery placed her hands on her forehead, and her voice trembled as she said, "I don't want to see my father's company fall either, but where am I supposed to find all of that money—"

"Borrow it!" said Shaun. "We've reached the end of our new product research and development. If we manage to get a loan, once we launch the new product, we'll be able to alleviate our financial troubles quite a bit."

"Who would we ask for a loan from? Who would be able to give me that much?" Avery said as she raised her eyes in disbelief.

"The banks," Shaun replied. "If the banks won't give it to you, we can find another investor. We have to try. If we manage, then great. If we don't, then you can give up. What do you think?"

At the president's office on the top floor of Sterling Group, the sun was shining through the spotless floor-to-ceiling windows.

With his back facing the sun, Elliot's chiseled features looked extraordinary.

He was holding a document that his assistant, Chad Rayner, brought to him.

"Mr. Foster, Tate industries are currently facing a debt of a hundred and twenty-five million dollars. Jack Tate's wife and youngest daughter took an early flight out of the country this morning. It doesn't look like they will be returning before the company's troubles are settled. I think Miss Tate will most likely give up on Tate Industries. A hundred and twenty-five million is an impossible amount for her," Chad explained.

Elliot had asked him for information on Tate Industries, so he figured that his boss was interested in the matter.

"Let's make a bet, Chad!"

Sterling Group's chief financial officer, Ben Schaffer, was stirring his cup of coffee as his eyes narrowed like a sly fox.

"I bet Avery Tate will come to Elliot to ask for a loan. She's in a favorable position to enjoy certain benefits. If she asks Elliot for the money, I'm guessing he'll at least lend some of it to her."

Chad shook his head and said, "I doubt she has the guts to do that."

Ben took a sip of coffee and chuckled, "You didn't see her last night. She smashed a bottle of wine from 1947 in front of our faces and went up against Chelsea. She might look gentle, but she's even more feisty than Chelsea."

"Alright, then. I'll make a bet with you!" Chad responded.

"What should we bet on?"

"If I lose, I'll buy you coffee for a month. If you lose, you have to buy coffee for everyone in the president's department for a month. How's that?"

"Okay."

That afternoon, Avery called up every major bank.

Things were not as simple as Shaun made it sound.

She called eight banks, two of which the company still owed money to.

Of course, the other two banks did not dare give her a loan either.

"Avery, here's a detailed introduction to our new product. It's a very promising product. I'll think of a way to set up a meeting with the managers of the other two banks. Go and put on something nice, then have a proper meeting with them," said Shaun as he handed Avery a thick file.

"Why do I need to dress up? Can't I just go like this?" Avery asked.

"You don't have makeup on, so you don't look your best. It can come across as disrespectful in the business world," Shaun replied.

"Let me take a look at the product profile first," Avery said.

"Alright. I'll contact the bank managers. I'll let you know once I set it up," said Shaun.

Chad received some information at six in the evening.

"It looks like we both lost the best, Mr. Schaffer," Chad said. "Surprisingly, Avery Tate didn't give up on Tate Industries. Also, she's meeting the managers of River City Bank and Silver Linings Bank for dinner tonight."

Ben was disappointed.

"Those two old geezers are infamous for being promiscuous! She's walking right into a lion's den! I suppose she doesn't know of society's dangers since she hasn't graduated college yet. I can't figure out why she wouldn't just go to Elliot? He's her husband even if only in name. Does she think he's less than those two old sleazebags?"

Chad snuck a glance at Elliot's face.

It was eerily dark.

At the end of the day, Avery was still Elliot's wife in name.

If she went to meet those two old men that night, it would be a blow to Elliot's pride.

Chad felt suffocated at the thought of his boss being played for a fool.

With Elliot's temper, if Avery really cheated on him, she would meet an ugly end.

"Should I give Miss Tate a call, Mr. Foster?" Chad said after thinking for a moment.

Elliot clenched his fists so tightly that his knuckles turned white.

"Don't contact her!" he snapped in a hoarse voice.

He wanted to see if Avery would really act so recklessly behind his back.

Ben coughed lightly, then said, "Do you want to have a drink with us? My treat!"

Elliot's expression turned malicious. He shut his laptop, then rolled away in his wheelchair.

His bodyguard followed closely behind and escorted him out.

Chapter 12

It was nine at night.

Dry leaves rustled on the ground in the fall wind.

Avery emerged from a cab and winced at the sudden chill.

She clutched her purse and quickly rushed toward the front door of the Foster mansion.

In the dark of night, she donned a strappy red dress which was sexy yet enchanting.

When she left the house that morning, she was wearing a t-shirt and casual pants.

The thought that she had deliberately dressed that way to entertain other men made Elliot clench his fists.

Avery only noticed Elliot sitting in the living room couch when she was changing her shoes in the foyer.

He was wearing a black shirt, which made him appear even more gloomy and cold.

The expression on his face was as indifferent as ever, so she did not look at him for long.

Once she had changed her shoes, she hesitated. She did not know whether she should greet him or not.

He did give her that pack of tissues that morning.

Avery walked uneasily into the living room and looked at Elliot.

The atmosphere was different that night. Mrs. Cooper would usually come out to greet her when she arrived home.

Was Mrs. Cooper out?

She took a deep breath as her heart thumped in her chest. She decided to avoid him.

"Come here," Elliot said icily.

Since they were the only ones in the living room, she could not pretend like she did not hear him.

"What is it?" Avery said as she stopped and glanced at him.

"I said, come here," Elliot said in a terrifyingly forceful voice.

Avery's heart tightened, and she involuntarily walked over to him.

She did not dare disobey him even if he was in a wheelchair and did not pose as big of a threat to her.

She walked to his side, looked at his handsome but stern face, and took a deep breath.

"What is it? Is it time for us to get divorced?"

Elliot's brows furrowed upon hearing her words.

He smelled the faint smell of alcohol emanating from her hair.

She had drunk wine.

Elliot suddenly looked up as he no longer tried to hide the disgust in his eyes.

His large hand gripped her slender wrist as he snarled, "Did you drink with someone? Did you have a good time?"

Avery felt like Elliot was about to break her wrist. She wanted to pull her hand back but could not move a muscle.

"Let go! You're hurting me!" she cried as her eyes welled up with tears. The more she struggled, the harder his grip became.

It was as if he was deliberately trying to hurt her and make her cry.

"I asked if you had a good time. Answer me!" Elliot snapped. Seeing her face twist in agony further angered him.

"What good time? I don't know what you're talking about!"

Avery gave up struggling. By the time she registered the first question, streams of hot tears ran down her cheeks.

"I didn't drink, Elliot! I didn't!" she said with eyes filled with tears and fear.

Elliot's adam's apple bobbed up and down his throat. The next second, he yanked her into his arms.

She said that she had not drunk, but he clearly smelled alcohol on her.

The cold tip of his nose landed on the crook of her neck.

Avery's soft and delicate skin carried a warm, milky scent.

It was odd.

He could not smell alcohol on her body.

Avery stayed completely still as she felt Elliot's nose on her skin, gently tickling her.

She leaned against his wide chest. She was so nervous that she forgot to breathe, and her heart forgot to beat.

It was a good thing that he stopped treating her violently.

He had let go of her wrist, but the pain was still there. The thought of being abused by him angered Avery.

She knew that his legs had not fully recovered, and he might not have any feeling in them yet. She placed her hand on his trousers and gave him a hard pinch.

The reason she was brave enough to do this was because she was prepared to deal with the consequences.

However, Elliot did not seem to realize that she had pinched him.

When he lifted his head from her neck, his dark eyes looked puzzled.

"Your clothes smell like another man's alcohol. Are you going to take it off, or should I?" Elliot said in a hoarse voice that carried a seemingly unstoppable force.

Avery froze in stunned silence.

Did she smell like another man's alcohol?

Hold on...

He wanted her to take her clothes off?

Right now?

When she snapped back to reality, she pushed her hands against his chest and tried to escape.

Elliot did not give her a chance to get away and tightened his arms around her.

He picked Avery up and violently tore the back of her dress in half.

"Ah!"

Without the protection of her dress, Avery felt a sudden chill on her back.

The blood in her body boiled as she scowled, "Elliot Foster! You maniac!"

Elliot tossed her on the couch and stared coldly at her exposed shoulders and back.

"Remember your place, Mrs. Foster!"

Avery held on to the high-end dress that Elliot had just ripped and held back her tears.

Shaun was the one who had arranged the meeting that night.

The dress had also been Shaun's idea.

It was true that the two bank managers tried to get her drunk, and they would not let her go even when she tried to come up with excuses.

She ended up turning them down and left the bar.

She was pregnant, so she could not drink.

There was no way that she would be out drinking with other men.

"I don't care about being Mrs. Foster! Don't pin your ridiculous standards on me!"

Avery pushed her disheveled hair behind her ears and rose from the couch as she held onto her dress.

"I hate you!" she cried.

Under normal circumstances, she would never tear into other people like this.

It was Elliot's persistent bullying that had made her lose all control.

She returned to her room and slammed the door shut.

A glimmer of emotion flashed by in Elliot's stone-cold face.

He had lost control of his emotions earlier.

He had waited all afternoon thinking that Avery would ask him for help, but she had not.

Not only did she not go to him, but she also went out and drank with other men.

All the anger that he had accumulated that day exploded at that moment.

Even if she had not said out loud that she hated him, he knew that. He knew that he was more terrifying to Avery than the Devil himself.

Elliot's phone screen lit up.

He picked it up and read Chad's message.

[Mr. Foster, did Miss Tate get home safely? I was out drinking with Ben when we bumped into her. She got into a riff with the two old geezers and left before dinner even started.]

A wave of gloom washed over Elliot.

Even if Avery had not drunk with the two sleazebags, to him, she had been in the wrong to attend the meeting in the first place.

She also should not have dressed so provocatively.

Avery opened her door when she heard a knock from the other side.

"Madam, Master Elliot asked me to bring you something to eat. I didn't know what you wanted, so I made you a bowl of soup," Mrs. Cooper said as she placed a tray on the desk in the room.

Avery had taken a shower to force herself to forget everything that b*st*rd Elliot had done to her that night.

"What does he mean by this?" she said as she stared cautiously at the bowl of soup.

She was hungry, but she did not dare eat.

"Master Elliot must feel bad for being so cruel to you earlier. His mood has been quite bad ever since you went to your room," Mrs. Cooper said.

She picked up the red dress on the bed and added, "Do you need me to get this mended?"

"It's fine. I borrowed it. Take the tag to him," Avery said.

"Oh..." responded Mrs. Cooper.

Avery took a deep breath, then sat on a chair and said hoarsely, "I can't afford to pay for it."

"Alright," Mrs. Cooper said. "Get some rest after you're done with the soup.

Madam Rosalie is being discharged tomorrow, so Master Elliot will be taking you to the old mansion with him."

Chapter 13

In the bathroom of the master bedroom, the nurse was carefully drying the water droplets off of Elliot's body with a dry towel.

His legs were still weak and he was only able to stand up if someone was holding on to him, so he needed the help of the nurse.

This nurse had been taking care of him ever since he met with the accident.

He was a middle aged man who was meticulous and careful with his work.

"You have a bruise on your thigh, Mr. Foster," said the nurse as he put on Elliot's bathrobe and helped him out of the bathroom. "I'll go get some ointment for you."

Elliot sat on the edge of the bed and opened up the bathrobe to look at the bruise when the nurse walked out of the room.

It was not like he had no feeling in his legs, but when Avery had pinched him, he held back and pretended like he had felt nothing.

For some reason, he kept recalling Avery's crying face.

Also, the unique fragrance of her body continued to linger in his mind.

Elliot had never felt this way about a woman in all of his years.

There was never a woman who was able to make him feel such strange emotions.

Something about Avery Tate somehow managed to arouse something inside of him.

Was it necessary for him to feel this way towards a woman whom he was about to divorce?

It was a feeling that was completely strange and absurd to him.

If he had a chance to go through it again, however, he would still lose his temper and rip her dress apart.

At 7 a.m. the next morning, Avery deliberately woke up early to avoid Elliot and have her breakfast.

She emerged from her bedroom and headed towards the dining room.

"Madam! You woke up early today, too! Breakfast is ready," Mrs. Cooper greeted her with a smile.

The word "too" was said with a strong emphasis.

Since Elliot was there, she should just return to her room.

"I made some vegetarian ravioli for you this morning. I made it especially for you since you mentioned not wanting to eat meat yesterday. I hope it suits your taste," Mrs. Cooper said warmly as she escorted Avery to her seat at the table.

Avery looked like she was sitting on pins and needles with a face of uneasiness.

She might as well have the words "I don't want to see you, Elliot Foster" written on her face.

Elliot did not look straight at her, but he felt the resistance emanating from her.

"We're going to see my mother after breakfast. You should know yourself what to say and what not to say," he said indifferently.

"When did you plan on giving me the money for that dress last night?" Avery asked sternly.

It was fine if he wanted her to cooperate and go see Rosalie, but he had to settle his debt first.

"There isn't much cash at home," Elliot said as he took a sip of milk, "I can wire it over to you if you're in a rush."

"That works. Here's my account number!" Avery said as she pulled out her phone, opened up her account number and passed it over to Elliot.

"How much was it?" Elliot asked as he set down his glass of milk and pulled out his phone.

"Five thousand," Avery responded.

Elliot lifted his eyes and glared at her. She felt no guilt at all.

"Didn't it say $4,500 on the tag?"

"Why did you bother asking me, then?" Avery retorted, then raised her right hand and added, "The extra $500 is for medical expenses."

The wrist that Elliot had grabbed yesterday was deeply bruised, so she planned to stop by the drugstore when she had the time.

She did not feel bad for asking for the extra $500 for that.

Elliot glanced at Avery's wrist and his lips pursed slightly. He wired the $5,000 over to her.

A third of Avery's anger simmered down after getting the money.

"Don't think I'll forgive you just because you paid me the money. I wouldn't forgive you even if you gave me another $5,000," Avery said.

Elliot did not respond to her cruel words, but quietly rolled off in his wheelchair instead.

His silence extinguished another third of her anger.

At 9 a.m. that morning, the Foster family was gathered at the old mansion to visit the newly discharged Rosalie.

Rosalie was discharged from the ICU this time, which meant that her condition was a lot more serious than the last time she was admitted for hypertension.

"How have you been feeling, Elliot?" Rosalie asked.

She did not have the heart to blame her son once she saw him, but worried about his health instead.

"Pretty good," Elliot replied.

Seeing his mother's face which had turned old and frail, he held back some of the words he wanted to say.

"That's good to hear," Rosalie said as she shifted her gaze to Avery, then asked, "What about you, Avery? Is Elliot still giving you a hard time? You have to tell me if he is."

Avery shook her head and said, "He's not. You, on the other hand, need to take care of yourself."

"I'll be fine as long as you and Elliot are fine," said Rosalie. "Avery, Elliot has never dated or gone after a girl before. He might not be that gentle or romantic, but I hope you can forgive him. He's a man after all. His career would come first. Don't you think so?"

She was trying to convince Avery.

Avery, however, felt extremely uneasy.

Elliot never dated?

He'd never gone after a girl?

How was that possible?

It looked like Rosalie did not know her own son very well.

"Avery, I heard that your father's company is facing some problems and is about to go bankrupt," Rosalie said. She had just left the hospital but was already concerning herself with all kinds of troubles. "I've asked the lawyers. This has nothing to do with you, so your father's debt can't be placed on your head. All you need to do is stay by Elliot's side and be his wife."

Avery knew very well that Rosalie had always treated her like a pawn, but there was no way she was going to live her life according to the old woman's ideals.

"My father's gone now, but he wouldn't want to see the company fall if he were still around. So, I'll do the best I can to try to win this losing battle," Avery said in a tone that was neither humble nor overbearing.

"Oh, Avery!" exclaimed Elliot's sister-in-law, Olivia. "Your father didn't spend much on you even when his company was making money, did he? Now that he's gone, you're holding on to a failing company and won't let go. What is it? Were you thinking of having Elliot cough up the money to help you out?"

"I heard that your father owed 125 million!" said Elliot's brother, Henry Foster, "That isn't a small amount. A typical person wouldn't lend you that amount, and they wouldn't be able to cough up that much... Were you thinking of getting it from our family?"

Avery had never considered asking Elliot to help her out with the money, so she was immensely unhappy with the family's remarks.

All eyes were on her as they awaited her response.

"All of you think too highly of me. Even if I asked to borrow the money from Elliot, he would never give it to me," Avery said wryly. "I know my own circumstances. I'll figure something out."

Her words relieved the Foster family members.

She was right. Elliot had been insisting on divorcing her ever since he woke up, so why would he ever give her the money?

Everyone's emotions relaxed quite a bit after some morning tea.

Rosalie held Avery's hand and said, "It's not impossible for you to help your father's company, Avery. All you have to do is have Elliot's child, then he will definitely lend you the money."

Avery caressed her belly and glanced at Elliot.

He was sipping his tea and looked completely calm, as if he did not hear the words his mother said to her.

As they sat in the backseat of the car on the way home, he was deep in thought, and she was looking out the window.

The atmosphere in the car was eerily quiet.

"If you were pregnant with my child," Elliot said suddenly in a chilling voice,
"I would kill it with my own hands."

A chill shot through Avery's body. Her lips parted, as if wanting to speak, but not a sound came out.

Chapter 14

In Avery's eyes, Elliot's face had turned into that of a demon baring its sharp fangs at her.

"Why?" she asked bitterly. "Even if you didn't want kids, there's no need for you to say such cruel words!"

Elliot's deep eyes were cold as he said, "What if you decided to take the chance if I didn't make myself clear?"

Avery took a deep breath and shifted her gaze from him.

She was terrified. It felt like she was about to fall into a bottomless pit.

Her reaction piqued Elliot's curiosity.

His lips curled up as he mocked, "You're not really thinking of having my kid, are you?"

Avery glared at him.

"I suggest you take my warning seriously. You know the kind of person I am. My actions will be much more severe than my words. Don't test me if you want to live," Elliot said, then turned to look out the window.

Avery clenched her fists and huffed, "Don't worry, I will never give you children. You know how much I despise you. The most urgent matter right now is to quickly get a divorce!"

The babies did not belong to him alone.

If she gave birth, she would be doing it for herself.

Once the kids were grown, she would tell them that their father was dead!

"Now isn't the time. We'll talk about it again once my mother's get better,"

Elliot said.

His tone was calmer. Perhaps her words were effective.

It made him realize that he was not the man she wanted.

"Don't drag it out for too long, then," Avery said.

She furrowed her brows and was a little anxious.

Her pregnancy would begin to show if they delayed things further.

She would not be able to keep it from him by then, and would definitely be forced to get an abortion.

"You're in a hurry to divorce me. Is there some urgent matter you need to attend to?" Elliot asked as his cold eyes fell on her, trying to see through her.

Avery's heart suddenly skipped a bit.

"Nope! There's nothing urgent. I just... I just don't want to stay with you. Has nobody ever told you how suffocating it is to be by your side?"

"They wouldn't dare say it even if they thought it," Elliot replied dryly.

"Oh... It's no wonder you don't like me," Avery said with a pout. "But it's stifling to not say what I want to say."

Elliot pondered to himself, and thought she had misunderstood something in the end.

"No man could tolerate his wife dressing up like a prostitute to escort other men."

"Wearing a slip dress makes me a prostitute? Socializing is escorting other men? What about when you men socialize?" Avery retorted. "Even if you hold a knife to my neck right now, I would still insist that I wasn't wrong last night."

It was like they were both from different planets.

Other than the fact that they were both human, they were complete opposites in every other aspect.

"Are you saying you'd do it again?" Elliot said.

His lips were slightly curled upwards in a sinister manner.

Avery pursed her lips and pushed herself into the corner out of instinct.

"I don't even drink, how could I possibly drink with others. I wouldn't drink even if the sky falls."

She would never take the lives of the babies in her womb lightly.

Even if her father's company goes bankrupt, she would never sell herself out for money.

Avery's answer extinguished the raging fury inside of Elliot.

The driver drove the car towards Elliot's mansion.

Avery jumped out of the car just as it came to halt, as if trying to escape.

Elliot watched her slender back, then said to the driver, "To the office."

Avery let out a heavy sigh of relief after the car drove off.

After she took an afternoon nap, she arrived at Tate Industries at 2.30 p.m.

She decided to sell off her father's assets to pay off some of the debt.

She wanted to deal with what she could and pay off what she could before thinking about looking for an investor.

The banks were out of the question.

She had completely offended the managers of River City Bank and Silver Linings Bank the night before. Both managers made it clear that they would never give her a loan.

"Don't blame yourself, Avery. If you drank last night, they probably would have acted out of line with you," Shaun said with a frown. "You're not that kind of woman, and I would never force you to do something like that."

Avery nodded and said, "I wouldn't do it even if you forced me."

Shaun's cheeks flushed as he nodded.

"I arranged a list last night of the few affluent individuals in Avonsville. All of them have the ability to produce the funds to save our company. You just need to convince one of them, and we'll be saved."

Avery took the list and quickly looked it over.

On the list were names, genders, company names, current net worth and contact information.

Some of them had phone numbers, while some did not.

"How am I supposed to contact the ones without contact information?"

Avery asked.

"The ones without contact information are the ones I couldn't get my hands on. We'll just have to meet those ones at their companies," Shaun replied.

Avery browsed the list once again.

This time, she discovered a key point.

The second name on the list clearly printed out "Elliot Foster".

Elliot Foster, male, Sterling Group, net worth over 15 billion.

Contact information: none.

Avery's face flushed as she asked sheepishly, "Is Elliot Foster that rich?"

She picked up a glass of water from the table and took a sip to hide her anxiety.

"That's just a safe estimate. His net worth should be a lot higher than that," Shaun answered assuredly. "He founded Sterling Group when the internet was just starting. However popular the internet is now is how much he's worth."

"I see..."

"It's a shame I couldn't find his contact information. You'll just have to go to Sterling Group to meet him. I'll come with you when you decide to go see him."

Avery shook her head violently and said, "I won't meet him."

She picked up a pen and crossed Elliot's name out on the list.

He would never lend her the money. If she went to him to ask for a loan, she would just be asking to be humiliated.

Avery stopped by the drugstore on her way home that evening.

She walked into the store and wanted to buy something for her bruise.

After the pharmacist recommended a few products to her, she suddenly thought of a question.

"Is this safe to use during pregnancy?"

"It's better to avoid it. Are you pregnant?" asked the pharmacist.

Avery nodded in silence.

The pharmacist immediately took back the products she recommended before and passed her a bottle of pills.

"How far along are you? Your bump isn't showing yet, so now's a good time for calcium supplements. This one's great and absorbs well. Obstetricians are always recommending this one to pregnant mothers!"

Avery arrived home with the calcium supplements half an hour later.

It was past dinner time, but Mrs. Cooper left some food out for her.

"What did you get, Madam?" Mrs. Cooper asked when she saw the drugstore logo on the bag Avery was holding.

Avery hid the bag behind her back and said, "Just something for my bruise."

"We have something for that at home. We have most common medications here. Just let me know if you need anything next time and I'll get it for you," Mrs. Cooper said with a smile.

"Okay, I'm going up now," Avery said, then turned and made her way back to her room.

She was caught off guard and bumped into Elliot.

He arrived when she was talking to Mrs. Cooper earlier.

He clearly saw the contents of the bag Avery hid behind her back.

"Why did you lie?" he asked as his dangerous eyes fell on the bag of calcium tablets.

Chapter 15

It clearly stated "calcium tablets" on the bag as calcium supplements for pregnant women were the same type that the elderly and those that lack calcium take.

"Do you have to tell other people exactly what kind of medication you take?" Avery asked.

Her cheeks were flushed, but her tone was relatively stable.

She hurried off after she said that.

She kept the bag of pills in a drawer, then washed up in the bathroom.

Things could not go on like this. Everything would be exposed if she did not leave soon.

All of her checkup reports were in the room. Elliot would find out about everything if he decided to check her room.

Of course, reason told her that Elliot might be a little extreme, but he was not actually crazy. He probably would not go as far as to check her room.

Besides, if he did not mention divorce, she had no way of divorcing him.

Her stepmother accepted the exorbitant benefits from the Foster family after all.

Avery sat on the edge of the bed with her mind in such a frenzy that she forgot about her hunger.

There was a knock on the door shortly after.

She snapped herself back to reality and walked over to open the door.

"Master Elliot's back in his room, Madam. Come and have something to eat!" Mrs. Cooper said with a kind smile.

Avery's anxiety subsided. Aside from Elliot, everyone at the mansion treated her quite well.

Perhaps they took care of her because of her young age.

When she arrived at the dining room with Mrs. Cooper, there was a hearty spread on the table.

"I can't eat all of this myself, Mrs. Cooper. You should sit down and join me!"

Mrs. Cooper smiled and said, "Eat however much you can, Madam. We have rules. I can't overstep."

"I see..." Avery said, then added, "Do you have children?"

Now that Elliot was not around, Avery felt a lot more relaxed.

"I do! They're in college now. They're about your age. Why do you ask, Madam?"

Avery's face reddened slightly as she grinned and said, "I'm just making conversation... I heard that your figure changes after giving birth, but you look really good!"

"I couldn't eat much when I was pregnant. My weight never went over 110 pounds, so my figure didn't change much."

"Was your bump not obvious when you were pregnant, then?"

"That's right! I looked like I was only five to six months pregnant when I was actually seven to eight months pregnant. People wouldn't even notice that I was pregnant when I wore loose-fitting clothes."

Avery felt inspired upon hearing Mrs. Cooper's words.

She placed her fork and knife down after only taking a few bites of her food.

She had to watch her figure so her baby bump would not be obvious.

"Why aren't you eating anymore, Madam?" Mrs. Cooper asked when she noticed how uncharacteristically little Avery had eaten.

"I'm not that hungry," Avery answered. "You don't need to leave me this much food for dinner next time. I don't want to gain weight."

"You're not fat at all."

"I don't like working out, so it's better for me to just watch what I eat."

Avery returned to her room after walking out of the dining room and pulled out the report from her latest checkup.

The doctor wrote down her next appointment date on the report. She had to go to the hospital for a checkup when she was three months pregnant.

She glanced at the date on the report and saw that it was coincidentally the next day.

Avery lay back on the bed and placed her hand on her belly. She wanted to feel the presence of the babies, but she felt nothing.

She did not throw up much during her pregnancy, but her appetite was different from before.

She lost some weight lately. Her belly looked even flatter when she did not eat.

Avery woke up early the next morning and headed to the hospital.

There were more tests to be done that day, so it was noon in the blink of an eye.

Since a few of the reports would only be ready at two in the afternoon, she decided to grab a bite to eat nearby.

Someone tapped her on the shoulder when she walked out of the hospital.

Avery turned her head and saw a slightly familiar face.

"It really is you."

Chelsea was wearing a white dress and a black blazer. Her makeup was exquisite and her hair was pulled back. She looked both smart and stylish.

"Are you sick?" she asked.

"I'm just here for a routine checkup," Avery responded.

She did not want to have much interaction with her, but Chelsea did not plan to let her go that easily.

"You haven't eaten, right? Let me buy you lunch. It was my bad last time, I'd like to apologize to you."

"I'm not mad."

"I see... Well, I just wanted to talk to you a little bit. I don't mean any harm," Chelsea said with an expression of feigned innocence.

As if turning down her invitation was the worst thing one could do.

Avery agreed to have lunch with her in the end.

The blood test this morning required her to go in on an empty stomach, so

Avery did not eat anything.

At this point, she was so hungry that her ankles were weak and she was seeing stars.

They picked a restaurant nearby and sat down.

Avery ordered a couple of simple vegetable dishes.

Chelsea went even further and ordered two salads, then passed the menu back to the waiter.

"I don't eat mains for lunch. I have to keep my figure," Chelsea said when she noticed Avery's shocked expression.

"Let's talk about you and Elliot! I heard that Madam Rosalie likes you a lot and won't agree to a divorce. You're in a pickle!"

Avery took a sip of water and asked, "Why didn't you nominate yourself when his mother was looking for a wife for him back then?"

Chelsea chuckled bitterly and said, "I was traveling out of the country at the time, so I had no idea what was happening. You were already married by the time I got back."

"Oh, what a coincidence!" Avery said.

Chelsea cocked an eyebrow.

"Are you suspicious of me? Nobody can question my love for Elliot. He doesn't like kids, so I got my uterus removed. Could you do that?"

Avery was frozen in stunned silence.

"I'm no longer a complete woman. I can never have children, but I have no regrets. I'm willing to do anything for him," Chelsea said proudly as she lifted her head up high.

It looked like she was waiting for someone to praise her for being courageous and special.

"Elliot is insane, and so are you. He hurts other people when he goes crazy, and you hurt yourself. It was stupid of you to hurt yourself for him,"

Avery said.

Chelsea's expression changed in an instant and her tone was much colder when she said, "What do you know? Elliot never hangs out with other women, but he's willing to be with me..."

"You're wrong. There's someone he likes, Chelsea. Stop acting stupid for him," Avery said.

Her emotions were a little messed up, so she spoke without thinking.

She pursed her lips in annoyance after saying those words.

How was it her business what Chelsea did?

If Elliot found out that she revealed his secret, he would unleash a heavy punishment on her.

Chelsea's face was frozen for a few seconds before she burst into laughter, as if she had just heard a joke.

"That's impossible! There's no way Elliot likes you!"

"I didn't say he liked me. I'm talking about another woman." Avery sighed.

"That's even more impossible!" Chelsea exclaimed. "Elliot doesn't have any other women by his side apart from me. I've known him for ten years, and my brother has known him for close to 20 years. I know him better than anyone!"

Something snapped in Avery's head.

For a moment, she did not know what was real and what was not.

There was no reason for Chelsea to lie to her.

However, if Chelsea was not lying... Then, what about the thing she saw on Elliot's computer?

Chapter 16

"Who told you there was someone Elliot liked? Where did you get the information? Do you know what her name is?"

Chelsea was beginning to feel uneasy despite being adamant that Elliot had no other woman besides her.

Avery shook her head and said, "What I said was just my opinion... I don't know Elliot as well as you do."

Avery changed her stance after calming down a little.

She realized that things were not as simple as they seemed, and she did not want to be dragged in.

She just wanted to give birth to her babies and live an average life.

"You scared me! I thought you saw him with a woman!"

Chelsea relaxed after hearing Avery's explanation.

"Elliot isn't the kind of man you think he is. He hates women and kids."

"Do you know why he doesn't like kids?" Avery asked casually.

"To be honest, I have no idea. I don't want to know either. If he doesn't like them, I just won't have them," Chelsea said, then furrowed her brows and mumbled to herself, "He's actually pretty nice to me."

"As long as you're happy."

Avery gave up trying to change her mind.

Everyone had the freedom of choice. What was important was being able to deal with the consequences of those choices.

She thought Chelsea was foolish. However, in the eyes of others, her decision to give birth to her and Elliot's children was probably foolish as well.

When the food was served, Avery was so hungry that she began to eat right away.

Chelsea had a lot on her mind and had lost her appetite.

"Are you sure you didn't fall in love with Elliot?" she asked.

"I'm sure," Avery answered with a nod.

Chelsea could not understand her.

"Why? He's capable and good-looking."

Avery looked up at her and said, "If I had to choose between you and him, I'd choose you."

At least that way, she would not get hurt.

Chelsea was utterly taken aback by her answer.

"Why?! Are you—"

Avery waved her hand in the air and said, "I was just using it as an example. It's fine as long as you get what I mean."

Chelsea completely lowered her defenses, as Avery suddenly began to look a lot more pleasant to her.

She thought of how Avery was the only one in her family that worked to maintain her father's company after his passing. Chelsea could not stop sympathy from welling up within her.

"You're still in college, right?" Chelsea asked.

Avery took a sip of water, then answered, "I'm graduating next year."

"Hmm, I heard about your dad's company. His debt has nothing to do with you since he has passed. You should focus on graduating and living your life," Chelsea advised. "Where are you supposed to find the money to pay off all of your dad's debt? Don't push yourself like this."

Avery lowered her gaze and did not respond.

Everyone around her was telling her to give up on Tate Industries.

A hundred and twenty-five million dollars was not a small amount.

Even her own mother was asking her to give up.

However, Shaun was always telling her how revolutionary the company's new product was, and that everything would only go upwards from here as long as they got through this obstacle.

Avery was constantly battling against her conflicting thoughts.

Chelsea paid for lunch when they were almost done eating.

As their meal mainly consisted of vegetables, they did not spend much.

Therefore, Avery did not insist on paying for the meal.

"Give me your number," Chelsea said when she walked over to Avery after paying the bill.

"What's the point?" Avery said. "Elliot and I are getting divorced soon, so there'll be no reason for us to meet after that."

Chelsea was a little upset about being rejected, but the thought of never seeing Avery again comforted her.

"That's true. When that happens, I'll be the only one by Elliot's side," Chelsea said as she shot a glare at Avery, before walking away.

At 2.30 p.m., Avery met the doctor after receiving all of her reports.

The doctor browsed through the reports, then adjusted her glasses, and said, "Everything looks good. However, it looks like you're pregnant with fraternal twins!"

Avery sat frozen in stunned silence.

"Do you still want to get rid of them, now?" teased the doctor. "The probability of being pregnant with fraternal twins is about the same as winning the lottery. You basically hit the jackpot!"

Avery's heart was thumping wildly in her chest.

Fraternal twins!

She had only ever heard of fraternal twins, but she had never met a pair in real life.

"If you do decide to get an abortion, it's best to do it while you're still in your first trimester. The longer you wait, the bigger the risk. It's a cruel thing, both for you and the babies. Right now, your babies are already taking shape inside of you," said the doctor.

"Doctor, I'm keeping them. I want to give birth to my babies."

At that moment, Avery had finally made up her mind.

"Great. Fill up these forms for me, and I'll open up a file for you."

It was four in the afternoon when Avery emerged from the hospital.

Perhaps it was because she had gotten up early and had not taken a nap, but she was on the verge of falling asleep.

It was like she was seeing the world through a filter. People. Cars. She could see neither of them too clearly.

She took a cab back home, went straight to her room, and fell into a deep slumber.

It was almost dark out when Avery finally woke up.

She sat in a daze on the bed. Both her mind and stomach were empty.

She knew she was hungry, but she could not bring herself to move a muscle.

Her phone suddenly began to ring, so she picked it up and answered.

"Avery, did you contact the names on the list I gave you?" Shaun's voice came from the other end of the line.

Avery lowered her gaze, took a breath, and said, "I didn't. I'll do it tomorrow."

"It's the weekend tomorrow! You shouldn't bother them, then. Maybe you can call them now?" Shaun said.

"Sure," Avery responded.

"Do you need me to send you a copy of the list?" Shaun asked.

"It's fine, I have it here with me," Avery answered.

"Remember to try calling some of them tonight. Make sure to sound sincere and—"

"I know, I know. I'm going to have dinner now."

"Oh, that's right. Where have you been staying since the repossession of your house?"

Avery looked around the guest bedroom she was staying in and said, "I rented a place. Don't worry about me. I'm fine."

"Okay, Avery. I'll be waiting for some good news from you."

Avery could not taste her dinner. Returning to her room, she began to contact the people on her list.

The moment they heard her name, they did not give her a chance to say her piece. They immediately rejected her and hung up.

It only took her twenty minutes to make all the calls.

All of them had rejected her.

Nobody wanted to hear about the new product from Tate Industries.

She was defeated before she even had a chance to put in the work.

Did she really have to give up?

If she did, then Tate Industries would be gone forever.

If she did not, then what else could she do to save it?

The room suddenly felt heavy and suffocating.

Avery threw on a long cardigan and walked out of the room.

The living room was empty, and the whole house was quiet.

She wrapped the cardigan around herself and walked out of the house.

The evening wind caressed her hair, making it billow around her face.

The coldness of the night pierced her bones.

She was strolling aimlessly down the street when a wave of memories suddenly filled her mind.

Everyone had seen her as the heiress to Tate Industries who never had a worry in her life.

Nobody knew how many cold meals and sick nights she had spent on her own.

A black luxury sedan rolled into the neighborhood.

It slowed down until it came to a halt.

Elliot slowly opened his eyes.

From his car window, he saw a woman crouched on the ground underneath the warm glow of the streetlights. She had her arms tightly wrapped around her knees.

Avery's shoulders were trembling from her sobs.

Chapter 17

The car sped past Avery, leaving a trail of dust.

She lifted her head and saw the blurry tail lights of the Rolls-Royce in the darkness.

Was that Elliot's car?

She wiped the tears off her face, calmed herself down, and walked toward the house.

She saw the car parked in the courtyard when she arrived.

She waited outside in hopes of going in after Elliot had gone to his room.

Her eyes stung. She looked up at the stars shining brightly in the night sky.

It was a beautiful spring night.

Before she knew it, she had been standing outside for an hour.

The driver had already moved the car into the garage.

The lights in the living room were still on, but there was nobody in sight.

Avery felt normal, so she walked slowly into the house.

On the veranda on the second floor, Elliot, dressed in a grey robe, was sitting in his wheelchair. The last dregs of wine sat at the bottom of his wine glass.

He had watched Avery the entire hour that she had stood outside in the cold.

He could not figure out the thoughts that would lead her to spend an entire hour out in the cold. She was so still that she could have easily blended in with the trees that stood next to her.

Elliot had met countless intelligent minds in his lifetime because they were the only people worthy enough to stand by his side.

However, Avery was an exception.

He did not consider her bright because she had provoked him despite knowing what kind of man he was.

She was an extremely foolish woman.

Seeing her miserable, however, affected his mood in a peculiar way.

It was a feeling that he had never felt before.

Maybe it was because of the cold wind, but Avery's head felt heavy by the time she got to her room.

She took out a thick blanket from the closet, wrapped herself in it, and fell into a deep slumber.

She sweated all night, ridding herself of the chill from the night wind.

When Avery woke up the next morning, aside from feeling a little sticky, she was in relatively good spirits.

She took a shower, changed into clean clothes, and went downstairs.

She followed the smell of food to the dining room, and Mrs. Cooper immediately served her breakfast.

"Has he had breakfast?" Avery asked.

"No, Master Elliot hasn't come down yet."

Hearing this, Avery picked up her glass of milk and a piece of toast, then began to wolf down her breakfast.

She was done eating in under five minutes.

"Are you that afraid of him, Madam?" Mrs. Cooper teased.

"I'm not afraid... I just don't want to see him," Avery said, then lifted her chin slightly and added, "Seeing him makes me uncomfortable."

"You'll be fine after spending a little more time together," said Mrs. Cooper.

"Will you be coming home for lunch?"

"I won't. I have something to do on campus today, so I won't be having dinner at home either."

"Alright. I'll go get the driver to take you there," Mrs. Cooper said. She left, intending to inform the driver of his duty.

Avery immediately stopped her and said, "It's fine. I'll just take a cab. He can have the driver."

"We have two drivers at home. One for Master Elliot and one for the odd jobs. I'll get the other one to take you," said Mrs. Cooper.

Avery could not win against her.

Once they had arrived on campus, Avery turned to the driver and said,

"Thank you. You can head back now. I'll find my own way home later."

After the driver drove off, a young woman ran up to Avery, tapped her on the shoulder, and said, "Avery! Who was that Porsche cutie?"

Avery did not expect to bump in her best friend Tammy Lynch to be at the campus entrance.

"He's not a cutie. It's 'Mr. Porsche' to you," Avery said as they walked into campus together. "Tammy, I don't think I can go to graduate school with you."

Tammy stopped in her tracks and said, "Is it because of your family? I heard about your dad. I'm so sorry."

Avery managed a smile and said, "Actually, I never really wanted to go to graduate school."

"I know, you're thinking of marrying your boyfriend after graduation, right?"

Tammy said. "When are you going to introduce me to him?"

Avery was taken aback.

She had only told her mother of what had happened with Cole.

Her friends and classmates only knew that she was dating someone but had no idea who he was.

"We broke up," Avery said. She then took a deep breath and said, "Do you know what it feels like to have someone completely destroy your trust? I thought he was the best man in the world, but he was nothing but human sc*m."

Tammy placed her arm around Avery's waist when she saw her red eyes, and said, "Forget about that, Avery. We're still young. Just think of it as a lesson learned. You'll definitely meet someone even better later!"

"I'm better off depending on myself than a man," Avery chuckled.

"We need to go through some heartbreak to grow," Tammy sighed. "You were completely love-struck before summer break, but look at the mature young lady you've turned into now!"

Avery shook her head and said, "I just hope I can take care of myself after graduation."

"Of course! You're the only double major I know who's at top of the class in both majors. The sky's the limit for someone like you!" Tammy exclaimed.

Avery's cheeks flushed at the praise.

At five in the evening, Avery and Tammy left the campus together. They had planned to have dinner together.

When they arrived at the campus gates, Tammy instantly pointed at the Porsche parked by the street.

"Avery! Isn't that the Mr. Porsche who dropped you off this morning? Is he here to pick you up?"

Tammy still remembered the car.

After all, luxury cars and beautiful people were pleasing to the eyes.

Avery looked toward the open window of the Porsche. She glanced at the driver, and he glanced back at her.

She was taken aback. Did she not tell him not to pick her up?

What was going on?

She walked over to the parked car as the driver opened the door to the backseat for her.

"What is it?" Avery asked in a low voice.

Since Tammy was there, the driver was cautious.

"Let's talk in the car."

Avery's heart tightened in her chest.

"Just go if you're busy, Avery! Let's go out some other time," Tammy said.

Avery nodded and said, "It'll be my treat next time."

Tammy waved her hand and said, "There's no need for that. Call me if you need anything!"

The car sped off once Avery was seated.

"Did you do something to make Master Elliot mad again, Madam?" asked the driver.

Avery raised her brows and answered, "I didn't. Did he ask you to pick me up?"

"Yes," he said. "You better prepare yourself!"

Avery's heart raced in her chest as she racked her brain.

No way!

She was on campus the whole day. She had not even seen Elliot, let alone anger him.

She went through all the events of the past few days, but she did not have a clue.

It was not until her head began to throb in pain that she stopped thinking about it.

They arrived at the house at five forty in the evening.

When the car came to a halt, Avery got down.

She changed into her house slippers and noticed Elliot sitting alone in the living room.

He was wearing a green shirt with the sleeves rolled up, exposing his muscular forearms.

The sapphires on his cufflinks shone brightly.

He was sitting comfortably on the couch, exuding the charm and arrogance of a long-reigning, king.

Chapter 18

"Sit."

Elliot glanced coldly at Avery.

"Okay," she said. She took the couch opposite him.

There was a laptop sitting on the coffee table.

The screen was facing her and on it was surveillance footage.

There was a bed in the footage, and on it was her and Elliot.

Avery's blood boiled at the sight on the screen.

She shot to her feet, pointed at the laptop, and yelled, "Are you a pervert?!"

Did you install a camera in the bedroom?"

She was livid.

She wanted to forget about the three months that she had shared a bed with him.

He was in a vegetative state during those three months, so she had never even seen him as a man.

Even those who looked sophisticated in public would have some inelegant behavior in the privacy of their bedrooms.

It was the reason Avery could not accept that she had been under surveillance for three months!

Nobody had told her there was a surveillance camera in the room when she stayed with him.

The sight of Avery's trembling body actually calmed Elliot down slightly.

"Why did you assume I was the one who installed the camera?"

He had just found out that his mother had installed a surveillance camera in his bedroom while he was ill. The reason she did this was because she was afraid of him suffering any abuse at the hands of his caretakers.

Nobody would be afraid of him when he was in a vegetative state, no matter how powerful he was before.

Elliot could not be angry at his mother because he knew she had done it with the best intentions.

He had retrieved the footage from his mother and browsed through them that day.

His blood pressure rose slightly after watching the videos.

He had never expected Avery to be that kind of woman.

"Oh... It was your mother?" Avery said, but she was still uneasy, and her rage continued to burn. "How could she do that?! She could have at least told me about it! I... I..."

"You never expected me to wake up, did you?" Elliot hissed as his eyes shot daggers at her. "It looked like you had fun messing with my body when I was sick."

Avery's cheeks flushed as she fell back onto the couch.

"I did not! I wasn't messing around! I was giving you a massage! It was to prevent muscle atrophy!"

After she moved into the mansion, she had watched the nurse give Elliot physical therapy many times before she took over the job soon after.

The reason she did that was because she felt awkward being in the room, doing nothing while the nurse gave Elliot physical therapy.

Looking at Avery defending herself, Elliot wondered if he had wronged her.

It was a good thing that the camera had recorded everything.

"Open it up and see for yourself," he said. He did not want to listen to her argue.

Avery's hand trembled as she reached out and hit the play button on the surveillance footage.

Of course, she knew what she had done.

However, there was no way she would admit that she had fooled around with his body.

She just... touched him a little bit...

She would not have done any of it if she had known that he would regain consciousness.

If she had known that there was a camera in the room, she would not have touched him even if someone had threatened to have her arms chopped off!

Avery turned her head away. She did not want to see the contents of the footage.

Even so, she could still see it all from the corner of her eye.

Elliot's words turned out to be true. The footage in the laptop was the perfect weapon against her.

It clearly documented exactly how she had "played" with his body.

Avery took a deep breath and decided to talk her way out of the situation.

"I can explain. The doctors had told me that you had been close to death, so I had never expected you to wake up... and I was also seriously giving you physiotherapy. You can't just focus on me touching you while ignoring all my hard work... I sort of contributed to your recovery."

Elliot's head began to ache as he listened to her explanation.

"Let me find a clip of me giving you a proper massage..."

Avery was not backing down, and she slid her fingers on the laptop's touchpad.

One minute later, she shut the laptop and shot to her feet.

"Sh*t!" she cried as her face turned a crimson red. "Did you see all of that?"

All the footage in here... You've seen it all, haven't you?!"

Her mind was in a frenzy.

Elliot knew exactly why she was reacting that way.

"Of course," he drawled nonchalantly.

"Ahhh! You b*st*rd! Who told you to look? You hooligan!"

Avery was so angry that she was gritting her teeth.

She had seen a clip of herself naked!

She had occasionally walked out of the bathroom naked when she had forgotten to bring her clothes in.

Elliot had been unconscious, anyway, so she had not been concerned.

Never in her dreams had she expected there to be a camera in the bedroom!

"You're the one who was naked. Why are you blaming me?"

Elliot could not wrap his head around her.

He cleared his throat then said in a hoarse voice, "Aside from your fair skin, there isn't much to look at."

"Why, you..."

Avery's eyes darkened with rage. She was beyond furious.

"Who are you to judge my body?! Shut your mouth if you don't know what to say! I'm deleting everything!"

She picked up the laptop and angrily stormed off to her room and slammed the door behind her.

The driver was smoking outside, so he had heard Avery's hysterical shrieks from time to time. When he heard the sound of the door slamming, he sighed at his own lack of imagination.

In his lifetime, he finally got to see a woman throw a tantrum at Elliot Foster.

At seven in the evening, Avery had deleted all of the surveillance footage and returned the laptop to the coffee table in the living room.

The commotion earlier had taken a toll on her.

She was starving, so she put on a brave face and walked into the dining room.

Elliot was not there, but she still felt uneasy.

It felt as if there were cameras all over the house, monitoring her every move.

"I didn't know there was a surveillance camera in the master bedroom, Madam," Mrs. Cooper explained. "Master Elliot really had nothing to do with it. Nobody cares more about privacy than he does."

"It's fine. I already deleted everything," said Avery.

She lost her appetite after eating just a bit of food.

She set her spoon down and turned to Mrs. Cooper, "Was I in an unusually bad mood earlier?"

"Kind of," answered Mrs. Cooper.

"I see..." Avery said. "Whatever. It's not like he can stand up and beat me up, right?"

She made up her mind. Since her privacy meant nothing to him, she might as well face things openly.

She strode out of the dining room, intending to do as she pleased, but things did not go her way.

She bumped into Elliot just as she left the dining room.

He said nothing and did nothing. His dark eyes just looked coldly at her.

There was a peculiar charm in his eyes. They were deep and vast, as if they could see through her in an instant.

It drove her heart into a giddy, uneven beat.

"Move."

His voice was low and magnetic.

Avery froze for a moment, then turned sideways.

Her cheeks flushed with embarrassment as she watched Elliot enter the dining room.

She thought he was there to mess with her, but he just came down for dinner.

She smacked herself in the head and let out a long sigh.

He had merely seen her naked body. It was not a big deal.

She had also seen his naked body previously when she gave him a massage.

Chapter 19

It was Sunday, and Avery did not get out of bed until it was ten thirty in the morning.

It was the first time she had slept in at Elliot's house.

When she walked out of the room, the group of men in the living room shifted their gaze toward her.

Avery was dressed in a loose nightgown with her disheveled hair falling to her shoulders, framing her clean, spotless face.

She did not expect Elliot to have guests that day.

Elliot and his guests stared sternly at her as if they did not expect her to suddenly appear.

Something snapped in Avery's head.

When she realized the awkward situation she was in, she instantly turned around and made her way back to her room.

At that moment, Mrs. Cooper walked over and pulled her in the direction of the dining room.

"You must be hungry, Madam. You were sleeping soundly when I went to your room earlier, so I didn't wake you."

"Those people... Who are they?" Avery stammered.

"They're friends of Master Elliot. They came to visit him. Don't worry. It's fine even if you don't greet them," answered Mrs. Cooper.

"Okay," Avery responded.

She did not even greet Elliot when she saw him, why would she greet his friends?

If she had known that he was having guests over, however, she would have woken early and spent the whole day out.

Elliot's friends in the living room were very interested in Avery.

"Elliot, why's that young girl staying with you? Is she a caretaker? Or maybe..."

"We're all adults here. Elliot is a man, after all. It's normal to have a young lady in his house! Ha ha!"

When Elliot did not respond, everyone shut their mouths and dropped the subject.

"Do you guys know Avery Tate from Tate Industries? They say she's Jack Tate's daughter—"

"I know. She called me Friday night asking for an investment, but I hung up before she could finish talking."

"She really is something. What does her father's debt have to do with her? She must be insane for jumping into this mess!"

"Young people are reckless like that! I looked into their new product, but it's a total bust! A self-driving system might sound cool, but the conditions are complicated and uncontrollable. Whoever invests in it would be an idiot!"

In the dining room, Avery listened to the discussion in the living room with mixed feelings.

Once she was done with breakfast, she took her laptop and went to a nearby cafe to work on her thesis.

At the moment, she had limited abilities. She needed to focus on her studies and life.

She received a new email around four in the afternoon.

She placed her cup of coffee on the table after reading its contents and then read the email once more.

It was signed 'Mr. Z'.

The contents stated his interest in Tate Industries' new product. He wanted to learn more about it and would invest if the meeting went well.

Avery's mind was filled with questions.

She knew nothing about this person apart from the fact that he went by Mr. Z.

If he was really interested in working with Tate Industries, he could have just set up a meeting at the office.

After some consideration, Avery replied to the email.

[Is this a new scam?]

Mr. Z's reply came shortly after.

[You have quite the sense of humor, Miss Tate. Here's proof of my assets.]

There was an image file attached to the email.

When Avery opened the file, her eyes instantly widened in shock.

The image was a screenshot of a bank account showing he had close to two hundred million dollars in his checking account.

As it was a tremendous sum, Avery stared at the image and did the calculations in her head many times before she was able to confirm the amount.

Her cheeks flushed and her heart raced. Her hands were trembling as she typed her reply.

[You're pretty good at editing pictures, but isn't this going overboard? Who would have two hundred million in their checking account?]

[What would it take for you to believe me? How about you send over your bank account number, and I'll bank in a deposit of intent of cooperation to you?]

[Is this what scamming techniques have advanced into? All you need is a bank account number to steal all of someone's money?]

Mr. Z did not respond to Avery's last email.

After pondering for a while, Avery sent him a screenshot of an account number.

It was an account that could only receive funds, so it did not matter if he turned out to be a scammer.

Avery pursed her lips and waited for a reply.

She received a transfer notification on her phone shortly after.

She opened up the notification and saw that Mr. Z had wired over eight hundred thousand dollars.

Shaun arrived at the cafe that Avery was at half an hour later.

"What's going on, Avery? Did this Mr. Z really send you eight hundred thousand dollars?"

Avery showed her phone screen to Shaun and said, "This balance of eight hundred thousand is from him."

Shaun was ecstatic.

"Which company is he from? You should set an appointment with him and talk face to face!"

Avery had an uneasy expression on her face as she said, "All he gave me was an address and asked me to meet him on Friday night."

"That's great! Send the address to me, too. I'll go with you on Friday,"

Shaun said.

"Okay," Avery responded.

Mr. Z's appearance allowed Avery to temporarily put the issue of Tate Industries' impending doom aside.

However, she could not help but wonder about the identity of Mr. Z, and where he came from.

He had given her eight hundred thousand dollars, and he had never even met her. Did he have too much money on his hands, or was he really that interested in Tate Industries?

Whatever it was, Avery thought it was incredible.

Friday arrived in the blink of an eye.

At breakfast, Elliot said, "Do you have time for dinner at the old mansion tonight?"

Avery stayed silent for a few seconds, then thought of an excuse and said, "I've got something to do on campus today, so I'll be back a little later tonight."

Elliot frowned slightly. He pursed his lips but said nothing.

Avery let out a sigh of relief.

She was meeting Mr. Z at six that evening.

The fate of Tate Industries depended on that meeting that night.

"You're still my wife for now," Elliot said as he placed his cup of coffee on the table. "If I ever find out that you're lying to me, you're dead."

His dark eyes dug into her, but his voice was neutral.

Avery's entire body went cold.

They had limited interactions with one another in the past few days.

She thought it was nice to continue that type of relationship, but why would he suddenly say something like that?

She was about to say something when he left the dining room.

She watched his back and mumbled to herself, "Weirdo."

...

Avery arrived at the Twilight Bar at five forty in the evening.

She gave Shaun a call, only to hear his frantic voice on the other end of the line.

"I'm stuck in traffic and I don't know when I'll get there. Go on in without me!

I'll get there as soon as I can."

Anxiety suddenly washed over Avery.

The meeting was set up a week ago, and Mr. Z was the one who booked the private room.

An attendant escorted her to the entrance of private room V606.

She took a deep breath and opened the door.

Unexpectedly, Mr. Z was already there.

She could vaguely make out the silhouette of a man in a wheelchair in the dark room.

Her eyes suddenly widened.

It... It was Elliot!

What was he doing here?!

Could it be that he...

Chapter 20

Avery felt like someone was strangling her.

She felt suffocated as the world began to spin around her.

How could Elliot be Mr. Z?!

Mr. Z sent her eight hundred thousand dollars and wanted to invest in Tate Industries. How was it possible that Elliot would do that?

However, if he was not Mr. Z, then what was he doing there?

Her mind spun as she looked at the man before her. His wheelchair, dark shirt, and unusually fair skin told her that the man in front of her was no other than Elliot Foster.

Avery let out a cold breath and subconsciously took a few steps back, but the door to the private room was closed.

"Leaving before saying hello?"

Seeing her so nervous made Elliot press his lips into a thin line.

"What are you doing in a place like this?"

Avery raised her hand to push a strand of hair behind her ear. She forced herself to stay calm as she said, "I... I'm here to have dinner with some friends."

"This is a bar."

"Oh..."

Avery glanced around the private room. It was a large room that was lavishly decorated, but she felt like she was in hell and could not settle down.

"I... I think I came to the wrong place. I'll go look for them now."

"Avery Tate," Elliot hissed. His voice was as cold as ice. "Did you not take what I said this morning seriously?"

"I heard you," Avery said, "but I have no reason to live my life by your words."

She remembered what happened last time like it was yesterday.

She had not drunk that night, but he had insisted that she had dressed like a prostitute so that she might go out drinking with other men.

Avery's reply made Elliot raise his thick brows.

He knew she was different from other women. She had her own opinions, and she did not back down in the face of power. Most importantly, no matter how sternly he warned her, she would never take his threats seriously.

Which also meant that she did not take him seriously at all.

Elliot picked up a glass of wine and took a sip.

Avery took a deep breath and asked, "What are you doing here? Didn't you say you were going to the old mansion for dinner?"

She wanted to ask what he was doing in the room that Mr. Z had booked.

She wanted to ask if he was Mr. Z, but she did not dare be so straightforward.

This was because she had no idea what his answer would be.

If he was Mr. Z, how would they proceed to discuss business matters?

If he was not, how would she deal with the blatant lie she had told him that morning?

"Come and drink with me," Elliot ordered as he glared at her with bloodshot eyes.

Avery raised her brows.

What was he trying to do?

"I told you I don't drink," she replied. She could not read his eyes, nor could she read his heart. All she wanted to do was leave that place. "Enjoy yourself. I'm leaving!"

She tried to open the door but noticed that it was locked from the outside.

There was no way of opening that door no matter how much strength she put into it.

"What's going on, Elliot? Let me out!" she snapped as her cheeks flushed with anger.

"I told you to drink with me," Elliot said in a threatening tone. "Did you not hear me, or are you feigning ignorance?"

Avery's cold sweat dripped down her back, and her ankles shook.

If she could drink, then she would drink with him to his heart's content.

However, she could not drink right now!

She could not drink even if he strangled her.

The door was locked, so there was no way out.

She could only walk toward him and try to reason with him.

"I lied to you this morning," Avery said as she stood next to him and lowered her gaze. "I had something to do today, but it wasn't something on campus. I made an appointment to meet someone tonight. He agreed to invest in my father's company."

"Who is he?" Elliot asked as he raised his gaze and stared at her flushed cheeks.

"I don't know his name."

"You don't even know his name, but you came to meet him?"

"Shaun came with me."

"Where is he, then?"

"Stuck in traffic."

Avery took a deep breath, looked straight at Elliot with her watery eyes, and said, "I'm not a child. Even if I am your wife, I have my own space and social life. You have no right to interfere in my affairs."

While she spoke, Elliot picked up his glass and took another sip.

She could not help but be distracted by the sensual movements of his throat.

Would he get drunk, drinking like this?

How would he get home if he got drunk?

Just as she was lost in thought, Elliot's big hand clasped around her arm.

By the time she noticed the pain, he had already yanked her over and thrown her onto the couch.

The couch was soft, but Avery was still upset.

What did he think she was?

Was she a toy that he could throw around as he pleased?!

Was she not allowed to have her own thoughts and opinions?

She gritted her teeth and tried to get up from the couch.

Since he was unwilling to reason with her, then there was no point in holding back!

Just as Avery was preparing to stand up, from the corner of her eye, she saw a tall figure looming over her and blocking the light in front of her.

Elliot was standing up!

He stood up from the wheelchair!

She stared at him in stunned silence as her mind went blank.

She forgot about her anger. She forgot about getting up. She forgot about everything that she had wanted to say or do.

Her lips moved as if she wanted to say something, but she was at a loss for words.

The next moment, Elliot threw himself over Avery and pressed her down onto the couch.

"Men take women here to drink. If you're not here for that, then why are you here?!"

He reached out his long, slender fingers and grabbed her chin tightly.

Her red lips parted from the pressure he exerted.

With his other hand, Elliot picked up the wine glass on the table. The red liquid in the glass shook slightly back and forth.

Fear took over Avery.

Tears began to stream down her face. She tried to escape, but he was pressing down on her with such force that she could not move a muscle.

"You come here when a stranger invites you... You need to learn your lesson properly," Elliot said coldly before he poured the wine into Avery's open mouth.

Avery grabbed onto his arms and tried to push him away, but he did not budge no matter how hard she tried.

He had just recovered from a long-term illness, but he was horrifyingly strong.

The sight of Elliot standing up from the wheelchair suddenly popped into her head.

He was taller and more terrifying than she had thought.

The deep red liquid entered her mouth. She did not swallow it, but the bitterness of the alcohol choked her and made her cough violently.

It felt like she was drowning.

In a time of desperation, a person's body will act on instinct to save itself.

Avery grabbed Elliot's shirt collar in panic and yanked it so hard that its button snapped off.

The button rolled onto the ground, and he felt a wave of cold air hit his bare chest.

Elliot looked at the face of the woman in front of him. It was flushed with agony. His chest tightened, and his heart suddenly softened.

He let go of her chin.

Avery immediately turned her head and spat the wine out of her mouth.

"I hate you, Elliot Foster!" she cried through teary eyes and clenched fists.

"It was just one drink. Was that so hard?"

The pity in his eyes disappeared. His slender fingers fell onto her collar and unbuttoned her shirt, exposing her exquisite collar bone.

"If it weren't me, another man would be doing this to you! These are the consequences of your lies!"

Chapter 21

It was a long and painful night.

When it was all over, Avery was so tired that she passed out.

The next morning, Elliot showed up at Sterling Group around ten in the morning as usual.

Once he entered his office, Ben walked in.

"I went to Twilight to see you last night, but I didn't catch you. Did you and Avery Tate leave early?"

Elliot raised his brows and said, "That's what you're here to talk about?"

Ben smiled bitterly and placed the file in his hand on Elliot's desk.

"This is the financial reports for Tate Industries from the past few years. I took some time to look into it. They're in pretty deep trouble."

Ben paused, then added, "Their finance director embezzled at least three hundred million dollars. I heard that he was Jack Tate's brother-in-law."

Elliot's eyes twitched slightly.

If what Ben said was true, then developing the new product was not the only reason Tate Industries was facing bankruptcy.

"This is the lesson. All of us should be careful about picking the correct wife," Ben sighed. "If Jack Tate hadn't had an affair with Wanda Tate back then, the Tates wouldn't be in this mess."

Elliot's expression was cold as he said, "This proves that women are obstacles on the road to success."

"It looks like you're really determined to divorce Avery Tate!" Ben said.

"When do you plan on going through with it? Should we have a party to celebrate your return to single life?"

Elliot cocked an eyebrow and said icily, "Don't you have work to do? Do you have that much free time on your hands?"

Ben jumped up from his seat, cleared his throat, and said, "I'm going now... Just a friendly reminder, though. Shouldn't you do something about that bruise on your neck? If I didn't know better, I'd think you got scratched by a cat. It looks like you two had a steamy night!"

"Get out!" Elliot cleared his throat and said hoarsely.

Ben immediately hurried out of the room.

"Are you busy, Elliot? I have something outside of work to talk to you about," she said as she walked in and closed the door behind her.

Elliot glanced at the emails in his inbox and said, "I'm busy right now. You can talk about non-work related matters after work!"

Chelsea froze for a moment, but she stubbornly walked over to his desk and said, "I'll just tell you now! This is more important than work."

She handed the file she brought in to Elliot and said, "Take a look at this. I'm sure its contents will shock you."

She took a seat on the chair across from him, and her eyes immediately fell on the scratch on his neck.

She didn't have to think hard to know what it was.

A wave of jealousy rose inside of her.

"Did you sleep with Avery Tate last night?" she exclaimed with a slight tremor in her voice. "Elliot, she's not worth your sincerity!"

"Shut up!"

Elliot's furrowed brows reflected his impatience.

"My relationship with her has nothing to do with you!"

As he said those words, he opened up the file and looked at the documents within.

Maternal Health File

Name: Avery Tate

Sex: Female

Gestational Age: 12 Weeks

The vein on Elliot's forehead throbbed as he read the file.

The chill in his eyes could kill.

He held back his rage and continued reading.

Father: Cole Foster

Elliot threw the file onto the table.

Avery was pregnant, and Cole was the father!

Chapter 22

Chelsea decided to add fuel to the fire when she saw Elliot's savage fury.

"Before she married you, Avery Tate was dating your nephew, Cole. It's not a big deal since everyone has a past, but she slept with your nephew after she married you! She's made a fool out of you.

I bet they did this thinking you were going to die back then!"

Elliot's fists were clenched and his face was stone-cold,

His expression was a face of seething anger. His cold eyes glared furiously at the maternal health file on his desk.

“I suspect they did this to get your inheritance. When the doctor issued a notice of critical illness, all of us thought you didn’t have long to live. If she got pregnant with your kid at the time, then your estate would fall right into her hands. They planned everything to the tee! When you unexpectedly regained consciousness, it ruined their plans.”

“Get out!” Elliot roared.

Whether or not what Chelsea said was true, the thought of this scandal being exposed to the public made him feel sick to the stomach.

Chelsea was slightly upset, but she completely understood his feelings at that moment.

She got up to leave, and carefully closed the door behind her.

Elliot’s throat moved slightly. His breath was hot.

He loosened his collar, picked up the file and carefully examined its contents once more.

When his eyes fell on Cole’s name, a murderous aura rose in his eyes.

Elliot had always known that his brother had his eyes on his fortune, but he did not expect Avery to be a pawn that he planted by his side!

He almost fell right into their trap.

He recalled the chaotic night he had spent with Avery, and his rage rose uncontrollably.

In the master bedroom at Elliot's mansion, Avery was in a deep slumber.

The room door suddenly burst open and filled the room with a screeching noise.

Before she could open her eyes, she was forcefully pulled up.

"I'm sorry, Miss Tate!" said the bodyguard as he yanked her out of bed.

"What are you doing?! Where are you taking me?!" Avery cried frantically.

"The hospital. Abortion."

A chill shot through her entire body upon hearing those words.

Did Elliot know she was pregnant?

How did he find out?

Who told him?

“Where’s Elliot?! Where is he? I want to see him!” Avery sobbed in terror.

“I’m not getting an abortion !

don’t want to!”

She tried to escape the bodyguard’s clutches, but Elliot had used up all of her energy the night before.

She was carried to the car and thrown into the backseat like a piece of garbage.

Elliot was sitting in the spacious backseat, staring coldly at her. He threw a piece of paper in her face and said, “You had so many chances to get rid of the b*st*rd inside of you, so why didn’t you do it? Do you love Cole that much? Do you want me to kill him with my bare hands?!”

His face was pale and his voice was chilling to the bone. Avery picked up the piece of paper, saw that it was the information she filled out when she registered at the hospital, and shut her eyes in agony.

She wanted to fill out the father’s name honestly, but Elliot had threatened to kill the baby if she ever got pregnant

Which was why she filled out Cole's name instead.

She was discovered in the end!

"Elliot, I'm begging you... Please don't make me get an abortion!"

Avery's eyes were bloodshot as she held onto his sleeve and begged through her tears. "They're not b*st*rds. They're not.

Chapter 23

Elliot unceremoniously slapped Avery's hand away and hissed coldly, "Letting you live is already showing you mercy, Shut your mouth and stop p*ssing me off!"

Avery looked at his heartless expression and swallowed all of her pain.

There was nothing she could say or do to make him change his mind. She pressed herself into the seat and gazed miserably out the window. When the car came to a halt in front of the hospital, Avery was forcefully yanked out of the car and dragged to the gynecology clinic.

Elliot stayed in a car and lit a cigarette.

Avery's teary eyes and the hateful expression she shot at him kept replaying in his head.

He refused to go easy on her!

Everyone who betrayed him had to pay for the consequences.

The large doors to the operating room slowly shut after Avery was pushed into surgery.

The doors reopened about half an hour later.

The doctor walked out and informed the bodyguard, "The surgery is complete, but we'll need to observe the patient for at least an hour."

The bodyguard's task was to get Avery to go through with the abortion. Now that it was done, his mission was complete.

The bodyguard left the waiting room and the doctor returned to the operating room.

When Laura arrived at the hospital after getting the call, Avery was sitting on a bench with her eyes red from tears.

"It hurts, Mom..." Laura patted her back and cooed, "Don't cry, my dear. Let's go home. He'll regret it when he finds out the truth!"

"No, he won't. He'll never regret it," Avery said as she wiped the tears from the corner of her eyes. "His heart is harder and colder than stone."

Laura held Avery as they walked out of the hospital, and they hailed a cab.

Once they were gone, Elliot's car sped off from the hospital.

Cole was told that Elliot had something to discuss with him and he was summoned to his house.

When Cole arrived in the evening, there was no sign on Elliot anywhere.

"What does my uncle want to talk to me about? Didn't he say he didn't want to see me here again?" Cole asked Mrs. Cooper after taking a sip of tea.

Mrs. Cooper's expression was anxious. She shook her head violently and said, "I don't know anything. Don't ask me."

She had hid in a corner and watched as Avery was forcefully taken away earlier. She could not say or do anything about it.

She could not believe that Avery was pregnant. What was even more unbelievable was the fact that Elliot would force her to get an abortion.

They slept together the night before after all.

Elliot's car drove into the courtyard shortly after.

Cole shot to his feet when he heard the car approaching and walked out to greet his uncle.

When Elliot emerged from the car, his dark expression was in complete contrast with the evening sun.

Cole had a bad feeling, but he smiled and said, "Uncle Elliot, why did you call."

Before he could finish his sentence, Elliot's bodyguard kicked him in the gut and sent him flying to the ground.

“You actually showed up, you little brat?! How dare you take your uncle for a fool?!” The bodyguard stepped down on Cole’s neck and spat at him. “Since you’re Master Elliot’s nephew, I’ll let you choose how you want to die. How about it?!”

Cole was racked with terror.

“What did I do, Uncle Elliot? Tell me what I did? I have no idea what I did!” Elliot looked down on his nephew from his wheelchair and said cruelly, “I killed your and Avery Tate’s baby.”

Cole was mortified. 1

“How is that possible? How could she have my kid? I’ve never even slept with her! How could she be pregnant with my kid?!”

Cole’s face was flushed in horror.

After a moment of stunned silence, he said, “Uncle Elliot, you said Avery’s pregnant? Wouldn’t the kid be yours, then?!”

Chapter 24

Elliot frowned.

If he had not seen Avery fill the list with his own eyes, he would have almost believed Cole’s words.

“Avery said that the child is yours, then it’s yours!” The bodyguard scolded.

“How dare you do such a thing! It’s not enough to repay even if you have nine lives!”

Cole cried out, “Avery lied! Uncle, the reason I broke up with her was that she wouldn’t let me touch her. I dumped her, and she hated me! She deliberately said that the child in her belly was mine! She wanted revenge on me! Uncle, you must believe me! No matter who the child in her belly belongs to, it can’t be mine!”

Elliot looked at the man lying on the ground with his face filled with fear. His heart suddenly went cold.

This was the man that Avery liked.

This cowardly and spineless man could easily betray her when he encountered problems.

How could he let Cole die so easily?

He wanted to destroy Cole little by little in front of Avery.

Laura took Avery back to her rented house.

After entering the room, Laura helped her to lie down on the bed.

Avery looked at the ceiling and said, “Mom, my child is still here. It hasn’t left me.”

Laura was stunned, “Avery, what’s going on? Didn’t you say that Elliot forced you to abort the child?”

“I told the doctor if she dared to touch me, I would never walk out the operating room alive. I wouldn’t let her out of the operating room alive either.”.

Avery’s voice was unusually cold.

Although the child was safe, her heart had already turned into ashes, as if she had died once.

‘I got away with it this time, but what about next time? She thought to herself.

As long as she stayed by Elliot’s side, the child’s safety would always be at stake.

The phone rang, breaking the heavy air hanging in the room.

She picked up the phone and saw that it was the vice president calling.

After picking up the phone, the voice of the vice president could be heard.

“Avery, I was drunk last night and just woke up!

Did Mr. Z contact you today?”

Avery was stunned, “No. Who did you drink with last night?”

“Mr. Z! His name is Jun Hertz. I haven’t found any information about him on the internet. He is a very young man. His family background should be quite wealthy. He said he has been looking for suitable investment projects. I talked a lot to him last night, and I don't know what decision he will make after considering it."

"Is he an acquaintance of Elliot?" Avery asked cautiously.

"Uhh. I don't know! But he knows Ben. He said that Ben is his senior, and Ben is the financial president of Sterling Group and the right-hand man of Elliot." The vice president quickly cleared up the relationship between those people. "So, Jun should have known Elliot."

"Avery, why did you suddenly mention Elliot? Do you know him?" The vice president asked curiously.

"No, I don't." Avery's tone was icy cold.

Her heart ached at the mention of his name. After talking on the phone, she put the phone down.

Laura walked to the bed and sat down.

"Avery, I found a job," Laura said. "I didn't tell you before because I didn't know if I could do it well." "What kind of work?"

Avery asked, suppressing her sadness.

Chapter 25

“There’s a close friend that I used to know. She needs a nanny to take care of her grandchildren, and the pay is very high.

I thought about it. A job is just a job anyway, so I went to try it out. Today is the third day of work, and everything is fine so far. I can earn a thousand and five hundred a month!”

“Your father is already gone, and he didn’t leave you with any property. I can’t hold you back,” Laura added.

Avery’s tears fell uncontrollably once she heard it.

“A close friend of yours is quite rich, isn’t she?” Her voice was a little hoarse, but now that she started crying, her voice became even hoarser.

“Being a nanny for a friend... it must be tough!”

“It’s not tough! Now as long as I can make money, I’m satisfied. My pride isn’t worth as much! Moreover, the rich will not necessarily stay rich their whole lives. Maybe I’m not as rich as my friend now, but maybe my daughter will make a lot of money in the future.”

Laura took a few tissues and wiped Avery’s tears.

“Mom... you don’t have to go to work. I can do a part-time job. I can work next year...” Avery burst into tears.

“You’re pregnant now, how are you going to work? Avery, if you really want to keep the child, we can’t keep on like this.”

Laura frowned and was very puzzled. “Why does Elliot not want this child?

It’s his own flesh and blood!”

“Really? Then why didn’t he marry that woman?”. Laura’s face was ashen, and she felt sorry for her daughter.

“It’s alright. Don’t be afraid. If it really doesn’t work, let’s hide and give birth to this baby. We keep it from him.”

Laura took Avery into her arms and patted her shoulder lightly.

Three days later.

Avery received a call from Cole.

He asked her to meet him. 1

After thinking for a few seconds, she agreed.

His purpose for a meetup, must be because of the child.

Cafe.

Avery stared at Cole's face several times.

He had several band-aids on his face, and even with the band-aids on, the large bruises were still visible.

“Stop looking at me. My uncle did this. If you hadn't said that the child you were carrying was mine, my uncle wouldn't have beaten me.” Cole said in a dull tone. Resigned, he continued, “Just treat it as my repayment for you! But when you asked me to elope with you, I really didn't have the courage.”

“Cole Foster, your problem is not that you didn't elope with me. If I don't bring up the matter between you and Cassandra now, are you going to hide it from me forever?” Avery picked up the glass of water and took a sip.

“When did you find out?” Cole looked at her in surprise.

“No wonder you never replied to my messages or answered my calls.”

Avery took a deep breath and asked, “Do you know where Cassandra is now? Her uncle took the money from my dad’s company. I won’t let it go easily.”

“She’s traveling around the world... It’s useless to find her for what her uncle did.”

“That’s her dad too. Avery, I know you’re angry, but please calm down. Don’t worry about the mess that your dad left behind.” Cold stretched out a big palm, trying to hold her hand, but she quickly avoided it.

“Avery, I’m sorry. Cassandra and I are not like what you think. I have never loved her. The reason that I’m with her... is because she seduced me. Men can’t control their lust and instinct most of the time... The woman I love the most in my heart has always been you.”

Avery got goosebumps in disgust.

“You may not know it, but my injuries are more serious than they seem, but I don’t blame you.” Cole said miserably. “I was in the hospital for a few days, and I haven’t been discharged yet. I came to you in such a hurry because I wanted to ask you, just whose child is it that you’re carrying in your belly?” (1)

“Oh... Avery, let’s work together!” Cole said his true purpose. “You still have a chance to approach him now. You find a way to kill him, and when he dies, no one can bully us again.”

Chapter 26

Kill him?

Avery frowned. Although she hated Elliot, she never thought of killing him.

Even if the child in her belly was now gone, it was impossible for her to have this thought.

Besides, could she really kill him?

Seeing that Avery was hesitating, Cole said, “My uncle is on a business trip now. You go back and think about it. Avery, as long as you can kill Elliot, I can marry you right away. I will give you whatever you want. I have told my parents about us and they are very supportive.”

Cole's attitude was sincere and his eyes were earnest.

When she was in love with him previously, she had always wanted to be recognized by his parents.

However, he had been reluctant to disclose their relationship.

Now, she no longer needed the approval of others.

“What if I fail?” Avery asked him. “If he finds out that I want to kill him, do you think he will keep me alive? Cole, you were a coward before, and now you're just the same. If you want to kill him, you do it yourself. If you can't bear the consequences of the failure, then don't do such illegal things!”

Cole's expression instantly froze. He did not expect that Avery would refuse.

“It won't fail. We'll poison him. You only need to poison him, and there won't be any trouble in the future. My grandma will definitely collapse, and my dad will handle the rest...”

“Since it's so safe, why don't you do it yourself?! He will return to the old house once a week.

You can poison him while he's back in the old house.” Avery suggested.

Cole was stunned.

“Cole, I don't think you've been beaten enough.” Avery looked at him and said bluntly, “Elliot is your uncle. How could you attack your own blood-related kin?”

“Isn’t it because you bribed his lawyer when he was sick and he found out later that he punished you?” Avery said,

“Although I hate him for being heartless, I haven’t lost my mind.”

After speaking, Avery got up and decided to leave.

“Avery! Don’t go first! Let’s have a meal together! It doesn’t matter if you don’t stand by my side,” Cole pleaded. “Now our family relationship with my uncle is irreconcilable, even if I don’t make a move on him, he will still definitely suppress me.”

Avery could sense the hint of conspiracy from his words.

“You really plan to poison your uncle?” Avery sat down again.

Cole continued, “If you don’t help me, then I won’t necessarily poison him. I may think of other methods that are less likely to be discovered.”

Avery asked, “When are you going to do it?”

Cate saw that she asked for the details, and asked her in return, “Avery, you won’t tell this plan to my uncle, will you? Do you want me to die?”

“You’re flattering me. Do you think Elliot will still care about me?”

“Oh... I haven’t decided when to start. After all, he hasn’t come back yet. We’ll see about it after he comes back,” Cole said.

After lunch, Cold was picked up by the driver.

Avery went to the hospital where she had made documentation before.

The hospital had an inescapable responsibility for the disclosure of her personal information.

Besides, she wanted to know who went to the hospital to check her information..

“Miss Tate, I didn’t leak your information. No one came to me to check your information. Would you like to ask someone else?” The doctor who helped to make Avery’s documentation previously brushed away his responsibility immediately.

Avery said, “If you don’t help me to find out who did it, then I’ll take you and this hospital to court. Now is a society ruled by law, and I believe that the law will restore justice for me. If the law fails to do so, I’ll expose everything to the media...”

“Hey! Don’t be so impulsive!”

Chapter 27

The doctor, seeing that Avery Tate was very emotional and that the matter was indeed somewhat serious, had to change his tone, “Miss Tate, I am so sorry. Just now, I used the wrong words. Please have a seat and drink some water first, I’ll go and have a look.”

The doctor poured her a glass of water and then immediately went to his seniors.

About half an hour later, the doctor was back.

“Miss Tate, do you know Chelsea Tierney? She’s the one who came to check your file.”

Getting the answer, Avery Tate left the hospital.

Never thought Chelsea Tierney regarded her as a pest and a thorn in the flesh!

However, there was no way she was going to be beaten passively.

Enter title...

She would definitely find a way to make Chelsea Tierney pay the price!

Tate Industries.

Avery Tate entered her father’s president’s office.

The vice president had been waiting inside for a long time.

“Tate, I want you to come here today because of two things,” Shaun Locklyn poured her a cup of warm water, “Jun Hertz’s side has changed his mind, originally he wanted to invest in us, but today he wants to buy our company for one billion directly.”

Avery Tate saw that the vice president did not look so pleasant and guessed, “Is this price too low?”

“If the company was in its normal days, at a price of one billion, an acquisition wouldn’t even be thought of. But now the company is not what it used to be, and the price given by Jun Hertz is just a little higher.” The vice president said, “In fact, being acquired at a low price is not the hardest part, what is hard is that after the acquisition by Jun Hertz, the core business will change. To put it simply, he doesn’t see driverless cars and won’t do this...”

“Then why does he want to do the acquisition?” Avery Tate wondered.

This system, in general terms, is artificial intelligence, and with it, there is no longer any need for a driver. Also, this system can be applied to other fields, such as, robots, drones and others.” .

Avery Tate: “Is this system so valuable?”

The vice president laughed bitterly: “Do you know how much your father spent on developing it? Well over a billion. How could your father have left the company to you because he wanted you to take on his debts? He was hoping that the company would come to life with you and take Tate Industries to a more glorious future.”

Avery Tate’s eyes dimmed a few moments.

she feared she was not capable of doing so now.

“One more thing, I don’t know if your father told you.” The vice president said, “The development of the new system was in its final stages, but it was stopped when your dad fell ill. Because your dad has the stuff in his hands. He doesn’t open access and no one else can touch the core at all.”

The vice president walked over to the wall of bookshelves and pressed a button.

In a flash, the wall of bookshelves moved away, and an entrance appeared.

“We have looked for many master locksmiths to open your dad’s safe, but we have not been successful. Tate, do you know the password to your dad’s safe? He must have said something to you before he died, right?”

Avery Tate’s heart was greatly shaken.

She entered the hidden door and saw a large safe.

In this modest space she saw a family portrait hanging on the wall.

It was Dad, Mum, and her.

Her eyes reddened instantly.

She thought Dad had long forgotten that the three of them were the only family.

“Tate, since we can’t afford to keep the Tate Industries alive, then let it go bankrupt! We’ll sell this system secretly and split the money. That way we’re all rich.” The vice president pushed the glasses on his nose, his ambition clear as day, “If the Tate Industries doesn’t go bankrupt, the money paid by Jun Hertz won’t fall into our pockets.” Avery Tate looked at his greedy face and she was suddenly alerted inwardly.

Chapter 28

“...I don’t know the password. My dad didn’t tell me the password before he passed.” Avery Tate frowned and shook her head.

She hadn’t lied.

It was true that Jack Tate hadn’t told her about the company before his death, let alone his last words related to the password.

There were so many people in the room at that time, if Jack Tate had said it, she couldn’t have been the only one who knew.

“Uncle Locklyn, why don’t I go back and ask my mom!” Avery Tate discussed with the vice president,” When I saw my dad for the last time, he left after saying a couple of words to me. My mom might know a bit more.”

The vice president didn’t doubt it: “Okay. Don’t tell anyone about this. This is a top secret of our company. I’m only telling you because you’re the heir appointed by President Tate.”

Avery Tate glanced at the safe, a very sober voice in her mind reminding her.

They had to tell her about this secret because they couldn’t find someone to open the safe. 1

Enter title...

If they had opened this safe secretly, they would have simply taken the stuff in the safe privately and would never have let her know about it.

“Well, I definitely won’t tell anyone about this thing. Uncle Locklyn, apart from you, who else knows about this?” Avery Tate chatted with the vice president as her feet headed towards the door.

The vice president followed along towards the door.

“Two other technicians. They are both your father’s particularly trusted people and have been following him for many years. When the time comes to sell and get the money, we’ll split it equally, what do you think?” The vice president said.

Avery Tate nodded, “Then I’ll go back and get the password first.”

“Alright. Tate, it’s not that I don’t persist, it’s that no one sees your father’s company and us as a team. They only want this system we’ve developed, and we’ll definitely be kicked out when the time comes. It’s also very hard for me to make this decision.”

“Yes, I understand. Uncle Locklyn, what if I can’t think of the right password?” Avery Tate’s eyes lifted up to look at the Vice President.

She was really a bit worried.

She had absolutely no clue now.

The vice president frowned, “Your father must have left you some signals when he gave you the company. You go back and think about it carefully.”

“OK”

After leaving the company, Avery Tate took a taxi back to her mother’s home.

Laura Jensen was washing vegetables. “Tate, why did Cole Foster look for you? Didn’t you two break up?”

Avery Tate picked up her glass of water, took a sip and said, “He was beaten up by Elliot Foster and wanted to fight back. He tried to use my hand to kill Elliot Foster.”

Laura Jensen’s face changed dramatically, “Tate, you wouldn’t agree to that, would you?!”

“How is that possible? Killing someone, I definitely won’t do it. Mom, what kind of person am I in your mind?”

Laura Jensen sighed in relief: “You’ve grown up and don’t share a lot of things with me. For example, the matter of your pregnancy...If Elliot Foster hadn’t forced you to have an abortion, how long would you have planned to hide it from me?”

Avery Tate walked up to her mom and hugged her: “Mom, I didn’t know about the pregnancy until very late, too. By the way, do you know where Dad’s relics are?”

The expression on Laura Jensen’s face froze and she said awkwardly, “Tate, your father and I divorced a long time ago and when he died, his relics were not mine to handle. What do you need his relics for?"

She told her mother what had just happened.

"It's a six-digit code. What would Dad have set? Did he ever tell you about it?" She pondered hard.

Laura Jensen shook her head, "He didn't say anything to me about the password. He kept telling me he was sorry then and kept shedding tears... Honestly, I hated him, but every time I think of the image of him on his deathbed, I get soft...

Sigh, what's the use of hating again when people have gone."

"Mom, the Vice President told me that Dad didn't give me the company to carry on the debt. He said that the system Dad developed could be sold for a lot of money." Avery Tate's nose twitched, and she felt very complicated.

Chapter 29

Laura placed her hand on Avery's shoulder and said, "You are his daughter, so he won't hurt you. I was with him when he first started his company. When we were married, I didn't ask for anything. I also invested a lot of money for his business.

If he dares hurt you, I will never forgive him, even if I'm dead."

Monday.

Avery took a cab to Sterling Group.

That was the first time she went to Elliot's company.

The Sterling Group building towered high and was majestic. She stepped out from the cab and headed towards the ground floor lobby.

“Miss, do you have an appointment?” asked the receptionist.

Avery replied, “No. Please contact Chelsea Tierney for me. Say that Avery Tate wants to meet her. She will see me when she hears my name.”

The receptionist stared at Avery for a while. She noticed that she dressed well, so she called the PR Department for her.

Soon, Chelsea came down.

She came out from an elevator and walked towards Avery. She glanced at her with a fierce gaze.

“Didn’t you just have an abortion? Don’t you need to lie in bed and rest?” mocked Chelsea.

Avery had a natural makeup look that day, so she looked alright. She said, “Chelsea, you go to great lengths for this, but does Elliot agree to marry you?”

Chelsea was not angry, instead, she smiled like a victor. She said, “He won’t stay with you even if he won’t marry me.

Avery, he just allowed you to have an abortion. That’s merciful enough for you. If I were him, I’m afraid I would kill you.”

“Oh, it appears that you’re familiar with illegal deeds.”

“Do you think you can ruffle my feathers with that? You’re such a clown right now.” Chelsea smirked with her red lips, and insulted her. "Freaking loser!"

Avery was unbothered. She asked, "Chelsea, have you ever worn a puffy dress in front of Elliot?"

Chelsea arched her eyebrow and said, "So immature! I never wear puffy dresses! Why do you ask?"

"I finally figured out why Elliot doesn't like you." Avery smirked and got close to her ear. "Elliot likes the cute type. He likes women in puffy dresses."

Chelsea laughed like she heard the funniest joke ever.

"I already slept with Elliot. You haven't, right? He likes women in puffy dresses, and he also likes women in a home haircut.

Oh yeah, the dresses better be pink. If you dress that way, he's bound to like you more," said Avery.

Chelsea froze up.

She knew Elliot for more than ten years, but Elliot was never physically affectionate with her.

However, Avery knew him for less than three months. She could not believe that they slept together.

Chelsea had to believe what Avery was talking about.

"Why are you telling me this? Why would you help me?!" questioned Chelsea. "Because I want a divorce with Elliot. He's dead to me. I just want my freedom back. Is that a good enough reason?"

Avery had a cold gleam in her eyes. Pink puffy dresses and a home haircut, those were the distinct features of that woman in Elliot's laptop. If Chelsea dressed like that in front of Elliot, she knew that he would go mad. Perhaps, he would choke Chelsea to death.

Chapter 30

Friday, afternoon.

"Madam, Master Elliot will be back tonight. You should come back too!"

Avery had been living at her mom's place ever since Elliot forced her to have an abortion.

"Alright. It's time that I end things between me and him." Avery hung up and went to Elliot's mansion.

It was seven in the evening.

Elliot's plane landed at the airport.

He hopped into a black Rolls-Roice with the escort of his bodyguards.

Once he was seated, he realized that Chelsea was in there.

"Elliot, how's my new hairstyle?" Chelsea wore a pink puffy dress. She tucked her hair behind her ear and seductively smiled at him.

Chelsea wanted to surprise him in the car.

Enter title...

Elliot quickly glanced at Chelsea and was no longer calm.

He was tensed and his face was as cold as ice. Tension arose in the car.

Chelsea noticed that. She felt anxious.

“What’s wrong, Elliot? Don’t you like my hairstyle? Or is it because this dress is ugly...?” Chelsea was nervous. Her voice was slightly trembling.

Elliot slapped her harshly!

Her body flung towards the car door.

“Scissors!” Elliot clenched his fist and spat that word out.

The bodyguards outside the car received the order and immediately ran to buy scissors.

Chelsea shivered in the car. She held her stinging cheek as she tasted blood from the corner of her mouth.

She was confused.

Utterly confused.

She had been with Elliot for ten years. Elliot was never that angry with her during those ten years.

Avery Tate!

That was her idea!

“Elliot! Let me explain! Avery told me to dress like this, and to have a hime haircut! Avery wants to piss you off. It’s not my fault!” Chelsea cried and grabbed onto Elliot’s arm. She tried to explain with tears in her eyes.

The bodyguards returned with scissors.

Elliot ordered, "Cut off her hair! And that dress!"

Chelsea jolted. The light in her eyes slowly faded away...

Why was he offended by the hairstyle and the puffy dress?

She could not figure it out.

However, how did Avery know that?

The bodyguards dragged Chelsea out of the car. Then, they closed the door.

Elliot softly ordered, "Drive."

Avery had been waiting in the living room after she ate dinner.

She already packed her things.

She was waiting for Elliot to come back, so that she could discuss the divorce with him.

Around eight, a Rolls-Roice slowly drove into the front yard.

Mrs. Cooper quickly walked out to welcome him.

Avery anxiously looked outside.

The autumn night was cold. The view was glazed in a hazy chill.

Elliot sat in a wheelchair. The bodyguard pushed him into the living room.

He was still wearing a black blouse and black sweatpants. He had an intimidating and unfriendly look.

"Elliot Foster, when are we getting divorced?" asked Avery with the courage she mustered. Elliot looked up at her and asked, "Divorce?"

"It's the weekend tomorrow. Let's get the divorce settled on Monday!" Avery continued.

Faced with her fervent impatience, Elliot nonchalantly pulled out a cigarette and lit it.

Avery furrowed her brows. She could not figure out what he was thinking.

Could it be that he did not want to go through with the divorce?

Otherwise, he would not be so indifferent.

Avery took a deep breath and said, "Can you really handle being cheated on? I wouldn't want to see me for the rest of my life if I were you. You have to divorce me! You'd be an idiot not to!"

Elliot coolly exhaled a smoke ring as he followed her with his dark eyes, watching her performance.

"Have you met with Chelsea? That must have p*ssed you off, right? That's good because it was all my idea! I did it just to mess with you!"

Avery was adding fuel to the fire.

Mrs. Cooper was in a corner. Her heart was pounding as she listened in.

Enter title...

Why was Avery digging her own grave? Was she having a mental breakdown because of the abortion?

If she continued aggravating him, Elliot might just send her to her death.

At that thought, Mrs. Cooper could no longer stand aside. She walked over and said, "Madam Avery doesn't mean any of this, Master Elliot... She must still be upset, so she's lashing out now... She's been sitting around at home ever since the wedding, so I can guarantee that she's never done anything dishonorable with Mr. Cole."

"Go and rest, Mrs. Cooper!" Avery said as her cheeks flushed from anxiety. "This is between him and me, so I'll deal with it myself. You don't have to worry about me."

"Stop trying to provoke Master Elliot, then!" Mrs. Cooper exclaimed. "Nothing good can come from it. Listen to me and apologize to him, Madam. He might just forgive you." "I don't need his forgiveness," Avery replied. "I just want a divorce."

Elliot's sharp, hawk-like eyes were fixed on Avery's slender back.

Was she playing hard to get, or did she really want a divorce?

Judging from what he had seen and heard, it seemed that the latter was more likely.

Now that her plan with Cole had been exposed, and the child had been aborted, they had no way of further exploiting him.

So, she could not wait to divorce him, so that she might run back into Cole's arms.

"Forget it!" Elliot snapped coldly as he put out his cigarette on the ashtray on the table. "Unless I'm dead, you can forget about getting a divorce."

"What? Why?"

Avery felt like she was just hit by an invisible force.

"Since it's agonizing for you to remain by my side, I'll continue keeping you in this agony," said Elliot out of pure spite.

In an instant, Avery felt as if she had fallen into an icy abyss.

What now?

He was throwing her a curveball!

What did she have to do to get away from him?

She stormed off to her room; her mind in a frenzy.

Elliot's phone rang just as Avery arrived at her room.

It was Ben.

"Hey, Elliot. Chelsea is a complete mess. She's wandering the streets and refusing to go home. She won't listen to me."

Ben was out of ideas and had no choice but to call Elliot.

"Call her brother."

“Okay... Did you get home alright? Is Avery there? Did you ask her if this whole thing with Chelsea was her idea?”

Ben could not bear to see Chelsea like this.

“How is it anyone else’s fault that Chelsea did that? Would she just do anything Avery tells her to? What if she told her to jump off a bridge? Would she do it, then?” Elliot sneered. “Don’t be an idiot, Ben.”

Ben had nothing to say about Elliot’s unwarranted rebuke, but he did have an opinion about Avery’s behavior.

“I think you’re going too easy on Avery. It’s not like you at all. She cheated on you, and you’re just letting her go after making her abort the baby? I was sure you would feed her to the sharks.”

“Do you think that the abortion was easy for her?”

“Huh?”

“She despises me right now. Seeing her helplessness and inability to act on that hate is a more gratifying form of revenge than letting her die.”

“I see... You’re not planning on getting a divorce, then? Don’t you think keeping her around could be dangerous? What if she decides to get rid of you?” Ben asked with a hint of concern in his voice.

“If she manages to kill me...” Elliot said as he crushed the cigarette between his fingers into the ashtray. “I’ll gladly admit defeat.”

Chapter 32

Avery met with Shaun at Tate Industries over the weekend.

“We need to open up the safe as soon as possible, Avery,” Shaun said. “Mr. Hertz has been pestering us for a decision. I don’t know if I should tell him the truth or lie to him... I’m stuck because I have nothing to show for it!”

Avery nodded and said, “I wrote down some numbers on a piece of paper last night. I think my father’s passcode would be a combination of these numbers.”

Shaun took the piece of paper out of Avery’s hand, glanced at the numbers, then nodded and said, “Let’s give it a try

now!”

They entered the secret chamber, approached the safe, and began trying out possible combinations.

However, things did not go as smoothly as they had hoped.

After countless failed attempts, Avery frowned and let out a heavy sigh.

“Would Wanda know what the code is?” she said. “The code to our front door is a combination of my dad and Wanda’s birthdays. He was good to her before he got sick.”

Enter title...

Shaun shook his head and said, "If she knew how valuable this new system is, she would have taken it with her before she left."

"Do you think someone could have already taken the things in the safe?" Avery asked.

"That's impossible!" Shaun exclaimed. "I check the surveillance cameras here daily. No one, apart from u s, has entered this room.'

"I see..." Avery said. "Is there no other way to open it up if we don't have the code? I really can't think of anything else other than the numbers I wrote down."

Shaun looked glum, and he began to pace back and forth.

"There might be another way," he said moments later. "If we can't crack the code, the only thing we can d o is break the safe door. However, doing that may damage its contents. It's a pretty big risk."

Avery stayed silent.

"Let me think about it!" Shaun said. "We'll just have to break into it if we can't figure something out."

Avery looked like she had something on her mind, but responded, "Okay."

"Avery, are you acquainted with Elliot Foster?" Shaun asked with a hint of suspicion.

"I'm not," Avery said as she hesitantly shook her head. "I would have already asked him for help if I did."

“Really? A friend of mine said they saw you enter the elite neighborhood where he lives yesterday.”

Avery’s cheeks flushed in an instant.

“Oh... I have a friend who lives around there. She had something to talk to me about, so I just went there to see her for a bit.”

“Ah... I didn’t know you had such wealthy friends,” Sean said skeptically.

“They had a successful business before, but things didn’t work out.”

“I see... Well, you can go now since we can’t crack the code. I’ll think about it a little more.”

“Okay, thank you!”

Avery walked out of the hidden room and left the building.

Once she was gone, Shaun inspected the piece of paper she had left behind. He studied it long and hard.

Was it really possible for the successor of Tate Industries not to know such an important code?

Shaun’s suspicions about Avery continued to increase.

Moments later, he sent a text message to Wanda, who immediately called him upon receiving it.

“Did you really think that Jack was out to ruin his own daughter by leaving the company to her?” Shaun sneered. “I always thought that you were a smart woman, but it turns out you’re in the dark about this, too.”

Wanda picked up on Shaun’s clue and suddenly turned cheerful.

“What exactly did Jack leave Avery?!” “A safe. It’s a big one, too. Its contents are priceless, but Jack apparently forgot to give Avery the passcode.”

Shaun had decided to join forces with Wanda. “If you can tell me what it is, I’ll make sure to give you a cut of the profits,” he said.

“How much exactly are you willing to cut? I’m not in if it’s a small amount?” said Wanda.

“I’ll give you twenty percent,” Shaun snickered. “It doesn’t matter if you decide to work with me or not. It never belonged to you, anyway.”

“Deal! I’ll do it. How long is the code?”

“It needs six digits. I’ll send you a photo of the numbers Avery said were significant to Jack, and the combinations we tried that did not work this afternoon. Let’s see if you find any inspiration from that.”

Chapter 33

Once Shaun sent the photo to Wanda, he decided to watch over the safe all day in hopes that she might surprise him.

If Wanda could crack the safe's code, then he could kick Avery out of the picture without giving her a penny.

Wanda called about half an hour later and said, "I can't think of anything else other than the combinations that you've already tried, but I noticed that the date of birth written here for Laura Jensen is the one on her ID. That's not her real birthdate. Let's try again with the real one."

"Alright!" Shaun responded enthusiastically.

Two hours later, they had finally managed to get the safe door open.

Wanda was right. Jack had used Laura's real date of birth and not the one stated on her ID.

Jack had used a combination of Laura's and Avery's birthdates as his passcodes.

The correct passcode and the family portrait in the hidden room matched perfectly together.

Enter title...

□

It was Jack's homage to Laura and Avery.

Wanda was on a video call with Shaun, and she burst into a raging fury when the safe opened.

"That b*st*rd! After all the years we've been together, he went and set such an important code to Laura's and Avery's birthdates! Sh*t! He would get an earful from me if he were still alive!"

When Shaun opened the safe, his muscles tightened in excitement, and his eyes sparkled with anticipation.

He did not hear Wanda's cussing at all.

There were two security levels to the safe.

The first was the passcode, and the second needed either a key or facial recognition.

The key was inside the room itself, and both Shaun and the other two technical staff knew of its location.

Shaun turned the key in the safe's lock and carefully opened the door.

He was met with a completely empty safe.

There was nothing in the safe!

Shaun's face was a picture of horror and fury.

"F*ck! Where the hell is it?!"

He violently landed his fist on top of the safe as his eyes reddened with anger.

"It must have been Avery!" Wanda cried from the other side of the phone. "Who else could it be but her? She gave you that piece of paper on purpose! She must have used her mother's correct birthdate to open the safe before this!" 1

"Did she plan to take everything for herself?" Shaun said through gritted teeth.

"D*mn it! I didn't expect her to be this ambitious! You can't let her get away with this, Mr. Locklyn!"

Wanda would love nothing more but for Shaun and Avery to go against each other.

All she had to do was sit back and watch the show.

Shaun ended the video call.

Avery was bad news, but so was Wanda!

He would not have wasted any of his time on them if it did not yield any profit.

He kicked the safe door shut, then thought carefully about when the contents were taken away.

Whether Jack had moved it before his death, or someone had taken it after he died, Avery Tate was still his biggest suspect.

Did she want to take everything for herself? Did she think she could get away with it that easily?!

Chapter 34

At the Foster mansion, Mrs. Cooper hurriedly sat Avery on the couch as she entered the living room.

Mrs. Cooper opened up the white gift box on the table, revealing the exquisite white gown.

“Are you sure he gave this to me?” Avery said as she looked at the gown in disbelief.

“Yes, Madam. There’s a dinner tonight that you need to go to with Master Elliot. There are shoes, too!” Mrs. Cooper explained, then opened up another box carrying a pair of fine stilettos.

Avery picked up one of the heels and stared at it with apprehension.

“Why is he taking me? I don’t know any of his friends. Isn’t he worried I’d embarrass him?”

“I’m sure he has his reasons,” Mrs. Cooper replied, “Move on from the past, Madam, and just spend the rest of your days happily with Master Elliot.”

Avery looked up at Mrs. Cooper and then said, “Do you think he’s moved on? We still don’t know what his real intentions are for taking me out tonight!”

“Madam... Was the baby you were carrying before really Mr. Cole’s? I didn’t think you’re that kind of woman,” Mrs. Cooper said.

Avery lowered her gaze and said, “That’s all in the past. Let’s not talk about it anymore.”

Then, she took the gown out of the box and said, “I’ll go try it on.”

“Alright,” replied Mrs. Cooper.

Avery arrived at Florraine Villa that evening. She walked into the banquet hall dressed in her new, ivory gown.

Under the light of the grand crystal chandelier, she looked like a mystical fairy that had mistakenly wandered into the human world.

All eyes were on her.

“Who is that? She’s stunning! Why haven’t I seen her before?”

“I think she’s the Tate family’s eldest daughter, Avery Tate. You know, from the soon-to-be bankrupt Tate Industries?”

“Oh! Now that you mention it, I kind of remember hearing something about that. What’s she doing here? Who invited her?”

That dress she’s wearing looks like the latest haute couture from Chanel. Is she that rich?

The crowd engaged in a fevered discussion as their eyes continued to follow her.

Avery glanced around the hall but did not see a trace of Elliot.

Her feet were beginning to feel sore from her high heels, so she found an empty seat and sat down.

A few people approached her as soon as she rested herself on the chair.

“Miss Tate, is the gown you’re wearing Chanel haute couture?”

Avery glanced down at her dress.

Was it not just a typical gown?

Was it actually haute couture?

“Is something the matter?” she asked.

“I doubt you can afford haute couture now with your family facing bankruptcy. What I’m trying to say is... Wearing a knockoff to an event like this is pretty humiliating, no?”

“If that’s the case, I’d be the one humiliated. What does that have to do with you?”

The two women next to her burst into mocking laughter upon hearing her answer.

It was their first time seeing someone wear a knockoff with such arrogance!

“Do you have an invitation, Miss Tate? I bet you don’t. How did you get in here?”

Avery glanced coldly at the women and said, “With my own capability.”

Her answer was like a hard slap in the face to her audience.

Very quickly, the crowd’s eyes shifted to her feet which were encased in a pair of rare stilettos.

They looked like limited edition Armeses.

“Did you get a sugar daddy, Miss Tate?”

The authenticity of luxury items could not escape the eyes of the truly wealthy.

The gown and heels that Avery was wearing were obviously the real deal.

From head to toe, her outfit was worth more than three hundred thousand dollars.

“That’s right! Otherwise, how would someone of my lowly status get into a banquet filled with rich people like you?” Avery said, mocking herself.

Everyone immediately saw her in a different light. “Who’s your sugar daddy? If he’s so generous with you ddy? If he’s so generous with you, he must be some powerful bigshot!”

Chapter 35

Avery decided to play along.

The crowd was scratching their heads trying to figure out who this old, ugly, and unfit bigshot was.

A waiter walked over to Avery and said, “Please proceed to the second floor, Miss Tate.”

Avery instantly looked up.

The building had an open concept, and the second-floor railing could be seen from the living room on the first floor.

Elliot’s bodyguard was standing by the railing and looking down at her.

When the waiter escorted her away, the faces of the people in the crowd changed from one of mockery to one of awe.

Those in attendance at the banquet were the creme de la creme of high society.

Even the wealthy had their own form of social hierarchy.

That night, the more ordinary members of the upper class were mingling amongst themselves in the banquet hall on the first floor.

Those with more power over society, on the other hand, were invited to the exclusive second floor.

“I can’t believe Avery Tate was invited up there! Who exactly is her sponsor?!”

“I have no idea! It’s not like we can go to the second floor. All I can say is that she must have a trick or two up her sleeve!

Even if her sugar daddy is some old, ugly geezer, she still hit the jackpot with him!”

“As far as I know, there aren’t that many old men at tonight’s banquet!”

“Was she just messing with us?”

The crowd looked at the second floor in unison, but they could see nothing.

When Avery arrived at the round table, there were less than ten people in attendance, and all of them were men.

She walked over and sat herself down next to Elliot.

The dining table was covered in exquisite delicacies.

Avery glanced at Elliot and asked, “You didn’t make me come here just to eat, did you?”

Elliot looked at her raised brows, then said in a low voice, “Cole will be here, too. Didn’t you secretly meet with him while I was away on business? I invited you here so that you could meet him in the open.”

Avery did not expect this to be his intention.

Did he think that she was so obsessed with Cole that they could not bear to be apart even for a little while?

Ha!

Avery was ravenous as she had not had her dinner yet, so she was in no mood to argue with him.

She picked up her knife and fork and began to enjoy the food by herself.

“Mr. Foster, that nephew of yours still owes me three million dollars! I wouldn’t usually fuss over such a small amount of money, but I heard that your relationship with him has gone sour. If that’s the case, I’ll have no choice but to go after him for it.”

“I caught him flirting with my twenty-year-old daughter once. I called him up and gave him a piece of my mind! He didn’t manage to trick me into investing with him, so he thought he could try his luck with my little girl! It’s disgusting!” “Cole

Foster is infamous in the financial world. Everything he invests in eventually goes bust. He’s so stupid that you can’t help but feel a little bad for him. He would’ve been a goner a long time ago if it weren’t for his father’s support!”

While the guests were ridiculing Cole, Elliot's gaze unintentionally fell on Avery.

"Are you checking to see if I've lost my appetite?" Avery said as she met his eyes. "The food's good, but the pasta is a little undercooked. I'm done eating."

She put down her knife and fork, then said, "I'm not interested in what you're talking about, so I'm going home!"

When she stood up from her seat, Elliot grabbed onto her arm to stop her from leaving.

Avery tried to shake his hand off but failed.

She glared at him and said, "You must have too much time on your hands. I've got a thesis to write! If you don't let me go, then I'll send it to you and you can finish it for me."

Seeing her sullen expression, Elliot released his grip.

When Avery arrived on the first floor, she saw Cole with a glass of champagne in his hand. He was slightly hunched, and he was singing flattering words to a group of people. He did it with the utmost respect.

She was already completely over him, so she simply turned away and walked out of the villa.

Elliot arrived back at the mansion at 10 p.m. that night. When Mrs. Cooper saw him, she asked, "Did Madam Avery not come home with you, sir?" Elliot checked the time on his wristwatch, then raised his brows and said, "She left at eight."

She's not home yet?"

Chapter 36

"Madam Avery hasn't come home yet," said Mrs. Cooper. "I've been waiting in the living room the whole time and I haven't seen her all night."

Elliot's eyes turned dark.

If she did not come home, where could she have gone?

Did she lie to him about coming home to write her thesis?

"I'll give her a call right now," Mrs. Cooper said as she rushed toward the living room.

Avery had been abducted the moment she had set foot out of Forraine Villa, and now, she was on the other side of the city.

She had been dragged into a car, blindfolded, and her wrists were bound.

The car drove on for about an hour before coming to a halt.

She was taken into a room and thrown into a chair.

When her blindfold was taken off, she heard the unfamiliar voice of a strange man.

“Apologies, Miss Tate. We’re just doing our jobs. We won’t hurt you as long as you cooperate with us.”

Avery glanced around the white room until her eyes fell on the stranger’s face.

He was wearing a mask, so she could not see his features, but his voice was completely unfamiliar to her.,

“I’ll cooperate as long as you don’t hurt me. However, I won’t do anything illegal even if you force me to,” she said calmly.

The man chuckled lightly, then said, “I doubt a weak little lady like you would be able to commit a crime.”

As he said that, he untied Avery’s hands and connected her to a lie detector machine.

“This is a lie detector. You have to answer my questions truthfully. You won’t get past this test, otherwise. If you lie, you’re not leaving this place tonight. Understood?”

Avery gazed at the machine, stayed silent for a moment, then nodded her head.

“Good,” said the man, then began the test. “What’s your name?”

“Avery Tate.”

“Did your father tell you the code to the safe before he died?”

“No.”

After she answered, the man glanced at the machine’s monitor.

All of the indicators were within the normal parameters, proving that she was telling the truth.

“Why were you at Forraine Villa tonight? Who invited you?”

Avery remained silent.

“Are you trying to lie to me?” snapped the man. “Don’t think too much about the questions, just give me an answer!”

“Oh... I was just worried you’d get shocked by my answer,” Avery said nonchalantly. “Do you know the Fosters?”

“Who?”

“Do you know Elliot Foster?” Avery asked.

of course! He’s loaded. Who wouldn’t know who he is? Why are you bringing him up? Was he the one who invited you?” asked the man.

Avery shook her head and said, “Do you know his nephew, Cole Foster?”

“What are you going on about? And am I the one asking you the questions or are you?! Just answer my question! Stop wasting my time!”

The man was losing his temper.

“Cole Foster took me there,” Avery said.

“What’s your relationship with him?”

“We have a special relationship. We’re all adults here, so you should know what I mean, right?”

“Fine, I get it! Were you the one who opened your father’s safe? This is an important question, so you better not lie! My employer knows the truth! This machine is just a backup!”

Avery stared at the man’s furious gaze, pondered for a moment, then said, “It was me, but the stuff inside isn’t with me.”

“Who did you give it to?!”

“I mentioned him just now,” Avery said with an innocent expression on her face..

“Elliot Foster?”

Avery shook her head.

“Oh! Your man, Cole Foster?” Avery nodded.

Chapter 37

Unfortunately, Avery had to use Cole as a scapegoat this time.

Since Shaun had found out about the missing contents, she had to divert his attention elsewhere before things got more difficult for her.

Suddenly, Avery’s phone rang.

The man opened her bag and pulled out her phone.

The words “Foster Mansion” flashed on the phone screen.

“You weren’t kidding! Since you’re close to the Fosters, I won’t keep you any longer. Go on!”

The man did not want to get in trouble with the Foster family. Besides, he already did what he was paid to do.

Once Avery was free, she immediately called Mrs. Cooper back.

“Why did you hang up just now, Madam? It’s late and you’re not home yet. Did something happen?” Mrs. Cooper asked.

Avery glanced around her surroundings.

She was in the middle of nowhere. The road was dim, and it ran through a forest. At a glance, it looked like the bloody jaws of a wild beast that were ready to gobble her up. It was terrifying.

“Is the driver still on the clock, Mrs. Cooper?” Avery asked. “I can’t get a cab where I am now.”

She was dressed in nothing but her gown from earlier, and she was trembling in the cold, fall air.

“He just arrived with Master Elliot. I’ll ask him to go get you. Send me your location.”

“Alright,” Avery responded, then sent her location to Mrs. Cooper’s phone, who then sent it to the driver.

It was a remote area that people seldom visited during the day, let alone in the dark of the night.

“Send some people there right now and find out what happened,” Elliot ordered his bodyguard.

Avery returned home about three hours later.

The driver stopped the car in the courtyard and got out,

Mrs. Cooper was confused, so she walked over to the car to check things out.

“She fell asleep in the car,” explained the driver. “It’s not proper for me to touch her, and I couldn’t bring myself to wake

her.”

Mrs. Cooper opened the passenger side door and woke Avery up.

Avery sat up and rubbed her tired eyes.

“You’re finally safe at home, Madam! Let’s get you to bed!” Mrs. Cooper said as she helped Avery out of the car. “Master Elliot was waiting for you the whole time. He was very worried about you.”

Elliot had been sitting in the living room all night.

Ad abc group

He did not say it, but Mrs. Cooper could tell that he had some feelings for Avery.

The only reason he made her get an abortion was so that he could continue spending his life with her. “He’s waiting for me?” Avery said. The fatigue had suddenly escaped her. “He’s not going to blow up atm e, is he?”

“Absolutely not. He’s just worried that you were in the middle of nowhere at this time of night,” Mrs. Cooper said.

“Oh, I’m fine now,” Avery responded.

As she slid into her house slippers at the front door, she noticed Elliot walking toward the elevators from the periphery of her vision.

He was not in his wheelchair.

Was he able to walk by himself now?!

“His legs...” Avery began to ask Mrs. Cooper.

“He can walk now, but not for long periods of time. He’ll still need the wheelchair once in a while.”

“He should be fully recovered soon.”

Avery’s cheeks flushed as her gaze shifted to his back.

Elliot’s steps had slowed down slightly.

“Of course, I do,” Avery said, then changed her tone and added, “That way, he can go back to work instead of being at home so much!”

She saw the muscles on his back and shoulders tighten, then he turned around. He was furious.

Chapter 38

“What I meant was, how are you supposed to buy me designer dresses and shoes if you do not work harder and earn more money?”

Avery had changed into her house slippers, walked over to Elliot, and added, "This is my first time wearing such expensive things."

"Poor you," Elliot hissed, then walked into the elevator.

Avery held her tongue as she watched the elevator doors close.

She wanted to insult his excessively extravagant and wasteful lifestyle.

When she entered her room, she took off her gown and walked into the shower.

The warm water enveloped her entire body, numbing her senses.

Avery arrived at Tate Industries first thing the next morning.

At 10 a.m., there was not a seat left empty in the meeting room.

"Good morning, everyone. My name is Avery Tate. The reason I called for this meeting today is because I was abducted last night," Avery said, then glanced around at the faces in the room.

"Seriously?! Are you okay, Avery?" someone exclaimed in shock.

"I'm fine. I wanted to have an open discussion with all of you today," Avery said calmly. "Things aren't looking great with the company right now. Investors aren't interested in us, and those that are looking at us, are only interested in acquiring us for a low price. With our current debt, what they are offering will hardly cover what we owe."

“We can bring out our Super Brain program! Once we arrange a press conference and introduce it to the public, people would be lining up to invest!” someone suggested, setting off a frenzy of consensus in the room.

“My father would never agree to sell the company. This is something that I’m sure all of you are aware of. Also, the new system isn’t ready yet, so I’m afraid it is not worth as much as you think it does,” Avery explained.

“What do we do, then? Are we really just going to let the company go bust?”

“If we continue to not have stable funding, I’m afraid that’s exactly what’s going to happen,” Avery answered.

Shaun slammed his palm on the table and roared, “You just want to keep Super Brain to yourself! Your father wasn’t the only one who worked on it!”

Avery looked coldly at Shaun and said, “Mr. Shaun, since you are claiming that the program isn’t the work of my father alone, then you should be able to form a new team to produce a new Super Brain. When you do reach that point, I would not object to you selling it to rebuild the company.”

Shaun’s face flushed with anger at Avery’s words.

Avery’s father, Jack, was the lead engineer on the project. Without him, there was no way for them to recreate the program.

“You say that you’re doing all of this for your father, but you secretly gave his life’s work to an outsider...”

“So, you were the one who abducted me last night, Mr. Shaun?” Avery asked.

Shaun’s eyes widened in horror.

“If you’re staying at the company in hopes of getting some giant profit, I suggest you give up. How would you get any kind of profit with all the debt we’re still buried in?” Avery said, then shifted her gaze to the rest of the room and added, “Anyone who’s on the same page as Mr. Locklyn is welcome to settle your final wages today.”

Shaun and two core members of the research and development team stormed out of the meeting room.

“Avery Tate looks gentle and quiet, but she turned out to be brutal!”

“She said she gave the stuff to Cole Foster... but I don’t trust her! She might still have it!”

“Let’s look into Cole Foster first!”

Avery left Tate Industries at noon to meet with Tammy at a restaurant for lunch.

“It’s so hard to meet you now, Avery! We barely see each other anymore!” Tammy whined. “Are you still having trouble looking for investors for your dad’s company?”

Chapter 39

“Voc it’s been hard” Avery answered. “I don’t think it’s plausible to introduce a self-driving program to the market right now. Even the most advanced program would not be able to beat the human mind. If I’m not confident in the program, why would the investors be?”

“Don’t be so pessimistic about it. Many people invest in things that they find creative, not just because of practicality.

There’s a party tonight. Everyone there is an heir of a rich family. Do you want to come with me? You never know, you might just bump into someone who’s interested in investing!”

“Forget it!” Avery scoffed. “I won’t get anywhere with a bunch of rich brats. It’s the first generation, self made bigshots that I need.”

“They’ll be there, too! You might as well try your luck,” Tammy said as she tried to convince Avery. “I don’t want to go either, but my dad’s making me. He set up a blind date for me. Just come and give me some moral support, okay?”

“Fine,” Avery said as she gave in.

At 7 p.m. that evening, Tammy drove Avery to a five-star hotel in the city.

“When we get in let’s split up. That’ll make it easier for you to fish for investors,” said Tammy. Avery nodded and said, “I didn’t forget that you’re here for a blind date. I won’t be a third wheel.”

Tammy chuckled, then said, “Keep your eyes on your phone. I’ll text you when I can’t take it anymore.” “Okay,” Avery responded.

The two women walked into the hotel and entered the ballroom from two separate doorways.

Avery picked up a glass of juice, then sat herself down in a corner of the room.

She wanted to take a peek at Tammy's blind date.

The Lynch family was in the department store business. They were not a listed company, but they were popular and wellknown in the country.

Avery was sure that the person Tammy's family set her up with would be from a similar background, but she was curious about his looks, age, and personality.

Soon after, a familiar, handsome face caught Avery's eye.

Why did Tammy's date look so familiar?

That man... Was that Jun Hertz?!

She had a meeting with him at Tate Industries before. It was a short discussion that did not end too pleasantly.

Avery placed her glass down and sent Tammy a text.

Avery: (What's your date's name? He looks familiar.)

Tammy was in the middle of a conversation with Jun when her phone screen lit up.

She saw Avery's text, then sent a reply.

Tammy: (Jun Hertz. Do you know him?)

Avery: (I do!!!)

Tammy: What's with that reaction? Did something happen between you? I can back off!

Avery: I No! I don't know him that well, but I know he's got about two hundred million dollars in his account!

Tammy: (Holy sh*t! Is he that rich? No way! He just graduated from college not too long ago. How could h e have that

Tammy: (What?! I'm going to need a second to process this.)

Avery: (Don't tell him we know each other! There's something fishy about this guy, but I haven't been able t o find out much about him.)

Tammy: [Leave it to me! I'll figure out what's going on!]

Since Tammy was focused on her phone, Jun shifted his gaze and looked around the banquet hall.

That was when he noticed Avery sitting in a corner of the room.

What was she doing there?

That party was a singles event, but Avery had a husband.

Jun grinned, then pulled out his phone and sent Elliot a text.

Jun: (Hey, Elliot. Your wife's at a singles party in the Celestial Hall at Regency Hotel. There are a few guys with their eyes on her... Did you let her out to play?

Chapter 40

Avery's phone rang ten minutes later.

She answered it, hung up, sent Tammy a text, then rushed toward the hotel exit.

Jun watched Avery's back as she quickly made her way out. He smiled.

How did she find the men to make a fool out of Elliot Foster behind his back?

Could she not just stay quietly by his side?

Where was she going to find a man who was better than Elliot Foster?

Jun had no idea what she was thinking.

Tammy's brows furrowed as she replied: [What's the rush? Is it that urgent?]

Avery: (Extremely urgent! I'll see you again soon!)

The one who had called Avery was Elliot's bodyguard.

He had instructed her to wait for him at the hotel entrance.

If she did not listen, he was going to break her legs.

Avery still suffered from the past traumatic experience with the bodyguard. He was a cruel man.

Although she knew that he was acting on Elliot's orders, it was better to be safe than sorry.

A black car stopped on the street in front of her about fifteen minutes later.

The car window rolled down, revealing the bodyguard's ominous face.

Avery got into the backseat, closed the door, and the car sped off.

"You know, Miss Tate," said the bodyguard. "If Mr. Foster had a pet dog for a few months, it would know who its owner and family are. Why are you biting the hand that feeds you?"

"Are you saying I'm less than a dog?" Avery said with a frown.

"That's exactly what I'm saying," said the bodyguard in a tone filled with loathing. "After spending all of this time freeloading off Mr. Foster, what else have you done other than p*ss him off every day?"

"You think I want to be a freeloader? If you don't like me that much, then why don't you convince him to divorce me?"

suggested Avery.

"You're an idiot!" roared the bodyguard. "I don't know what's gotten into Mr. Foster. How could he fall in love with a stupid woman like you?"

"You're the idiot here," Avery said. "How could you possibly think that he loves me?"

“Seriously? If he didn’t love you, you’d be long gone by now! Have a heart, won’t you?” said the bodyguard as she angrily slammed his fist onto the steering wheel.

Avery stiffened in the backseat. She wanted to hold back, but she could not help but retaliate.

“Would he have forced me to get an abortion if he loved me?”

“Did you really expect him to let you give birth to some other man’s kid?!”

“What if it wasn’t someone else’s baby?” Avery asked. “He still wouldn’t let me keep it.”

“Just don’t have a baby, then! If you were half as smart as Miss Tierney, you wouldn’t end up fighting every day!”

Avery glanced out the window and said, “That’s your opinion. I like children, and I want to have my own. What right does he have to say he loves me if he won’t allow that?”

The bodyguard was frustrated beyond words.

After a moment of silence, Avery suddenly asked, “Why do you think he loves me? Why can’t I tell?”

“He slept with you, didn’t he?” said the bodyguard through gritted teeth. “If that’s not love, then what is?”

“That’s it?” Avery said.

“He made me check on what happened with you in the outskirts last night. Doesn’t that prove that he cares about you?”

But how do you repay him?”

Avery was taken aback.

She did not expect that Elliot would send someone to investigate after her.

“How exactly did I repay him?” Avery said.

She did not dare feel moved.

Judging by the bodyguard’s fury, she was prepared to hear the worst from him.

“You told them that you went to Forraine Villa last night with Mr. Cole. You said that you had a great relationship with him and passed on something important to him... You’re a lying, scheming cheater!”

Avery let out a laugh and said, “He’s angry again?”

“How could you laugh at a time like this? He’ll whip you with his belt if you’re not careful!” warned the bodyguard.

“I just wanted to test out the lie detector, but it turned out to be a complete waste of money,” Avery said, then lowered her voice and added, “I didn’t say those things to make him mad. I didn’t know he would investigate any further.”

“I told you he loves you! Why won’t you believe me?” the bodyguard yelled. His voice had turned hoarse.

Chapter 41

Perhaps it was because Elliot had not shown favor to many people in his life so far that when he showed the slightest feeling for someone, everyone assumed that he was in love with that person.

The kind of love that Avery dreamed of was one of mutual respect and not one where one party held all the control and power in the relationship.

When the car arrived at the Foster mansion, the bodyguard got out and walked right up to Elliot.

“Miss Tate told me in the car that the things she said last night were simply to test out the lie detector,” explained the bodyguard, probably in fear of Elliot losing his temper.

Avery was taking her time changing into her house slippers at the front door. She was alert, listening in to the conversation.

“She even said that she never meant to anger you,” added the bodyguard.

“Does she not have a mouth? Why are you speaking for her?” snapped Elliot.

The bodyguard immediately dismissed himself, but not before throwing a threatening glare at Avery, as if to warn her that her days were numbered if she did not make things up to his boss.

Avery slowly sauntered over to Elliot.

She sat herself down on the couch across from him, then mustered up her courage and prepared to speak.

“Did you go to a singles party?” Elliot was one step ahead of her. He had asked her the question before she could say anything.

“Was that a singles party?” Avery responded. “I had no idea. All I knew was that many of the guests were rich, so I went to look for investors.”

Elliot’s brows furrowed tightly as he asked, “And did you find any?”

“I didn’t,” Avery answered. “I was only there for about ten minutes before your bodyguard called me.”

“Are you blaming me?” asked Elliot.

Avery was a little hungry, so she picked up an apple from the fruit bowl on a table and took a bite.

“If I do blame you, would you give me the money?” she asked.

“In your dreams,” Elliot responded.

Avery chuckled, then said, “That’s why I won’t let you ruin my good mood.”

“Are you in a good mood because you fired your vice president and two main staff from the research team?”

Avery froze mid-bite.

Her almond-shaped eyes landed on him as she asked, “Are you in love with me, Elliot?”

If he were not in love with her, why would he go through the trouble of looking into every little detail about her affairs?

Time seemed to come to a standstill in the room. The atmosphere between them was awkward.

Avery shoved the apple back into her mouth.

Elliot's eyes were fixed on her, his gaze was so deep that she felt like he might just swallow her whole

Moments later, he spoke up.

"And you?"

Was he asking her if she loved him?

Avery's heart began to race wildly as her cheeks flushed.

"I wouldn't say I'm in love with you, but I wouldn't say I'm not either... I don't have the courage to be in love with you..."

She was rambling. Her thoughts twisted and turned around and around.

She was confused at the end of it, but she hoped that Elliot had understood what she meant.

She could see the rage burning in his eyes, but he sounded unusually calm as he said, "I'm not as bad as you think I am,

Avery. You don't have to understand me, but there's no need for you to go against me."

"I'm not going against you," Avery said, then cleared her throat and added, "I just want to live my own life my way."

Her life?

It was a life that definitely did not include him.

Elliot picked up his cup of coffee and took a sip.

"What Hertz is offering isn't a small amount. If you sell at that price, you would still have some funds left over after paying off the debt," Elliot said, changing the subject.

Avery was stunned for a few seconds before realizing that he was talking about Tate Industries.

“My father wouldn’t want to sell the company.”

“Going bankrupt isn’t that different from selling it off. The former would mean losing the company at a greater loss.”

Avery thought it over for a moment, then said, “Thank you for your input, but I have my own thoughts on this.”

Elliot burst into a light chuckle.

It was the first time she had seen him laugh.

He was mesmerizing when he laughed.

The last time Avery saw his face like that was on his computer. His smile was tender and warm as he had his arms wrapped around that woman.

Chapter 42

Avery wondered if she would be his mistress if that woman was still alive.

If she was dead, then was she her replacement?

Either way, it made her heart ache and left a bad taste in her mouth.

While Avery was lost in thought, Elliot’s thoughts also wandered.

“Tell me, what exactly do you like about Cole?” he asked as he pulled out his cigarette box. His face was the epitome of an enigma.

“I don’t like him anymore,” Avery said coldly.

If they had not talked things out earlier, she might have continued to use Cole to anger him.

It was childish, but Elliot was always losing his temper over the smallest things.

If she did not retaliate, she would lose her mind.

“Is it because you realized he was nothing but a penniless loser?” Elliot asked as he held the unlit cigarette between his fingers.

“Is money all you think about?” Avery retorted. “Back when Cole was pursuing me, he would write me love letters every day. On the weekends, he would take me to art galleries and music recitals. We would have the most wonderful conversations-”

“Sounds like a load of superficial bullsh*t to me! It’s precisely because all he thinks about is getting into a woman’s pants that his business is a mess,” said Elliot, cutting her off. “What you consider wonderful was nothing but a joke!”

“Have you always been this mature and successful? When I was fifteen, I liked guys who were cute. When I was sixteen, I liked guys with good grades. At seventeen, I was into basketball players. I liked talented guys when I was eighteen... I loved Cole. It’s all in the past, and I might hate him now, but I can’t pretend that all of that meant nothing.” :

“Shut up!” Elliot roared as he snapped his cigarette in half; his eyes were cold. “Go back to your room!”

Avery pursed her lips and stood up.

She did not return to her room but walked to the dining room because she was still hungry.

“Is there anything to eat, Mrs. Cooper?” she asked.

She looked calm and nonchalant as if it were someone else and not her that had just gotten into a fight with Elliot

Mrs. Cooper immediately prepared dinner for her.

Avery sat at the dining table, pulled out her phone, and saw a series of text messages from Tammy.

Tammy: (The party’s over! I’m not that into him. He’s a little too soft for me. He didn’t seem to be that into me either, but said that we should go out for dinner next time, probably because of pressure from his family.)

Tammy: [He said his parents don’t give him much spending money! How could he possibly have two hundred million? Did you misunderstand?)

Tammy: [I’m going to have dinner with him this weekend! I have to get to the bottom of this! Also, why did you have to leave in a rush?]

Avery replied: (Long story. I’ll tell you once I’ve found the words.)

Tammy called Avery right away after receiving her text.

Avery's hand clenched her phone.

She glanced at the living room and noticed Elliot was still there.

He would hear everything if she talked on the phone now.

She declined the call and sent Tammy a text: [I can't talk right now. Let's talk on campus tomorrow!]

After his shower that night, Elliot paced back and forth in his room in a gray, silk robe.

His weak legs were now filled with energy.

A question was floating around in his head.

It caused deep furrows in his brow and made his heart tighten.

Moments later, he pulled out his phone and called Chad.

"Chad, check and see if there are any art exhibitions or recitals tomorrow. Find something in the afternoon or evening."

"Yes, sir," Chad responded. "Is there a specific kind of exhibition or recital that you're interested in?"

He had never gone to art galleries or concert halls.

Even at that moment, he had no interest in them.

"Find something that women would like," Elliot said.

"Yes, sir. However, women of different ages have different preferences..." said Chad, as he continued his line of questioning. It was the first time he had received such an odd request from Elliot.

Chapter 43

Why was Elliot asking about art galleries and recitals?

What led to this massive change in taste?

“Pick something that a woman in her early twenties would like,” Elliot said.

Chad finally understood where all of this was going.

“Of course, sir. I’ll send you the tickets once they’re booked.”

Elliot was not in his office at Sterling Group the next morning.

Ben and Chad seized the opportunity to gossip about their boss.

“Mr. Foster might as well have told me straight up that he wanted to take Avery out,” Chad said with a chuckle. “I wonder what happened between them. I didn’t expect things to progress so quickly. I thought they were getting a divorce!”

Ben was analyzing the situation, then said, “I’m guessing they slept together. Elliot is a stone-cold b*st*rd, but after getting a taste of Avery, I bet he couldn’t control his urges even if he hated her to death.”

“Chelsea would lose her mind if she found out,” said Chad.

“Don’t tell her. She’s spent the past few nights getting drunk, hoping that Elliot would feel bad for her...” Ben sighed. “Who would've thought that she would lose to Avery Tate.”

“Fate is a mystery to us all. I wonder why Mr. Foster postponed his whole schedule today,” Chad mused.”

“Don't look question his personal matters,” Ben advised.

Chad shook his head and said, “I wouldn't dare.”

There was a lecture by internationally renowned neurology expert, James Hough at Avonsville University that day.

Avery arrived at the auditorium early that morning to get a spot.

The talk went on from 10 a.m. to 11.30 a.m. that morning.

Once the lecture ended, Avery rushed toward the exit.

She greatly admired Professor Hough and wanted to take this rare opportunity to meet him and ask him a question.

She followed the professor's entourage all the way to the administrative building, where she noticed a black luxury sedan parked at the entrance.

Luxury cars like this were a rare sight no matter the time and place.

Moreover, it was the exact same model as the one Elliot owned.

It was too bad that she did not remember his number plate, so there was no way of confirming whether the car was his or not.

“Why would he come here anyway?” Avery mumbled to herself, then walked into the administrative building.

Avery was approaching the Dean's office when she noticed the man standing in front of the entrance to be Elliot's bodyguard.

Holy crap!

Does this mean that the car she saw really was Elliot's?

What was he doing here?

Why would he come to the medical college?

Avery was curious and walked straight toward the office entrance.

"Miss Tate?"

The bodyguard recognized her and reached out to grab her.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"I should be asking you that question. This is where I go to college. Is Elliot here?"

She shook off the bodyguard's grip and looked into the room.

There were three people in there, namely Professor Hough, his assistant, and Elliot. Was Elliot here to see the professor?

What for? Was he sick?

Chapter 44

The bodyguard yanked Avery out of the way, causing everyone in the office to look toward the door.

When Elliot recognized Avery's slender figure, he got up from his seat and said, "What are you doing here?"

Avery shook off the bodyguard's grip once again, smoothed her clothes, and walked into the office.

"I'm here to see Professor Hough," she said, then looked curiously at Elliot and asked, "Are you here to see him, too?"

Professor Hough examined the two, then adjusted his glasses, and asked, "Do you two know each other?"

Avery was about to tell the professor that they were acquaintances, but Elliot was one step ahead of her." Professor, please keep the matter we talked about private."

"Of course," answered the professor. "It's doctor-patient confidentiality."

"I'll be off, then," Elliot said.

The professor nodded in response.

Elliot turned toward the exit. When he walked past Avery, he glanced at her, but said nothing and walked out.

Avery was a little stunned.

Why did he not answer her question?

What mysterious conversation did he have with the professor? What secret was he trying to hide?

"Are you here to see me, Miss?" asked the professor, refocusing Avery's attention on him. "I have to leave in about ten minutes. Did you have a question to ask me?"

Avery immediately pulled out the documents she had prepared and said, "I'm sorry for bothering you, professor. My name is

Avery Tate, and I'm a senior in the medical college here at Avonsville. This is a paper I wrote on some of your previous clinical cases. I got all of the information online, and since there weren't many details on the internet, I had to come to my own conclusion for a lot of the cases. I was hoping that you could take a look at it and let me know if there are any errors."

Professor Hough took the document from Avery's hands and began to sift through it.

Once Elliot was in the car, he glanced over at the administrative building.

Was Avery a medical student?

From what he knew, she was an art student. Was the report he received incorrect?

He pulled out his phone and called Chad.

"Chad, the background check you did on Avery before stated that she was an art student, but what is she doing in medical school?"

"She is, in fact, an art student. I confirmed it with the university myself."

* "I bumped into her at the medical department."

"Do you mean the medical department at Avonsville University?"

"Yes."

“I’ll look into it right away,” Chad said, then added after a brief pause, “I’ve sent you the reservations for the recital. It’s going to be at 4 p.m. today.”

“Got it.”

Moments later, Chad called Elliot back after checking out the news on Avery.

“Mr. Foster, Miss Tate is majoring in arts and minoring in medicine.”

“I see.”

“I didn’t expect her to be that impressive.”

Elliot hung up.

That noon, Avery met Tammy at a restaurant close to campus for lunch.

Once they were seated, Tammy passed the menu to Avery and said, “You’ve really changed, Avery. You used to come out every single time I asked you out, but last night was the first time in forever that we have gone out together, but you left faster than the speed of light. What’s going on?”

“Tammy, was the party last night a singles event?” Avery asked.

“It was! What’s up?”

“Don’t invite me to parties like that again in the future. I’m not single at the moment.” “What?!” Tammy exclaimed. “Didn’t you just break up not too long ago? How did you move on so quickly?”

Chapter 45

Avery did not know whether to laugh or cry.

“Relax... I was forced into it. When our family was struggling with money, my stepmother married me off for the engagement gifts and cash. I’m still waiting to get a divorce!”

“What the hell was she thinking?!” Tammy exclaimed. “Why didn’t you tell me sooner? We should go to the police!”

Avery reached out to calm her down, then said, “It’s not as bad as you think. We’re from two completely different worlds, so we should get divorced anytime now.”

Tammy was still not convinced.

“Who is he? Tell me... You husband... Dimn it! I still think this is insane!”

“It is pretty nuts. I’ll tell you who he is after we’re divorced.”

“Absolutely not! You need to tell me right now! I’ll stand up for you!”

Avery knew about Tammy’s bad temper all too well.

If she found out about Elliot, she would definitely go after him.

Her relationship with Elliot was already on the rocks, and Tammy’s involvement would just add fuel to the fire.

“Just focus on looking into Jun Hertz for now! I’ll definitely tell you who my husband is after that,” Avery said, trying to negotiate with her best friend.

“Ha! Look at how easily you called him your husband. I bet you call him ‘Honey’ all the time!” Tammy teased.

Avery’s cheeks flushed. She sighed, then said, “As if he would respond to that. He was forced into this, too.”

“Really? Here I thought you were whisked away and forced into marriage by some sleazebag-”

“Hey! I think you’ve watched too many soap operas! It’s not like that at all!”

Tammy shook her head and said sympathetically, “It looks like that senior in your department lost his chance. You know he likes you, right?”

The expression on Avery’s face froze.

“Alright! Don’t look at me like that... I know you don’t like him like that. I’ll talk to him...” Tammy said, then changed the subject and added, “Let’s go to a recital after this! There’s one at the Philharmonic Hall today!

Avery suddenly received a text message from an unknown number, but its contents sounded oddly familiar.

[The bodyguard will pick you up at 4 p.m.)

The text was signed “Elliot Foster”.

Did this unfamiliar phone number belong to Elliot?

Why was the bodyguard picking her up?

“Did you hear what I said, Avery? There’s a recital this afternoon...” Tammy said as she reached out to pinch Avery’s cheek.

“What time is the recital?” Avery asked as she put her phone away.

She suddenly felt hot and took a big gulp of water. “Four thirty,” Tammy answered. “It’s your favorite piano virtuoso, Ricardo!”

Avery lifted her hand and massaged her aching temples, then said, “I really want to go! Really! But I have something to do at four!”

“What is it? Can’t you just cancel or something?”

“I can’t.” Tammy rolled her eyes, then said, “I get it! It’s your husband, isn’t it?”

Avery covered her face with her hands. Her silence was a confirmation.

“Why do you care so much about him anyway? Who is he? Is he more important than I am? Can’t you just ditch him and come to the recital with me?” Tammy huffed. “Of course, you’re more important, but I’m a little afraid of him.”

“What’s there to be afraid of? Is he going to beat you up if you don’t follow his every whim?”

Avery took another gulp of water.

“You’re such a wimp! You won’t even tell me who he is. Serves you right, getting bullied by him!”

Tammy felt bad for Avery’s situation, but she could not help but be furious at her cowardice.

The bodyguard picked Avery up from campus at four in the afternoon.

The car stopped at the car park of the Philharmonic Hall twenty minutes later.

Avery felt lightheaded as the bodyguard led her into the concert hall. "Elliot wants to take me to a recital?"

Chapter 46

"No idea," the bodyguard sh/rugged.

Avery took a deep breath and glanced at her surroundings.

If her memory served her right, the recital that Tammy mentioned earlier was this exact one!

However, she had declined Tammy's invitation.

In the end, she found herself here anyway!

The only thing was that she was here with Elliot instead.

She would be mortified if she bumped into Tammy in the concert hall.

As her palms began to sweat profusely, she prayed that she would not run into Tammy.

It was impossible to end up being seated close to each other in such a large concert hall, right?

Chad reserved the whole front row for Elliot.

Avery saw him the second she walked into the hall.

He was sitting by himself. He sat ramrod straight, and he emanated arrogance.

Since the concert had not yet begun, he was looking at his phone.

Avery felt as if her feet were glued to the ground, and she could not move.

Elliot stood out too much!

What made him want to invite her to a recital?

Did he forget about how he insulted her relationship with Cole the night before?

She had talked about how art was a wonderful thing, but he had called it a joke.

“What are you standing around for? Move!” snapped the bodyguard when he noticed Avery standing still.

“I’m a little cold... Could I borrow your jacket?” Avery asked politely as she glanced at the bodyguard’s black suit jacket.

The bodyguard’s expression was cold as he unbutton his jacket, revealing a plethora of weapons.

Avery’s ankles turned weak at the sight, and she quickly rushed over to Elliot.

When she reached his side, she hesitated for two seconds, then sat down two seats away from him.

1 sec

Elliot stared at the empty seats between them and frowned.

Was she avoiding him?

The bodyguard who was sitting on the other side of Elliot snapped, “What are you playing at? Didn’t you just say you were cold?!”

Avery took a deep breath, then said awkwardly, “Why do you always talk so much? The bodyguards I see on TV always keep their mouths shut. Can you just focus all of your energy on protecting your boss?”

The bodyguard was baffled.

This infuriating woman!

Elliot glared at the bodyguard and said, “Sit further away.”

The bodyguard instantly shot up and moved down the row from them.

Avery felt her breathing even out.

She took another deep breath to try to calm herself down.

Suddenly, an idea popped into her head.

She took off her coat, folded it neatly, and placed it on the seat between her and Elliot.

She unfastened her ponytail and tried her best to cover her face with her hair.

This way, as long as Tammy did not show up in front of her, she would not be able to see her face.

Elliot watched her coldly. He was trying to read her.

Did she take off her coat to show off her figure?

Did she undo her hair to flaunt her femininity?

It was obvious to him that she was teasing him.

“Avery...” Elliot began to say.

“Don’t talk to me!” Avery hissed as she continued to cover her face with her hair. “My friends are here, too. I don’t want them to know I’m here!”

Elliot’s lips pursed into a thin line, and his jaw tightened. The calmness in his eyes had vanished

Chapter 47

Elliot felt like a joke.

Why did Avery not want to be discovered by her friends?

Was it that embarrassing for her to be seen with him?

The recital began soon after, and Avery calmed down.

It was a good thing that Tammy did not see her!

She wondered where she was seated.

She wanted to turn and look around, but reason stopped her from acting rashly.

Tammy was at the recital with another friend and was seated in the fifth row.

“Who’s that on the first row? Three people taking up all those seats. What a waste!”

Tammy was complaining to her friend who was scrutinizing the row of nearly empty seats.

“Probably someone rich! We’re on the fifth row and the tickets cost over a hundred and fifty bucks, so I bet first row tickets are expensive! It looks like they reserved the whole row. You can tell right away that that guy in the middle is super-rich. The woman next to him is either his daughter or his lover. The muscular guy on the other side is definitely his bodyguard.”

Tammy agreed with her friend’s analysis.

“That woman on the left looks a lot like my best friend!” Tammy said as she stared at the back of Avery’s head.

“What kind of best friend would I be otherwise? Of course, I know what her back looks like!”

The more Tammy looked at the woman, the more she thought she looked like Avery.

She pulled out her phone and sneakily took a photo.

“You can’t take pictures in the concert hall!” sighed the friend. “You might as well go to the first row and check it out!”

“Forget it, the recital’s about to start anyway,” Tammy said as she sent the photo to Avery.

Avery felt her phone vibrate in her pocket.

She pulled it out and saw Tammy’s text message.

Tammy: (Avery, doesn’t this woman look a lot like you?)

Avery’s heart almost burst out of her chest, and she unconsciously sank further into her seat.

Seeing her odd reaction, Elliot turned his head and looked behind him.

“D*mn, he’s hot!” Tammy exclaimed when she saw Elliot’s handsome face. “Holy sh*t! Isn’t that Elliot Foster?!” cried her friend.

“That’s Elliot Foster?”

“Yeah! Did you forget that I’m a business major? Of course, I’d know him. That’s definitely Elliot Foster!” Tammy let out a sigh and said, “If that’s the case, then that woman next to him can’t be my Avery. Why would she be sitting next to him?”

She then sent another text to Avery.

Tammy: (Sigh, it can't be you, because the man next to her is Elliot Foster! Do you know who he is? He's super-rich and super hot! I couldn't breathe when he turned to look at us just now!)

When Avery saw Tammy's message, she could not help but sneak a peek at Elliot.

Super hot?

Why did she not see it?

Tammy sent another text moments later.

Tammy: (My friend's planning on getting a photo with him later. Do you think I should ask for one, too? | wonder if he'll do it.)

Avery's phone felt like fire in her hands.

"Elliot..." she called out to him under her breath, "I'm suddenly really hungry... Let's go get something to eat!"

She would get caught red-handed if she did not leave now.

The mere thought of it terrified her.

Before Elliot could answer, she picked up her coat with one hand and grabbed onto his arm with the other. She hunched as she pulled him out of the hall.

Avery brought their time at the recital to an abrupt end in less than ten minutes.

This was the first time Elliot Foster had taken a woman to a recital.

He had never cared for such things, but he overcame his emotional barriers just to make her happy.

With his current status, Elliot was bound to be the center of attention everywhere he went.

Not only did Avery not appreciate this opportunity to spend some alone time with him, but she was mortified at the idea that someone might see them together.

Her behavior was a huge slap on his proud face

Once they were out of the concert hall, Elliot shook off her hand and stormed off without turning back.

Avery was hit by a sudden realization as she watched his tall figure walk away from her.

Was asking her to the recital his way of taking her out on a date?

Even so.... were not both parties supposed to agree to the date? Had he wanted to surprise her?

Chapter 48

The more Avery thought about it, the more erratic her breathing became.

Was this proof that Elliot was in love with her?

Otherwise, why would he go and do something that he considered a waste of time?

She felt a sudden chill run down her spine.

Her hand instinctively drifted to her lower abdomen.

She was now more than three months pregnant. She had been watching her diet, so her baby bump was not showing at all.

By the time she reached the fifth and sixth months, she could still hide her bump under loose clothing.

What would happen when she was near the end of her term?

No matter how skinny a pregnant mother was, she would not be able to hide her baby bump once that time came.

If she was still by Elliot's side by then, she would definitely get caught.

Avery wandered aimlessly around the streets.

She was holding her jacket in her arms, and she was wearing nothing but a light t-shirt, but she did not feel the cold breeze.

Her feelings for Elliot confused her.

It was exactly like the answer she gave him the night before.

She did not have the courage to love him. She despised his previous domineering and arrogant behavior.

She could not say that she did not love him either, because somewhere deep down inside her heart, she did in fact have feelings for him!

She was just too embarrassed and too cowardly to admit it.

The babies she was carrying were standing between the two of them.

If she wanted to keep the children, then she had to leave him.

At the end of the day, she was not a cold-hearted machine. Her body and actions would not necessarily follow every instruction that came from her rational mind.

When exactly did she begin to fall in love with Elliot? She could not answer that question.

She had hated him to death when he forced her to get an abortion.

Avery arrived home that evening and placed a gift box on the coffee table in the living room.

“Mrs. Cooper, this is for Elliot. Please let him know when he gets back later,” Avery informed.

Mrs. Cooper beamed as she said, “Now, that’s the way! Your life here would be much easier if he’s happy with you. If for nobody else but yourself, you should care more about his mood.”

Mrs. Cooper’s words made sense, but Avery said indifferently, “I’m a little hungry.”

“Dinner’s ready. How about you take a bite now, then join Master Elliot again when he gets home?” suggested Mrs. Cooper.

Avery immediately shook her head and said, “He’s mad at me. It’s better for the both of us if we don’t have dinner together.”

Mrs. Cooper was at a loss for words.

How did Avery anger Elliot this time?

Elliot might not have the best temper, but as long as things go his way, he would never lose his cool for no good reason.

It was the end of the workday at Sterling Group, but Elliot was still in his office and he had no intention of leaving anytime soon.

He arrived at the office at five in the evening emanating an ominous and frightening aura.

Nobody dared speak to him, and he spoke to no one either.

He just continued to work from five to six in the evening.

Chad phoned up Ben to ask for his help.

He did not dare leave before Elliot left.

Besides, Elliot's awful mood made Chad jumpy.

Did he not go to a recital with Avery?

Why was he back at the office before the recital was over?

Did Avery ditch him, or did they fight at the recital?

Ben arrived soon after answering Chad's call.

Chad explained the situation to Ben outside Elliot's office door.

"I bet she passed him off again," Chad said. "I really want to meet Avery Tate. I think there's something wrong with her. Of all the people she could mess with, she decides to pick on the boss every day."

"Maybe this is her modus operandi," Ben said. "Sometimes, going against the tide can lead to unexpected results. No one around Elliot would dare anger him. Don't you think it's refreshing for him to have someone around who drives him crazy?"

“Come on, nobody likes getting infuriated all the time,” Chad disagreed.
“Unless Mr. Foster is some kind of masochist.”

At that moment, the doors to the president’s office burst open and Elliot walked out. Ben and Chad reacted quickly, and they immediately rushed to Elliot’s side to help him out.

Chapter 49

“Mr. Foster, are your legs alright without the wheelchair?” Chad asked gently.

He knew that Elliot had not used the wheelchair today as he had not wanted there to be any obstructions while he was on his date with Avery.

Enter title...

Him having to roll the wheelchair would have definitely been a bad experience for Avery.

It was a shame that she did not appreciate his boss’s thoughtfulness.

Elliot pushed Ben and Chad aside.

His expression was cold as he curtly said, “I’m fine.”

“Let’s go have a drink, Elliot!” Ben said as he grabbed onto Elliot’s arm once again. “Charlie Tierney’s around, so let’s get him to join us.”

Elliot’s ominous expression concerned Ben.

Charlie was Chelsea’s older brother.

Ben was the one who called Charlie when Chelsea angered Elliot.

The Tierney family business was based in Rosacus City..

As the heir to the Tierney empire, Chalice spent most of his time in Rosacus.

After a moment of silence, Elliot said, "No."

He made his way to the elevator. He did not walk quickly, but his strides were sure and stable.

Although his love life was a mess, his legs were recovering quite well.

Elliot arrived home at seven thirty that evening.

Mrs. Cooper immediately brought Avery's gift to him and said, "Madam Avery prepared a gift for you, Master Elliot."

The box was quite heavy, and Elliot wondered what it was.

"Is she home?" he asked.

"She is," Mrs. Cooper responded, "She went back to her room to write her thesis after dinner."

Elliot pursed his lips and examined the gift box.

Had she bought him a gift after she had realized how rude she was?

It was only fair that everyone got a second chance.

Avery's initiative to buy him a gift made the rage in his heart dissipate slightly.

Elliot slowly opened up the box, revealing the book inside of it.

This book had an eye-catching title.

It was called “The Art of Anger Management”, and it had a picture of a lush ginseng plant for a cover.

Elliot’s brows furrowed tightly.

Was this Avery’s idea of an apology?!

Did she genuinely want to apologize to him, or did she think he was narrow-minded and wanted to continue to test his limits?!

The smile on Mrs. Cooper’s face also vanished upon seeing the book.

She took back the praise she threw at Avery earlier.

“I’ll go get Madam Avery so she can explain the meaning behind her gift. I’m sure she didn’t mean any harm,” Mrs. Cooper said as she tried to come up with an excuse for Avery.

“Forget it!” Elliot hissed through gritted teeth, then slammed the book on the table.

Avery’s heart tightened when she heard the commotion from her room.

There was a reason why she bought that book for Elliot.

One of her professors had recommended it to her, and she already read the whole thing herself. She found the book’s connection between mental and physical health to be enlightening and helpful.

It opened her mind, and she believed that an open mind can lead to better emotional health.

One might not live forever if one got angry less, but it could at least prevent some illnesses.

Was that not great? What was he getting angry about again?

Did he think her gift was too cheap?

She did not have much money to buy him anything expensive.

Avery's heart raced and uneasiness overcame her. She hesitated over whether or not to go downstairs, and talk to Elliot.

At that moment, the door to her room burst open, and Elliot's tall and muscular figure appeared before her.

Chapter 50

Cold sweat dripped down Avery's back.

Instinctively, she slammed her laptop shut.

Enter title...

She would not have done that if she were working on her thesis.

In her earlier frenzy of wild thoughts, she started a new file and wrote down a plan.

It was a plan to get a divorce within the next three months.

Avery hoped to get a divorce from Elliot before she was seven months pregnant.

That was the only way she could successfully go through her last trimester and peacefully give birth to the twins.

If her plan failed and the divorce did not go through, then the only thing she could do was disappear.

That would be the worst-case scenario.

Avonsville was her home, and she wanted to continue to live and work there. She also hoped that her children could be born and grow up where she did.

Avery's overly cautious reaction revolted Elliot.

Did she think that he would be interested in her thesis?

Or perhaps she was not working on her thesis at all, and she was doing something else?

Avery saw Elliot's sullen expression and immediately shot up and walked over to the door.

"Did you not like the book I gave you?" she said gently as she squeezed past him out of the room. "You shouldn't look down on it. It's a really good book that highlights all kinds of ways to stay healthy. The author is my mentor's teacher. He's a really well-known professor, you know?"

She talked as she walked into the living room and picked up the book from the coffee table.

In the seriousness of her introduction, Elliot forgot to cut her off.

"You can take a look whenever you're bored. You can start at any chapter and it would still make sense,"

Avery added.

“Is it really that great? You’re making me want to get one for myself, too,” Mrs. Cooper chimed in.

“I’ll go get one for you tomorrow, then,” Avery said with a smile.

“Don’t mention it. It was not expensive at all. There was a sale at the bookstore so I got it for a dollar fifty.”

The smile on Mrs. Cooper’s face froze at Avery’s mention of the price of the book.

Mrs. Cooper did not mind that the book was cheap, but she felt embarrassed for Avery.

She angered Elliot, but ended up buying a gift for him that was barely over a dollar?

As if it was not already bad enough that she bought him a gift that was on sale, she was openly parading the fact that it was easy on the wallet!

Avery sensed that the atmosphere had turned awkward.

She took a deep breath, then picked up the gift box on the table and said, “This gift box wasn’t cheap, you know? It was even more expensive than the book!”

Even if the gift box cost more than the book, it was doubtful that it could be that much more expensive.

“Thank you, Madam! I’m going to get dinner ready for Master Elliot now,” said Mrs. Cooper as she rushed t o the kitchen.

Avery turned around to glance at Elliot's face.

He did not look as stern as he did earlier.

He was either no longer angry, or he was not in the mood to be enraged with her.

It was unbelievable that she would buy him a gift that cost just over a dollar.

His head ached so badly that he could no longer feel any other type of pain.

His calm expression lifted the alarm in Avery's heart.

Out of concern, she asked, "Why were you meeting with Professor Hough earlier today? Are you sick?"

Before he could shoot his mouth off, Avery picked up a banana and passed it to him.

"Here, have a banana. I'm going back to my room."

When she shoved the banana in his hand, her fingers accidentally touched him. The skin-to-skin contact sent electric waves shooting between them.

She pulled her hand back as her cheeks flushed a crimson red.

Before she could escape, Elliot put the banana down, grabbed onto her arm, and yanked her back.

"You haven't explained what happened earlier," he said in a low voice.

Whether Avery had given Elliot a book worth a dollar or a hundred thousand dollars, she still owed him a reasonable explanation for ruining his afternoon

Chapter 51

Avery felt suffocated under Elliot's fiery yet solemn gaze.

"Are you talking about leaving the recital early today?" Avery began to explain after a moment's hesitation.

"My friend texted me saying that she wanted to take a photo with you after the show. I figured that you wouldn't like taking photos with strangers, and I didn't want to explain to them why we were there together."

Enter title...

"Why not?" Elliot asked, his voice as cold as ice.

"It wouldn't exactly be a quick conversation, would it? Besides, you and I are too different from each other.

Not only in status but also... in age. Would you be willing to hang out with my friends? We can be pretty immature... Wouldn't it be annoying if they bothered you because of our relationship? Wouldn't you rather have one less thing to have to worry about?"

In truth, the true reason why she did not want him to meet her friends was because they could get a divorce at any moment. There was no guarantee that they were going to spend the rest of their lives together.

If Avery revealed her relationship with Elliot to her friends, and they got divorced the next day... How humiliating would that be?

It would be better to wait until everything was settled.

Avery's detailed and patient response calmed Elliot down quite a bit.

Her concern was not unreasonable.

He had no interest in any of her friends.

Apart from Avery, he had no intention of getting to know anyone younger or more immature than he was.

"You should go back to your room," Elliot said through thin lips.

Avery let out a sigh of relief as if she had just received a great pardon.

She peeled a banana, then stubbornly shoved it in his face.

"I got these Goldfinger bananas today. They're my favorite. I think they taste better than normal bananas.

Try it," Avery urged with a look of anticipation on her face.

Seeing the bruised skin on the banana made Elliot hesitate, but he did not have the heart to turn her down.

He took the banana from her hand and took a bite.

It tasted a little sour at first, but sweetness slowly filled his mouth as he continued to chew on it.

On the whole, it was sweet, sour, and starchy, and very different from the average banana.

"Don't judge it by its bruised skin. It's completely fine on the inside," Avery said with a sparkle in her eyes, then added, "Thank you for taking me to the recital today. We didn't get to stay until the end, but I still wanted to thank you."

She hurriedly finished her sentence, then rushed back to her room before she could get a response and shut the door.

Elliot was puzzled.

Was this her so-called gratitude?

He might have felt her sincerity, but she could have at least waited until he finished eating before running

It was in the late morning the next day that Mrs. Cooper noticed that Avery had not come down for breakfast, and Elliot was stubbornly waiting in the living room.

He did not say what he was waiting for, but Mrs. Cooper guessed that he wanted to have breakfast with

Avery.

When Mrs. Cooper knocked on Avery's door and did not receive a response, she opened the door and walked in.

After taking in the scene in the room, she quickly entered the living room and announced, "Madam Avery is hunched over asleep on her desk. I think she stayed up all night. Maybe you should go ahead and have breakfast without her, Master Elliot.”

Before she could finish her sentence, Elliot had already gotten up from the sofa and was making his way toward Avery’s bedroom,

He picked Avery up from the chair and lay her down on the bed.

She was in such deep sleep that she had not stirred despite the movement.

It must not have been long since she had fallen asleep.

Why was she going this far for her thesis?

Elliot shifted his gaze to the laptop on the desk.

It was from a brand that had already gone out of business, and the model was at least a few years old.

It was no wonder that it had shut down before, and she was forced to use the computer in his study.

He walked over to her desk and noticed that the laptop’s screen was a little blurry, so he hit the power button.

The screen lit up moments later, revealing a home screen with only a few icons on it.

There was Avery’s thesis and a file named “The Plan”, which Elliot opened up without hesitation.

The document’s title was bolded and in all caps, making it stand out greatly. The title was “Three-Month Divorce Plan”!

Chapter 52

The contents which were below the title were short and simple, for Avery could not figure out exactly how to get out of her situation no matter how much she had thought about it.

There was only one sentence: (Divorce Elliot Foster by the end of the year at all costs.)

A mixture of rage and bitterness swept across Elliot's face.

He was working on himself to change for the better, but she was still hell bent on leaving him.

She had created the document the night before... She had played him for a fool!

While she pretentiously buttered him up with her gifts and her words, she had been planning her escape in her room!

Elliot had thought that Avery was different, but the only thing that was unique about her was that she was a two-faced snake!

He slammed the laptop shut and stormed out of the room.

The people at the executive meeting at Sterling Group noted Elliot's peculiar mood.

From the moment he stepped into the conference room, his brows were furrowed and his expression was icy.

His face emanated a chilling aura that made the people around him shudder.

weathe

All the department managers were seated in stiff, upright positions, and they barely dared to breathe.

The company's performance in the third quarter had exceeded expectations, but why was the president enraged?

Elliot did not say a word throughout the entire meeting and indifferently listened to each department's report.

It was not until the end of the meeting that he said, "Dismissed," then left the room in a flash.

Chad was about to run after him, but he was held back by one of the managers.

"What's wrong with the boss, Mr. Rayner? Is he not happy with our performance this quarter? If he isn't, then he can tell us what he wants, and we will do our best to achieve it!"

"Exactly! It was weird that he didn't say anything the whole time. Does he have some new plans or ideas?"

Everyone surrounded Chad in hopes of getting first-hand news from him.

Chad adjusted his glasses, then said, "The company's performance this quarter was indeed impressive, s o

I'm sure Mr. Foster is very satisfied. The reason for his bad mood doesn't have anything to do with work, but it is something in his personal life. Just get back to work!"

After that, Chad hurriedly rushed to Elliot's office.

He opened the office doors without knocking, but he did not expect there to be a guest inside the room.

"Long time no see, Mr. Tierney," said Chad.

"Hey, Chad. I'm borrowing your boss for a second," said Charlie with a gentle smile on his face.

Chad took the hint, so he quickly stepped out of the room and shut the door behind him.

As the room returned to its original state of silence, the smile on Charlie's face also vanished.

"I'm here on my parents' orders to take Chelsea home, but she won't come with me no matter what I say to her," Charlie said. "You're the only one she'll listen to, Elliot."

Elliot picked up his phone and dialed Chelsea's number in front of Charlie.

Chelsea answered the call almost right away and said excitedly, "Elliot? Did you need something?"

"Resign and go home with your brother," Elliot said bluntly.

Charlie's brows furrowed at his unexpected straightforwardness.

Chelsea stayed silent for a moment, then exclaimed, "Did Charlie say something to you? Don't listen to him! I'm not going with him!"

She hung up right after she said her piece.

Elliot put down his phone, then shot Charlie an icy glare and snapped, "How many times have I had to deal with her behavior over the years? That was the last time. Don't bother me with your family matters again!"

Noticing his unusually bad mood, Charlie shot to his feet and said, "I'll be leaving, then!"

He bumped into Chad as he walked out of the office and said, "Is your company in the middle of a crisis or something? Elliot is in an exceptionally bad mood today."

"Everything's fine. It's Mr. Foster's love life that's in a crisis," Chad responded.

Charlie raised his brows in curiosity, then asked, "Who's he dating? Why haven't I heard anything about it?"

"His wife."

"Avery Tate?"

"So, you have heard about it."

"I heard it from Chelsea. She's always bringing up Elliot when I talk to her. It hurts my ears," Charlie said, then grinned and added, "So, the great Elliot Foster has fallen in love with a young lady who's barely out of college. Interesting..."

Chapter 53

“Maybe it’s fate,” said Chad.

“That’s too bad for my baby sister,” responded Charlie.

Enter title...

“Forgive me for being forward, Mr. Tierney,” Chad said. “Chelsea is an exceptional woman, but despite all the years that she’s spent by Mr. Foster’s side, he still hasn’t fallen in love with her. Even if she spends the next twenty, thirty years next to him... He will never love her.”

A hint of malice flashed in Charlie’s eyes as he replied, “Thanks for the reminder.”

That evening, Elliot took the company’s managers out for dinner.

After that, Ben dragged him out for drinks.

Everyone knew that Elliot was in a foul mood, but nobody knew the reason behind it.

Which was why they all decided to work together to get him drunk.

Once drunkenness began to show in Elliot’s eyes, Ben took his wine glass away from him.

“You haven’t said much today. Isn’t it stressful keeping everything inside?” Ben said as he switched Elliot’s wine glass out for a glass of juice.

Elliot raised his slender fingers to his head and began to massage his temples.

“Avery wants a divorce,” he said in a low voice with his eyes slightly closed.
“Am I that pathetic?”

The room froze in stunned silence.

How was it possible for anyone to think their boss was pathetic?!

Was there something wrong with Avery Tate’s head?

Not only was Elliot Foster a talented man, but he was also a master of business.

The number of women who love and admire him would line up from here all the way to the south pole!

Who did Avery Tate think she was to hurt him this way?!

“What do you think of Miss Tate, Ben?” Chad asked.

“She’s just an average college student,” Ben responded, then changed his mind and corrected himself,”

Wait, maybe not. She’s quite a looker. If Chelsea’s looks could kill, then Avery gives off a sweet and friendly girl-next-door vibe.”

“I’ve never met Avery Tate! Should we give her a call and ask her to join us?” someone suggested.

Ben glanced at Elliot, saw that he was still massaging his temples in pain, so reached into his pocket and pulled out his phone.

“I’ll get Avery to come take you home, Elliot!” said Ben.

Elliot’s breathing turned heavy.

He did not answer the question, so Ben took it as him agreeing to the suggestion.

At the Foster mansion, Avery was sitting at her desk, quietly making revisions to her thesis.

She was surprised when she picked up her ringing phone and saw that it was Elliot calling.

When she answered the call, however, the voice on the other line was not Elliot's.

"Hello, Miss Tate. Are you busy right now?"

"I'm not... Who is it?" Avery said as she felt her heart tighten from anxiety. "Elliot's had a little too much to drink. Could you come get him?"

"Me? Doesn't he have a bodyguard? I doubt the bodyguard is drunk, too?"

Everyone in the room was taken aback by her response.

"The bodyguard isn't with him tonight," Ben responded, "So, are you coming?"

Avery stood from her seat, got her coat from the closet, then said, "Send me the address. I'm on my way."

Ben hung up the phone and sent her their location.

About forty minutes later, Avery and the driver arrived at the restaurant where Elliot and his entourage were gathered

She got out of the car and came face to face with the group of men standing at the restaurant's entrance.

All the men looked at her.

Avery's cheeks flushed as she subconsciously tucked her chin deeper into the collar of her coat.

Ben dragged Elliot toward her, handed him over, then said, "Miss Tate, even if you don't love him, I hope you don't hurt him."

Avery almost lost her balance and dropped Elliot.

"Hurt him?" she asked, bewildered. "I wish I could! I just have no idea how."

Her voice struck a nerve inside Elliot. He shot up, turned around, and pinned her against the car.

Chapter 54

Avery smelled the alcohol on Elliot along with the faint scent of tobacco.

Suddenly, she noticed that the group of men behind Ben had pulled out their phones and were aiming their cameras at her.

Enter title...

They must have been in on it with Ben.

Avery gave Elliot a hard shove, but because she was worried about him falling, she reached out and grabbed his arm.

Seeing this, the driver hurried over to help, and the two placed Elliot in the backseat of the car.

Once Avery strapped Elliot in, the driver passed her a bottle of water.

She had worked up a sweat, so she accepted the bottle and took a big gulp of water from it.

“That was for Mr. Foster, Madam,” said the driver.

Avery’s cheeks turned crimson.

She quickly held the bottle out next to Elliot’s arm and asked, “Do you want some water?”

His eyes were closed and his brows furrowed tightly as if he was in a world of discomfort.

He did not respond to her question at all.

Avery was not sure if he did not hear her, or if he did, but chose not to answer her.

“Maybe you can feed it to him, Madam,” suggested the driver.

Avery frowned in frustration.

She placed her hand at the back of Elliot’s neck in hopes of lifting his head up.

The moment her palm made contact with the skin on his nape, however, Elliot’s eyes instantly shot open.

Avery quickly yanked her hand back, threw her head back, and took another big gulp of water.

As Elliot watched her side profile, he recalled the divorce plan he saw on her laptop.

He wondered how she planned to turn her scheme into reality.

The car drove steadily in the night as the atmosphere inside of the vehicle turned stranger and stranger by the minute.

From the corner of her eye, Avery noticed Elliot's unwavering gaze fixed on her, and her heart began to race wildly in her chest.

She finished the bottle of water in record-breaking time.

Elliot snatched the empty bottle out of her hands and tossed it aside, breaking the silence with a bang.

"You want to divorce me because I made you abort that b*st*rd child," he hissed coldly.

Avery had nowhere to run or hide, so she had no choice but to answer him.

"It's your right to not want kids, but you can't forcefully take away my right to be a mother. I want children, and I want to be a mother. Tell me, apart from getting a divorce, how else would I be able to have my own kids?"

This matter was a thorn in their relationship. If it was not resolved, it would continue to stab at them for the rest of their lives.

"Why do you insist on having kids? Do you like them that much?!" Elliot scoffed as a fiery rage boiled in his eyes.

Avery clenched her teeth as a wave of emotions rose inside of her.

If she were not already pregnant, she could live without children.

However, now that she was pregnant, she had a responsibility to her babies. "Why are you so against having them? You're not the one giving birth to or raising them! Why can't you just give them a chance?"

Avery cried in a voice that was louder than Elliot's.

The driver was shocked.

Where did Avery Tate get the guts to raise her voice at Elliot Foster?

Did she really think that his patience with her was limitless?

Just as the driver thought that Elliot would raise his hand, a heavy silence fell upon the backseat.

Avery calmed down slightly after a little while.

Her voice broke through the piercing silence as she said through reddened eyes, "Everyone has something they'd rather not discuss. What's there to fight about?"

"Don't think that you're the only one for me, Avery Tate," Elliot said in a voice that was chilling to the bone, his tone heartless and indifferent.

"We're as different as heaven and hell. I've never hoped to stand on equal ground next to you," Avery responded.

What kind of a question was that?

She did not answer him. Her head was pounding.

The backseat was drenched in the smell of alcohol. She felt sick to her stomach and rolled down the

Chapter 55

The cold, night air burst into the car, whipping Avery’s hair and calming her nerves.

Elliot had said that he was not the only one for her.

Enter title...

From that, she figured that as long as she remained adamant about the divorce, he might just agree to it

one day

The anxiety she felt dulled into relief with that comforting thought.

When they arrived at the mansion, Mrs. Cooper and the driver helped Elliot out of the car.

Avery saw that he was being looked after, so she quietly returned to her room.

It was not long before Mrs. Cooper showed up in her room and said, “Master Elliot won’t let anyone touch him, Madam. Maybe you should give it a try! You just need to wipe his face down and help him change his clothes.”

Wipe his face and change his clothes?

Avery would have no objections if Elliot were still in a vegetative state, but he was not!

He might have had a little too much to drink, but he was not unconscious.

She had not forgotten the fight that they had in the car on the way home.

“Why not just let him sleep like that?” Avery suggested. “He can take a shower and change himself when h e gets up in the morning. Let him be.”

“How could we do that, Madam?” Mrs. Cooper exclaimed in shock. “Come and try it out with me! He might protest less if you were the one helping him change.”

The door to the master bedroom was wide open when Avery arrived, and Elliot was lying in bed in a silent slumber.

Mrs. Cooper shoved Avery in the direction of the bed and said, “Master Elliot’s had too much to drink, so h e might wake up in the middle of the night and throw up... It’s better if someone stays and looks out for him.”

At this point, Avery already knew what Mrs. Cooper was about to suggest.

However, Mrs. Cooper interrupted her before she could refuse, “This is a crucial period in the recovery of his legs. The doctor said that getting hurt right now would severely affect his rehab treatment later. You should just stay with him tonight!”

Avery’s face twisted into a deep frown as she held back the words of protests she was about to cough up earlier.

Mrs. Cooper had a point, and she had no reason to refuse.

“You can wait until Master Elliot has slept for a bit before wiping his face... If you can’t get him to change into his pajamas, you can just help undress him... And let him sleep like that...” Mrs. Cooper said as she walked towards the room door.

Avery felt like her head was about to explode.

Once Mrs. Cooper was out of the room, she walked to the side of the bed.

Elliot’s eyes were shut and his breath was heavy. His cheeks were an unusual shade of pink, and she wondered how much he had to drink.

Avery went into the bathroom, then reemerged with a bowl of warm water,

She placed the bowl on the night stand at the head of the bed, then sat on the side of the bed and began t o unbutton Elliot’s shirt,

He sensed her touch on his shirt, and his hand clasped around her arm in reflex. At the same time, his eyes shot open, revealing a look of extreme caution.

“Let go,” Avery said as she stared into his eyes. “Or take it off yourself,”

Elliot did not want to do anything himself. His head was killing him,

Reason had not yet escaped him, but his body was already numb from the alcohol,

He let go of her arm, and Avery proceeded to successfully remove his shirt and unbuckle his belt.

Just as she was about to take off his trousers, Elliot’s large hand grabbed onto her slender wrist.

This time, his grip was tighter,

“Who let you in my room?!” he roared as his chest rose and fell. “Who let you take off my clothes? Have you always been such a loose woman?”

Avery was flummoxed.

Was this the power of alcohol?

It was likely that he would not remember anything about what happened that night when he woke up the next morning

At that thought, Avery released her inhibitions.

She pushed his hand out of the way, grabbed onto the waistband of his trousers, and yanked it off after a couple of hard yanks.

Elliot's brows furrowed tightly as he glared viciously at her."

She paid him no mind and moved on to dumping the clothes in the laundry basket.

She then picked up the face towel from the bowl of warm water, wrung it dry, and proceeded to dab the warm towel on Elliot's furious face.

Chapter 56

"Stop acting like a baby," Avery said in a low and gentle voice as she wiped down Elliot's face. "Do you think I want to care for you like this? You stink of booze... Aren't you a clean freak? Was that all an act? | wouldn't even bother helping you if your legs weren't still recovering."

The sound of her voice calmed Elliot's breathing, and he was overcome by a sudden wave of drowsiness.

Her voice was like a hypnotic lullaby.

Once Avery finished wiping Elliot down, she pulled the covers over him and tucked him in.

By the time she cleaned up in the bathroom and returned to the bedroom, he was already fast asleep.

She finally let out a huge sigh of relief.

She sat down on the edge of the bed and glanced around the room.

The memory of how her every move was monitored and recorded by surveillance cameras for the first three months she was there sent a shudder down her body.

The cameras were probably gone by now.

Elliot was erratic and bad-tempered, but he was not a pervert.

Avery got up and retrieved her pillow and blanket from her room.

Elliot had woken up several times during the night.

He was not completely sober, so he did not notice that there was someone else in bed with him.

Avery and Elliot ended up spending the night in peace and quiet.

The next day, the warm morning sun crept in through the large windows, enveloping the room in light.

Avery was sound asleep on the bed. Her arm rested on his chest, her slender leg wrapped around his thigh.

Elliot's splitting headache woke him up and that was when he noticed Avery's peaceful face right next to

him.

A strange feeling washed over him.

Less than a minute after he had opened his eyes, Avery's eyes slowly opened as well.

As their eyes met, sparks of embarrassment crackled in the air around them. Elliot's eyes were still bloodshot, but they were much more focused than the night before.

Avery very quickly realized the awkward positions of her arm and leg.

Seeing as he did not seem bothered by it, she decided to casually dismiss the whole thing and slowly raised her leg off of his.

“You’re looking well-rested. Did you have a good night’s sleep?” Elliot said in a husky voice. Avery’s leg froze in midair.

.. “I guess so,” she said with flushed cheeks as she immediately moved her leg away, then changed the subject and said, “You didn’t take a shower last night. Aren’t you going to have one?”

Her words rescued her from the embarrassing situation.

Elliot got out of bed and walked into the bathroom.

The moment he was out of sight, Avery picked up her pillow and blanket and fled the room.

That was close!

It was a good thing that nothing had happened.

She prayed that he would forget everything from the night before, including their fight in the car.

Otherwise, the rest of her days would surely be a nightmare.

Although, that disruption of the peace might just be what she needed for a divorce.

That weekend, Tammy and Jun went out on a lunch date.

Since it was their second time meeting, they were much more relaxed around each other.

Tammy was wearing a jacket with wide-legged trousers and a pair of sneakers.

She had on light makeup, and her hair was gathered up in a simple ponytail.

Of all the coincidences in the world, Jun had also shown up in a jacket. Although, his was paired with a pair of jeans and casual sandals.

They exchanged warm smiles when they met.

“You were dressed pretty sexily at the party that night. Here I thought that your hotness was all there was to you,” Jun said with a grin.

Chapter 57

Tammy was holding the menu. She glanced at Jun and said, “Your outfit was pretty tight, so I assumed you liked men. Of course, I’m not saying you can’t prefer men. I respect everyone’s sexual orientation.”

Jun almost choked on his water.

“You’ve greatly misunderstood, Miss Lynch. I’m straight. Very straight.”

“And I’m not as promiscuous as you think.”

“Alright! Let’s start over,” Jun said as he reached out his hand for a handshake.

In order to find out his true intentions for Avery, Tammy shook his hand.

Once they had ordered their food, the two of them talked about anything and everything.

An hour and some wine later, Jun's defenses crumbled and he began to ramble.

"I have a friend who had a shotgun marriage. He has feelings for his wife, but he's too scared to show it.

When she had gotten into some trouble recently, he had me help her. The funniest thing is that his wife has no idea that I'm friends with her husband. The first time she met me, he had been furious. He didn't think that she should have gone to meet a stranger... Isn't that hilarious?"

Tammy was stunned, then said, "A friend of mine also suddenly told me she had a husband out of nowhere!

She won't even tell me who he is because she keeps wanting to get a divorce, but I don't know if she'll be able to get one."

"I guess anything is possible nowadays," Jun said.

"Exactly! One thing's for sure, I'm never jumping into marriage," said Tammy.

"Me, too," responded Jun.

At this point, Tammy had decided that it was time to find out if Jun really had two hundred million in his bank account, and she executed her plan.

“Do you use a digital wallet or a credit card to buy stuff nowadays?” Tammy asked as she tried to behave as casually as possible.

“I use my phone because it’s more convenient,” Jun replied.

“Isn’t there a limit to that?”

“I rarely splurge on things. After all, it hasn’t been long since I graduated, I feel bad using too much of my parents’ money.”

Tammy nodded, then asked bluntly, “How much money do you have in your savings account?”

Jun was taken aback by her the personal nature of her question.

“Are you worried that I’m some penniless loser?” Jun asked, then answered honestly, “I only have under a hundred thousand in there.”

Tammy pursed her lips, then shook her head out of politeness.

Should she trust Jun or Avery?

Judging by his expression and tone, it did not seem like he was lying. On the other hand, Avery was her best friend, and she had her unconditional trust.

Tammy changed her strategy and asked, “Does your family delegate some important jobs to you?”

Perhaps the two hundred million belonged to Jun’s father?

Could acquiring Tate Industries also be his father's idea?

"No way! My father hopes to pass the family business to me, but I'm not interested in it at all." Jun's answer threw Tammy back into a sea of confusion. She wanted to continue interrogating him, but they were still far from being close enough in their relationship to justify that.

If she asked him now, there was no way that he would answer her truthfully.

It seemed like she had to be a little more ruthless.

"What do you think of me?" Tammy asked with her sweetest smile. "If you like me, I'd like to take things to the next step. What do you think?"

Jun was taken aback.

"Don't you think that's rushing things?"

Tammy's smile faded slightly.

"I don't mean it like that, Miss Lynch!" Jun explained immediately. "I just thought that we could meet a few more times and get to know each other better before we decide on moving things further..."

The more he explained, the more upset Tammy looked.

"Alright! I'm sorry, Miss Lynch. I just didn't expect you to be that interested in me. Since you're willing to take things further with me, then, of course, I'd agree..."

“Don’t call me Miss Lynch anymore, Jun. Call me Tammy,” said Tammy as the smile returned to her face.

She had decided to unravel Jun’s true intentions within the next two weeks.

Her magnetic smile made Jun feel like he was in a dream.

Things were going too fast!

He did not expect to get a girlfriend this quickly!

Avery’s jaw dropped when she heard the news of Tammy getting a boyfriend.

Was this not too big a sacrifice?

Just as she was about to send Tammy a text, she received a call from an unknown number.

Her fingers accidentally tapped the answer button on her phone, and the unfamiliar voice of a man came from the other side of the line.

Chapter 58

“Is this Miss Avery Tate?”

The low, deep voice on the other end was warm and polite.

“Yes, and you are?” Avery asked.

“Hello, I’m Charlie Tierney from Trust Capital. I got your number from your company’s HR department. I’d like to propose a collaboration,” said Charlie.

“Trust Capital?”

“That’s right. Do you have time to meet up today? I’m near your office right now,” Charlie said in an earnest and sincere tone.

After a moment’s consideration, Avery accepted his invitation.

Once they decided on a meeting point, she called the HR manager at Tate Industries.

“Do you know Charlie Tierney from Trust Capital?”

“He’s an impressive investor. Trust Capital is one of the country’s top ten investment banks, which was why

I didn’t hesitate to give him your number when he asked for it earlier,” answered the HR manager.

“Got it,” said Avery

“Do you need me to accompany you when you go to your meeting? I’m worried that you’ll get overwhelmed if you go alone,” asked the manager.

Morale at Tate Industries took a huge dip when Shaun left the company. It had also caused a handful of the staff to resign.

If they continued to fail to get investors, it would not be long until the company met its doom.

She looked up Charlie Tierney online on her way to the meeting.

She was stunned when his photo popped up.

He looked much younger than she had expected.

She glanced at his age and discovered that he was indeed rather young.

It was strange. They were the same age, but why did she think Charlie looked younger, but Elliot looked

She took another look at Charlie's photo and found her answer.

Charlie had a dashing smile in the photo while Elliot had a constant poker face.

When Avery walked into Cafe Meadow, Charlie immediately got up and waved to her.

She sat down on the chair across from him and said, "Nice to meet you, Mr. Tierney."

"There's no need for formalities here. Call me Charlie." said Charlie with a warm smile as he passed the menu to her.

Avery awkwardly waved her hand in the air and said, "I don't drink coffee," then paused and came up with an excuse, "I've been having trouble sleeping, so the doctor told me to quit caffeine."

Charlie put the menu down and said, "I'm sorry, I had no idea. Let's go somewhere else!"

"It's fine, I'll just have some water," Avery responded immediately. "You mentioned being interested in a collaboration, Mr. Tierney. Would you mind telling me why you're willing to work with us?"

Charlie ordered a cup of coffee and a slice of cake and passed the menu to the waiter.

"From a business point of view, I want to work with you because I think highly of Tate Industries," he said.

Avery stared at him and asked, "Are you interested in our self-driving program?"

Charlie's expression turned unreadable. After pondering for a moment, he said, "Your father wanted to venture into the private vehicle sector with the self-driving program, but I think we can do better than that.

We could bring the program into the exploration, search, and rescue, or even the military sectors... Don't you think so?"

The possibilities in Avery's mind suddenly broadened.

"Applying the system to the private sector is too much of a risk," Charlie continued. "If something goes wrong, even just one or two lethal accidents would completely destroy the company's reputation."

Avery nodded and said, "That's a very good point, Mr. Tierney. May I ask what kind of collaboration you're hoping to have with us?"

Charlie adjusted his glasses, put on a light smile, and said, "From what I understand, someone is interested in acquiring Tate Industries." "Yes," Avery responded. "He wants to buy us out."

Chapter 59

"I heard that you're not interested in selling, which is why I won't bring that up," Charlie said. He decided to cut to the chase and said, "I'd like to become a shareholder."

Avery's eyes instantly lit up.

"Are you serious about this, Mr. Tierney?" she asked.

"Of course, I am. However, there are two things I need to discuss with you before we sign the contract," Charlie said as he pulled out a document. "This is a proposal that my team and I put together. Tate Industries won't make it for long if it continues on its current course. We're running a business, not a charity. Firstly, only profit can ensure a company's sustainability in the long run."

Avery pulled out the documents from the folder and roughly sifted through them, and said, "Can I bring this proposal back and discuss it with my team, Mr. Tierney?"

"Of course."

"Thank you," Avery said as she picked up her glass and took a sip of water.

She then stared earnestly at Charlie and asked, "What was the other matter you wanted to discuss?"

Before she arrived, she did not expect their meeting to go this smoothly.

Now that the most important part of their meeting was settled, she finally felt like a weight was lifted off o f her shoulders."

"I'm Chelsea Tierney's brother," Charlie said honestly. "I'm her half-brother, to be exact."

The second those words escaped his mouth, the calmness on Avery's face instantly vanished.

Chelsea Tierney... Charlie Tierney...

It was no wonder that she felt there was something familiar about Charlie.

He was Chelsea's brother all along!

Avery had never gotten along with Chelsea, and now, her brother wanted to invest in her company...

Was this a joke?!

She could not help but wonder about Charlie's true intentions for wanting to invest in Tate Industries.

"I don't have a typical sibling relationship with Chelsea. We have different mothers, and my father made m e the heir to the family business..." Charlie explained.

"Are you telling me all of this because you know that I don't get along with your sister, Mr. Tierney? Did she tell you about it?" Avery asked cautiously.

"She's always been obsessed with Elliot Foster. Since I know about your relationship with him, I expected that she has made things difficult for you even without her telling me about it."

"That's right. We have a terrible relationship. Which is why I need to go back and properly think about the possibilities of working with you," Avery said straightforwardly.

Charlie did not expect her to react this fiercely.

"Miss Tate, as the successor of Tate Industries, you should be prioritizing your company's well-being. You have hundreds of employees whose survival is dependent on you. Your affairs with Chelsea are none of m y business. You shouldn't fling your frustration with her at me. I'm innocent."

Charlie's tone was soft and gentle. It was difficult to be angry with him no matter what he said. "I'm not a professional leader, Mr. Tierney. Things between Chelsea and I aren't as simple as you think. As her brother, it's only natural for me to have my reservations about you," Avery said.

"Give it some thought, then. I'll be waiting for your answer," Charlie said with a confident grin on his face.

Avery nodded, then got up and left.

The news of Trust Capital's preparations to invest in Tate Industries spread like wildfire in the business world.

Elliot's brows furrowed tightly upon hearing about it.

Charlie was a self-serving egoist.

He was certain that he had ulterior motives for investing in Tate Industries.

Although they had known each other for years, they were not close.

If it were not for Chelsea, they would have lost touch with each other a long time ago.

"Elliot, I called Tate Industries earlier and was told that Avery had met up with Charlie Tierney today and agreed on a collaboration... If he invested a hundred and fifty million, Avery would have a hard time rejecting him, especially because he will purely be an investor and will have no involvement in the company's operations," reported Jun.

Elliot raised his brows, and his voice was chilling as he said, "It looks to me like he wants to use that money to buy Avery, not the company!"

Chapter 60

"Is Avery worth that much?" Jun asked, slightly shocked.

"She's worth that much because she's my wife," Elliot said as an icy chill rose in his eyes. "If she were not married to me, Charlie Tierney wouldn't bother with any of this."

Jun was even more confused than before.

"If he wants to give Avery the money, then let him! Isn't this just him throwing free money at her?"

"She's my wife!" Elliot snapped.

"Oh, okay... I get it. What do you plan on doing? Increase our offer? She will definitely go with Tierney's offer if we don't."

"Not necessarily."

"If that's the case, then why are you so upset?"

Jun could tell from Elliot's tone that his emotions were all over the place.

Elliot wanted to acquire Tate Industries so that Avery could be free of its debt and troubles.

She was still in college, and she lacked the knowledge and experience when it comes to running a company.

It would be better for her to sell the company, pay off the debt, and make some money while she was at it.

That way, her and her mother's lives would be much smoother moving forward.

Elliot came to this decision after considering every aspect, but she did not appreciate any of his efforts.

If Avery accepted Charlie's investment, he would definitely hold the reins to the running of the company in the end.

"I admire you, Jun. Nobody loves you, and you have nobody to love, so you don't have to get your heartbroken," Elliot teased.

"I got a girlfriend today!" Jun responded enthusiastically. "I met her on a blind date. Our fathers know each other, so it's pretty much a solid match."

"That's good. Let me meet her once things are stable," Elliot said.

"Sure!" Jun said, then added, "Anyway, I think you can talk to Avery about this whole thing. She actually has a mind of her own."

"Go see your girlfriend!" Elliot snapped.

Just the sound of Avery's name gave him a headache.

As if he did not know Avery was opinionated.

It was because she was so opinionated that she never listened to anything he had to say.

Meanwhile, Avery was sitting in another cafe and complaining to Tammy on the phone.

"Whether it's Mr. Z, Jun Hertz, or Charlie Tierney... I can't help but think that there's something fishy about them,” she rambled. “Jun Hertz came out of nowhere, told you he had no money but came across as a billionaire in front of me. Charlie Tierney, on the other hand, knows full well that I don’t get along with his sister but insists on investing in my dad’s company. I wouldn’t be so suspicious if people were fighting to get a piece of Tate Industries, but nobody is interested in us at all!”

Tammy took a sip of the iced tea in her hand and said, “Let me deal with Jun Hertz. As for Tierney, why don’t you pick up the slack with his sister?”

Avery was taken aback.

She had spoken too quickly and let that slip.

“If you don’t trust Jun Hertz, then don’t work with him! Otherwise, you’d be in a mess if he sells you out in the end. I bet he’s a genius, so you won’t be able to keep up with him,” said Tammy.

It was a good thing that she did not decide to get to the bottom of her earlier question. “I’m sure the company’s management will insist on accepting Trust Capital’s investment,” Avery said. “You’re the boss! Who cares what they think?”

“I’m not technically the boss. I never signed the contract!”

“Now that your vice president is gone, who would go against you? Just make the decision yourself, Avery. Don’t think too much about it... Oh, Jun’s here. I’m hanging up now!”

When Avery returned to the Foster mansion that evening, there were guests in the house.

“Miss Tate! It’s the weekend, did you go out to hang out with your friends? Have you had dinner? If not, come join us!” Ben said with a grin as he got up from the couch. The sight of Ben made Avery recall Elliot’s drunken shenanigans the other night. “I’m not hungry... You go ahead! I’ll eat later.”

Avery did not want to join them for dinner at all.

Just then, she caught a whiff of the fragrant scent that drifted from the kitchen.

Her stomach immediately began to growl.

“Hahaha! Join us, Miss Tate!” Ben said as he led Avery into the living room. “I heard that you found an investor today, but why don’t you look happy about it?”

“Do you know Charlie Tierney? He’s Chelsea’s brother,” Avery asked. Since Ben seemed to know about Charlie’s offer, she decided to ask questions.

“If you don’t trust Jun Hertz, then don’t work with him! Otherwise, you’d be in a mess if he sells you out in the end. I bet he’s a genius, so you won’t be able to keep up with him,” said Tammy.

“Do you know Charlie Tierney? He’s Chelsea’s brother,” Avery asked. Since Ben seemed to know about Charlie’s offer, she decided to ask questions.

Chapter 61

“Of course I know him! We used to go out for drinks together all the time! Did he tell you that he’s really close to Chelsea?” Ben said as he deliberately mentioned the main point.

A hint of shock appeared on Avery’s face as she said, “He said they weren’t close.”

“He lied to you, then,” Ben said. “You have to really think about this. Why does he suddenly want to invest in Tate Industries? What’s the catch?”

“Are you saying it could be a trap?” Avery asked.

Ben shook his head and said, “I’m just saying that you need to look at this from every angle. There's no such thing as a free lunch, and gold doesn't just drop from the sky. You and Chelsea just had a falling out very recently, and now brother is interested in investing in your company. Aren't you worried?"

"I am," Avery answered.

"You have to think about this carefully... Anyway, let's eat," Ben said, then hollered, "Elliot! I'm done talking to your wife. You can come out now."

Avery almost choked at the sound of Ben calling her Elliot's wife.

Once she was seated at the dining table, Elliot chose a seat further away from her.

Ben brought over a decanter full of wine from the bar.

"Would you like some, Miss Tate?" he asked as he placed the decanter on the table and brought over three wine glasses.

Avery shook her head and said, "I don't drink. I need to work on my thesis later."

"Oh, I'll drink with Elliot, then..."

Ben poured a drink for himself and Elliot, then said, "It was a good thing you were around to take care of him when he got drunk the other night."

Avery coughed, then said, "I didn't take care of him. He was fine after a good night's sleep."

"I guess Elliot isn't a bad drunk. He's quiet even when he's drunk," Ben said.

"He's not very good at expressing his feelings..."

"I think he's very good at expressing himself! He loses his temper every time he's unhappy. I've never met anyone who likes expressing themselves more than he does."

Ben sat in stunned silence, while Elliot's face instantly turned dark with rage.

"Let's eat," Avery said when she noticed his change in expression.

She picked up her knife and fork and gobbled up her food to shut her little mouth up.

She finished her food in less than five minutes and left the table.

Ben watched her leave and sighed, "Does she always eat that quickly?"

"She does," Elliot responded.

"Is she anorexic? She didn't eat much."

"Someone who's actually anorexic wouldn't touch their food at all."

"Oh... I guess she's watching her figure to get your attention."

Elliot raised his brows and asked, "You think she cares about what I think at all?"

If Avery really cared about him, she would not have embarrassed him earlier.

He used to constantly get enraged by her attitude, but his patience had increased significantly.

"It doesn't look like it... But her courage to say whatever is on her mind is exactly why you like her," Ben said.

"When did I ever say that I like her?"

"Drop the act. It's just the two of us here. Besides, there's nothing wrong with liking a woman. Avery's more outstanding than a lot of other women...

"Outstanding, my *ss. All she thinks about is having kids."

Ben was left speechless.

In the guest bedroom, Avery turned on her laptop but could not calm her worried heart.

Something was bothering her, and she could not help but feel like something bad was about to happen.

Her phone suddenly rang, and her heart immediately began to race.

She picked up her phone and Cassandra's name met her eyes.

How dare she call her?! She was sure that it was for nothing good!

Chapter 62

Could it be that they had spent all the embezzled money?! How was it possible for them to spend that huge sum of money this quickly?

Avery took a deep breath and answered the phone.

Before she could say a word, Cassandra screamed from the other end of the line, "Avery! Is the Super Brain program my dad developed with you? Give it to me now!"

It sounded like she was crying, and she also sounded terrified.

Something snapped inside of Avery.

"How dare you call me, Cassandra?! Your uncle embezzled Dad's money! Did you know that's a serious crime?! The police are investigating him right now!"

"What does that have to do with me?! I wasn't the one who took the money! I just want the Super Brain program! Bring it to me right now! You have to get it to me tonight!"

Cassandra's voice got louder and more hysterical.

Avery's brows furrowed at the sound of the background noise on the phone.

"Where are you right now, Cassandra?!"

Cassandra burst into tears and wailed, "Help, Avery! I'm at the casino with Cole... He's being held right now ... If you don't bring Dad's new program here, they're going to chop off his finger!"

"Casino? You're gambling?!"

Avery's face turned pale.

She had no idea that Cole was a gambler!

"What's the point of going into that?! Bring over the program and save him! Do you hear me? Do you want Cole to lose his finger?! Don't you love him anymore?!" Cassandra yelled.

Avery was already walking toward the door, but she stopped in her tracks when she heard Cassandra's words.

"Don't embarrass yourselves! Even if he was the last man on earth, I wouldn't give Cole Foster the time of day! He's being held back because he lost money, right? If that's the case, why don't you pay it off for him? Your uncle stole hundreds of millions from Dad. I doubt Cole lost that much!" said Avery as she walked to the bathroom.

Her head was spinning, and she needed to wash her face to freshen herself up.

"It's not like my uncle gave me any of that money!" Cassandra cried frantically.

"Besides, they just want the program! Didn't you tell people that you gave it to Cole? Why did you say that when you never gave him anything? You did it on purpose to mess with him, didn't you?!"

Avery had not expected Shaun to move this quickly.

Cole may be a loser, but he was still Elliot Foster's nephew at the end of the day.

Shaun was more ruthless than she thought!

"They're keeping him because he gambled, right? Let me guess... Someone approached him asking about the program, he said he had it and used it as collateral, and now he's fallen right into their trap..."

Avery could see the whole thing clearly in her mind.

If Cole had not said that he had the program, why would anyone have funded his gambling?

If he did not gamble, how could he have gotten tricked in the first place?

Whose fault was this? It was his and no one else's!

“Ha! So you did do it on purpose! You're heartless, Avery Tate! He was so good to you when you were together! It looks like his love was all for nothing!”

Cassandra chastised Avery.

“Yes! He was really good to me. While he was dating me, he was doing all kinds of shameless things with you... They're only going to chop off his finger; they are not feeding him to the sharks. This isn't the time for you to cry over him yet!”

Avery said coldly, then hung up the phone.

Her phone rang again less than a minute later.

This time, Cole's name was flashing on her phone screen.

Avery clenched her jaw, then answered the phone.

She did not go soft on him, but she wanted to hear him begging and howling.

“Avery... Avery! Save me! If you don't... I'm going to turn into a cripple! You never gave me the program... You never did!"

Cole was being held down, and his voice was filled with panic.

"Why did you say you had it if I never gave it to you? You're paying for your own sins, Cole Foster! I can't save you!" Avery said, then prepared to hang up.

"Avery! It's my uncle! Uncle Elliot did this!" Cole screamed suddenly.
"Nobody

else would dare touch me! Please beg him for me... I'm begging you!"

Avery was stunned.

Was this not Shaun's doing?

She suddenly remembered how Elliot had sent his bodyguard to the outskirts of the town to investigate what had happened the night she had been abducted.

Chapter 63

Elliot knew everything that Avery had said while she was strapped to the lie detector!

Was he truly the one behind everything?

Did Elliot want to get his hands on Tate Industries' new program?

Cold sweat dripped down Avery's back as she thought about all of this. She hung up on Cole and walked out of her room.

Elliot and Ben were done with dinner and were smoking in the living room.

Ben immediately killed his cigarette in the ashtray when he noticed Avery.

“Do you want to join us, Miss Tate?”

Avery nodded and walked toward Ben.

Once she was standing in front of him, she said, “I’d like to speak with Elliot alone.”

Ben was taken aback.

Was this her way of kicking him out?

Embarrassed, he stood up and said, “I’ll leave now. You two have a good talk.

You could take a walk outside, too. The weather’s nice.”

He hurried out of the house right after.

Avery sat down where Ben was sitting. She thought of how Cole was about to get his finger chopped off and that motivated her straightforward approach.

“Cole just called me. He is being held at a casino, and someone wants to chop his finger off.”

Elliot already knew this.

He received word about it from his people at the casino.

They said that Cole was going big on the floor that night.

“Are you sad?”

The sound of Cole’s name escaping Avery’s lips upset him.

“The people who are holding him think that he has Tate Industries’ new system, so they lent him money to gamble with. Now they’re asking for the program as compensation,” said Avery slowly and clearly. “You are amongst the people who know that he has the program...”

“Are you suspecting me?”

Elliot’s eyes turned cold as ash fell from the cigarette between his fingers.

“I’m just asking. If it isn’t you-”

“It’s me,” Elliot smirked maliciously. “Will you get down on your knees to beg for

him?”

Avery raised her brows and said, “Over my dead body.”

Every muscle in Elliot’s body tensed.

“You don’t think I won’t ask them to chop off his finger?!” he roared.

“Go ahead and do it.”

Elliot fell silent.

“He used to tell me that I was the only woman he loved, but he’s out doing god knows what with my sister tonight. If you cut his finger off, I’ll light you a cigarette. How’s that?” said Avery.

The dark gleam in Elliot’s eyes turned ice cold.

It looked like Avery no longer cared about Cole Foster!

After all, he was a loser who had nothing to offer her now.

Elliot’s phone rang moments later.

He glanced at the screen, then turned his phone off.

Avery’s phone rang soon after. She looked at the screen, then pressed down on the power button and turned it off. The room was so quiet that they could faintly hear each other’s heartbeats. After pondering for a while, Avery said, “Don’t mess with me, Elliot. Otherwise, I’m dragging you down with me.”

Chapter 64

Avery would not hand over what her father had left to her to anyone.

She refused to let anybody take it from her.

Her words were harsh, but not only was Elliot not scared, but he also found it hilarious.

“What are you smiling at?” Avery asked when she saw his smile.

“You,” he mocked. “You’re self-righteous, arrogant, and you’re digging your own grave.” Avery could force herself to accept the first two, but what did he mean by her digging her own grave?

“Get back to your room! Just looking at you gives me a headache.”

Elliot’s face suddenly darkened, and his voice was low and deep.

“I didn’t do anything. You must have a headache because you’re sick,” Avery said indifferently. “Don’t you have a family doctor? Should I call him?”

“F*ck off!” Elliot growled through gritted teeth.

Avery returned to her room in a terrible mood.

She shut her laptop, walked over to the bed, and lay down.

She had fallen out of love with Cole a long time ago.

If it were not for Cassandra’s phone call, she would have never thought about them nor would she have felt any of the emotions that she was now experiencing.

The thought of Cole being a gambler and being in danger gave her a strange and complicated feeling.

All of her memories with him were ruined, and she even felt a little disgusted.

It was as if she was in some weird TV show where she was never truly in touch with reality, and she was living a lie.

In the midst of her jumbled thoughts, she fell asleep.

A car pulled up at the Foster mansion at 2 a.m. that night.

Mrs. Cooper was awakened by the bodyguard who was on night duty. She rushed into the living room to see Rosalie's furious face. "Get Avery Tate down here!" Rosalie yelled before sitting down on the couch.

Mrs. Cooper immediately ran over to the guest bedroom.

A groggy Avery walked into the living room five minutes later.

The tense atmosphere in the room instantly woke her up.

"I always thought that you were an innocent little girl, but you have been lying to me all this time!" Rosalie snapped as she trembled with rage. "I never knew you dated Cole. Why didn't you tell me?! If I knew this from the beginning, I never would have made you Elliot's wife! This whole thing is preposterous!"

“None of you asked me about it, nor did you care about my feelings. You just treated me like a pawn. If you’re upset that the pawn you chose was a tainted piece, then you only have your own self to blame,” Avery said nonchalantly.

Rosalie shot to her feet and wobbled over to Avery.

“Fine, say I was wrong! But what do you have to say about framing Cole tonight?!”

‘I framed him? Are you talking about how he got in trouble after gambling?’

Avery’s retort left Rosalie at a loss for words.

You know very well that nobody would lay a finger on him if he didn’t go looking for trouble himself. Instead of educating him, you’ve come to put the blame on me. This means that me being a part of the Foster family is a sin in and of itself.”

Avery’s eyes reddened as her emotions got the better of her.

Rosalie could no longer hold back and landed a hard slap on Avery’s face.

The sound of her palm coming in violent contact with Avery’s cheek echoed through the large living room.

Avery’s cheek burned as hatred rose in her eyes. “Yes, I framed Cole on purpose. He betrayed me and I wanted revenge,” Avery said in a voice that was much clearer and more stable than before. ‘Also, as long as I’m by Elliot’s side, you can forget about having grandchildren.’

Rosalie raised her arm once again to give Avery another slap, but the energy suddenly escaped from her body and she fell to the couch..

Avery did not reach out to help her, but Mrs. Cooper rushed over.

Elliot made his way over from the stairs immediately after.

He was in a gray silk robe, and his face was chillingly stern. Avery did not want to see him at all. Not even for a second.

Chapter 65

Before Elliot reached the living room, Avery quickly ran back to her room.

Rosalie was having trouble breathing, and she felt like she was about to suffocate, but the sight of Elliot immediately calmed her down.

“Elliot... My son...” Rosalie weakly reached out her arm to Elliot, who hurried over and held her. “Divorce Avery Tate... Go tomorrow... Get a divorce...”

Rosalie said with tears in her eyes. “I’m sorry... I’m sorry, my son... I was blind... I found you such a dirty woman..."

Elliot lifted his hand to wipe the tears off of his mother's face, then said, "Don't meddle in my affairs with Avery, Mom. You also don't need to bother with Cole."

"Cole got his finger chopped off... He must be in so much pain! He said you did it, but I know that isn't true ... How could you do something so cruel to your own family? You're not that kind of person..."

"If you bring up this nonsense in front of me again, I'll get the driver to send you home right now," Elliot said with a frightening expression on his face. "I won't divorce Avery. Unless I decide to do so myself, no one can make me."

Rosalie dejectedly took in a deep breath, then said, "Did you fall in love with her? For her... You're willing to turn your back on your brother's whole family..."

Elliot let go of his mother, shifted his gaze to the old mansion's driver, and said,

"Take my mother home."

After that, he turned and made his way upstairs.

Rosalie watched her son's back and could not hold back her tears.

How could he be so heartless?!

It was all Avery Tate's fault!

Elliot never used to be like this!

Avery's appearance had destroyed the relationship between uncle and nephew, which was what led to this whole fiasco.

Avery sat in bed with her back against the headboard and her head slightly tilted back.

Her cheek stung, and her heart hurt.

The bruise on her face would go away after a few days, but the pain in her heart might never disappear.

Even if she thought she was over it, if something triggered her one day, traces of that night would still resurface.

At 8 a.m. the next morning, Elliot sat at the dining table for breakfast.

He suddenly turned to Mrs. Cooper and said, "Call Avery down."

Mrs. Cooper made her way over to the guest bedroom but frantically returned moments later.

"Madam Avery isn't in her room. She might have gone out. Let me ask the front gate,” Mrs. Cooper reported to Elliot, then walked toward the front yard. She returned shortly after and said, “Madam Avery left around six this morning.

Should I give her a call?”

Mrs. Cooper was a little worried about Avery.

Rosalie’s slap was not a light one.

Avery might look soft and gentle, but she was a proud woman.

Mrs. Cooper dialed her number but was met by nothing but the cold beeping dial tone.

“Her phone’s turned off,” Mrs. Cooper said in a low voice.

Avery left at 6 a.m., and she had turned off her phone.

She would not be upset enough to do anything stupid, right?

A slap was not reason enough to seek death, but some people might lose control of their actions when they were triggered.

Elliot’s expression was stone-cold as he put down his coffee cup and left the dining room without a word.

He stopped in the living room, pulled out his phone, and called his assistant.

“Chad, look up Avery Tate’s mother’s phone number for me.”

“Yes, Sir. I’ll get that for you right away,” answered Chad. Once he got Laura Jensen’s number, he immediately dialed it. “Sorry, the number you are trying to call is not reachable. Please try again later.”

What was going on? Both Avery and her mother had their phones turned off?!

Chapter 66

Avery was in the middle of getting an ultrasound at an unknown county hospital.

“The babies are developing nicely... Come back for an anomaly scan when you reach the five-month mark, ” said the doctor.

“Thank you, Doctor,” Avery said as she let out a sigh of relief.

“Don’t mention it. I was really close to your mother back in school,” the doctor said as she passed a copy of her ultrasound scan to Avery. “She told me that the father doesn’t want kids, so you came all the way out here for your checkup... Avery, raising two kids by yourself isn’t going to be easy!”

Avery took the copy of the scan, smiled, and said, “It’s fine. I can do it!”

“As long as you’re prepared.”

“I’ll get out of your hair now. I’ll call you again before we come by next time,”

Avery said, then left the examination room.

Laura saw her walk out, then immediately walked up to her and asked, “How are the babies? Is everything alright?”

“Everything’s normal. Are you tired, Mom? I’m exhausted!” Avery said as she yawned.

She had not slept the night before.

After leaving the Foster mansion at six that morning, she had met up with Laura and taken a three-hour, bumpy bus ride out here.

She almost fell asleep on the bus a few times, but she held on.

Now that the checkup turned out fine, a weight was lifted off of her shoulders, and she wanted nothing but to have a good sleep.

“Should we just get a room at a motel and rest a bit?”

Avery’s tired face made Laura’s heartache.

Avery shook her head and said, “It’s going to take us another three hours to get back! We should just leave now.”

“Let’s get something to eat first. You haven’t eaten anything all day. Aren’t you hungry?” Laura said, then held Avery’s hand and led her out of the building.

“I guess I’m pretty hungry,” Avery said as she caressed her lower belly. “It feels a little different from before. I’m not showing yet, but it feels hard here.”

She took her mother’s hand and rested it on her belly.

“This is nothing compared to how it will feel when you start to show and reach the late stages of your pregnancy...” Laura said, then sighed. “Time sure flies

by. They’re already four months old.”

“Right? It won’t be long before they’ll be born,” Avery said. Excitement and worry flashed through her eyes as she said those words.

“Your divorce with Elliot... How is that going?” Laura asked.

Avery shook her head and said, “He’s stubborn as hell. The more I bring up the divorce, the more he won’t do it. So, I’ve decided never to bring it up again.”

“Now that I think about it, I don’t think I’ve ever officially met him!” Laura sighed.

“What’s there to meet? He’s cold to everyone. Meeting him would just annoy you,” Avery said softly.

Laura disagreed and said, "He's young and rich, so it's only natural for him to be spirited. He's not the same as us average folk, so you can't look at him from that point of view."

"Why do you think we're here right now, Mom? Why are you on his side?" Avery pouted.

Laura grinned awkwardly, then said, "Let's go eat. We'll leave after that."

On the way back to the city, Avery fell asleep with her head on Laura's thighs.

While Laura was gently stroking her daughter's hair, her fingers accidentally touched her left cheek.

Avery took in a sharp breath and mumbled in her sleep, "Ouch... That hurts..."

Laura shifted her gaze to her cheek.

She would not have noticed anything if she did not look closely, but Avery had put on a thick layer of foundation

"What happened to your face, Avery?" Laura cried out, waking Avery up.

Avery opened her eyes and said, "What is it, Mom?"

Lauren touched her cheek, and Avery flinched in pain.

“What happened to your face? Who hit you? Was it Elliot?”

Laura’s heart tightened.

“No... I fought with his mom last night... Why didn’t I think of getting his mom to make him divorce me? | guess that did not work as well,” Avery said nonchalantly.

“You stupid girl! Don’t come up with something this ridiculous just to get a divorce!” Laura sighed, then added, “Why didn’t you go get some medicine when we got to the hospital this morning?”

Chapter 67

“I’m pregnant, so I can’t just simply take medication,” Avery said. “It’ll be fine after a few days. I just need to cover it up with makeup for now.”

“You... Get some more sleep!”

Laura patted her legs, urging Avery to lie down.

Avery shook her head and said, “I’m not tired anymore. I’ll just look through my phone.”

When she turned on her phone, she noticed the missed call from Mrs. Cooper.

She thought of calling back, but the crowded bus was noisy. After some consideration, she decided to talk to her when she got home.

Suddenly, the day's headline popped up on one of the news apps on her phone.

It read, 'Cole Foster Carried Out of Casino in the Dead of the Night! Suspected of Owing a Loan Shark Money!'

Avery took a deep breath and clicked on the headline.

She saw the photos of the night before.

There was one of Cole being carried out of the casino, and one of him being taken to the hospital.

The familiar face next to him belonged to none other than Cassandra.

Avery had not seen her sister in a long time, but she noticed that she was dressed even more promiscuously than before.

If Cole had not gotten in trouble with the loan sharks, she probably would have spent the night with him at some fancy hotel!

Avery closed the news app and checked her messages.

She noticed a text from Tammy that read: (Avery! I almost slept with Jun Hertz last night! Sh*t! We were halfway there when my period came out of nowhere!

Avery was extremely shocked.

Avery: (Aren't you moving too fast?!)

Tammy: (We had a little bit too much to drink last night... Ugh! You should've seen his expression when I started bleeding... He was disappointed, but he still went out and got me a tampon.]

Avery: (Don't they have those in the hotel room?!)

Tammy: [...We spent the night at his apartment. I might have agreed to date him to find out what he's hiding, but I still have to make sure he knows what he's doing in bed!

Avery: [I see.]

Tammy: [Hehe. How's your husband in bed?]

Avery's cheeks flushed, and she changed the subject.

Avery: (My phone's dying. I'm going to charge it now! Tammy: [I bet you already slept with him! Otherwise, you would just say you don't know! Hahahaha!

Avery was so embarrassed that she shoved her phone back into her bag.

When the bus arrived at Avonsville three hours later, Avery first sent her mother home.

Laura was holding a big bag of groceries in one hand and a bag of fresh fruits in the other, so she passed the keys to Avery to open the front door.

When she opened the door, she saw someone was sitting on the couch!

Avery was so startled that she took a few steps back.

Laura was also in shock.

If she had not already seen photos of Elliot and knew what he looked like, she would have already called the cops.

Seeing their terrified faces, the bodyguard walked over to the front door and pushed Avery into the house.

He then took the bags of groceries from Laura and helped her take them into the kitchen. Laura's lips moved slightly as she hesitated about whether or not she should thank him.

"What are you doing here?" Avery said when she had composed herself. She walked over to Elliot and demanded, "This is where my mother lives. What do you think you're doing here?"

A shiver ran down her spine.

It was horrifying how easily Elliot had managed to look into her and her mother, and he even found Laura's exact home address.

Her privacy meant nothing to him. Elliot noticed the fear in her eyes, then said,

"I'm here for you."

Chapter 68

A few words from Elliot were enough to make the defensive walls around Avery's heart crumble.

She had left the house at six in the morning and turned off her phone. He could not reach her and came all the way here.

Was he worried about her?

"You must be Elliot," Laura said as she noticed the awkward air in the room.

"Avery was having a bad day, so I took her out to relieve some stress. She's fine now. Let me get you something to drink!"

"Mom!"

"No, thank you."

Avery and Elliot spoke at the same time, making the atmosphere even strang

“He’s leaving now, so don’t mind him. You should sit down and get some rest,”

Avery said as she led her mom to the couch.

She was subtly kicking out her unwelcome guest.

Elliot took the hint and stood up.

“I’ll be going now. I’ll come by one day to visit,” he said.

Laura wanted to send him off, but Avery pulled her back and said, “I’m leaving now, too. Stay at home and rest, Mom.”

She then got up and trailed behind Elliot.

Once they were out of the building, she turned to him and said, “Don’t ever come here again.”

Elliot’s expression turned cold. He clenched his jaw as if he had reached the limit of his patience.

“I don’t need you to pretend to care about me,” Avery continued. “If you really care about me at all, then divorce me.”

She then turned and walked away.

Elliot’s eyes shot icy daggers at her slender back.

They were physically close, but their hearts could not be further apart.

At the hospital, Cole was rushed into surgery after being sent to the hospital in the middle of the night. If the dismembered finger was preserved well, there was a high possibility of recovery if surgery was done within the next eight hours.

He might never regain full function of it, but at least he would not be crippled.

After the night's surgery, Cole did not regain consciousness until two in the afternoon the next day.

The terror in his eyes made him appear as if he had been robbed of his sanity.

"Cole! Don't be scared! You're at the hospital now. You're safe! Nobody can hurt you now!" Olivia cried as she cooed at her son. "Your father has paid off the money you owed."

Henry did not look happy. He had to cough up a huge sum of money to pay off the loan sharks after all.

He always knew that his son was a good for nothing, but Cole had lost a ridiculous amount of money last night!

The tens of thousands that he had lost before were still within Henry's means, but he had lost over eight million dollars this time.

Of course, Henry did not pay back the full sum. Since they had already cut off Cole's finger, he only had to pay off half of the money.

Chapter 69

"If you ever gamble again, I'll cut off both of your arms myself!" Henry snapped through gritted teeth.

"Why are you snapping at him? He just woke up! How could it be possible for him to lose all of that money by himself? I'm sure it was that brat, Cassandra Tate!" Olivia cried, then walked out of the room and called Cassandra over.

Cassandra walked into the room, took one look at Cole on the hospital bed, and hung her head in guilt.

"Mom... Why are you blaming Cassandra? Someone deliberately set me up last night, or I wouldn't have lost that much money!"

Cole's voice was weak, but he was more lucid now.

"It was Uncle Elliot... Nobody else could have done this! He found out that I used to date Avery Tate and hates me to death now!"

“I know it was your uncle! He doesn’t care about you or your father!” Olivia cried hysterically. “There’s something wrong with him. He’s not normal. We shouldn’t provoke him!”

Henry shoved his wife aside and yelled, “What are you saying in front of an outsider?! Elliot and I don’t get along because of our huge age gap! If your son had a backbone, Elliot wouldn’t be able to squash him like a bug! Take a look in the mirror and figure it out for yourself! Just looking at the two of you is giving me a headache!”

He then turned and stormed out of the room.

Olivia burst into tears.

Cole felt like his head was about to explode.

“Don’t cry, Mom! It’s all my fault. I’m a closet! Why did you save me? You should have just let me die!”

“Elliot! Don’t be like that... You might not be as business-minded as your uncle, but you’re way better than him in my eyes!” Cassandra said as she held Cole’s arm. “Focus on recovering, for now, then we will come up with a way to take our revenge on him! Once he’s dead, your father won’t compare you to him again!”

Cole suddenly calmed down.

Olivia’s wailing also came to a halt.

“Cole, you’ve seen Avery’s true colors now, right? She’s on your uncle’s side now, so you should let her go completely! We should get rid of both of them!

Once they’re dead, your uncle’s fortune will be ours.”

Cassandra was revealing her ambitious character.

Olivia walked over and stared coldly at her, then said, “What do you bring to the table? I heard your mother took a fortune from the Tate family. Why didn’t she help out with the loan sharks last night?!”

Cassandra pouted and said, “It’s true that my mom is wealthy, but she’s opening a new company outside o f the country right now. By the time the business flourishes, our net worth might just surpass Elliot Foster’s! The market overseas is much more promising than it is here...”

“Don’t give me that bullsh*t! The way you two were gambling last night, you would have gone through any amount of money!” Olivia snapped.

“We won’t do it again! Really! I swear!” Cassandra said, raising her hands in defeat as her eyes filled with tears. “We were just curious and decided to try it out. It won’t happen again!”

“Cole is our family’s last hope because Elliot won’t have children,” said Olivia.

“Why is that? Is there something wrong with him?” Cassandra asked curiously.

“I’m not telling you anything! You’re not even my daughter-in-law yet,” Olivia said coldly. “I’ll only forgive you if you’re able to help Cole from now on.”

“I’ll do whatever it takes,” Cassandra said confidently. “Just you wait. I’ll show you what I’m made of.”

That evening, Chelsea was sitting at a high-end restaurant with a glass of red wine in her hand.

She had no appetite, and her brows furrowed as she said, “Have you lost your mind, Charlie? Are you trying to break my heart by handing over that much money to Avery Tate? If you have too much money, then how about giving it all to me?”

Charlie shook his head and said, “I can give you however much you want,

Chelsea, but you’ve misunderstood me. Does money have anything to do with how Elliot Foster hurt you? He messed with your feelings, so I’m just giving him a taste of his own poison.”

“Ha... You want to try your luck with Avery Tate? Do you really think Elliot would let you get away with that? He loves her.”

The more Chelsea thought about it, the more insane the whole thing sounded.

“Don’t get yourself mixed up in all of this, Charlie. It’ll be hard on me if you become enemies with Elliot.”

“I never got along with him anyway,” Charlie said nonchalantly. “I decided to invest in Tate Industries because they’re not as bad as people think. Once I get my hands on it, I can turn the whole company around.”

Chelsea glared at her brother and said, “Avery Tate is my arch-nemesis. Are you trying to piss me off by making money for her?”

“Look on the bright side. Don’t you think she might just fall in love with me if I help her like this?”

“What if she doesn’t? Don’t get me wrong. You’re an outstanding man, but I still think Elliot is more attractive,” Chelsea said as admiration washed across her face. “His assertiveness, his indifference, his self-control-.”

“Do you know how his father died?” Charlie scoffed. He swirled the wine in his glass, then said, “Elliot killed him.”

Chapter 70

The admiration on Chelsea’s face instantly vanished into thin air.

“I can’t be one hundred percent sure about this, but I’m at least eighty to ninety percent sure of it,” Charlie continued. “I never told you because I was on decent terms with him before. Besides, I figured that his merits could make me overlook this matter.”

Chelsea felt a chill run through her entire body. It felt like an eternity before her trembling hand managed to bring her glass of wine to her lips.

“He might be impressive, but he has a huge disadvantage. You shouldn’t worship someone like him. If you were to marry him, I’d be worried for your safety,” Charlie said indifferently as he cut into his steak.

“I’m sure he had a reason for doing it... I don’t believe that he’s a bad guy...”

Chelsea mumbled after a moment’s silence. “I would know if he was a lost cause. I spent all these years by his side, so I know him like the back of my hand.”

Charlie chuckled at his sister’s gullibility.

“There was a serial killer who was finally caught a while ago. He managed to get away with his crimes for over ten years. The whole time, he was working hard at a normal job, and everyone around him said that he was honest and kind...”

“Watch your mouth, Charlie Tierney!” Chelsea snapped. “I have my own opinions. Mind your own business!

“I knew you couldn’t handle me putting him down, which is exactly why I didn’t say a word all these years,” Charlie said with an innocent expression, then shrugged and said, “Keep holding on, then! When you decide to give up one day, our family will always welcome you back with open arms.”

“I don’t need that! I have my own properties.”

“It looks like Elliot Foster pays you well,” Charlie teased.

Charlie was the Tierney heir, so Chelsea had never asked for a penny from the family after she left and began to fend for herself.

“Everything aside, he’s an amazing boss. Even if he will never belong to me, I’m still willing to stay by his side,” Chelsea said, then raised her glass and added,

“Good luck going after Avery Tate. I know you’ve never failed in pursuing a woman. I hope it’ll be the same this time!”

“I’m confident it will be,” Charlie said smugly as they clinked glasses.

A week later, Ben walked into Elliot’s office at Sterling Group with the latest piece of first-hand gossip about Trust Capital to share with him.

“Charlie Tierney is interested in investing in Tate Industries, right? Rumor has it that Avery Tate hasn’t given him a solid answer yet,” Ben said with the widest grin on his face. “I also heard that he’s been asking Avery out at every opportunity... He invited her out for dinner, asked her out for a hike, and even to an art gallery... It looks like he's pulling out all the stops, but it's too bad that Avery's been indifferent and ignoring all of his advances..."

"Mr. Tierney's finally met his match!" Chad chimed in. "He's an expert Casanova. Every one of his girlfriends has been more outstanding than the last, and they were all crazy about him. Even after he broke up with him, he still managed to stay on friendly terms with all of them. I didn't expect Miss Tate not to fall for his charms."

Elliot's face was stiffened with rage. He did not find the whole thing funny at all.

The fact that Charlie Tierney was asking his wife out in the name of "work" was vile, disrespectful and a blatant act of shamelessness.

"She hurt her face and hasn't left the house in a week," Elliot said curtly.

Ben and Chad were taken aback.

"How did she get hurt?"

After a moment's hesitation, Elliot said quietly, "My mother hit her."

"What the hell? Was it because of that whole thing with your nephew?"

"Yes," Elliot said as he shifted his gaze away from his laptop screen. He picked up his cup of coffee, took a sip and said bitterly, "She hasn't spoken a word to me all week."

"Well, did you try to make her feel better after your mother hit her?" Ben asked.

Elliot shook his head.

"Did you get her a gift or something to cheer her up?" Chad queried.

Elliot continued to shake his head.

Both Ben and Chad took deep breaths.

Any idiot would be able to figure out why Avery had ignored Elliot for a week!

"She wants a divorce. If I asked her what she wanted, she would say she wanted a divorce agreement;" Elliot said dejectedly. "If I tried to cheer her up, she would say that I was faking it and that I should divorce her if I truly cared about her."

He was afraid of making a move or saying a word because all Avery wanted from him was a divorce.

Ben and Chad suddenly felt sympathetic towards him.

Elliot was far better than Charlier Tierney in every aspect, but why was his love life such a mess?

At the end of the day, one could blame it on his lack of experience. After all, most things become easier to handle the second and third time around.

Chapter 71

The first thing they had to do was make it past the first obstacle. Only then would the journey get smoother.

“In that case, don’t ask her about it and just get her something,” Ben suggested.

“You should get her some jewelry. All women love jewelry.”

“She doesn’t. I’ve never seen her wear any,” Elliot said.

“How about beauty products? All women use that stuff, right?” Chad proposed.

“She doesn’t use any. When I went into her room, I didn’t find anything but a cleanser.” He could not just give her a measly face cleanser as a gift, could he?

Ben did not expect Avery to be so different from all the other women he had met.

What was even more unexpected was the fact that the great president of Sterling Group, Elliot Foster, actually snuck into a girl’s room to observe things like this!

“Buy her that cleanser, then!” Ben said.

“It was covered in dust. It didn’t look like she uses it much,” Elliot responded.

Ben and Chad were at a loss for words.

– “Clothes, Shoes, bags! She obviously wears clothes and shoes. She must use bags, right?” Ben continued to throw out ideas. “I bet she’s devastated after your mother hit her. She won’t talk to you until you take some action.”

“Actually, I think Miss Tate is different from most women,” Chad said. “She’s still in college, so she probably isn’t very materialistic. Gifts might not do much for her.”

“You have a point,” Ben said as a thought popped into his head. “Gifts might help, but what’s more crucial here is the man being proactive with his body.”

“Meaning?” Elliot asked.

“Giving hugs and kisses?” Chad suggested.

“Exactly!” Ben exclaimed.

Elliot’s face instantly turned glum.

Seeing his change in expression, Ben offered up his assistance, “We can help you if you don't feel like doing it!"

"You want to give her hugs and kisses?!" Elliot roared.

Ben choked and clarified, "I mean we can help get her gifts for you! The rest is up to you." "Forget it," Elliot said coldly. He did not want to depend on others to help him in his love life. "It's not like she's the only one for me," he added.

"Why did you sneak into her room to check out her dusty face cleanser, then?"

Ben teased. "Stop it, Ben. Give the boss some face," Chad said.

"Get out, both of you!" Elliot snapped.

Chad grabbed Ben and yanked him towards the door.

"Chad," Elliot said as they were walking away, "Get me an appointment with Charlie Tierney."

"Yes, Sir. When would you like to meet him?"

"Tonight."

"Okay."

That evening, Avery decided to take a walk outside after dinner.

She had been cooped up indoors for a week and was feeling restless.

The bruise on her cheek had worsened after the day she covered it in makeup for her checkup.

She also was not using any medication, so it was taking a while for the bruise to heal.

Even now, even though it was not as bad as before, you could still notice traces of a purplish bruise if you looked closely.

Avery put on a face mask and walked out of the neighborhood.

She had barely taken a few steps before a motorcycle rode past her. It had already sped away before she realized that the phone in her hand had vanished!

Chapter 72

Avery froze in her tracks.

When she realized that her phone had just been snatched away, she began to run in the direction that the thief had sped off.

However, she stopped running when she remembered that she was pregnant and made her way back toward the house.

Mrs. Cooper was on the phone with Elliot about an hour later.

“Master Elliot, Madam Avery’s phone was stolen when she was out on a walk earlier. I took her to the station to file a report, but we were told that it was nearly impossible to get the phone back. Madam Avery’s eyes were so red when we got home. She said that there was a lot of important information on her phone.

She’s crying by herself in her room right now.”

She could not allow things to remain as they are, and she thought that if Elliot knew about the matter, he might be able to use his connections to retrieve Elliot’s phone.

In truth, she had never confirmed if Avery was actually crying in her room, but she said it on purpose in hopes that Elliot might feel bad and help her.

Elliot had an appointment with Charlier Tierney that night.

He was already at the restaurant where they were supposed to meet in, and

Charlie was expected to arrive at any moment.

After receiving Mrs. Cooper’s call, he came to a decision after less than a minute’s consideration.

When Charlie arrived at the restaurant and saw nobody but Chad, he raised his brows and asked, "Where's your boss?"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Tierney, but Mr. Foster just left. Something happened at home, so he asked me to wait for you here and explain things to you," Chad explained apologetically.

"Isn't that too much of a coincidence?" Charlie scoffed. "Could it be that he decided not to meet with me and came up with some lame excuse?"

"Even if Mr. Foster didn't want to see you, he wouldn't escape at the last minute," Chad said. "He's not afraid of anyone."

Charlie took a seat, then stared calmly at Chad and said, "From what I recall, he doesn't have the best relationship with his family. Who exactly is in trouble for him to ditch me like this?"

"His wife," answered Chad. Charlie did not have anything to say to that.

"I'm guessing Mr. Foster asked to meet you to discuss your dealings with Miss Avery Tate. I may be speaking out of turn, but I have to inform you that Mr.

Foster is very fond of Miss Avery. You would be better off keeping your distance from her.”

After considering it for a moment, Charlie responded, “Have you ever thought of jumping ship, Chad? can offer a significant pay raise.”

Chad was flustered.

“Thank you for the kind offer, Mr. Tierney, but I have no intention of leaving Sterling Group anytime soon. As long as Mr. Foster doesn’t fire me, I won’t leave his side.”

“Why’s that?” Charlie asked, puzzled.

“You can ask Chelsea her reason for not leaving the company.”

“She won’t leave because she’s in love with Elliot Foster. Don’t tell me you’re in love with him too?!” Charlie chuckled.

“I like him, but out of respect,” Chad answered honestly. “Everyone always talks about his temper, but there are many facets to a human being. Someone who never smiles isn’t necessarily a bad person, and someone who is always friendly isn’t necessarily pure of heart.”

“Are you talking about me?” Charlie asked. “Of course not,” Chad replied.

“There is no hidden meaning. You’re a formidable man, but I would never betray

Mr. Foster.”

Chad knew very well that Charlie wanted to poach him so he could use him against Elliot.

As his trusty right-hand man, nobody would know Elliot as well as Chad did.

“If I decide to turn my back on Mr. Foster today, I could very well do the same thing to you in the future. I’m sure you won’t be able to trust someone like that,”

Chad said.

When Elliot arrived at the police station, the whole station fell into an anxious frenzy.

The captain rushed over when he received the call.

“Your phone was stolen? That thief must be out of his mind! I’ll get my men on it right away! You have my word that I will get your phone back within the next twenty-four hours!” said the captain as he placed his hand on his chest and promised Elliot.

“It’s not my phone that was stolen,” Elliot said.

“Oh! You scared me! I thought it was yours,”

“It was my wife’s,” Elliot said, then took a sip of water and asked, “Can you get it back in twenty-four hours?”

The captain was taken aback, then said, “Yes! Absolutely! We have surveillance cameras everywhere now, so we will definitely get it back! We’ll start a fullfledged investigation right now!”

Elliot nodded and said, “I appreciate it.”

“Don’t mention it! We’re just doing our jobs!” The captain flipped through the report, then asked, “Is your wife’s name Avery Tate?”

Chapter 73

“That’s her,” answered Elliot.

“Got it! I’ll remember her name!” responded the captain.

Back at the Foster mansion, Avery was sitting at her desk and using her laptop to sign into her social media accounts so she could post a status update about her stolen phone.

She continued to sit at the desk in a daze after that.

Maybe it was a good thing if the thief wiped out everything in her phone and sold it off.

What she dreaded was a stranger invading her privacy and going through her

phone.

She placed her hand on her spinning head and sighed heavily.

If she knew this was going to happen, she would never have left the neighborhood.

She could have just taken her walk in the neighborhood itself!

Avery got up from her desk and went into the bathroom.

After her shower, she climbed into bed and lay down.

She had to get a new phone and number the next day.

She tossed and turned in bed, unable to fall asleep.

The sound of frantic footsteps came from the hallway outside, followed by a knock on her door.

“Are you awake, Madam?” Mrs. Cooper called. “Master Elliot just called to say that he got your phone back. You just need to go sign some release documents at the station. If you don’t want to go yourself, he can do it for you.”

Avery leaped out of bed and opened the door.

“They found my phone?”

“Yes! Master Elliot made sure they did,” Mrs. Cooper said, making sure to emphasize the key point. "I was the one who called him and told him about the whole thing. You're not mad, are you?"

Avery shook her head.

She was ecstatic that her phone had been found, how could she possibly be angry?

She arrived at the police station with Mrs. Cooper half an hour later.

When Avery noticed that Elliot was holding her phone in his hand, she broke into a cold sweat.

"Give that to me!" she snapped, then rushed forward and tried to snatch her phone out of his hand.

Elliot raised his arm over his head before she could grab it.

"Are you that afraid of me looking through your phone?" he mocked.

"Did you?" Avery asked as her eyes reddened. "Who gave you permission? Do you have no regard for other people's privacy at all?! I'm not your toy! You always do this! You never respect me!"

Everyone around them watched their altercation in stunned silence.

Elliot had stayed at the station the whole time to pressure them into getting the phone back.

Now that the phone was found in record timing, not only was Avery not grateful, but she was snapping at

him.

This was the mighty Elliot Foster that put fear in the eyes of all those around

him!

Where did Avery find the courage to raise her voice at him?

The thief was watching them fight, and could not help but interject, "It's just a bunch of photos of a belly in there!"

His words turned Avery's eyes red with rage and made her body tremble.

It was as if she was stripped naked for all to see.

When she entered her second trimester, she would take a photo of her belly after every shower to check the progress of her baby bump.

Elliot did not check her phone, so hearing the thief's words made him glance at

Avery with a bewildered look on his face.

Chapter 74

Holding back tears, Avery turned in anger and stormed out of the station.
She

did not sign the release paper, nor did she take her phone back from Elliot.
Elliot

signed the papers and left the station. On the car ride home, he passed her phone to her and said in a low voice, "I didn't go through it."

Avery took her phone and her breathing was heavy as she said, "But you already know what's inside."

"Are they important? Those photos..."

Avery gritted her teeth and warned herself not to lose her temper with Elliot.
He

was the one who had helped get her phone back after all. Her hand clenched around her phone as she asked, "If I told you that the baby you had forced

me

to abort wasn't Cole's but yours... Would you feel guilty at all?"

Elliot turned his head and glanced at her.

Avery's expression was serious, and it did not seem like she was kidding.

He gulped and responded in a hoarse voice, "From the IVF treatments?"
"Yes,"

Avery answered. She met his gaze and said, "You killed your own child with your own hands. Do you feel any guilt?"

She hoped to see even the slightest hint of remorse on his face to make herself feel better.

She prayed that he was a man of flesh and blood and not a cold-blooded money-making machine.

The expression on Elliot's face puzzled her. He knew that he would be breaking her heart, but he still replied indifferently, "I don't. It was never meant to be born in the first place."

Avery chuckled coldly and asked, "Would you be so calm if your own parents said that about you?" "I would thank them if they never gave birth to me," he answered. "Not everyone wishes to be born into this world, Avery."

Avery raised her brows.

Did he not wish to be born?

How come?

Elliot's mother loved him unconditionally, he had a successful career, and there were plenty of people around him who treated him like he was the center of their universe...

Why was he so pessimistic?

What exactly did he have to go through?

“Are you depressed?” Avery asked as she could not help but analyze his words from a medical perspective. “There are treatments for depression. If you’re sick, you should go see a doctor as soon as possible.”

The expression on Elliot’s face relaxed slightly.

“If being sick could make you dwell on me, then go ahead and treat me like a sick person!”

It was close to midnight when they arrived at the mansion.

Once Avery was in her room, she was so tired that she did not have the energy to think about anything.

She got into bed and fell asleep soon after.

That night, she had a dream.

She dreamt of the reason behind Elliot’s pessimism.

In her dream, she saw a young Elliot and his father.

His father was an impossibly strict man that had no patience for his playful son.

Young Elliot had to endure the wrath of his father's ruthless belt until he bled...

His howling cries were heartbreaking.

The bloody images in her nightmare made her wake up in horror.

Outside the window, dawn had broken, and the sky was getting brighter.

Avery got up on her arms and began to mumble to herself, trying to make herself feel better, "There's no way his father would hit him like that. Even if he did, his mother would stop it... Dreams are almost always the opposite of reality.

There's no way he was abused."

However, she was strangely certain that Elliot must have gone through something dark to hate the world as much as he did.

Not only did he hate the world, but he also did not want to bring the next generation into it.

Nobody was born to be bad.

Her loathing for him suddenly lessened slightly.

He was not at fault, and neither was she. Fate was the only one to blame for entangling their lives together.

Chapter 75

At breakfast the next morning, Avery and Elliot sat at the dining table in silence.

She was having eggs and toast, while he was eating cereal. "Thanks for getting my phone back last night," Avery said, shattering the silence between them. "I'm sorry about my mother," Elliot said, finally expressing the apology that had been bothering him. Avery's cheeks flushed as she said, "You weren't the one who hit me. Why are you apologizing?"

"She shouldn't have slapped your face," Elliot said in a stiff voice. "If anyone touched my face, I would,"

Before he could finish his sentence, Avery lifted her hand and gently caressed his cheek.

His skin was surprisingly smooth and felt good against her fingers. Elliot's eyes were smoldering as his Adam's apple rolled in his throat, while his hand trembled slightly around his glass of milk.

"Okay, we're even," Avery said as she withdrew her hand and lowered her head to have a sip of her tea. Her heart was thumping wildly in her chest, and the skin on the fingers that touched his cheek felt like they were on fire.

She hurriedly finished her breakfast and returned to her room.

The bruise on her face was lighter than the day before, and it did not hurt as much.

Avery put on a light layer of makeup to cover up the bruise.

She could no longer stay cooped up in the house.

The office had called her multiple times throughout the week, and Trust Capital was sending inquiries every other day.

She emerged from the room after she got dressed. Elliot had already left.

“Are you going to the office, Madam? Let me get the driver,” Mrs. Cooper said then went off to call for the driver.

Avery was waiting at the front door when her phone rang.

“Do you have time to spare today, Miss Tate?” Ben’s voice came through the phone speaker. “I have a favor to ask.”

“What is it?” Avery asked sounding puzzled. “Are you sure I could help?”

“I’m sure,” Ben answered assuredly. “Are you at home? I’ll come pick you up.

We can talk more when we meet.”

“Okay,” Avery responded hesitantly. Ben arrived at the gates of the mansion half an hour later.

Apart from the color, which was white instead of black, he had the exact same car model as Elliot.

“Aren’t you going to the office today, Mr. Schaffer?” Avery asked as she hopped into the passenger seat and fastened her seat belt.

“I don’t need to clock in at the office,” Ben grinned. “We need your help picking out a present.”

“What do you mean by “we”? Who else are we talking about?”

“The other managers at the office. Elliot’s birthday is coming up. We need to get him something, but we’re not sure what to buy. That’s where you come in.”

“When’s his birthday?” Avery asked bashfully.

“Do you not care about your husband at all?” Ben chuckled as he felt some pity for Elliot.

Chelsea worshiped him like a god while Avery treated him like garbage.

Even so, he willingly chose to be garbage.

Avery's cheeks reddened with embarrassment. She simply came up with an excuse and said, "I'm pretty busy."

"Of course, you are. Your company's going through a rough patch, and you're working on your thesis. I'm sure you're even busier than Elliot," Ben said.

"You're making fun of me," Avery said as she noticed the teasing tone in his voice, but she was not angered by it. "I don't know what he likes. I'm afraid I won't be of much help."

"Of course, you can help," Ben said as he drove the car onto the freeway. "Let's head to the mall." It was not long before the car came to a halt in front of the city's largest shopping mall.

There was not much of a crowd on a weekday morning.

Avery and Ben walked into the department store and went straight to the jewelry section on the first floor.

Avery raised her brows in confusion and asked, "Does he like jewelry? I've never seen him wear any..."

Was jewelry not a more suitable gift for women?

Ben had no choice but to be honest with her.

“Elliot has never accepted any gifts from us,” he said. “But now that he has you, you can accept a gift from us on his behalf.”

Chapter 76

If Ben had mentioned this when he arrived at the house, Avery never would have gotten into his car.

“Mr. Schaffer, I know that all of you want to get on Elliot’s good side-“Avery began to say.

“What do you mean? Haven’t you ever gotten presents for your friends?”
Ben

interjected with a smile. “He always gets us something for our birthdays.”

“So, you don’t get him a gift just because he told you not to? That just shows that you don’t see him as a friend at all, but as a boss,” Avery said. “I don’t think you should drag me into this. If I accept your gift on his behalf, it would be the same as me accepting a gift from him. If that’s the case, I won’t be able to take pleasure in reprimanding him when he makes me angry in the future.”

Ben was bewildered.

Take pleasure in reprimanding him? How exactly does Avery treat Elliot every day?

Ben began to suspect that his boss had a masochistic side to him.

“You should think of something else! I’m leaving,” Avery said, then turned and began to walk away.

Ben immediately reached out and grabbed her arm.

“Miss Tate, Elliot’s birthday this year is different from the ones before,” he said.

He had already prepared the perfect script, and his professional acting instantly silenced Avery.

“It was after his last birthday that he had gotten into that accident and that rendered him a vegetable. At the time, the doctors said that he didn’t have much longer to live... None of us expected him to pull through, but he woke up in the end. It’s a good thing he did, too. Otherwise, he wouldn’t be able to celebrate his birthday this year...”

Avery’s heart turned as soft as cotton.

She put herself in his shoes and thought about how painful it would have been if she was the one who was in a coma after getting into a car crash.

All Ben wanted was to celebrate Elliot's birthday and get him a gift to cheer him up. Was that so wrong?

"Don't worry, Miss Tate. We won't give you anything too expensive. I hope you will be able to accept it with ease," added Ben.

Avery gestured at the jewelry counter and said, "Everything here is too expensive. Let's go somewhere else."

She finally gave in!

"Do you need some beauty products, Miss Tate? I see you've got makeup on.

Should we get some new makeup products? You'll need some makeup remover to go along with that, right?"

Ben was in full swing.

"You have slender wrists, Miss Tate. I'm sure a bracelet would look good on you!

Let's get one! It's pretty cheap!

“What do you think of these brand’s bags, Miss Tate? Let’s get something classy! A classic style would go with everything and you can it’s big enough to carry a bunch of stuff! It’s both stylish and practical!

“Miss Tate... Your shoes are looking worn out. Let’s get you a new pair! I know a store that sells flats that last forever. I’ll take you there!”

Avery saw a whole new side to Ben.

It was like he had never-ending spirit and energy.

He also seemed to have a vast knowledge of women’s products.

He was able to easily list out everything from the best tampons to the stores with the most comfortable lingerie.

He truly was womankind’s best friend.

Avery would have been less cautious with him if it were not for the fact that he was Elliot’s CFO.

After spending the whole morning shopping, her entire body began to ache.

She spotted a cafe and immediately went in and took a seat. She refused to walk into another store.

“What would you like to eat, Miss Tate? Go ahead and order whatever you want,” Ben said as he passed a menu to her.

All Avery could feel was fatigue, so she was not very hungry.

“Don’t call me out for things like this again, Mr. Schaffer. I’m only helping you out this once.”

There were about twenty to thirty gifts in total.

Avery felt restless and uneasy.

She should not have given in so easily.

However, when she thought of Elliot now, his face was less loathsome to her than before.

Her head began to ache.

Ben took a sip of water, then said casually, “Sure thing. Thanks for your help today! You haven’t gotten back to Charlie Tierney with an answer, have you?”

“Not yet,” Avery responded. “He sent me an email last night with a revised proposal. I haven’t gotten a chance to look at it.” “He’s really pulling out all the stops for a chance to work with you!” Ben said, then

Chapter 77

Avery was distracted until a thought suddenly popped into her head.

“Did Elliot have anything to do with what happened to Cole Foster?” she asked.

Ben was dumbfounded.

“Why do you think he did? Didn’t Cole Foster get into trouble himself with his gambling? What does that have to do with Elliot?”

Avery took a sip of water, then said, “He said he was the one who planned it. He even told me to get down on my knees and beg.”

Ben was at a loss for words.

He picked up his own glass of water and took a sip, then said, “What are you two doing? What couple is always getting into fights like the two of you... It turns out you both do it on purpose. Do you both find joy in fighting with each other?!”

Naturally, Avery refused to admit it.

“I don’t have such a weird hobby. He’s the one who’s always provoking me.”

“Exactly! I’m sure he feels the same!”

“Which is exactly why we don’t get along,” Avery said, taking another sip of water. "Disagreements are normal in a relationship. Some people even fall deeper in love the more they fight."

"Most couples break up the more they fight," Avery said. "Don't you think Chelsea Tierney is a better match for him? Nothing's ever gone wrong in the ten years they've known each other..."

"Nothing's gone wrong because there was nothing there. Elliot feels nothing for Chelsea."

"I see... I almost forgot..."

The one he loved was the woman who looked like a princess.

After lunch, Avery took a cab to Tate Industries.

Ben sent the day's winnings back to the Foster mansion, then drove to Sterling Group.

Of course, he did not forget to flaunt his victory in front of Elliot.

"I bought her thirty-one gifts this morning," Ben said. "She was very happy."

Elliot looked up to glance at Ben and said, "Did you force her into it?"

Ben cocked an eyebrow and said, "Could you tell?"

Elliot raised his brows and silently watched his performance.

“When I asked her to pick out a bracelet, she stared at a specific necklace for more than three seconds. I went back to get it after she left.”

Ben pulled out a jewelry box and opened it, revealing a diamond necklace.

The diamonds were small, so the necklace was not too expensive.

“Give it to her when you get home tonight,” Ben said as he passed the box to

Elliot.

Elliot fiddled with the box with his fingers. His sharp eyes were fixed on Ben as he asked, “How did you get her to accept the gift?” “I told her that your first birthday after the accident was coming up-”

Elliot frowned, then snapped, “There’s still a long way until my birthday!”

“I was just helping you cheer her up,” Ben said. “She didn’t look that happy on the surface, but I’m sure she was happy on the inside.”

“You’re no help at all,” Elliot said in a low voice.

Ben stayed silent.

“Give me the receipts,” Elliot said.

“Give me the receipts!” Elliot roared.

Avery returned home in the evening. "I've sent all the gifts to your room, Madam," said Mrs. Cooper. Avery's cheeks turned pink as she responded,

"Thanks... Is Elliot home yet?"

"He got back around four in the afternoon."

Avery's heart suddenly began to race. "I'll come down after he's had dinner..."

"I'm going to my room."

Once she was in her room, Avery began to take out the gifts from their bags.

She suddenly noticed a red, square-shaped box.

"I don't think we bought this today," she mumbled to herself, then opened the box.

The necklace in the box was the one that she had noticed and found to be quite lovely at the jewelry store earlier.

Chapter 78

Avery was certain that they did not buy this necklace that morning.

How was it now right in front of her?

She walked out of her room and bumped into Elliot who was walking down the stairs.

She tried to calm the nervousness inside of her and asked, “What’s up with this necklace?”

On the surface, it might look like this had nothing to do with him, but her instincts told her otherwise.

She was sure that Ben told him about it.

Elliot’s expression was slightly uneasy as he answered, “Ben bought it.”

After a pause, he added, “I took a look at the price, and it was too cheap.

Nobody wanted it so I brought it back to you.”

Avery was piecing together the words in her head trying to figure out a way to return the necklace to him, but his words made her mind go blank.

He gave it to her because it was so cheap that nobody else wanted it.

Great!

If that was the case, then she will just accept it!

“Let’s have dinner together,” Elliot called out.

Avery wanted to refuse, but her body was more honest than her mind was.

Perhaps it was because she had accepted a gift from him?

The two of them took their seats at the dining table.

Once Mrs. Cooper was done serving their dinner, she dismissed herself and walked out of the room.

Avery picked at her food and ate slowly.

Elliot had taken the initiative to ask her to join him for dinner. Did that mean that he had something to say to her?

On top of that, he must have given his blessing for Ben to buy all of those gifts for her, right?

A frenzy of thoughts bounced around in her head as the piece of meat at the end of her fork remained suspended in midair without reaching her mouth.

Elliot noticed that she was distracted and asked, "What's on your mind? Did Charlie Tierney contact you?"

Avery took a bite of her food and said, "Do you know him well?"

"We were classmates," Elliot answered calmly, then said something that took Avery by surprise. "Do you want to see his ex-girlfriends?"

Avery choked on her food and coughed violently.

She put down her knife and fork, then took a large gulp of water.

Elliot produced a file out of nowhere and slid it across the table to her.

Avery glanced at the file and then turned her gaze to him. She stared deeply at

him.

She found his behavior to be extremely strange.

Her relationship with Charlie Tierney was purely one of business.

Why did he want to show her information about Charlie's exes?

He even printed out all of their details for her... His actions were beyond her comprehension.

Elliot did not expect her to stare at him so daringly.

"Didn't you know that he's trying to date you?" he asked.

Avery's jaw dropped.

"Does he not know that I'm your wife?"

"He does, but marriages end and people cheat."

Judging by her astonishment, Elliot could confirm that she had no knowledge of Charlie's ulterior motives.

"I see..." Avery said as she picked up the file and flipped through the pages. "All of his exes are so sexy! Look at those hourglass figures! They all have gorgeous full lips too. Red lipstick looks especially good on lips like that...

You

men'must all love women like this, huh?"

Elliot's lips pressed into a thin line.

He had shown the file to Avery so that she would realize that she was not

Charlie Tierney's cup of tea, not to discuss the matters of men and women with

her.

"You said he wants to date me, but it doesn't look like I'm his type at all. Why would he even bother?"

As Avery asked her question, the answer popped into her head almost immediately.

"To take revenge for his sister?"

"You're not as dumb as I thought," Elliot mocked.

Avery glared at him and said, "Wouldn't this ruin your relationship with him, though? With your temper, you would go after someone even if they took a grain of salt from you."

Elliot's face turned solemn as he said, "We haven't had a relationship for a long time."

"I see.." Avery responded, then picked up her knife and fork and continued with her meal. "So, do you know what you need to do now?" Elliot asked.

He needed an answer from her.

"I had a meeting with the executives at the office earlier today. All of them are in favor of working with Trust Capital."

Chapter 79

"You have the power to reject," Elliot said.

"Just eat your food!" Avery snapped. "Even if I decide to work with Charlie Tierney, it doesn't mean that I will fall in love with him. Why do you think that I'll give in to his advances? Do I seem that easy to you?" Elliot fell silent. Avery returned to her room after dinner, opened Charlie's email, and looked through its contents.

A wave of uneasiness washed over her after she finished reading it.

She did not know a thing about running a company, but she understood

Charlie's proposal very well. "If they go in the direction that he suggested, Tate

Industries might just be able to come back from the dead.

If it were not for the fact that Charlie was Chelsea Tierney's brother, she would have immediately agreed to work with him.

Avery shut her laptop and lay down on her bed.

She picked up her phone and saw a text from Tammy.

[I slept with Jun Hertz! Ugh! I think I'm in love with him!

Avery did not expect things to turn out the way they did.

However, apart from being a little strange, Jun Hertz was not a bad catch at all.

Avery: (Work things out with him if you're in love. This is your fate!

Tammy: (He said he wants me to meet someone important tomorrow but won't tell me who it is. I'm so nervous!)

Avery: (Maybe he wants to surprise you.) Tammy: (A surprise is fine, but I don't need a fright. Let's talk about your husband! Do you sleep in the same room?)

Avery's cheeks flushed as she replied: (I'm in the guest bedroom. There's nothing much to talk about him. Stop asking.)

Tammy: (Is he good looking?)

Avery did not want to answer at first, but Elliot's handsome face popped into her mind and she could not help herself from texting back: [Yes.]

Tammy: [Damn, Avery! You sure are lucky! How old is he?] Avery: [He's up there. He's pretty much an old man to us.)

Tammy: (Older men have their advantages. They're gentle, thoughtful, and know how to treat you well.)

Avery: (I think you've been watching too many romantic dramas.)

Tammy: [Didn't you say he was good looking? That's all you need! A handsome face can make up for all a man's shortcomings!]

At breakfast the next day, Avery deliberately stared at Elliot for longer than usual.

The more she glanced at his thick brows, smoldering eyes, chiseled nose, and seductive lips, the more attractive he seemed.

She recalled what Tammy had said the night before, and began to believe that a handsome face might just be able to make up for all of a man's faults.

Elliot ignored her blatant observation of him and asked, "Do you have time tonight?"

Avery's heart skipped a beat.

Was he asking her out?

"I think so," Avery said as she lowered her gaze and took a bite of toast.

"I'll get the driver to pick you up in the afternoon." "Where are we going?"

"You'll find out when we get there."

This was a vast improvement from the time Elliot had taken her to a recital without previously asking her about it.

He was at least giving her a heads up this time.

At 5p.m. that evening, Jun brought Tammy to a high-end restaurant.

“Do you remember that friend I mentioned before?” Jun asked as he held Tammy’s hand like he did not want to be apart from her for a second. “The one who suddenly got a wife.”

Tammy thought about it and the memory popped back into her mind.

“Do you mean the one who had a shotgun marriage? The one who got you to help out his wife when she got in trouble but got mad when she actually came out to meet you?”

Chapter 80

Jun nodded and said, “That’s him! I met him when I was abroad. He’s eight years older than I am. We were neighbors when he was in college. I was always following him around back then.”

“You kept in touch with him despite the huge age gap?” Tammy asked.

“Yes! I always go to him when I’m troubled,” Jun answered.

Tammy glanced at his face and teased, "What kind of troubles could a young man like you possibly have?"

"I want to start my own business, but my family is against it. He has a successful career. Even my dad admires him, so I need him to help me convince him."

Tammy was suddenly filled with excitement.

"What's his name? I'm sure I've heard of him before if he's a successful businessman."

"You probably have heard of him," Jun said as he took a sip of water. "It's Elliot

Foster."

Tammy's eyes widened in astonishment.

She let go of Jun's hand and exclaimed, "He's married?! Oh my god! I have a friend who worships him... She'll be devastated if she finds out about this!"

"Your friend isn't the only one who looks up to him. With his net worth and status, plenty of women would have their eyes on him. His wife is way out of his league."

"Huh? Who's his wife? I'm so jealous!"

Tammy pouted as she turned green with envy.

Jun wanted to continue to keep her guessing on purpose.

“She’s a nobody. You wouldn’t know her even if I told you. You’ll see when they arrive,” he said, then added, “By the way, don’t mention anything about how Elliot got me to help her out before, okay?”

Tammy nodded eagerly.

She was curious to see what kind of a “nobody” managed to snag the formidable business tycoon, Elliot Foster.

Avery put on a new dress for the evening.

However, she felt that it looked too solemn and decided to wear an old jacket over it.

When the driver arrived at Tate Industries to pick her up, he said, “You look beautiful today, Madam.”

Avery’s cheeks turned crimson red.

All she did was put on some foundation and lipstick.

Did she really look that different from usual?

Once she was in the car, Avery pulled out a small mirror from her back and observed her face.

Perhaps it was due to her good mood, but her rosy cheeks made her look exceptionally lovely.

Elliot and Avery arrived at the restaurant at six in the evening.

When they stepped onto the second floor, Tammy instantly recognized the woman standing next to Elliot as... Avery!

Tammy felt her soul escape her body.

The whole world stood still as everything before her eyes began to twist out of shape, then suddenly return to normal.

The wife that Elliot Foster married in a flash was none other than her best friend, Avery Tate!

She was close to tears from the thrill of it all.

When Avery noticed Tammy and Jun, she raised her brows and asked Elliot,

“Do you know Jun Hertz?”

A strong sense of foreboding began to rise inside of her.

Elliot took in her sudden change in emotion and answered, “We were neighbors when I was studying abroad.”

They walked over to their table where the waiter pulled back their chairs and helped them into their seats.

Avery lowered her gaze as her chest began to rise and fall rapidly.

She had no idea that Elliot and Jun knew each other.

From the looks of it, their relationship was not bad at all.

Otherwise, they would not have a private meeting like this. Why exactly did

Elliot bring her here to meet Jun Hertz?

Chapter 81

Tammy was frantically sending signals at Avery with her eyes, but all Avery could think about was the relationship between Elliot and Jun.

“Miss Tate, the reason why I never told you that I knew Elliot was because I did not want to make you feel troubled,” Jun began to explain himself with a smile.

“You didn’t exactly get along well before this. I didn’t mean to hide it from you... I really do want to buy your father’s company.”

Tammy moved her phone under the table and sent Avery a text.

Tammy: (Don’t listen to him, Avery! Elliot Foster is the one who wants to buy Tate Industries! It’s Elliot Foster!)

Avery glanced at her phone on the table and opened up the text.

She read it and gazed coldly at Jun. “Did you tell Elliot about your interest in buying my company?” she asked.

Jun’s warm smile remained on his face as he said, “I did. I asked for his opinion and he told me it was worth a try. As I told you before, I’ve been looking for investment opportunities ever since I graduated college.”

Avery received yet another text from Tammy: (He’s lying! He’s just Elliot Foster’s pawn!]

Her heart tightened as she continued to interrogate Jun.

“Did you really get the money from your father? Does he have time to meet up tomorrow? I’d like to talk to him.”

Jun turned pale as he responded, “I borrowed the money! I didn’t tell you because I was embarrassed...”

“Who lent you the money?” Avery pried.

Elliot, who was sitting in silence throughout the entire conversation, finally spoke up.

“I did,” he said.

Tammy sent Avery another text: (They’re both lying! Elliot Foster is Mr.Z!
Jun

told me himself just now! You have to expose them right now!)

Avery had one hand clenched tightly around her phone and the other gripping her glass of water.

Her face was rid of color, and her lips were pale from her biting down on them.

Elliot was Mr. Z.

He wanted to use Jun's name to buy out Tate Industries.

No matter what his objectives were, Elliot's actions left a bad taste in her mouth.

Why did he not make the offer himself?

Was he looking down on Tate Industries?

Or was this his way of humiliating her?

The night of her first meeting with Mr. Z popped into Avery's mind.

Elliot was furious that she had gone out to meet a complete stranger and made her suffer through the entire night.

Did he think she was an idiot?

Was it exciting for him to have her wrapped around his finger?

If there were no other people around them, Avery would have slapped Elliot in the face.

Even if she did that, however, what would that change?

Avery took a large gulp of water, stood up, and stormed off.

“Wait for me, Avery!” Tammy cried as she picked up her bag and trailed after

Avery.

Jun’s jaw dropped in mortification.

What the hell?

Did they know each other?

“Elliot... I’m sorry... I had no idea that they were friends!”

His mind was in a frenzy of thoughts as his cheeks turned crimson.

He messed up!

Elliot’s expression was cold as he curled his fingers to form a fist.

“I thought your girlfriend looked familiar when you sent me her photo yesterday.

Then, I recalled seeing her when I was at the concert hall with Avery before.

She told me that she had friends there at the time.”

“I see... So, you brought Avery along to meet me because you knew they were friends!” Jun said with a dumbfounded expression on his face. “Why did you take the risk of Avery finding out about all of this and bring her here?”

“Did you tell your girlfriend anything?” Elliot asked.

Jun scratched his head and answered truthfully, “I said some things before you got here. It was just some information to make conversation easier with you...

Why is Avery so upset about this? Isn't she overreacting even if you were the one who wanted to acquire her company? It's a lot of money that we're talking about here! Nobody else other than you would be willing to cough up that amount to buy out Tate Industries.” “She can't accept the fact that I'm Mr. Z,” Elliot replied hoarsely.

Chapter 82

If he could turn back time, Elliot would not change a thing.

He was not perfect.

Avery's appearance in his life was what made him decide to try to critique, examine, and correct his own behavior.

If it were not for their constant fights and misunderstandings, his feelings for her would not be this deeply rooted in his heart.

Tammy caught up to Avery outside of the restaurant and grabbed her arm.

“I can’t believe you’re married to Elliot Foster, Avery! This is massive news!”

Tammy exclaimed as her head spun from the excitement of the evening’s events.

Avery, on the other hand, felt like there was a lump stuck in her throat. If he could turn back time, Elliot would not change a thing.

He was not perfect.

“I can’t believe you’re married to Elliot Foster, Avery! This is massive news!”

Tammy exclaimed as her head spun from the excitement of the evening’s events.

Avery, on the other hand, felt like there was a lump stuck in her throat.

“You saw it yourself. He’s just messing around with me.”

“Jun said that he just wanted to help you but was too embarrassed about it,”

Tammy said.

She did not think that things were that bad to warrant such a reaction from Avery.

“Let’s head back inside, Avery! We should let him explain...”

Avery shook off Tammy’s grip. Her tone was determined and cool as she said,

“You go ahead! I want to be alone.”

She hailed a cab and left.

When Tammy turned to return to the restaurant, Elliot was walking out of the building.

He took quick steps as if he had decided to chase after Avery.

Tammy pointed in the direction Avery left in and said, “She took a cab and went that way.”

Elliot nodded in thanks, then hurried toward the parking lot.

Jun came outside right after Elliot left.

He approached Tammy with eyes filled with accusation and said, “You’re a spy!”

Tammy’s cheeks were flushed, but she lifted her chin high and said, “How long have I known you? Of course, I’d be on my best friend’s side.”

“I suspect you dated me just to dig information!” Jun scoffed.

“Exactly!” Tammy said without remorse. “Now that I’ve gotten the information that I needed,

we can keep this going if you want, or end things if you don’t! We haven’t known each other for long, anyway. We should go our separate ways rights now while things aren’t that serious!”

Jun took in a tortured breath. He wanted to speak, but he was afraid of saying the wrong things.

He was not quite willing to let Tammy go, but he did not want her to see how desperate he was for her.

“Don’t think about breaking up with me before Elliot and Avery work things out!

You have to make sure they make up,” Jun proposed. “You started this mess!”

“What does this have to do with me? I wasn’t the one who lied to her!” Tammy refused.

“Didn’t you see that she wore makeup today? She had never dressed up whenever we met. I'm sure that she did all of this for Elliot," theorized Jun.

"They'd be just fine if you kept your mouth shut!"

Tammy was close to being convinced by his ridiculous logic.

"Elliot treats her really well. Won't you be touched if a man is willing to cough up all of that money to help pay off your debt?" Jun asked.

Tammy nodded and said, "I guess, but Avery isn't an unreasonable person. I'm sure she has her own reasons for being this angry. I'm still on her side."

Jun raised his hand and held his head.

Tammy grabbed onto his arm and said, "As my boyfriend, you should be on my side! They're like a wolf and a sheep. Why should you feel bad for a big, bad wolf"

Jun was at a loss for words.

"I'm hungry. Let's go eat!" Tammy said, then pulled him back into the restaurant.

Avery had taken the cab to her mother's house.

She had nowhere else to go.

When Laura saw her daughter's pale face and dazed expression, she immediately pulled her in and sat her down on the couch.

“What’s wrong? Did you get into a fight with Elliot?”

If it were not because of Elliot, Avery would still be at the Foster mansion no matter how bad a mood she was in, and not here at her home.

Chapter 83

“I really want to turn back time, Mom,” Avery mumbled. “I don’t care if we’re poor.”

“No matter what happens, running away is never the solution,” Laura said as she sat down next to her daughter. “If you can’t handle your father’s company, just let it go. There will always be opportunities to make money, but you can’t forgo your studies.”

Avery glanced at her mother and caressed the wrinkles on her face, then said, “I won’t run away. I’m just a little tired.”

“Take a break if you’re tired. Have you had dinner?”

Avery shook her head.

“Let me whip something up for you,” Laura said, then walked into the kitchen,

At eight in the evening, Avery went into her room to rest while Laura left to take out the trash.

It began to rain.

It was not heavy, but it was a constant drizzle.

Laura could not be bothered to walk back upstairs to grab an umbrella, so she braved the rain and ran toward the dumpster.

She threw the trash into the dumpster and turned back toward the apartment.

That was the moment she saw a silhouette standing at attention at the front entrance of the building.

She did not notice it when she had rushed out earlier.

Laura ran back toward the entrance and glanced at the tall silhouette.

She was startled when she recognized the face in the rain.

The man's handsome features were drenched, and his formidable pride was washed down the drain along with the rainwater.

"Elliot?!" Laura exclaimed. "What are you doing here? Why are you standing in the rain?"

She grabbed Elliot's arm and pulled him toward the apartment entrance.

Elliot pulled his arm back and said, "I'm not going in."

The last time he was here, Avery had warned him never to come back here.

If he went in now, she would be furious.

"Why not? You're here for Avery, right? She didn't tell me why she was upset, but I already knew it was because you two had a fight," Laura said.

Elliot lifted her hand to wipe the rain off of his face, then said plainly, "I want to apologize to her."

"Come in with me, then! How are you supposed to apologize out here? She wouldn't want to see you getting drenched out here, either!" Laura said frantically.

Elliot escorted Laura into the building, then said, "I'm afraid she won't want to see me in your house."

"The two of you really need to talk things out properly! Let me go talk to Avery!"

Since Laura could not convince him, she could only try to convince her daughter.

When she entered the apartment, she rushed straight into the room.

Avery leaped out of bed when she saw her mother's wet clothes.

"Is it raining out there? Why didn't you bring an umbrella? You're going to get sick," Avery said as she led her mother to the bathroom. "Go and take a shower

now..."

"Avery... Elliot's outside," Laura said as she held Avery's hand. "He was standing in the rain. God knows how long he's been out there, but he's completely drenched... Did you turn off your phone? Won't you let him up here?"

Avery was stunned.

"He said he wants to apologize to you, but he won't come with me, so I came up to let you know," Laura sighed. "Why don't you go get him so you can have a nice talk up here?"

Avery's head began to throb in pain.

"I don't want to see him. If he's willing to get rained on, then let him!" she said with a frown, then changed the subject and said, "I'll go get you a cup of tea."

When Laura reemerged after her shower, a piping hot cup of tea was sitting on the dining table.

Avery was sitting at the table in a daze and lost in unknown thoughts.

“I think he needs this cup of tea more than I do ” Laura said.

“I’ll throw it out if you don’t want it,” Avery said as she picked up the cup and made her way toward the kitchen.

“He doesn’t look as bad as you think, Avery,” Laura said as she caught up to Avery and grabbed hold of her arm. “The rain’s getting heavier. Do you really not feel bad for him at all?”

Chapter 84

“What about me?” Avery said as she placed the cup of tea on the kitchen counter, then made her way back to the room. “He’s never treated me with respect, not even just for a day.”

“The two of you are from completely different worlds. It’s understandable for him to be a little stand-offish toward you,” Laura said. “Forget about his past. Focus on who he is right now and who he will be in the future...”

Avery raised her brows, puzzled, and asked, “Why are you speaking up for him?”

Do you think he could suddenly find some kindness in his heart to let me keep the children?"

Laura fell silent.

"I'm sure he has his reasons for not wanting children," she said after a brief pause. "I think the fact that he's willing to swallow his pride and come here to apologize to you is a sign that he does care for you."

Avery covered her ears with her hands and said, "I'm going to bed. My head hurts."

Seeing her adamant refusal, Laura had nothing else to say.

She walked out of the room and planned to go downstairs to talk Elliot into leaving.

Avery let out a long, heavy sigh when her mother left the room...

She had a splitting headache.

It hurt so badly that she could not think.

The mere thought of Elliot's name and face made it feel like there was an invisible force wrapped around her throat.

Laura returned to the house about twenty minutes later.

She walked into the room and sighed when she saw Avery fast asleep.

Elliot was still downstairs.

He refused to leave no matter what Laura said.

She planned on getting Avery to go and talk to him, but she could only let her rest now that she was asleep.

As for Elliot...

They could only pray that the rain stopped soon.

The rain went on all through the night.

In fact, it got heavier during the later part of the night and eventually turned into a full-blown thunderstorm.

Laura was startled awake by the rain in the middle of the night.

She wanted to check on Elliot, but she was so afraid of getting the same result that she forced herself to stay in bed.

At six the next morning, Laura threw on a jacket and ran downstairs.

It was an old neighborhood, so a night's heavy rain was all it took for the area to be flooded.

Seeing that Elliot was nowhere in sight, Laura let out a sigh of relief.

It would be great if he finally decided to go through with the divorce after this.

What she was afraid of was having things go back to the way they were.

At 11 a.m. at the Sterling Group headquarters, Jun appeared in a hurry at Elliot's office on the top floor.

"Hey, Chad. I couldn't reach Elliot, so I came to check things out. He got into a huge fight with Avery last night. I'm guessing they went at it again after they left."

Chad was already slowly getting used to their fights.

"I heard that Avery went for a tour of Trust Capital this morning," he said.

"That's exactly why I'm here," Jun said. "She went over there with her management team. I'm almost certain that she won't sell to Elliot after last night's fiasco."

Chad poured a glass of water for Jun, then said after a moment's consideration,

"If she really decides to work with Charlier Tierney, then there's nothing else we can do about it."

"I just think that she's gone too far!" Jun said as he was determined to stay on Elliot's side." What did Elliot do wrong? He just told a little white lie out of the kindness of his heart. The only reason he asked me to cover for him was because he was worried that Avery would be too proud to accept his help...”

“You’re still young, Jun. Mr. Foster isn’t just thinking of acquiring Tate Industries out of kindness. The company isn’t as bad as you think it is. It does have some value to it.”

“Huh?”

“Avery Tate is a woman, after all, so she would be more emotional. The reason she’s upset isn’t the money, but because she felt like her feelings were betrayed.”

Chapter 85

“What now? Would Elliot have to go and beg for her forgiveness?”

“I’ll go check on them after work,” Chad said.

“Should I get my girlfriend to go see Avery?” “Who’s your girlfriend?”

Jun cleared his throat and said, “She’s Avery’s best friend... She was the one who revealed everything to Avery. I swear... If I didn’t like her that much, I would’ve broken up with her last night!”

Chad sighed and said, "You sure know how to pick them!"

"She saw right through me. How was I supposed to know that they were so skillful?"

"It looks like you're going to have to keep your mouth shut in front of her from now on. You're no longer one of us."

"I'll make sure to stand my ground!" Jun said bitterly. "For Elliot's sake!"

That evening, Ben and Chad arrived at the Foster mansion to see Elliot.

"Master Elliot came home around five in the morning... His bodyguard said that he spent the night in the rain outside of Madam Avery's mother's house. They only managed to get him home after he passed out around four in the morning,"

Mrs. Cooper reported. "He's in his room right now. He had a fever in the morning that broke in the afternoon, but he's heating up again now."

Ben and Chad did not know what to say.

When had Elliot Foster ever been in this sort of pathetic situation?

He actually spent a night out in the rain for Avery Tate!

"The storm last night was brutal," Ben said with furrowed brows.

"It got worse after midnight. The lake in my neighborhood had overflowed,"

Chad said.

“Nobody would be able to pull through a night in that storm no matter how healthy they are!”

Chad turned to Mrs. Cooper, then asked, “Where’s Miss Avery? Is she not home?”

Mrs. Cooper shook her head and said, “She won’t answer my calls. She always used to pick up when I called. It looks like this fight between them was especially bad.”

was

At that moment, the doctor walked down from the second floor.

“How’s he doing, Doc?” Ben asked.

“His fever still hasn’t broken,” replied the doctor. “If this goes on, he’s sure to get pneumonia. I’m afraid his lungs might have already been infected. I suggested taking him to the hospital, but he won’t listen.

“How could we allow that?” Mrs. Cooper said frantically. “I’ll call Madarn Avery again. Master Elliot never listens to anyone but her.”

Ben frowned, then made his way out of the house.

Chad trailed along behind him and said, "What if she doesn't pick up the phone

again?"

"I'm going to look for her," Ben said.

"Do you know where she is?"

"She should be with Charlie Tierney right now. He seemed especially happy in his social media posts earlier today."

"I'll stay here while you go, then. If things go bad, I'll just have to take Mr. Foster to the hospital by force."

Ben nodded and left the mansion.

Chateau Juliet was one of Avonsville's oldest and most expensive high-end restaurants.

Avery did not want to go, but her company's management team insisted and eventually made her give in after half an hour of pestering.

It was not completely due to their persuasion that she decided to show up.

She was just tired of pretending and did not want to pass her bad mood onto her mother, so she figured it was better for her to stay out of the house for now.

Charlie placed a glass of apple juice in front of her.

Avery picked up the glass and took a sip.

Suddenly, the doors to the private room burst open.

Chelsea's exquisite face appeared in the vision of everyone in the room.

She charged toward Avery with a raging fury.

"Are you enjoying the feeling of being pursued by two different men?" she said through gritted teeth. She picked up a glass of water from the table and splashed it onto Avery's face.

Chapter 86

Avery's face was wet. Even though the water was warm, she felt chilly.

"Chelsea! What are you doing!" Charlie got up immediately, grabbed Chelsea's arm, and pulled her aside.

"Charlie! Don't stop me! I'm going to teach her a lesson tonight!" Chelsea's eyes were red, and her sharp voice pierced through the entire private room.

Charlie snapped, "Have you lost your mind?!"

Chelsea had never been yelled at in public by Charlie, and she boiled with rage.

Then, she pushed away Charlie's hand, trying to attack Avery again.

Splash!

A glass of juice was splashed on her face.

Avery slammed the empty cup on the table, and she looked at the messy-faced Chelsea, and said, "If you want to bully me, at least make sure you're capable of doing so."

The crowd instantly fell into silence, and everyone's eyes turned to Avery and Chelsea.

Avery was only splashed with a glass of warm water, and her face was still clean and clear but just wet. However, Chelsea was drenched in red watermelon juice, covering her face and hair...

Her originally delicate facial features now appeared particularly funny.

"Go on with your meal! I'll leave first." Avery wiped the water off her face with a tissue. After saying that, she strode out of the private room.

Chelsea wanted to chase after Avery, but Charlie grabbed her.

"Chelsea, aren't you embarrassed enough?!"

"Hehe. You think that I'm humiliating you, right? Let me go!" Chelsea shook off his hand, tears streaming down her face.

She had just learned that Elliot had waited for Avery in the rain outside of Laura's dilapidated rented residence all night. Even though his fever persisted, he refused to visit the hospital. Avery was treating the man she thought of as gold as mere dust, and Chelsea was in so much pain that she could not ignore it any longer. Hence, she had taken it out on Avery.

"Chelsea, calm down. Do you think the Chelsea I know would have acted that way?" Charlie's rhetorical question made Chelsea stop crying.

Elliot did not like her, and now even Charlie looked down on her.

She felt abandoned by the world.

"I don't think you're humiliating me, but I'm just afraid you'll regret it later. I told you many times that when dealing with enemies, you have to outsmart them.

Have you forgotten?" Charlie held her hand tightly and took her to the bathroom.

After the Tierney siblings went to the bathroom, the management of Tate Industries and Trust Capital looked at each other.

“Why did Chelsea and Miss Tate fight?” Someone from Trust Capital asked the one from Tate Industries.

“I don’t know! We don’t know anything about her private affairs!” A person from Tate Industries replied.

“Oh... It feels so complicated.”

“That’s right! I wonder if it’ll affect our cooperation.”

“Probably not. Mr. Tierney personally does the planning for this cooperation, and he really wants to facilitate it,” the person from Trust Capital said.

Everyone from Tate Industries breathed a sigh of relief. “That’s good.”

Avery froze when she walked out of the restaurant. She truly felt the piercing chill of early winter, and as her hair was wet, her scalp tingled when a gust of night wind blew.

It started to rain at this time last night. Later, the rain had become heavier and heavier, and it rained all night. Avery sniffled.

Chapter 87

Avery did not return to Elliot’s mansion, nor did she visit the sick

Elliot. This time, Avery was astonishingly cruel. Besides her, another person also had also treated Elliot ruthlessly.

Ben.

As Avery had never returned to Elliot's mansion, nor did she show any concern for him as he lay in the hospital bed, Ben would come every day and give him daily updates on Avery's daily activities. For example, today Avery had gone to Trust Capital and had a great morning with Charlie, or today they had lunch together.

It did not matter if the two of them had gone to an art exhibition or not, and it did not matter if they really had lunch together. What truly mattered was that Elliot was pissed off, as that was the only thing guaranteeing that he cooperated.

If Elliot was still sick, he could not take revenge.

Ben used his understanding of Elliot to make him live in misery every day.

Eventually, Elliot's condition began to improve under the control of medication.

Although he still looked pale and weak, he was determined to get out. The reason for his desire to leave the hospital was that Ben had told him that Charlie was taking Avery to an AI technology event.

These days, Elliot thought about many things as he lay in bed. To be frank, his memory of Charlie was not that clear, but this illness made him recall the past.

Charlie was a refined speculator and egoist. He carefully calculated his every move, whether it was making friends or doing things, so as to maximize the benefits and reduce the harm that he would experience. Additionally, he was good at disguise. He would be smiling even when facing an enemy, and just when they thought he was admitting defeat and lowered their guard against him, he would take the opportunity to stab them ruthlessly.

He and Elliot had drifted apart not only because they were incompatible, but they had also drifted apart because of their different investment ideas. Charlie would do anything for money, and he was good at wooing the powerful and turning in illegal wealth. Even though Elliot would also do anything for profit, Elliot had his own lines, and there were some types of money that even he would not touch even if it were to be right in front of him.

Avery and Charlie were getting close. Sooner or later, she would be pulled into the abyss by Charlie.

“Elliot, the doctor said you have to stay in bed for at least a week before going out,” said Ben.” It’s cold outside today, and there’s a strong wind. You’ll definitely get sicker if you go out.”

The doctor nodded vigorously beside him.

Elliot went to the closet, pulled out a gray woolen coat, and put it on.

Ben shook his head at the doctor.

This meant Elliot would go out regardless of what anyone said.

Today’s AI technology exhibition was an exhibition for the upper class, and there were only fifty seats at the exhibition site. However, the stage was massive, and there would be a grand and eye-opening AI technology exhibition.

Charlie had got two tickets and invited Avery, who agreed without much thought.

She had not dabbled in this much in the past, but she was intrigued.

The exhibition started at 2pm.

At noon, Charlie had taken Avery to an upscale restaurant. She had agreed to all of Charlie's requests in the past few days – whether it be for fun or to dine together. They had pleasant conversations every time they had met, but Charlie could feel that her attention was not entirely on him. Avery's eyes were always dull, and if she liked him, there should be a luster in them.

Chapter 88

Nevertheless, Charlie was not discouraged, and he could give her more time.

After ordering, the two chatted casually. Then, Avery picked up her phone and fiddled with it.

“Avery, do you have any issues with our cooperation?” Charlie asked casually as he took a sip of red wine.

Avery was reading the news, and she looked up at him when she heard his voice.

“Your plan is fine, but there are still some disagreements on our side,” said

Avery casually. Charlie laughed. “What's the disagreement? Let's see if I can help.”

Avery replied, "It's fine. I can handle it myself."

The disagreement stemmed from herself. In fact, the management of Tate Industries was very eager to accept investment from Trust Capital, but Avery was still hesitating. She had promised to meet with Charlie because she had wanted to get to know him a little better. However, no matter how well Charlie performed, he was still Chelsea's brother, and it was hard for Avery to rid herself of the prejudice she held against him.

Avery wanted to earn a profit, but she also had to consider the consequences of failure. Only when she felt she could accept the worst would she nod her head in agreement.

In the blink of an eye, it was already 2 p.m.

Charlie and Avery entered the exhibition hall and took their seats in the first row.

After a while, the host came on the stage and gave a speech, welcoming everyone to the event.

"Today, we have a mysterious guest with us, and this mysterious guest made a request to our robot, Lucy.”

As the host spoke, Lucy made a grand debut. Lucy was very realistic. It was a female figure, about 1.5 meters tall with long brown hair, wearing a blue and white uniform.

Then, the host continued, “Let’s see if Lucy can fulfill the mysterious guest’s request!”

Applause sounded from below the stage.

Lucy’s eyes swept across the stage, and then she stepped off the stage.

All eyes were on Lucy as they wondered who the mysterious guest was, and what was his request.

After a moment, Lucy walked toward the first row. Avery watched it approach and thought it was impressive. She did not expect robots these days to be so realistic. The scientists were able to make them walk and talk as a human would. It was simply incredible!

Just when Avery sighed at the power of modern technology, Lucy stopped in front of her. She thought something was wrong with Lucy, so she poked Lucy's arm.

Lucy stretched out its robot hand and said coquettishly, "Pretty lady, would you like to come with me?"

Avery was stunned.

There was laughter all around.

Avery blushed and asked, "Lucy, where are you taking me?"

Lucy answered, "There's a handsome man who wants to date you. He's so handsome! Come, see him with me!"

Lucy's voice was childish and playful, and it was hard to say no.

Avery pointed at Charlie and joked, "There's a handsome guy next to me."

Lucy glanced at Charlie, then waved at Avery. "He's not as good-looking as that handsome man. That guy is really handsome! I want to marry him! If you met him, you would want to marry him too!"

Lucy's answer caused the audience to burst into laughter.

The host saw that Avery and Lucy were at a stalemate, so he chimed in, "Miss, why don't you go and meet the guy with Lucy? After the event, we'll give you some attractive gifts!"

Avery was caught in a dilemma. Ignoring Lucy would be a minute matter, but she could not just brush off the organizer! Hence, she got up and followed Lucy backstage. After entering the backstage, she saw a familiar face—

Chapter 89

Elliot had lost a lot of weight, and his originally well-defined facial features appeared more profound and elegant.

What was he doing here? Was he the mysterious guest?

Lucy left after finishing the task.

Watching Lucy leave, Avery realized that the mysterious guest was indeed Elliot.

Was he not bedridden?

Was he feeling better already?

Avery stood still, not saying a word or approaching him.

"Mr. Foster, is this lady the person you're looking for?" The person in charge asked Elliot.

Elliot nodded. "Thank you."

"You're welcome," said the person in charge.

Elliot walked toward Avery, looking at her with indifferent eyes, and said, "Let's talk."

"Talk? What's there to talk about?" Avery lowered her gaze; her tone was cold.

Elliot was not in a hurry or annoyed. Instead, he took her arm with his big hand and pulled her away. There were many people backstage, and it was uncertain how they would talk about them.

Leaving backstage, Elliot led her through the lobby and into the VIP lounge.

They closed the door behind them.

Elliot's voice was hoarse yet powerful. "Avery, stay away from Charlie. Whatever his purpose for approaching you is, he's not going to do you any good."

Avery met his eyes and retorted, "You don't want me to cooperate with him because you want me to sell the company to you?"

Elliot's Adam's apple rolled. However, before he could contradict her statement, Avery continued, "Don't you think you are being too miserly? No wonder you're embarrassed to come forward. If I were you, I would never admit that I offered one hundred and fifty-five million dollars.”

A faint blush appeared on Elliot’s pale face when he heard her teasing. She knew how to provoke him quickly.

“Name your price.” His breathing became heavier, and his voice was hoarse.

“Hehe. You came here specifically to discuss business with me?” Avery sneered, “Sure, but I’m not free now. Let’s do it tomorrow! How about that?”

Elliot saw her leaving, and he grabbed her arm again.

“Avery, I’ll say it one last time,” Elliot said, coughing a few times. His voice was hoarse as his breathing steadied. “You’re no match for Charlie ... If you think one hundred and fifty-five million dollars it too small an amount, name your price.”

Avery faced the cold door, and her disguised rudeness melted away.

He was obviously still sick, and he was not here for an urgent matter. Why had he come? Could he not wait till he had fully recovered?

Avery shut her eyes and quietly took a deep breath. Then, she simply mentioned a number,” Three hundred million. I want you to invest in the company and not buy it!”

It was not that she really wanted three hundred million, but she just wanted to see his reaction. It was he who forced her to make an offer.

“Okay,” Elliot agreed without hesitation, “go and reject Charlie...”

Avery suddenly turned around and interrupted him, her chest heaving, “Are you crazy? You’re ill now, so I won’t talk to you! Hurry and go back!”

“I’m feeling much better.” His voice was a little softer than before, but his eyes were redder.

Avery sensed something was wrong and put her hand on his forehead.

It was a little hot.

IIUV

She withdrew her hand and said with great difficulty, “Are you going back yourself, or do I have to call your bodyguard!” “Go and reject Charlie.” He did not seem to understand her and continued pushing his demand.

“I’m not rejecting him! The more you do this, the more I insist on not rejecting him!” Avery’s eyes were turning red, and she gritted her teeth. “Elliot, I won’t be at your mercy anymore!”

Avery saw a hint of disappointment spreading across Elliot’s haggard face.

Then, she looked away, opened the door, and left quickly. Exiting the room,

Avery felt the chill of the wind.

Chapter 90

As if a roaring fire had been warming the room, Elliot felt the chill as soon as Avery had left the room. Later, Avery went to the bathroom to wash her face. Once she was done freshening u P, she returned to the exhibition hall.

The exhibition lasted for over an hour, but it passed by in the blink of an eye.

Avery saw plenty of things, but she remembered none of it. After the exhibition ended, she got up.

Charlie asked Avery, “Would you like to go for afternoon tea? I know a new place, and it’s quite good.”

Avery was not interested, and she rejected his offer, “I’m a little sleepy and want to go back to rest.”

Charlie realized that she looked exhausted, and he said, "I'll take you back."

"Thank you."

The two walked out of the first row.

At the exit, Avery saw a familiar face. Seeing that he was waiting for her, Avery turned to Charlie and said, "Mr. Tierney, why don't you head out first? I have something to do."

Charlie also noticed Shaun, the former second-in-command of Tate Industries.

"Sure. Just call me if you need anything. I'll wait for you outside."

After saying that, Charlie strode out.

Shaun waited until Charlie left before approaching her.

)

"Are you going to accept Trust Capital's investment?" Shaun smiled, and he sounded polite.

"I heard that you're now at Golden Technologies. That's pretty good," Avery said.

Shaun replied, "It's nothing great or horrible as I'm still a vice president... I'm afraid I'm stuck with the word 'vice'..."

Avery responded, "You can always start your own business and be your own boss."

Shaun shook his head. "It's good to be the vice president as I don't have to take such a big risk.

Avery mocked. "Oh. That just shows you're still incompetent."

The pleasantness on their faces vanished, and hostility surged forth. It was Shaun who had set the trap that caught Cole. Therefore, Avery was constantly on her guard.

"Avery, why are you so cruel? Are you hiding your nervousness? Hehe. Let me just tell you that I'm no longer interested in the Super Brain System that you have! Instead, I'll work with my research and development team to develop a more powerful system. I'm going to make sure that the system that you have will be nothing more than artificial stupidity," Shaun scoffed.

Avery answered indifferently, "Oh. Best of luck!"

“Aren’t you afraid?!” Shaun was secretly raging when he saw her indifference.

Avery smiled and retorted, “Aren’t you the one who should be living in fear?
No

matter how useless Cole is, he’s still the young master of the Foster family.
You

should watch out for him. He might try to take his revenge on you in the near future.”

Shaun’s face turned as red as a beetroot.

Coming out of the exhibition hall, Avery strode toward Charlie.

“Mr. Tierney, you can leave first! I saw a flower market nearby, and I want to go over and get some.”

Avery wanted to be alone for a while, so she found a random reason.

Charlie nodded. “Avery, my father’s birthday is next weekend, and I want to invite you to his birthday party.”

Avery replied, “Sure!”

Charlie added, “You can bring your mother over. The birthday party will be at my house, and w. e won’t have too many guests over.”

Avery said, “I’ll go back and tell my mom. Thank you!”

Charlie answered, "No worries. I'll pick you up."

Avery said, "You must be busy by then. Let's talk about it at your father's party!"

Avery watched Charlie get into the car and leave. After he left, she breathed a sigh of relief.

It was windy, and Elliot was back at his mansion with a fever.

The doctor sighed secretly.

Mrs. Cooper frowned, pulled the bodyguard over, and asked in a low voice, "Did Master Elliot meet Madam?"

The bodyguard answered, "They met, and they fought again. Otherwise, why would Mr. Foster be like this?"

Chapter 91

In the afternoon, Avery had bought two pots of daffodils at the flower market.

Then she took them with her to her mother's house. As it was not five o'clock yet, Laura should still be at work, but Avery found that she was busy in the kitchen.

"Mom, did you get off work early today?" Avery changed her slippers and put the two pots of flowers on the living room table.

Laura came out of the kitchen, looking a little embarrassed.

“Avery, I’m not working anymore,” Laura explained. “My friend’s daughter-in-law hired a more professional nanny.”

“Mom, don’t be sad,” murmured Avery as she hugged her mother.

Laura chuckled. “I’m fine... Why did you buy two pots of flowers?”

Avery glanced at the simple rented house and replied, “I happened to pass by the flower market, so I bought two pots.”

“Okay... Avery, don’t worry about my job. I can always look for another one.”

“Mom, you don’t need to. Just rest at home!” Avery said. Then, she took out her bank card from her bag and handed it to her mother, adding, “There’s money in the card. You can spend i Laura pushed the card away and said with a serious expression, “Avery, if it’s one thing that I’ve learned after so many years, it’s that you can only rely on yourself. Even if I become a street cleaner tomorrow, it’ll be better than asking for money from you.”

Avery could not help laughing when she saw her mother’s righteous look.
“Mom,

there’s no need to be a street sweeper. I heard that you have to get up at four in the morning to sweep the street. It’s too cold now, so you should find an easy job!”

Laura also laughed. “If it pays more, what’s waking up at four in the morning?

I’m going to cook. Just sit down and get some rest.”

Avery walked over to the sofa and sat down. Then, she took out her phone and saw Tammy’s message.

Tammy: (Avery, I really don’t understand... What the hell is going on with this guy Elliot? He hasn’t recovered from his illness, so why did he look for you? Is he trying to show how head over heels he is for you? If he truly loves you, he should just give you the money! What’s the point of putting on a show!]

Avery looked at Tammy’s playful message; she did not know how to respond to it.

After a while, Tammy sent another message: [Jun just went to see Elliot. The doctor

mentioned that Elliot's immune system is messed up, and it's best to go to the hospital for treatment. Is it serious?)

Avery replied: (We can only know the seriousness by getting an examination at the hospital.]

Tammy: (Oh... Are you in love with Charlie? They all say so.)

Avery: (Who are 'they'?)

Tammy: (Just the people around Elliot! They said you're ignoring Elliot because you're now in love with Charlie. I don't think Charlie's as handsome as Elliot. He looks glib and shrewd.)

Avery did not feel that way with Charlie these days.

Avery: (So you think Elliot looks like an honest man?)

Tammy: (Honest?! Forget that. But Elliot doesn't look glib! However, he does seem a bit fierce. Haven't you noticed that many celebrities with a run-in with the law or men involved in domestic violence are like this?)

Avery took a sip of water and asked: [What about Jun?]

Tammy: (He's much younger than Charlie and Elliot. Besides, he's handsome and caring yet naive. Avery, if you get divorced, look for a younger boy in the future! It's easier to control them!]

Avery: [Let's talk about it after I get divorced!]

Tammy: (Are you really willing to divorce Elliot?)

Avery: (Why not? Whether I divorce him or not, I'll not be able to get his property.)

Tammy: (You're right. A rich man of his level... Well, most people can't even take advantage of him even if they wanted to.)

Avery did not eat much for dinner.

Laura asked, "Why aren't you eating more? Is it not good?" Avery frowned slightly. "Mom, my belly is showing." Laura smiled and said, "You're almost five months pregnant. Your stomach will definitely get bigger."

Avery replied, "Fortunately, the weather is cold, and I'm wearing more layers, so others can't tell."

Laura said, "Well... Avery, I thought about it. Do you want to go to graduate school? Go abroad to study. Take advantage of the opportunity while studying and give birth to the children overseas.”

Avery was stunned. “Mom, it costs a lot to study abroad. Besides, I don’t want to go to graduate school. Instead, I want to work and make money.”

Laura assured, “Don’t worry about money. I’ve saved some over the years, and it’s enough for you to go abroad for graduate school.”

Chapter 92

Avery was shocked. Laura and Jack got divorced when Avery was still young, and she was so busy with her own affairs that she had no time to care about how her mother’s life was going Hence, Avery was completely unaware of how Laura had saved money.

“It’s okay if you don’t want to go abroad... I’m thinking, why don’t we buy a smaller house? It’s okay for us both to suffer a little, but we can’t let the children feel sad!” Laura continued.

Avery asked, “Mom, do we really have that much money?”

Laura replied, "We can still afford a down payment."

Avery said, "Oh... Then there's no rush. The babies are still months away!"

"Time flies, and you better give it a careful consideration."

Avery nodded. "Mom, I'm going out later. My friend's dad is celebrating his birthday next week, and I have to buy a present."

Laura was worried. "Can't you get it in the morning? It's getting dark, and I'm uneasy about you going out alone."

Avery said, "There are street lights outside. I'll be fine."

Laura uttered, "Alright. Come back soon."

Avery got up, grabbed the bag from the sofa, and went out. She hailed a cab and gave him Elliot's address. Elliot's thin, haggard face kept appearing in Avery's mind, and she could not control the urge to go back and have a look.

Moreover, she had already thought of an excuse.

The car stopped at the gate of Elliot's mansion, and Avery got out of the vehicle.

She noticed that several cars were parked in the yard, and it seemed that many people had come to visit him. The gatekeeper recognized Avery and immediately opened the gate.

Avery went inside.

Chad was the first to see her, and he quickly notified the people in the living room.

Mrs. Cooper strode out to greet Avery, "Madam! You're back!"

Avery replied softly, "I'm back to get the laptop."

A flash of embarrassment flashed across Mrs. Cooper's eyes, and she replied,

"Oh... Why don't you check on Master Elliot? He's sick again, and the doctor said his immune system is messed up after being in the rain the other day..."

Avery was indifferent to the suggestion. She followed Mrs. Cooper into the living room. In an instant, everyone looked at her. It had only been a few days, yet Avery felt that everything here had become so unfamiliar. Perhaps because they looked at her more coldly than before, but nonetheless, that was not surprising. In their opinion, Elliot's illness was her fault.

"Madam, go to the second floor! Your laptop is in your room. No one touched it,"

Mrs. Cooper urged.

Avery hesitated, stepped forward, and walked toward the second floor.

After Avery went upstairs, Chad said, "Should we go up? Chelsea is on the second floor after all. I'm afraid they will fight."

Ben folded his arms and said lightly, "Don't worry about them."

Avery walked to the second floor and walked right to the door of Elliot's bedroom.

The bedroom door was open.

Elliot was lying on the bed, eyes closed, probably in a deep slumber, whereas Chelsea was scrubbing him with a wet towel.

Chapter 93

The doctor and Rosalie were also in the room, and they were standing by the window talking about Elliot's health. However, Avery's feet were as heavy as mercury, and she could not bring herself to enter the room. When Chelsea turned around from the bed with the water in her hand, she immediately caught sight of Avery standing outside the door.

"Avery! What are you doing here!" Chelsea lowered her voice, afraid of waking

Elliot.

Then, she put the basin on the bedside table and strode toward Avery.
Rosalie

heard the noises and walked toward the door as well.

Avery was afraid of waking Elliot, so she took a few steps toward the stairs, but

Chelsea thought she was trying to escape and quickly approached her, blocking her way.

“Avery! Are you making a fool of Elliot?! If you don’t like him, then let him go! If you do anything to hurt him again, I’ll never let you go!” Chelsea’s eyes were full of hatred.

Rosalie shouted sternly, “Avery, Elliot does not want to divorce you because he is enchanted b y you! I didn’t expect you to be this unappreciative! I was blind, and I had thought that you were a good person! If I had known earlier, I would have picked Chelsea to be Elliot’s wife! Only Chelsea truly loves Elliot!”

Avery was not in the mood to fight back. After all, she was only there to see how

Elliot was doing. Now that she saw it, that was enough.

“Go and take care of him! I’m leaving!” Avery pushed Chelsea away and walked downstairs, step by step

In the living room, a group of people led by Ben all pricked their ears to listen to the movement upstairs. After Avery was “defeated” and came downstairs, everyone was in different moods. Some people thought she was a joke, and others sighed with embarrassment. Nevertheless, their opinions were unimportant and what mattered was Elliot’s stance. Unfortunately, Elliot was sick and asleep, and he had no idea what was happening.

“Miss Tate, you came by taxi, right? How about I drive you back?” Chad offered graciously.

Avery shook her head. “I’ll go back myself.”

After that, she walked toward the door.

Mrs. Cooper looked at Avery’s dejected back, and she immediately chased after her. “Madam, you haven’t got your laptop yet.”

Avery snapped back to her senses. She turned around immediately, walked across the living room, and entered her room.

“I really want to go up and wake Elliot,” Ben said. “If Avery leaves tonight, I’m afraid she’ll never come back.”

Chad urged, “Then go up and shout! I’ll support you from here.”

Ben glared at him. “Madam Rosalie is here. I dare not.”

After a while, Avery came out, dragging her suitcase. She said she was coming back to get the computer, but it was an excuse. If Elliot was awake and the two had a good talk, maybe she would not leave.

Mrs. Cooper blamed herself. She had asked Avery upstairs just now in good faith. What if Elliot had woken while Avery was upstairs? It was better than her not having seen Elliot, right?

“Madam, why don’t you wait until Master Elliot wakes up and inform him that you are leaving?” Mrs. Cooper asked.

Avery replied. “There’s no need.”

Later, she dragged her suitcase and resolutely walked out into the cold winter night.

Rosalie had come downstairs, incensed.

“Avery! Don’t ever come back!”

Ben secretly sighed.

She was really making things worse!

Avery had always been stubborn. Additionally, she had not wholly calmed down because of Mr. Z’s matter, and now, Rosalie had angered her again. How could Avery endure it?

Avery turned a deaf ear to Rosalie’s threats. Soon, she disappeared from everyone’s sight. “You all saw it! I didn’t bully her! She left of her own will!”

Rosalie roared angrily.

Chapter 94

Rosalie still felt a little apprehensive about her position. After all, Elliot had almost ended their relationship because of this woman.

At around midnight, Elliot’s fever subsided, and he finally woke up. Warm orange light lit the room. He sat up and saw Chelsea lying on the edge of the bed, fast asleep.

Elliot frowned, got out of bed, and left the room.

The following morning, Chelsea woke up to an empty bed and an empty heart.

Then, she immediately went downstairs to look for Elliot.

Mrs. Cooper was shocked, and she exclaimed, "I've been downstairs, but Master Elliot has not come down!"

Chelsea was stunned. "He's not in the room! I only came down because he was missing."

Mrs. Cooper became anxious. "Goodness! Master Elliot can't just disappear into thin air!"

As she said that, Mrs. Cooper ran upstairs. She and Chelsea searched all the rooms on the second floor, but they could not find Elliot.

Chelsea burst into tears. "It's all my fault... I slept so deeply last night, and I didn't notice him getting out of bed at all..."

Mrs. Cooper hurried downstairs and said, "I'll ask the gatekeeper. If Master Elliot went out, there would be a record."

After a while, Mrs. Cooper got the report from the gatekeeper: Elliot had never left. Mrs. Cooper gathered the servants and began searching the villa.

After half an hour, everyone gathered in the living room.

“He’s not in the front yard.”

“Neither is he in the backyard.”

“No sight of him in the warehouse or parking lot.”

“All rooms on the ground floor have been searched... except for Madam’s room.”

After listening to everyone’s reports, Mrs. Cooper strode toward Avery’s room.

She pushed the door open and immediately breathed a sigh of relief. Elliot was lying on Avery’s bed, sleeping peacefully.

Mrs. Cooper swiftly exited the room and said to Chelsea, “Miss Tierney, you should go back! Then, if Master Elliot needs you, he’ll contact you.”

Chelsea was indignant. “Why’s he lying in Avery’s bed? Didn’t they quarrel? The situation is so bad now... Why is he-”

Mrs. Cooper interrupted, “If you weren’t in Master Elliot’s room last night, he wouldn’t come to Madam’s room to rest. Master Elliot hates outsiders in his room.”

Chelsea sobbed and choked, uttering, “Am I an outsider? I’ve been with him for ten years—”

Mrs. Cooper answered, “Miss Tierney, i know you have a hard time, and it has not been easy for you. But you can’t force your one-sided love on others.”

Chelsea was angered. “How dare you talk to me like that?!”

Mrs. Cooper replied, “Our Madam never yells at the servants because she’s our boss. I’m not saying that you’re not as good as our Madam, but I just hope that you can discover the strengths in others and discover your own weaknesses at the same time.”

Mrs. Cooper might as well have said Chelsea was not as good as Avery.

Chelsea left Elliot’s mansion full of anger.

Elliot exited Avery’s room at eight in the morning. After a whole night’s rest, his temperature was now normal. However, he still had a headache, and his limbs were weak. When Mrs. Cooper saw him come out, she quickly brought a bowl of hot soup to him.

“Master Elliot, Madam came back to see you last night.” Mrs. Cooper kept looking at his face as she spoke.

Elliot held the bowl, but he did not drink the soup. Instead, he looked at Mrs.

Cooper, telling her to continue.

“You were asleep when Madam came upstairs to see you. Miss Tierney was wiping the sweat off you,” Mrs. Cooper said, “It was my fault. I asked her to come upstairs to see you, but I didn’t know Miss Tierney would be so unruly.”

“Don’t let her into my room in the future,” Elliot said hoarsely.

Since no one was in the villa, Mrs. Cooper bluntly reported, “Yes, Master Elliot.

Last night, Madam Rosalie and Miss Tierney spoke harshly to Madam. Madam took her suitcase and left, and I’m afraid she won’t come back and live here anymore.”

Chapter 95

At ten in the morning, a Rolls-Roice stopped in front of the gate of an old community house. The door of the car flung open, and a tall figure alighted the vehicle. Elliot was wearing a long navy blue quilted coat, a gray scarf, and a pair of brand new leather boots. Even though he was dressed warmly, his face was pale and haggard. His cold and noble temperament was incompatible with everything around him.

The driver and bodyguard followed Elliot, carrying expensive gifts.

Laura trotted from the kitchen to open the door when she heard a knock. She was shocked to see Elliot.

“Why are you here?” Laura froze, then she opened the door, urging, “Come in! I heard that you are sick. Are you okay?”

Although it was early winter, it was not cold enough to wear a jacket.

Elliot glanced at the clean floor and hesitated. “Do we need to remove our shoes?”

Laura immediately shook her head. “No, there’s no need! Come in!”

She invited Elliot inside and saw the gift boxes the driver and bodyguard were carrying.

“Why did you bring so many gifts?” Laura asked, confused.

Avery had taken all her luggage with her last night. Laura had dared not ask her anything. However, she guessed that her daughter had broken up with Elliot for good, which was why she had dragged her luggage back. Laura had never expected Elliot to come over.

“I’m here to pay you a visit.” Elliot walked over to the sofa and sat down.

After the driver and bodyguard placed the gifts in the living room, they left.

Laura found the remote and turned on the heating.

“Oh... You and Avery... last night...” Laura appeared to be in a dilemma, and she did not know how to broach the subject.

Elliot looked at Laura sincerely, and he said, “I didn’t see her last night. There’s some misunderstanding between her and me.”

“Oh... She rarely tells me anything about you. So I don’t know what to say.”

Laura poured him a cup of hot water and added, “You don’t look that great. You should rest at home.”

“I’m fine.” He took the glass and held it in both hands.

Laura sat at the end of the sofa, and she looked at him. A sick person was not in full control of their bearings, and Elliot had looked so commanding and unapproachable the last time she had seen him.

Laura hesitated, and she finally asked the question she had been harboring in her heart,” Elliot, what do you feel for Avery? I divorced her father when she was very young, and she did not get to experience life with him... You should be able to imagine the environment she grew up in; she did not get any normal sort of love. If you don't like her, please set her free.”

“This is not the time to talk about divorce,” Elliot took a sip of water and said, “Recently, she got closer to a man, Charlie Tierney. You may not know him, but I do.”

Laura immediately understood what he meant. “You're saying that Charlie isn't a nice guy?”

Elliot nodded. “I hope you can persuade her to stay away from Charlie Tierney.”

Laura nodded again and again. “Okay, I'll tell her when she wakes up.”

Elliot frowned and glanced at his watch. It was now half-past ten in the morning.

Avery was still asleep?

Laura explained, “She went to bed late last night, so she hasn't woken up yet.”

As soon as Laura said that, the bedroom door opened, and Avery came out in her pajamas. Her long hair was messy, and she was still half-asleep. However, her dull eyes suddenly lit up when she saw Elliot.

“Avery, Elliot is here for you. I’m going to buy some food. Have a good chat with him,” Laura made an excuse and went out.

Avery glanced at the heater. Then, she looked at Elliot’s quilted coat. It seemed that he was still sick.

Chapter 96

“If you’re sick, just stay home and rest.”

After Avery said that, she turned around to get a glass and poured some water.

“I’m much better today.” Elliot removed his scarf.

“That’s what you said yesterday.” Avery drank the water and put down the glass.

Then, she went to the living room and saw the gifts on the floor.

Avery asked, “What are these for?”

“It’s not good to come empty-handed.” He thought for a few seconds and changed the subject, “I just found out today that you went back last night.”

“Did you come here just to say this?” Avery walked over to the sofa and sat down, looking at his thin face with her almond eyes.

There was a distance of more than a meter between the two.

“Chelsea and I—”

“I don’t want to hear it,” Avery interrupted him, “I’m not interested in knowing what type of relationship you have with her.”

Elliot saw her cold face, and he secretly felt powerless.

“Are you going to talk about Charlie and me next?” She looked at him and said, “Elliot, even if I get deceived by him, I’ll suffer the consequences myself. I won’t drag you into the mess, and I won’t ask for your help. So don’t mention this to me again.”

Avery was like a rebellious child. The more he cautioned her against it, the more she went and did it. Elliot pursed his lips, and he appeared tired as he quietly digested what she said.

Avery was a little hungry, so she got up and went to the kitchen and saw the breakfast her mother had left in the food warmer for her. Then, she took a bun and returned to her seat on the sofa. She ate with relish, and he watched her with bright eyes.

“What else do you have to say?” After Avery was full, she looked at him again.

“If there’s nothing else, then go back!”

“I want to stay for lunch,” Elliot said.

Avery was stunned as she did not know how to reject him. After all, it was only a meal, and she was not that petty.

“You can stay and eat! I’m going out!” Avery got up from the sofa, intending to change and leave.

“Avery, are you never going to come home again?” Elliot got up from the sofa and followed her to the bedroom door.

Avery answered, “This is my home.”

“Did my mom say something to you last night?”

“No.” She did not want to cause more trouble. Besides, he was weak now, and it was better for him to rest and recover. "Our affairs have nothing to do with other people. I don't think we're compatible."

"What's considered "compatible"?" Elliot walked into the bedroom and shut the door.

The bedroom was only a little over ten square meters, except for a bed and a wardrobe, there was very little room to move around.

A sense of oppression immediately filled the room.

"When I'm comfortable with the other person, that's compatible." Then, Avery raised her head and looked at Elliot, adding, "But you make me very uncomfortable."

Her words angered him.

"Did Charlie make you feel comfortable?" Elliot gritted his teeth and repeated,

"Did he make you comfortable?"

"Either way, being with him is more comfortable than being with you!" She felt him leaning toward her, and she stretched out a hand and pushed him.

"Don't be so shameless! Don't think that I won't dare to hit you just because you're a patient!”

Zip!

H

Elliot unzipped his jacket. Immediately after, he took off his coat and hung it on the clothes rail next to him. He was wearing a gray V-neck T-shirt underneath.

Above the neckline was his sexy Adam’s apple, and there seemed to be beads of sweat on his neck.

“Why are you undressing? You might get cold again!” Avery took his coat off the clothes rail and wanted him to put it on. However, he directly picked her up and threw her on the bed.

Chapter 97

“Avery! Have you forgotten whose wife you are?!” Elliot clenched her struggling little hands tightly and pinned them above her head. “I told you to stay away from Charlie! Don’t challenge my patience!”

It had been a while since Avery had seen him this irritable and crazy. He looked so weak, but his strength was frightening. She did not dare resist him, as the more she fought, the crazier he became. Avery lied down quietly for the sake of the children she carried within her. She waited for him to vent his dissatisfaction.

“Why aren’t you saying anything?” Elliot’s burning gaze watched Avery’s face.

His fingers rubbed her cheeks, finally slipping from her eyebrows to behind her ears. “What do you want me to say? What do you want to hear? I’ll say it for you.” She said.

The anger in Elliot’s heart was instantly extinguished.

“Avery, am I really unforgivable?”

Elliot’s voice was hoarse and soft, his fingers sieved through her hair to gently clasp her in his palms. His body was a little hot, and Avery felt really warm.

“You’re not unforgivable.” Avery’s eyes moved slightly, dropping her disguise.

“Elliot, you are amazing. Everything about you is amazing... But, I want to lead a peaceful life, so let me go.”

The hope in Elliot’s eyes shattered, and he did not want to listen to her anymore. Then, he covered her cherry lips with his.

At noon, the bodyguard knocked on the door. Laura opened the door and let him in.

“Where’s Mr. Foster?” The bodyguard immediately became vigilant when he saw no one in the living room.

Laura pointed to the bedroom door. “In the room.”

The bodyguard replied, “Oh...”

He wanted to ask when Elliot would come out, but he soon noticed that the question was redundant as no one but Elliot himself knew that.

“I made lunch. Do you want to eat? Where’s the other person with you? Call him in. We will dine together,” said Laura warmly.

The bodyguard sullenly walked to the bedroom door, pressing his ear against the door.

There was no sound coming from within.

Laura said, “The house isn’t soundproofed, and if they’re talking inside, we can hear it from outside. Maybe he’s asleep. I think he’s still sick!”

The bodyguard sighed. "The doctor told him not to go out, but he insisted on coming."

Laura nodded. "Don't worry! He'll be fine with us."

The bodyguard asked alertly, "Where's Avery?"

"She's inside too," Laura answered.

The bodyguard's thoughts began to run wild. "How long have they been in there?"

"Maybe an hour? I went out to buy groceries before, so I don't know when the two of them got in," Laura said as she walked toward the kitchen, "If you're not eating, I'll eat first."

The bodyguard was in no mood to eat. Their relationship had been strained recently, and Elliot was so sick and weak. Avery could easily kill him in the room!

Thinking of this, the bodyguard could not care less anymore and just opened the bedroom door. However, he was greeted with a surprising scene.

Elliot was lying naked on the bed with his eyes closed, motionless... "

Avery stood by the bed holding a quilt. She probably did not expect someone to push the door open, so she looked rather surprised.

O

lu

LIE

“What did you do to Mr. Foster?!” The bodyguard growled, strode to the bed, and reached out his finger to see if Elliot was still breathing.

Avery was impressed by the bodyguard’s imagination. “He’s not dead but asleep.”

VVU

The bodyguard retracted his hand in embarrassment and glanced at Elliot’s body again. “Why did you take off his clothes! Why are you such a sl*t!”

“Don’t slander me! He took it off himself.” Avery glared at the bodyguard, adding, “If you don’t believe me, you can ask him when he wakes up!”

The bodyguard gasped “Oh,” and glanced at Avery. She was wearing a summer nightdress, and her exposed skin gave a glimpse of what had just happened.

“I’m going out! Take good care of him!” He strode out after saying his piece.

Avery’s head was heavy with anger. She sat down on the edge of the bed and glanced sideways at Elliot.

Chapter 98

Elliot slept soundly though he sweated. His temperature was normal, and as Avery was exhausted, she lay down beside him and fell into a deep slumber.

Avery woke up at three o'clock in the afternoon, and she felt a pang of hunger.

She got out of bed, changed her clothes, and came out of the room, just to find the bodyguard and the driver sitting on the sofa in the living room, watching TV.

As for Laura, she was sitting in the kitchen, fiddling with her phone.

The scene appeared calm... however, she was conflicted about how they seemed to be treating her house as their own.

“Avery, are you hungry?” Laura placed down her phone and brought out the leftover food.

Avery walked to the living room and said to the driver, “Your boss should be waking up soon. Go back and get a set of clean clothes.”

The driver immediately stood. “Okay.”

After the driver left, Avery turned off the TV and said to the bodyguard, “My mom has a migraine, and she can’t stand loud noises. If you’re staying here, just keep quiet.”

The bodyguard dared not object. After all, his boss was still in her bed, and he did not know when he would wake up. What if he slept until late at night?

The bodyguard’s fear came to pass. It was six o’clock and the sky was rapidly darkening, but Elliot showed no signs of waking up.

Laura spoke to Avery, “Avery, I’ll stay at the hotel tonight.”

Of course, Avery disagreed, “Mom, I’ll just wake him up.”

The bodyguard interrupted, “He’s a patient! He needs to rest! Don’t wake him up!”

Avery glared at the bodyguard. “This is my home!”

The bodyguard said to Laura, “Madam Laura, I’ll pay for the hotel room!”

After that, he took out his wallet, took a few hundred dollars, and handed them to Laura.

“Madam Laura, take it!” The bodyguard’s voice was rough, and he sounded angry.

Laura was a little scared of him.

Avery chimed in, "Mom, take it!"

They should just take the money!

Laura took the money, but she felt a little uneasy. "Avery, i'll go and find a hotel."

Avery suggested, "Mom, don't go yet. It's still early, and he should wake up later."

The bodyguard offered, "Madam Laura, I'll take you to the hotel. Mr. Elliot won't necessarily go back when he wakes up, and it's already so late."

The bodyguard was a prophet! As soon as he took Laura away, Elliot woke up.

Avery reached out to check his temperature.

It was normal.

"You've slept all afternoon, and it's getting dark now. Get up and go home quickly!" Avery took the fresh set of clothes the driver had brought in the afternoon to him.

Elliot surveyed the room with his bloodshot eyes.

"Get up! This is the only bed in our house!" Avery urged.

Hearing this, Elliot said hoarsely, "I'm dizzy-"

Avery said, "Stop pretending! I touched your forehead just now, and your temperature is normal!”

Elliot started to cough. It was so bad that Avery thought that he might cough out his insides. Avery pursed her lips and did not say anything. Even though he no longer had a fever, it did not mean he had fully recovered. Then, Avery walked out of the room and asked the driver for help.

“Elliot’s awake, but he said he can’t get up—”

The driver said, “If he can’t get up, let him continue to sleep! I’ll go back and get his medicine.

After saying that, the driver left. Avery rubbed her temples. Did she really have no choice but to let him stay overnight?

Chapter 99

An hour later, the driver arrived with all of Elliot’s necessities. He had even brought a sumptuous dinner. Mrs. Cooper used lunch boxes and thermal insulation containers to pack dinners for at least three people.

“Miss Tate, this is Mr. Elliot’s medicine. Thank you for your hard work tonight!”

The driver carefully handed the medicine to Avery and then got off work.

Avery sat on the sofa, looking at Elliot's things on the table, lost in thought

Was she too soft-hearted?! She should have driven him away by noon!
That

way, it would not be so troublesome!

Suddenly, a coughing sound came from the bedroom. Avery sighed, took Elliot's

medicine, and pushed the bedroom door open. It was just the two of them at home now, so she left the door open to ventilate the room.

Elliot had showered and changed into clean clothes. However, the bed was a mess.

"Do you have any hot water?" Elliot was a little thirsty.

Avery put the medicine on the bedside table and went out to get him warm water. Elliot followed her all the way to the kitchen.

"Where's your mom?" He asked.

"Thanks to you, she's staying at the hotel tonight." Avery handed him the water glass. "Are you hungry? The driver brought you dinner. You should eat some!"

He did not eat at noon and slept until now, so he must be hungry.

"I'll just have some soup." He had no appetite.

Avery went to the coffee table in the living room and brought dinner over.
There

was a bowl of soup in it.

Elliot finished the soup and put down the spoon.

“I dirtied the bed. Do you have clean sheets? I’ll change it.” His face was still pale, but he had just taken a shower and looked refreshed.

“Go and dry your hair. I’ll change it.” Looking at his sick appearance, Avery could not get angry at him.

“Where’s the hairdryer? I can’t find it.”

Avery got up and went to the bathroom to get it. He followed behind her and took the hairdryer from her. Then, she went to the room and changed the sheets and duvet cover. The two seemed to have a tacit understanding as husband and wife who have lived together for many years.

It was nine in the evening when Avery’s phone rang. It was a video call. She did not think much of it and directly hung up. However, the other party called again.

Hence, Avery took a deep breath and accepted the video call.

It was a video conference call from the company’s management. After accepting the call, three faces appeared on the screen.

“Avery, have you considered the offer? It’s our honor that Trust Capital is willing to invest in u S... What are you worried about?”

“I asked Charlie’s assistant today, and he said that Charlie has not made any excessive demands on you and has been waiting for your reply.”

“Didn’t we agree last time? Everything’s for the benefit of the company. Are you backing out o f your promise? We know that you have a bad relationship with Chelsea... But what does this have to do with Charlie? People are willing to pay actual money to invest in us. Besides him, w e have no other choice.”

Avery’s temple throbbed as she listened to their chatter.

“Give me another week.”

“Another week?! You said the same last time

“That’s right! How long are you going to put it off? To put it bluntly, if you don’t want the company to survive, you can just reject Charlie! Yet, you’re not accepting or rejecting it! I really don’t understand what you’re thinking!”

Avery replied, “Charlie’s father’s birthday is next weekend, and he invited me to the party. After next weekend, I’ll give you an answer.”

“An answer to us?! You’re giving an answer to Charlie!”

“Oh... I’ll give him an answer next weekend. It’s past nine o’clock, and you guys should rest early.”

Avery wanted to hang up the video call as Elliot was sitting right beside her, and he would surely not leave tonight.

Chapter 100

Moreover, there was only one bed here. Since Elliot was sick,

Avery planned to give him the bed. After taking a shower, she came to the sofa and sat down. She thought of spending the night on the couch tonight. However,

Elliot also came over half an hour later. As he had slept the entire afternoon, it was understandable that Elliot was not sleepy, and Avery could not just force him to go to sleep.

On the other side of the video call, the technical department manager said, “You’ve been dragging this, causing me to lose sleep for a week! Avery, let’s have a heart-to-heart talk!” The head of the development department chimed in,

“I also have insomnia every day! Not only can I not sleep well, but I can’t even eat!”

“I’ve been losing more and more hair lately! My hair was never much to begin with!” The person in charge of the personnel department followed.

These old men were just telling sob stories to force Avery to decide immediately.

Elliot frowned and directly snatched Avery’s phone.

Avery was shocked. “Hey! I’m on a video call! Give me back my phone!”

She moved toward him, trying to grab the phone back.

“Who’s that man?! He looks familiar?”

CV

“He’s Avery’s boyfriend, right! He’s still with Avery even though it’s so late! It must be her boyfriend!”

“Oh... This guy looks like someone...”

On the other side of the video call, the three old men discussed the identity of the man.

“Avery, how do you hang up? I can’t find the button.” Elliot took her phone and studied it for a few seconds, and because he could not find the button, he returned the phone to her.

After Avery got her phone back, she immediately hung up the call.

“Who told you to take my phone?!” Avery scolded.

He opened his eyes and said lazily, “Their voices are annoying. It’s nine o’clock in the evening, not nine in the morning.”

“If you think it’s annoying, you can go back to your home! This is my house.”

Avery frowned, took the phone, and walked toward the bedroom.

Elliot followed her.

At the same time, the three managers had a private video call.

“Don’t you think Avery’s boyfriend looks like someone... Have you noticed it?

That man looks like Elliot Foster!”

“I’ve seen Elliot in person, but I was sitting in the back row at least a few hundred meters away from him.”

“Haven’t you two heard his voice before? That man, he sounds like Elliot.”

“We haven’t even met him before. How do you know what he sounds like?”

“It must be Elliot! I swear! No wonder she is stalling with Charlie. It looks like there is a better option!”

“If that’s the case, then Avery’s really impressive! She hid her ability and fame well, even secretly getting bigger deals!”

“I’ll have to apologize to Avery! I text her almost every day, accusing her of being ignorant!”

“There’s no need to be so anxious! Let me confirm with her if that man is Elliot!”

Avery was in her bedroom, battling a splitting headache. She had to lie down on her bed. Elliot, who saw her lying in bed, chose to lay down beside her. He turned off the light in the room.

Avery had her eyes closed, but she was breathing heavily. It meant she was in a bad mood.

Elliot said, “I’ve seen one of the three people in the video call with you just now.”

Avery looked at him sideways. “Who?”

Elliot answered, "The chubby guy with glasses."

Avery seemed indifferent. "Oh... So what if you met him before?"

Elliot replied, "I think he recognized me, so we can't hide our relationship anymore." After a pause, he continued, "I'll pay three hundred million. Tell Charlie and see if he follows." "Are you crazy!" Avery raised her foot and kicked him. "Do you think this is an auction!"

Chapter 101

Avery said solemnly, "Elliot, I'll not accept your money, so don't say such a thing

again."

"Why don't you want my money? Is my money any different from the money of others?" he sounded gloomy.

Avery hesitated before answering, "I don't want anyone's money, and I don't want to depend on others."

Avery's words made Elliot speechless.

"I'm going to sleep, don't disturb me."

Avery rolled over, turning her back to him. Looking at her slender back, Elliot covered her with the blanket, but she removed it immediately.

“I’ll use mine, and you’ll use yours. Don’t touch me.”

There were two blankets on the bed, and Elliot was covered with a thicker one, whereas Avery used a lightweight one. However, the heater in the room was turned on, so the space was warm.

“You should use the thick one, and I’ll use the thin one,” Elliot said kindly. He was relatively weak and felt cold, so he thought that she was cold too.

“Are you trying to give me a heatstroke?” Avery said bluntly, “Go to sleep. You have to go before my mom comes back tomorrow morning. You’re seriously affecting our lives by staying here.”

Elliot covered himself with the blanket. “Okay.”

Ten minutes later, Avery grabbed her phone and turned toward him. With the help of the light of her phone, she saw Elliot. His eyes were open, and they were dark and cold in the dim light.

“Why aren’t you sleeping yet? Are you cold?” Avery asked.

Elliot answered, "A little. Are you feeling warm?"

Avery was wearing a short-sleeved shirt, and she only covered her upper body with her blanket. It was as if they were both in different seasons.

"Don't mind me... I'll get you a blanket..." Avery sat up.

Elliot grabbed her and said, "Just give me half of yours."

"Oh..."

Avery gave him half of her blanket. However, now the only way she could cover herself was if she leaned toward him. Realizing this, she sat up again, trying to get the blanket.

"Don't move... I'm trying to sleep." He stretched out his long arms and pulled her back again.

Rosalie was sitting on the sofa at Elliot's mansion. She was so angry that she had even skipped dinner. After the driver returned from delivering Elliot's stuff, Rosalie began questioning him.

"Is the rental house small?"

The driver answered, "It's tiny. The whole house is not as big as the living room here.”

Rosalie glanced at the living room, and her blood pressure rose.

“When I left, Avery’s mother had already gone to stay at a hotel. Only Mr. Forester and Avery are in the house.”

“This Avery... Will she do anything terrible to Elliot?! Elliot’s so ill now. How can you leave him alone with her? Where’s the bodyguard?! The bodyguard must never leave him!” Rosalie was very concerned.

“It should be alright...” The driver stammered and explained, “I heard from the bodyguard that the two of them did... did it at noon... They should still have feelings for each other.”

Rosalie was shocked. “Elliot’s so sick! How can he still have the energy to do it!

Avery is indeed a vixen! I’m going to bring Elliot back! If he continues to stay with her, won’t he be exhausted!”

The driver cast a knowing gaze at Mrs. Cooper.

Mrs. Cooper immediately spoke to Rosalie. “If you go, I’m afraid that Mr. Elliot will turn against you. You should go back first, and I’ll ask the driver to pick him up tomorrow morning.

“I think you’ve been brainwashed by Avery too!” Rosalie shook off Mrs. Cooper’s arm.

Mrs. Cooper took two steps back, not arguing with Rosalie.

“Take me to where Avery lives. I’ll just stay outside and see, and I won’t go in!”

Rosalie said to the driver.

The driver immediately helped her.

Forty minutes later, Rosalie saw the old residential district where Avery lived, and she sat in the car, unable to hold back her tears.

Chapter 102

“My son has never lived in such a harsh environment since he was born...

Never! What type of karma is this! It’s all my fault! Why did I get Avery to be his wife? There are so many women, yet I chose this vixen!”

In the room, Elliot’s breathing gradually became stable. Avery reached out and touched his forehead. Even though Elliot was clammy, his temperature was normal. As she was afraid that he would wake up thirsty at night, she got out of bed and poured a glass of water, and placed it on the table beside him.

When Avery woke up the following morning, Elliot was nowhere to be seen. She picked up her phone and checked the time.

It was already past eight in the morning.

Elliot sent her a message just after six in the morning, (I slept well last night, so I'll leave first.

Avery's cheek instantly flushed. It was only a text from him, so why was she feeling warm? Then, she found the remote control and turned off the heater.

After washing up and leaving the room, Laura called her for breakfast.

"What's the situation between you and him now?" Laura passed her breakfast and utensils.

"What situation?" Avery pretended not to understand.

"Don't pretend to be puzzled. Don't you want to divorce him? I think the two of you can't be separated." Laura sat across from her and looked at her, adding,

"He doesn't want to divorce you at all, and he looks like he likes you a lot."

Avery sighed, "Mom, so what if he likes me? My value shouldn't be determined by a man.”

Laura was helpless. “But he won’t divorce you. What will you do?”

“If it really can’t work out. I’m going to study abroad.”

“That’s great!”

“Mom, let’s eat. The food won’t taste good if it’s cold.”

Avery felt that every breath she took was filled with his scent. After breakfast, she had to take a shower.

Elliot exited the bathroom wrapped in a towel. He walked to his closet and changed into his clothes before heading to the dining room for breakfast.

Mrs. Cooper was a little puzzled when she noticed that he was wearing fewer clothes. “Master

Elliot, aren’t you cold?”

“I’m not cold, and I feel better today.”

“That’s great! The doctor will come over later. Let him examine you.”

Elliot’s words shocked Mrs. Cooper. Before he had visited Avery yesterday, he looked haggard and sick, but today, he looked completely normal. Was taking all that medication not as effective as spending the day with Avery?

When Elliot showed up at the company, several executives could not help but follow him to his office.

“Mr. Foster, are you fully recovered? Wasn’t it quite serious?”

“Blah, blah, blah! Mr. Foster just had a cold and a fever. How serious could it be? Since he’s here at the company, it means that he’s almost healed.”

“That’s right! Mr. Foster, if you feel uncomfortable, you can go back and rest at any time. We’ll send you an email if there’s anything urgent with the company.

You can work from home.”

Elliot ignored their concern and turned to Chad. “Get Chelsea over.”

Chad called Chelsea immediately, and the others wisely retreated.

“Elliot, why did you come to work all of a sudden? Did the doctor allow you to come to work?” Chelsea was worried when she saw that he was looking unwell.

“Chelsea, your father’s birthday is coming up, right?”

Surprise flashed in Chelsea’s eyes, and she answered, “Yes, it’s this weekend. I didn’t tell you because you were sick.”

Elliot said, "I'll be there." Chelsea smiled, and her heart was full of joy.
"Okay! I was worried that you wouldn't go! My dad will definitely be pleased to see

you."

"Chelsea, I have a wife. I'm attending your dad's birthday party because your brother invited my wife," Elliot explained, destroying all of her fantasies.

Chapter 103

Chelsea's smile disappeared. "You've never had eyes for me, have you?"

Elliot replied, "Find someone who does."

Chelsea turned around and left.

In the evening, Chelsea was unhappy and asked Charlie out for a drink.

Charlie noticed that she was dispirited, and he said impolitely, "No man will like

you when you look like this."

Chelsea's eyes were red with anger. "I'm tired enough in public! Do I still need to put on an act in my own home?!"

Charlie poured her a glass of wine, comforting her, "Chelsea, we're still not on the same page as siblings. If you listen to me, you'll get everything."

Chelsea gulped down the wine and asked him with bloodshot eyes, "Can I get

Elliot?"

Charlie wrapped his long arms around her, leaned closer, and whispered in her ear, "You can't get him alive, but if he's dead, I can give you his ashes. This means you have him indirectly. How about that?"

Chelsea's face immediately dropped, and she pushed him away!

"Charlie! Are you f*cking crazy?! If you dare touch Elliot, you're my enemy!"

Bang!

Charlie slammed into the table behind him, and there was a sharp pain in his lower back. He hunched over, unable to straighten up..

"Charlie! I'm sorry! I didn't mean it!" Chelsea helped him up and apologized guiltily, "I didn't mean to quarrel with you... but Elliot's my bottom line. Don't be his enemy!"

"He's already an enemy..." Charlie gasped in pain. "He wants to take out three hundred million to invest in Tate Industries. Chelsea, do you think Tate Industries is worth three hundred million? He's provoking me!"

Chelsea froze.

“Are you serious? Why didn’t I hear the news?”

“Because he doesn’t trust you. Also, he deliberately asked someone to tell me the news. I guess he and Avery had a private conversation.” Charlie slowly sat down on the sofa with a painful expression. Then, he said, “Chelsea, get me some medicine.”

Chelsea went to the medicine cabinet, but her thoughts had drifted. Perhaps,

Elliot and Avery

would never get a divorce. Chelsea had never seen Elliot care so much for a woman. In fact, Elliot’s every act toward Avery was better than how he had treated her for the past ten years.

Chelsea had lost! She had been completely defeated!

Charlie’s father’s birthday party was held at the Tierney family’s hillside villa in Rosacus City’s Santa’s Elrich District. Since Avonsville was just next to Rosacus

City, it only took more than an hour to drive there.

Charlie called Avery early in the morning and wanted to drive to pick up her and Laura.

Avery politely declined, "My mother doesn't want to go, and I need to go back to the school today. Don't worry about me. You should head over first!"

Avery did not have anything planned, and Charlie also knew that she just did not want to be with him.

Charlie said, "Avery, come as early as possible. I have something to tell you."

Avery replied, "Alright... I have something to tell you too."

After hanging up, Avery went back to sleep. She had stayed up to complete her thesis, and she was rather sleepy.

0

It was noon and the Tierney Villa in Rosacus City, whose parking lot was several hundred meters wide, was filled with luxury cars.

Elliot entered the ballroom and started looking for Avery in the crowd.

"Avery's not here yet," Chelsea said. "Have you two made up? I thought you would come together."

Elliot answered calmly, "Maybe we'll get back together tomorrow."

Chelsea took him to his seat.

“I heard that you want to invest three hundred million in Tate Industries. Elliot, from a friend’s point of view, I think that’s very irrational of you.” Chelsea poured him a glass of warm water.

“How much I give her is a matter between her and me.” Elliot picked up the water glass and took a sip. “You don’t have to worry about my family affairs.”

Chelsea’s face became ashen.

Family affairs!

He could lightly say the three hundred million was a family affair!

V

“I’ll never express my opinion about you and Avery in the future!” Chelsea retorted.

Elliot scoffed. “You better keep your word.”

Chapter 104

Chelsea was speechless. She had mentally prepared herself the entire morning so that she would not be jealous of Avery when she saw Elliot.

However, her psychological defenses had collapsed!

Chelsea endured the pain and left the banquet hall.

Not far away, Charlie watched Elliot snub his sister again. What made it worse was she had been snubbed in her own house. It would be a lie if Charlie had said that it did not hurt him, and it would also be a lie if he had said that the situation had not embarrassed him.

Charlie wanted Elliot to compensate his sister for all ten years of her youth she had wasted on him.

After lunch, Elliot went to the guest room to rest. He did not expect Avery to arrive just yet. Did she not say being with Charlie was really comfortable? Was she lying to him?

When Elliot arrived at the guest room, he did not lie down. He was not very sleepy, and he only came here because he did not want to socialize. Later, he sent a text to his bodyguard. 1

(Call me when Avery arrives.)

After sending the message, Elliot put the phone on the table, and he took a book from the shelf next to him.

At about four in the afternoon, there was chatter outside the door.

“Do you know Avery Tate?”

“Of course. That’s the woman Young Master Charlie fancies!”

“That’s right. Young Master Charlie just asked me to prepare a woman’s daily necessities and bring them to his room. I think that Avery will be staying overnight.”

“When it comes to wooing women, our Young Master Charlie has never missed a beat! Do you know why he succeeds every time?”

“Why?”

“Our Young Master Charlie has a way of getting women to obey him! By-”

The sound outside the door suddenly became quieter. Following that, the footsteps were getting further away.

Elliot frowned and walked toward the door. At this time, his phone rang, so he turned around and answered the phone.

“Mr. Foster, Avery’s here. Charlie greeted her at the door, and he’s taking her to the south side now,” said the bodyguard.

“Follow her!”

“Mr. Foster, the Tierney family’s bodyguards are guarding the south side, and outsiders are not allowed to enter. I inquired about it, and the south side is where Charlie's father lives."

Elliot hung up. Then, he searched through his address book, found Avery's number, and dialed

"Avery, my father prefers a quiet space as he gets a headache when he hears the phone ringing and so on..." Charlie said to Avery.

Avery immediately replied, "I'll silence my phone."

"There's no need. Your cell phone should have no signal now. The signal is blocked in the area he lives in."

Avery was shocked. "Is your father's illness that severe?"

Charlie nodded. "We visited a lot of doctors but to no avail. In the end, we had to let him live in a tranquil place for him to feel better."

Avery asked, "Since he prefers peace, why's he throwing a birthday party?"

Charlie laughed. "It's not that he prefers peace, but it's because of his illness.

Before he got sick, he liked the crowd."

Avery nodded in understanding.

"Why does your dad want to see me alone? I'm a little nervous," Avery admitted uneasily.

Charlie replied, "Don't be nervous. He just wants to have a chat with you."

Charlie and Avery did not turn up at dinner, and Elliot had called Avery several times, but he did not receive a response. He had called Charlie but to no avail.

Heartbroken, Elliot came out of the banquet hall and strode toward the south area of the villa.

Chapter 105

Elliot was stopped by the Tierney family's bodyguards on his way to the south side of the villa.

"You can't go in there, Mr. Foster."

"Let me in!" Elliot roared with a savage fury. "My wife's inside!"

"Do you mean Miss Tate?" asked the bodyguard, then added, "She just went hiking with Mr. Tierney."

Elliot pursed his lips as his eyes turned into glacial orbs of ice colder than the abyss.

The bodyguard pointed in the direction of a hill not too far away and said, "They went that way, but it's already dark out, and it's a pretty steep walk. If you are unfamiliar with the path, I suggest you wait for them inside. I'm sure they'll be back soon."

Elliot clenched his fists, then he stormed up the hill.

In the living room in the south wing of the villa, after listening to Charlie's father's two-hour history lesson on the establishment of his company and his thoughts on Tate Industries, Avery was desperate to escape.

"Thank you for taking the time out to talk to me, Mr. Tierney. Since it's your birthday today, I'll speak to Charlie another time about business."

If Charlie's father were not the star of the night, she probably would not have been able to sit through his rambling for much longer.

Charlie glanced at his watch, then said to his father, "Get some rest, Dad. Avery and I are going to get something to eat."

As they walked out of the living room, Avery noticed the night sky and felt a peculiar surge of gloom rise inside of her.

Perhaps it was because it was her first time there, but she felt uneasy about the vast unfamiliar terrain that surrounded her.

•"I have no plans on accepting your investment, Charlie," Avery said as she finally mustered the courage to give Charlie her answer.

Charlie froze in his tracks, and the chivalry vanished from his face as he said,

“Why is that? Can you give me a clear reason?”

“It’s because you’re Chelsea’s brother. I cannot keep my peace of mind and accept your invitation,” said Avery bluntly.

“Did Elliot Foster say something to you? Are you planning on having him invest in your company instead?”

Charlie was not surprised by her answer, but he felt hurt nonetheless.

“I won’t be accepting any investment from him either,” Avery answered with calm eyes and a determined voice. “I have to catch the subway home, so I’m afraid I won’t be staying for dinner.”

She had accepted his invitation simply to give him her answer.

Now that she had cleared things up with him, it was time for her to go.

1

Charlie did not expect her to be so callous about the whole situation.

Her way of doing things was shockingly similar to that of Elliot.

Was that the reason they could not help but be attracted to each other?

Charlie grabbed onto Avery's arm, then said, "Have some dinner before you leave. Elliot is here, so he can take you home after. I'll worry otherwise."

Avery withdrew her arm and said, "I called a cab earlier. It should be here any minute now."

"Stay for dinner!" Charlie snapped. "There's no reason for our relationship to turn sour just because we won't be working together. I'm not your enemy,

Avery!"

Avery took a deep breath.

She never planned on being on bad terms with Charlie.

It was impossible for them to be friends, but she did not need another enemy in her life.

When Charlie escorted Avery back into the banquet hall and sat her down, Chelsea charged toward them with icy daggers shooting from her eyes.

She stopped in front of Charlie, then dragged him by the arm outside.

The sight of the Tierney siblings walking away made Avery lose her appetite.

Chelsea's expression earlier was strangely dark, as if something bad had just happened.

Avery glanced restlessly at her surroundings.

Apart from those at her table, the other guests did not seem to have noticed the siblings' odd behavior.

Charlie mentioned that Elliot was there, but why was he nowhere in sight?

Chelsea dragged Charlie out of the banquet hall, then yelled, "Where's Elliot, Charlie? Where the hell is he?!"

Chapter 106

Charlie patted down his wrinkled shirt, then snapped coldly, "I'm not his bodyguard, Chelsea! I don't have time to keep tabs on him! Go look for him yourself!"

Chelsea violently punched Charlie in the chest and shrieked, "I can't reach his phone, and I can't find him! His bodyguard doesn't know where he is either!

Stop pretending! You installed that signal blocker on purpose! This is all part of your crazy plan!"

Charlie clasped a hand over her mouth and he flung her over his shoulder with the other.

“Listen to me, Chelsea! I have to lock you in your room for now. You won’t suffer again after tonight!”

Back in the banquet hall, Avery shot to her feet.

The uneasiness in her heart rose as she took in the unfamiliar faces around her.

She pulled out her phone and noticed Elliot’s missed calls and text message which read: (Look for me when you see this! I’ll be in the banquet hall!]

Avery was in the banquet hall, but where was Elliot?

She tried calling him, but her call was immediately rejected.

Was the south wing not the only place with no signal?

With her suspicions rising, she walked out of the banquet hall to see a tall figure in black approaching her in a hurry.

“Did you see the boss?!” cried Elliot’s bodyguard with panic written all over his face.

“No! Isn’t he with you?!” Avery asked as her chest tightened and paranoid thoughts filled her mind. “I tried calling but I couldn’t reach him. There’s no signal here!”

“I bet Charlie Tierney used a signal blocker! I don’t know where the boss went. I didn’t even notice he was gone until Miss Chelsea ran over to ask me where he was!”

Avery clenched her fists tightly as she recalled the dark expression on Chelsea’s face when she had approached Charlie.

“Charlie... I’m going to look for Charlie!” Avery stammered.

“I’ll go with you!”

When they arrived at the south wing of the villa, Elliot’s bodyguard charged toward one of Tierney’s guards and grabbed his throat.

“Where is Charlie Tierney?! Take me to him!”

Avery immediately shoved the bodyguard aside and said, “How is he supposed to talk with you strangling him?!”

The bodyguard coughed violently and gasped, “How would I know where Mr.

Tierney is? I'm just in charge of guarding the south wing... I don't know anything..."

"Did you see Elliot Foster come by, then?" Avery pried.

She felt a strong sense of foreboding in her heart.

Elliot had tried calling her all afternoon and even sent her a text. He had been waiting for her the whole time.

He must have known where she was and came looking for her.

Noticing the change in the bodyguard's expression, Elliot's bodyguard kicked him to the ground and roared, "Where is my boss?! I'm running out of patience.

You have three seconds! Three... two..."

"He went up the hill!" cried the bodyguard as he pointed toward the dark outdoors. "He went that way!"

"F*ck! Why would he go up there? As if he'd run out in the dark!" yelled Elliot's bodyguard as he planted his foot on the guard's head. "Spit it out! F*cking tell

me!"

Avery's heart was thumping wildly in her chest and her eyes were brimming with tears.

It had not been long since Elliot stopped using his wheelchair.

He was in no shape to hike up that hill, especially not in pitch darkness.
“He...

He went up... To look for... Miss Tate,” stammered the Tierney guard before passing out.

Chapter 107

The villa was located halfway up the hill.

There was a winding but smooth road starting at the bottom of the hill that led straight to the villa.

From there onwards, however, there were no roads leading to the top of the hill.

It was already dark out when Elliot had begun his journey from the villa.

Using his flash as a torchlight, he hurried up the hill.

He was worried for Avery’s safety.

Charlie had bad intentions when it came to Avery, and he was terrified of what might happen to her if he was too late.

He would never have allowed Avery to come alone if he knew about Charlie’s

evil plans.

Half an hour later and Elliot was breathing heavily, but it was nothing compared to the hell his legs were going through.

His doctor had ordered him not to do any extraneous activities for the next six months.

He was only allowed to walk normally and not for long periods of time either.

Activities like hiking that wear out the knees were out of the question and carried extreme risks.

The cold wind rustled the leaves of the trees in the darkness.

Elliot was forced to come to a halt as he began to feel a sharp pain in the lower half of his body.

He tried to call his bodyguard, but there was still no signal.

He could make his way down the hill. The little energy he had left would allow him to do that much.

The thought vanished from his mind as quickly as it had appeared.

He powered through his discomfort and continued up the hill.

He had to find Avery and bring her safely down the hill.

It was at that moment that Elliot met with an accident...

His aching legs could no longer support him, causing him to lose his balance and fall backward.

As he fell, he did not think of how afraid he felt, nor did he think of death. The only thought in his mind was Avery's face.

Her smile, her tears, the way her brows furrowed when she was angry, her calm composure...

It was all Avery

Fear only struck him at the very end, when he thought of what Charlie Tierney might be doing to her!

He fell into a bottomless pit of darkness.

The sharp, blunt thuds that rang in his ears were the sounds of him hitting against hard rocks and branches.

He had no idea what he was falling into, nor did he know if this was how he would meet his doom.

"Elliot! Can you hear me? Elliot Foster!" Avery yelled at the top of her lungs into the silent darkness. "I didn't go up there! Elliot! I'm right here!"

“We’re coming for you, boss!” cried Elliot’s bodyguard. “Say something if you hear us! Say something! We’ll come get you!”

Their calls were met with nothing but an unsettling breeze and eerie silence.

The further Avery walked, the more terrified she became.

The path up the hill was impossibly steep!

She was only able to make her way up from holding on to the bodyguard’s arm.

With his legs still recovering, why would Elliot come to a place like this?!

Why would he dare?!

How could he?

Hot tears escaped from the corners of Avery’s eyes.

“Elliot!” she cried through gasping sobs.

The bodyguard felt Avery was slowing down his progress, so he shook her off and said, “Wait

•right here. I’ll go look for him!”

He then turned away and continued to walk up the hill.

Avery wiped the tears off her face and resumed her way up the difficult path.

She could not stand around and do nothing!

It was impossible!

She had to find Elliot!

She had to tell him herself that she did not walk up that hill! She had to tell him that, even if she did go there, he should not have taken such a big risk to go after her!

Was he not an intelligent person?

Where did all of his intelligence go?!

What about his reason?

Did everything disappear into thin air?! Avery's tears blurred her vision as she

Chapter 108

A glimmer of light not too far away suddenly grabbed Avery's attention.

She held up her phone and aimed the light in the direction of the glimmer.

At the bottom of the sprawling ravine was the clear silhouette of a man lying on the ground.

"Elliot!"

Avery let out a shrill cry before she got down on all fours and crawled toward the ravine.

“I’m coming, Elliot! Don’t be scared! You’ll be fine... You’ll be okay!”

Hearing her cries, the bodyguard yelled down the hill, “Did you find him?!”

“Yes! He fell! He’s covered in blood!” Avery yelled as she tried to contain her emotions. “Get over here!”

She took a deep breath and jumped down to where Elliot was.

Her foot slipped upon the sudden impact, which caused her to draw a sharp breath of pain.

She swiped the tears off her face and quickly scrambled to where Elliot was and took him into her arms.

“Elliot! Wake up! Don’t fall asleep! Stay awake!”

His cheeks were cold to the touch. Blew her warm air onto his face.

There was no signal up on the hill.

There was no way for them to call for help.

While Elliot’s bodyguard carried him on his back down the hill, Avery trailed along behind them, using a branch for support. Tears streamed down her face.

How did this happen?

Who was the one who told Elliot she was on the hill?

This was attempted murder!

If Elliot had fallen into a deeper ravine, and if nobody had been able to find him, he would have frozen to death within twenty-four hours!

Hot tears streamed down Avery's face when she thought of Elliot's close brush with death. She had been the reason he had gone up there in the first place.

After Elliot was rescued, two of the Tierney family's bodyguards walked into Charlie's room at the villa.

"We were waiting at the top of the hill for him the whole time, but he fell over before he even got to us!" reported one of the guards.

Charlie slammed his clenched fist on the table, then snapped, "What a weakling! He couldn't even climb up a d*mn hill! Why didn't he just fall to death?!"

"He got lucky! We took a look at where he fell. It was a pretty big ravine. Nobody would have found him if it was a narrow one!"

Charlie rubbed the space between his brows, then growled, "Nothing that happened tonight leaves this room! Get out!"

After the guards left, Charlie walked out of the room.

He got out the key to Chelsea's room and opened the door.

Chelsea's bloodshot eyes were filled with deep loathing.

"You killed him, didn't you? Was this what you meant by setting me free?! Didn't it occur to you that I'd gladly die with him?!"

Her eyes were swollen from crying, and she was holding a knife in her hand.

She was trembling uncontrollably.

If Charlie told her that Elliot was dead, she might just stab herself in the chest with that knife.

"He's a lucky man. He isn't dead, but I might just be," Charlie said as his expression turned dark. "He'll come after me when he wakes up. You should leave the house, Chelsea!"

The knife in Chelsea's hand clattered on the ground.

"Why did you have to go this far? Listen up, Charlie. Whenever you're up against Elliot Foster, you will lose every single time. Why don't you just accept your fate?”

Chelsea smirked coldly, then picked up her bag and stormed out of the room.

A week later, Tate Industries officially announced its bankruptcy and began its liquidation proceedings.

Since Avery had never accepted her father’s testamentary succession, Jack’s debt had nothing to do with her.

On the day the news broke, Avery had received a text message from Shaun.

[You’re going to hell for this!]

She turned her phone off after reading it.

There were limits to how much she could handle.

She did not have the time nor the energy to care about insignificant matters.

Elliot’s legs were severely injured.

He would be wheelchair-bound again once he was discharged from the hospital.

Avery never once visited him.

It was not that she did not want to, but she could not.

The Foster family’s bodyguards were constantly stationed in front of his hospital room's door, and they did not allow a soul to enter.

She could only receive news of his condition from Mrs. Cooper, who told her that Elliot's mood took a turn for the worse when he regained consciousness.

He refused to speak and did not want to be disturbed.

All Avery could do was wait. She was waiting for him to be willing to see her.

Chapter 109

Avery was cooped up at the library at Avonville University after having dinner on campus.

A sudden cheer made her look up from her book.

"It's snowing! It's the first snow of the year! Look, it's getting heavier! Let's go out and play!"

"Sure! I want to take some pictures!"

Half of the people in the library left.

Avery walked over to the window and looked out at the snow gracefully fluttering down from the sky.

It was a beautiful scene.

It was no wonder there was a saying that you shall surely succeed if you ask someone out during the first snow.

Things of beauty put everyone in a good mood, after all.

“Your phone’s ringing!” someone said as they came up behind Avery and tapped her on the shoulder.

She snapped out of her daze and said, “Oh, thank you!”

She then limped her way back to her seat.

Avery had not gone to the hospital to get her foot treated till much later.

The swelling was so bad that it was taking a while to heal.

Even so, none of this affected her daily life.

She picked up her phone and answered the call.

After hearing what the person on the other line had to say, Avery’s eyes lit up and her brows raised in excitement.

•The wide beam on her face did not disappear even after she hung up the phone.

Her luck was finally turning around.

Perhaps she had a guardian angel watching over her.

Avery packed her stuff, picked up her bag, and walked out of the building as fast as she could.

Her phone suddenly rang again, and she picked it up without hesitation.

“It’s snowing, Avery! Don’t tell me you’re still in the library!” Tammy said on the other end of the line.

“Tammy! I’ve decided to go to grad school!”

“What?! What happened?” Tammy exclaimed in shock. “Didn’t you say you weren’t going? What made you change your mind so suddenly?”

Her voice was so loud that Avery had to pull the phone further away from her ear.

“Do you know who Professor James Hough is?”

“No idea,” replied Tammy. “Is he some bigshot professor?”

“He is! He’s my hero! I just got a call from his assistant saying that the professor wants me to study under him...” Avery said as she burst into tears. “This is a dream come true... I still can’t believe he picked me...”

Tammy wanted nothing but to give her best friend a big bear hug.

“I’ve always said that you were meant for great things, Avery! Why didn’t you believe me? You believe me now, don’t you? Where are you right now?

Let’s go out and celebrate!”

Avery’s head was spinning from all of the excitement. She wiped the tears off her face, then said, “All I want to do now is go home and sleep. I’m beat.

Dinner’s on me next time!”

“Have you been having trouble sleeping?” Tammy asked. “I heard from Jun that Elliot was discharged today. You don’t have to worry about him. He’s got plenty of people looking after him, so I’m sure he’ll recover in no time.” ,

“I know,” Avery responded.

It was not that she was worried about his recovery, but she was crippled by guilt.

He would not have gotten hurt if it had not been for her.

Once the phone call ended, Tammy put her phone down and looked up at Jun.

“Avery’s going to grad school,” she said with a sigh. “She’ll probably have to leave the country. I looked up that professor she was talking about and found out that he works at a medical school abroad...”

“What the hell is going on with him anyway? Why won’t he see Avery? She was the one who found him when he fell down that hill... It wasn’t like she was the one who told him to go up there. How could he be upset with her?”

Tammy could not help but stand up for her best friend.

Jun wrapped his arm around Tammy’s shoulder, and the two slowly strolled under the falling snow.

Chapter 110

“I don’t think the reason why Elliot won’t see Avery is that he’s upset...” Jun said. “His bodyguard told me that his face was covered in scratches from the fall. I doubt someone as proud as him would want anyone seeing him in that condition.”

“So, that’s what it is! I have to tell Avery before she overthinks things,” Tammy said, then sent Avery a text telling her what she just heard from Jun.

Avery simply replied with a smiling emoji.

Tammy: (Elliot's birthday is coming up in a couple of weeks. Have you thought about what you 're getting him?]

Avery: (Not yet. I don't know what to give him.)]

Tammy: (Since it's getting cold out, you should try knitting him a sweater!)

Avery: (Are you serious? Who wears knitted sweaters anymore?!]

Tammy: (Just do it. Men like stuff like that.)

Avery: (Problem is, I don't know a thing about knitting!)

Tammy: (The people selling the yarn would teach you! Or you could look for tutorials online You're a smart girl. You'll figure it out!)

Avery: (Why are you insisting that I knit him a sweater?]

Tammy: (Because men always fall for that stuff! Jun told me that he still can't forget his first love because she knitted a sweater for him. He's kept it all this time... It drives me nuts, but I refuse to knit him one myself!)

Avery stood puzzled in the snow as she read her best friend's text.

She only snapped back to reality when the cab she had called earlier came to a halt in front of

her.

She arrived at her mother's apartment with a bag of yarn in her hand an hour later.

Laura noticed the bag in her hand and asked, "Are you knitting a scarf?"

Avery's cheeks flushed as she answered, "I'm thinking of making a sweater."

Laura gave her a meaningful look and asked, "For whom? It can't be for me, right? Are you knitting it for Elliot?"

"It's for you, Mom..." Avery said, then added, "Elliot's birthday is coming up, so I'm making one for him first. That way, the one I make for you later would be much better."

"I'm just messing with you!" Laura chuckled. "Is it still popular to knit sweaters for someone you like now? I thought that was just back in my day..."

"Tammy said it's a thing."

"I see. I guess this old trend is making a comeback! Do you know how to knit?

It's going to take quite some time. Do you need my help?"

Avery shook her head and said, "I've got two weeks to go. I should be able to manage."

Elliot was sitting in his wheelchair on the second-floor balcony of his mansion.

He was staring at the falling snow.

His mind had been blank for the past few days. His heart also felt empty.

It was as if all of the pain and agony before had come to a pause.

He did not feel like seeing anyone, nor did he want to hear a sound.

The only thought that crossed his mind came when his aching body made him think of how things would have turned out if he had fallen to his death.

It was clear to him that nothing would have changed.

The earth would continue to turn.

Those who cried for him would slowly return to their daily lives.

There was nobody in the world who would not be able to live on if someone left.

However, at the end of the day, there was still something that he could not let go of.

He had to stay alive.

His hands tightened around the armrests of his wheelchair as his entire body stiffened.

A tear escaped from the corner of his eye and rolled down his cheek.

Rosalie was sitting in the living room with the doctor standing by her side.

“I’m afraid the accident has caused a recurrence of Elliot’s depression,” reported the doctor.

Rosalie let out a heavy sigh and said, “I thought so. He refuses to talk, and now he’s locked himself up.”

Chapter 111

“I prescribed some medication to help, but he won’t take them,” said the doctor with a frown. “He won’t get better if he continues to refuse help.”, “I’ll talk to him tomorrow,” said Rosalie.

“I heard that he listens to Miss Avery. Maybe we should—”

“Absolutely not!” Rosalie snapped furiously. “She’s the reason my son is like this. That woman brings nothing but bad luck!”

The doctor did not argue.

His only responsibility was to Elliot's health.

"I know you didn't mean to take her side..." Rosalie said as she tried to quickly reach a compromise. "Let's see if he listens to me tomorrow."

She only hoped for her son's speedy recovery.

Everything else could wait.

After Avery took a shower, she walked to the window and looked outside.

The snow on the ground looked like a layer of silver powder that illuminated the night.

She felt a strange compulsion rise within her.

She picked up her phone and wanted so badly to give Elliot a call.

She wanted to hear his voice.

After some thought, she was afraid that he would not answer her call, so she decided to send him a voice message instead.

Even if she could not hear his voice, she wanted him to hear hers and know that she was thinking of him.

Avery sent the message, then walked to the living room, took out the bag of yarn, and began to knit.

With the world around her stuck in silence, she became immersed in her task.

Elliot was startled awake from a nightmare in the middle of the night.

His forehead was covered in sweat and his eyes were filled with an unusual restlessness.

These days, he was having nightmares of himself dying every night.

The most terrifying part of the dreams was that he was always an incomplete corpse that was reduced to an unrecognizable mess of blood and flesh.

In those dreams, he was rotting away, surrounded by flies and maggots.

He hated himself more every time he woke up.

Elliot picked up his phone and looked at the time.

His fingers accidentally opened the text message notification on the home page, and his eyes met Avery's profile picture.

He opened the message with trembling hands and played her voice message.

"It's snowing outside, Elliot. Did you see? I heard you went home today. I hope you get well soon! I wanted to call, but I was afraid of bothering you. Which is why I'm sending this instead. Here's a photo of the snow on our side!"

Elliot clicked on the photo she had sent and saw the beautiful, snowy scenery.

His throat tightened as the revulsion from the trauma subsided, temporarily.

He played Avery's voice message over and over again and allowed the gentle ring of her voice to slowly chase away the demons in his heart.

A week later, Elliot showed up at the headquarters of Sterling Group.

He was in his wheelchair with a light blanket over his legs.

His face was as aloof and regal as ever, while he emanated an unapproachable aura.

Other than the fact that he was wheelchair-bound, there was almost no evidence that he had a near-death experience only a few weeks ago.

When Elliot entered his office, his assistant, Chad immediately briefed him on his work schedule.

Once he was briefed, Chad asked, "Do you want anything to drink, sir? Coffee?

Some milk, maybe?" "Coffee," Elliot said, then added, "Call Chelsea over."

Chapter 112

"Yes, sir," Chad responded.

Soon after, a cup of coffee was placed in front of Elliot.

As Chad exited the room, he bumped into Chelsea who was on her way over.

She was not wearing any makeup, and her face looked unusually haggard.

Chat approached her, intending to speak to her, but in the end, he said nothing.

Chelsea entered Elliot's office and shut the door behind her.

"I'm sorry, Elliot," she said in a hoarse voice as she stood in front of Elliot.
"This

was all due to my brother's scheme. He knew that you were still recovering, he made you go up that hill. It's an especially steep hill. We don't usually go up there ourselves. He wanted you dead."

Elliot stared silently at her pale face, then said, "I know."

"I'm sorry. He won't apologize to you. He already left the country," Chelsea said through the lump in her throat. "Please forgive my family, Elliot. My father's getting old, and I'm afraid he won't be able to handle the backlash. If you have to punish someone, then punish me. I'll take it all without question."

Elliot continued to stare at her in silence.

It was as if he was seeing her for the first time.

She always had on the most immaculate makeup and only presented her best self to him.

“I appreciate how you’ve stayed by my side all these years, Chelsea,” he finally said in a soft voice that was void of emotion. “Leave the company and never appear in front of me again. If you can do that, then I’ll leave your family alone.”

Tears streamed down Chelsea’s face as she digested Elliot’s words.

It was over!

Things were completely over between them!

She took a deep breath and tried to hold back her tears, but they were uncontrollable, and they continued to escape her eyes.

She took one final, deep look at Elliot, then turned and ran out of the room.

Once Chelsea was out of the building, it was Ben’s turn to walk into Elliot’s office.

He knew that Elliot would not want to hear a word about Chelsea, so he did not mention her.

“Your birthday is coming up next week, Elliot. If you don’t want to have a party at a hotel,

then let's organize something small at home," Ben suggested.

Elliot took a sip of his coffee, then said coldly, "Forget it."

He hated crowds and never celebrated his birthday.

"Avery already prepared your birthday present, though. How is she supposed to give it to you if you don't have a party? You should know that what she's giving you isn't something you can get with money," Ben said, throwing out the bait.

Elliot wanted to pretend like he did not care, but the look in his eyes gave him away

"She knitted a sweater for you! She's been working on it all day and all night just so she could get it ready in time for your birthday," Ben continued. "Don't you want to see it for yourself? I don't think any girl has ever knitted you a sweater with their own hands before!"

Elliot did not like wearing sweaters because he found them troublesome.

The long process of knitting a whole sweater was even more troublesome!

In his eyes, it was foolish of anyone to do something like that.

However, he would never call Avery foolish.

If she gave him a sweater, he would accept it.

“I know you don’t like crowds,” Ben said. “It’ll just be lunch with a few of the guys.”

Elliot’s brows furrowed, and Ben realized that he had forgotten to mention the most important guest.

“Oh, of course, Avery would be there, too,” he added quickly. “Since she’s already prepared a gift for you, she’ll definitely join us. Should we do it at your place or at a restaurant?”

“Restaurant,” Elliot replied curtly.

“Got it! I’ll go make the reservation right away! Should I let Avery know or will

you?”

“You do it.”

Ben stroked his chin and said, “Haven’t you two been in touch at all? Why not?

Jun told me that she kept wanting to go see you...”

“She never did,” Elliot said in a muffled voice.

One could tell just from his breathing that he was upset.

Ben never expected that Elliot was always waiting for Avery to make the first move.

“I bet she’s been busy knitting your sweater! It’s not exactly an easy task, plus it’s her first time making one... Now that I think about it, didn’t you hate wearing sweaters?” At that thought, Ben let his thoughts run wild and added, “Why don’t you give it to me once she’s done knitting it? I’ve never worn a hand-knitted sweater before!”

Elliot’s expression remained still as he said, “You remembered wrong. I love wearing sweaters.

Chapter 113

Elliot was lying through his teeth, but Ben had no reply.

of all the years they had known each other, Ben had never once seen Elliot in a sweater.

Although, perhaps a sweater that Avery knitted for him was much more meaningful than one that was bought with money,

“Your mom called me saying your nephew was discharged from the hospital,”

Ben said. "She wants you to go home for dinner tonight."

"She can tell me that herself," Elliot said.

"Did she upset you recently? She was pretty cautious when she talked to me earlier. Don't be mad at your mom, Elliot. There's nothing like a mother's love in this world"

"Please stop talking."

Ben burst into laughter.

"Do you want to go back to the old mansion for dinner with Avery?"

Elliot thought for a moment, then said, "Didn't you say she's been busy knitting?"

"That's true! There's only a week left. I wonder how she's doing."

When Elliot arrived at the old mansion that night, Rosalie was beside herself with joy.

Everyone else, on the other hand, had different levels of caution on their faces.

Elliot's cold gaze fell on Cassandra.

"She's Avery's sister, Cassandra Tate..." Rosalie explained when she saw her son staring at their guest. "I didn't like her at first, but she's been taking care of Cole after he got hurt..."

Cassandra grew apprehensive under Elliot's unwavering gaze.

She mustered up the courage to greet him and said, "Nice to meet you, Sir. I'm Avery's sister. I thought that you'd be coming with her tonight!"

Elliot ignored her and shifted his gaze to Cole's haggard and sluggish face.

The time he had spent at the hospital was the most agonizing period of his life.

"I broke up with Avery half a year ago, Uncle Elliot. She hated me after she found out that I was seeing Cassandra. There was no way that I would be able to devise a plot to keep her by your side," explained Cole desperately.

"I could tell," Elliot said, then added after a brief pause, "I'm afraid you don't have the ability to rule Avery Tate."

Avery's unique personality prevented anyone from controlling her.

"Insult me however you want. As long as you're happy," Cole said humbly.

"I'd be happy if you shut your mouth," Elliot said bluntly.

Cole remained silent.

His finger reattachment surgery went well, but he was not fully recovered yet and had to depend on Cassandra to feed him.

The tension remained strained throughout the night's dinner.

Noticing the rigid silence, Cassandra decided to lighten the atmosphere.

"We had a credible fortune teller predict Avery's future for us before," she said.

"They told us that Avery would bring bad luck to her husband... I bet your recent accident was because of her.

As Elliot raised his eyes to look at her, his gaze chilled her to the bone.

"I'm a pretty good fortune teller myself. I'll predict your future right now... You won't live long."

Cassandra's fork fell from her hands and clattered to the floor.

Sensing her son's rage, Rosalie called for the bodyguard and said, "Throw her out!"

Cole was upset that Cassandra was being kicked out.

"Grandma—"

"Shut up! Feed yourself or don't eat at all! I never liked that girl! She'll be nothing but trouble for you!"

Cole did not say another word and proceeded to try his best to pick up his fork with his injured hand.

Elliot pulled out a check from his pocket, slid it across the table to his brother, and said, "This is for taking care of Mother, Henry. Take it."

•Rosalie lived with Henry, so Elliot would regularly give his brother some money to cover expenses.

Henry was hesitant.

He wanted to accept the money, but he could not help but feel humiliated. It was a child's duty to take care of their mother, after all.

Chapter 114

Cole's previous run-in with loan sharks had forced Henry to cough up a huge sum of money.

"Since Elliot's offering, just accept it!" Henry's wife, Olivia, chimed in. "We're all family here. There's no need to be so formal with Elliot."

Henry's face turned crimson. He picked up the check and said, "You don't need to do this again, Elliot."

“I’m done eating,” Elliot said. “I’ll leave now.”

Rosalie got up and sent him off.

Once they were out of the house, Cole’s fork fell heavily onto the floor.

“Dad! Why did you take his money?!”

He felt humiliated.

He hated being treated like charity.

“How dare you, you spineless piece of sh*t?!” Henry roared furiously.

“Return to me all the money that I had spent to discharge your loans if you can!”

Olivia joined her husband in chastising her son and said, “Your uncle may look down on us, but there’s no reason why we shouldn’t accept free money! Do you know how much he just gave us? Eight hundred thousand dollars! Your dad’s company wouldn’t even be able to make that much in a year!”

“Are our finances really that bad?” Cole asked with bloodshot eyes.

“What did you expect? Most of our customers only work with us as a favor to your uncle. They stopped working with us during the second half of the year...”

Olivia sighed. “It’s a good thing for you that Cassandra has no clue as to our situation. I'm afraid she won't be rushing to take care of you if she finds out we're barely getting by."

This was a huge blow to Cole.

His injured hand clenched into a tight fist, but he felt no pain.

He had been living in his own fantasy the entire time.

Now that the walls of that dream world were crumbling, he had no choice but to face the cruel reality.

In the blink of an eye, it was the day of Elliot's birthday party.

Avery woke up early in the morning, checked on the gift she prepared, then began to get ready for the day.

On the other side of the city, Elliot was taking out a t-shirt from his closet.

It would not be convenient to wear a sweater over a button-down shirt.

What if the sweater Avery made was fitted?

Elliot and Avery arrived at the restaurant at ten in the morning.

They were there early because Ben had called them individually beforehand.

He had told them to hurry as the other party had arrived.

It was not until they had arrived did they realize that they were the only ones

there.

Avery secretly gave Elliot a once-over.

The bruises on his face had already healed, and he looked rather handsome.

She could not tell how his legs were doing since he was in his wheelchair.

He was dressed in nothing but a t-shirt and a light jacket.

As Avery was examining him, Elliot was also inspecting her.

She was wearing makeup, but it did not cover the dark circles under her eyes.

It appeared that she had truly dedicated herself to knitting the sweater.

“I knitted a sweater for you... I wasn’t sure about your measurements so I made it a little bigger...” Avery said as she passed him the paper bag she was holding.

Elliot lowered his gaze, took the bag from her, and pulled out the sweater.

It was a cream-colored sweater made from thick yarn, so it felt slightly heavy in his hands.

It would probably feel extra warm on him.

He took off his jacket and put the sweater on in front of her.

Avery’s cheeks flushed slightly.

Not only did Elliot not find her gift lame, but he had also chosen to wear it the moment she gave it to him. "Happy birthday, Elliot Foster."

Chapter 115

Elliot glanced up at Avery's face, then said in a hoarse voice,

"Thank you."

The sweater felt more comfortable and warm than he had expected.

Avery was shocked by how good he looked in it.

She could not decide if it was the quality of the sweater, or if he was just that good looking. She picked up the paper bag and pulled out a gift box.

"I also got you this just in case you didn't like the sweater," she said.

Elliot stared at the box in her hand.

"It's a lighter," Avery explained quickly. "I didn't know what else to get you so I got this. It's practical and you could probably use it. You shouldn't smoke too much, though. It's bad for you."

Then, she placed the box in Elliot's hands.

Elliot opened the box, pulled out the lighter, and sparked a light.

"I'm not a heavy smoker," he said in a sultry voice. "I only smoke when I'm stressed out."

Avery's brows raised in surprise as she said, "You were always smoking when I was living at your place."

"That's because you were always driving me mad," Elliot answered.

Avery had no answer for that.

"Let's go out for some air," Elliot said.

He was feeling a little warm.

The heater was on in the restaurant and drops of sweat were beginning to form on his forehead.

"Sure. Let me help," Avery said as she made her way behind Elliot's wheelchair.

"It's fine. It's an electric wheelchair," Elliot said as he began to roll out of the building at the push of a button.

Avery caught up to him and said, "You always had your bodyguard wheel you around before."

"There was no need for me to do anything while they were around."

"I could help you, too..."

"It's fine."

"I want to," Avery said, then grabbed onto the handles of the wheelchair and pushed Elliot outside. "How are your legs? What did the doctors say?"

"The right one's bruised, and the left one's broken."

Avery felt a sharp pang in her heart.

"Did it hurt a lot?"

"It was okay."

The cold air welcomed them as they exited the building.

Avery wheeled Elliot to the side of the road, then placed her coat over his legs.

"Why didn't you reply to my message?" she said after finally finding the courage.

She had found it hard to sleep for a few nights when she had not received a reply to her message.

Their faces were close, and their breaths intermingled.

Elliot did not want to tell Avery that he had a relapse and that he had only recently become stable after a few weeks of antidepressants.

After that, he found out from Ben that Avery was busy knitting a sweater for him, so he did not want to bother her.

"Forget it. I guess it didn't warrant a reply anyway. It was the first snow of the year, so I impulsively sent you a message,” Avery said.

She got to her feet, then moved to the back of the wheelchair and wheeled it along the street.

“Why didn’t you come to see me?” Elliot asked suddenly.

“Jun said you were too proud. I was afraid that you wouldn’t want to see me until the scratches on your face recovered.”

“You only sent me one message the whole time.”

“You didn’t respond the first time, so I thought you didn’t want to hear from me.”

“I did, though,” Elliot croaked.

“What?” Avery asked in bewilderment as her heart began to race. “Elliot, what did you—”

“There’s a bakery over there,” Elliot interrupted as he pointed at a store in front of them, changing the subject. “I feel like eating cake.”

Avery’s attention was successfully diverted.

“Oh, let’s go get a cake, then!” she said, then added after a brief pause, “Didn’t you hate dessert?”

“That’s true. Birthdays should be a little more special.”

At the bakery, the shop readily offered her assistance and asked them to pick a cake. Elliot glanced at Avery and said, “You pick.”

“Should we get a mousse cake?” Avery asked. “A butter cake might be too sweet.”

Elliot turned to the shop assistant and said, “We’ll take the mousse cake.”

“Of course, Sir,” responded the shop assistant. “What size would you like?”

Elliot turned back to Avery again and asked, “What size should we get?”
“How

many people are coming to the party?” Avery asked.

Chapter 116

“I have no idea,” Elliot said. “Don’t worry about them.”

“Let’s get a bigger one, then!” Avery said. “Ten inches, maybe?”

Elliot turned to the shop assistant and said, “Ten inches.”

“Sure thing. Are you guys on a date? You look cute together,” said the shop assistant with a smile.

A wave of embarrassment washed over Avery’s face, turning her porcelain skin ruby red.

On the other hand, Elliot glanced at the desserts on display and asked, “Do you want to get anything else to bring home?”

“Go ahead and get something for your mother.” Avery noticed the rosy tint in Elliot’s cheeks, chuckled to herself, then said, “Sure! I’ll get something.”

They left the bakery an hour later.

Elliot was holding the cake with an uneasy expression on his face.

There were not many people out on the streets.

The weather was cold, but the warmth that surrounded him helped him fight the chill.

When they arrived at the restaurant, all the other guests were waiting for them in the private room.

Upon Avery and Elliot’s arrival, the noisy atmosphere instantly turned silent.

Elliot’s cream sweater took years off of his age.

The cake he was holding also clashed with his image.

Everyone knew that he never ate dessert.

Ben cleared his throat and approached the couple.

“Did you guys go and get a cake? I brought one, too, but it’s not as big as this one.”

Avery felt uncomfortable under the crowd’s gaze and explained; “He said he felt like eating cake, so we went and got one.”

Ben coughed and asked, “Elliot said he wanted to eat cake?”

“Yes,” Avery said. “Is everyone here? I’ll unbox the cake, then.”

While Avery walked off with the cake, Ben reached out to touch Elliot’s sweater and said, “It feels pretty soft. Miss Tate is quite talented! Don’t you feel a little warm wearing that in here? Let me take it off for you.”

Elliot slapped Ben’s hand awake and hissed, “Don’t touch me.”

Ben grinned, then wheeled Elliot to his seat at the table.

After Avery placed the cake on the table, Ben instructed the waiters to serve their food.

Elliot picked up the candles in the cake box and arranged them on the cake one by one.

The whole room watched him in awed silence.

When did Elliot Foster become this carefree?

Did he not say that he hated birthdays?

The way he was behaving, it looked like he was actually enjoying himself!

Once he was done arranging the candles, Elliot pulled out a lighter and lit it.

Everyone stared at the spark in a daze.

“Don’t people usually light candles at night?” Avery asked awkwardly.

Ben walked over to the windows and drew the curtains, then said, “No worries!

Anytime is fine as long as Elliot feels like it!”

The room was drowned in darkness the moment the curtains were drawn.

Ben was an expert at analyzing Elliot’s thoughts and emotions, so once Elliot had lit the candles on the cake, Ben asked, “Is that a new lighter, Elliot? Let me light a cigarette.”

Elliot shoved the lighter back in his pocket, then responded childishly, “It’s from

Avery.”

“You gave him two presents, Miss Tate? How sweet!” praised Ben.

Avery was flushed with embarrassment.

She changed the subject and said, "Let's sing a birthday song!"

As she began to sing, the rest of the crowd joined in.

At the end of the song, Elliot shut his eyes and made a wish.

Avery was lost in thought as she stared at Elliot's handsome face illuminated in candlelight. She wondered what wish he would make.

Chapter 117

Soon after, Elliot opened his eyes and blew out the candles on the cake.

The curtains were pulled back, and light flooded the room once more.

"What did you wish for, Elliot?" Ben asked with a grin.

"Do you always reveal your birthday wishes to people?" Elliot countered.

The room burst into laughter.

Elliot cut a slice of cake and placed it in front of Avery.

"You should eat the first slice," Avery said as she pushed the cake back to him.

"I can't eat that much," Elliot replied.

He picked up a fork, took a bite out of the slice, and pushed it back to Avery.

It was as if they were immersed in their own world, separate from the rest of the room.

The crowd began to roar and make fun of them.

“Should we start calling Miss Tate Mrs. Foster now?”

“Why don’t you give it a try? I don’t think the boss would mind!”

“Hahaha! Miss Tate wouldn’t mind either, right?”

Avery was so embarrassed and uncomfortable that her ears and the back of her neck turned red.

“Quit it, all of you,” Elliot ordered.

“Sure, sure... Let’s eat cake!”

The cake was moved to the other side of the table, sliced up, and distributed.

Once they were done with the cake, lunch officially began.

•“Would you like some wine, Miss Tate?” Ben asked as he held up a bottle of wine.

Avery shook her head and said, “Water is good enough for me.”

“We can’t have that! What about juice or a glass of milk?”

“Water is fine.”

Avery felt a little dizzy.

It was likely due to the fact that she had woken up too early that morning.

On top of that, since everyone else was drinking, the faint scent of alcohol permeated the entire room.

After Ben poured Avery a glass of water, he noticed that she was not eating.

“Are you feeling uncomfortable, Miss Tate? There’s no need for that. Everyone here has known Elliot for a long time. We’re like a band of brothers!” Ben said in an attempt to help Avery relax.

Avery lifted her heavy eyelids and said truthfully, “That’s not it. I’m just feeling a little tired after all of that cake.”

Ben shot to his feet and said warmly, “I’ll take you to the guest room to rest.”

Elliot placed his hand on top of hers that was resting on the table, stared straight at Ben, and said, “I’ll take her.”

Someone yanked Ben away and dropped him back in his seat.

Ben was a mess of laughter and tears. “Don’t forget to come back! I still plan on having a drink with you, Elliot!”

Avery withdrew her hand from Elliot’s warm grasp and said, “The waiter can take me. You stay and eat.”

“I’ll take you,” Elliot insisted in an especially stubborn tone.

Avery felt that there was something different about him after the accident.

She used to despise his domineering and obsessive behavior, but she now found herself unable to refuse him.

She knew that no matter how bad he looked, he would never hurt her.

Avery wheeled Elliot out the door, and the two quickly disappeared from the room.

“Who would’ve thought that the boss could be so caring toward a woman? I always thought that he had no interest in women at all!”

“He just never met the right woman before this. Avery Tate’s got him wrapped around her finger!”

“Are you sure it isn’t the other way around? Why would she knit him a sweater otherwise? I doubt many women are willing to do that nowadays.”

“What are you guys going on about?” Ben exclaimed, interrupting the heated debate. “They’re hooked on each other. I bet Elliot’s developed feelings for Avery, and Avery’s started to pay more attention to him, too... If Avery decided to be a little more selfish, Tate Industries wouldn’t have gone bankrupt. Elliot wanted to give her three hundred million dollars to help, but she rejected it. Would any of you be able to refuse that amount of money?"

Everyone shook their heads violently.

"No wonder the boss likes her so much. He might never find another woman who treats money like it's nothing but sh*t!"

"Watch your mouth! What are you doing talking about sh*t while we're eating?!"

"Hahaha! Let's bet on whether or not Elliot's coming back to lunch," Ben proposed. "I bet he won't!"

The rest of the room agreed and said, "I bet the same." How were they supposed to carry on with a bet like this?

Chapter 118

At the door to the guest room, Avery said, "I'll take you back to the room. I can come back here to rest after that. I'll join you after I wake up."

Elliot entered the room and said, "I'm tired, too."

Avery was stunned.

"You didn't eat anything! You should go eat,"

"Drop it. Get some rest."

How could Avery possibly drop this?

She did not feel good about letting him starve on his birthday.

She rushed back to the private room to get Elliot something to eat.

Everyone in the room happily helped her.

“Get some more meat, Miss Tate! You have to make sure he eats it all! He lost

so much weight

“We’ll leave the boss to you, Miss Tate! Take care of him for us!”

“Get some rest after you eat, Miss Tate. We won’t bother you at all!”

Avery left the room with flushed cheeks and returned to the guest room with a tray of food.

Elliot was texting someone.

Avery placed the tray of food in front of him.

“Don’t you want to take the sweater off? It looks like you’re sweating,” she said.

“I shouldn’t have used such thick yarn.”

Elliot placed his phone down, then took off his sweater.

.”I can use it as a coat.”

Avery took the sweater from him and hung it in the closet.

“I got a bunch of food for you,” she said. “Eat as much as you can.”

She then sat down on the bed and watched his slender back.

It was true that he had lost quite a bit of weight. On the other hand, her own weight was steadily increasing.

She was already five months pregnant at this point,

Her appetite was getting better. She was watching her diet, but she could not prevent her weight from increasing, not with the two growing babies within her.

Avery had planned on helping Elliot get in bed after he was done eating, but she fell asleep before he was done.

Elliot finished his food, then made his way over to the bed.

He watched Avery's tired, sleeping face, and could not help but gently caress her cheeks.

By the time Avery woke up from her deep slumber, it was dark outside.

She shot up and saw Elliot sitting in his wheelchair, with his deep, dark eyes staring straight at her.

Avery blushed, then took a deep breath and asked, "Don't... Don't tell me you were watching me sleep the whole time?"

A tint of redness appeared on Elliot's face.

He changed the subject and said, "Are you hungry? It's seven now. I told them to carry on with dinner. Let's eat something else.

Avery agreed, then went to the bathroom to wash her face.

The night brought with it a drastic drop in temperature in Avonsville.

Avery felt chilled to the bone as she wheeled Elliot outside.

"Let's get some ribs!"

"Sure," Elliot responded.

There were not many people on the streets, but they were surrounded by a plethora of restaurants.

Avery, who did not have lunch earlier, was now suddenly overcome by a wave of hunger.

"Look, it's cotton candy! Wait here. I'm going to go get one. I haven't had it in forever!" Avery said, then made her way toward the cotton candy stall up ahead.

Elliot smiled softly at the sight of Avery's excitement.

Moments later, Avery was grinning from ear to ear as she held the cotton candy in her hands.

Suddenly, she saw a black car speeding at an alarming rate from the corner of her eye, and it was clearly charging in Elliot's direction!

The cotton candy fell from her hands as she ran with all her might towards Elliot, her shrilling cry echoing in the cold air... "Elliot! Look out!"

Chapter 119

The boom of a gunshot pierced through the night followed immediately by the sound of car tires coming to a screeching halt.

Avery felt like her eardrums were about to burst as she held tightly onto Elliot.

Tears were streaming down her face as her body shook uncontrollably.

The tires of the black sedan had been blown up.

It had swerved and crashed into the cotton candy stand that Avery had purchased cotton candy from.

Elliot had his arms wrapped around Avery as he watched the car from the corner of his eyes.

Someone was trying to kill him but had failed.

Then came the sound of another gunshot.

This time the gun had been pointed at the driver's seat.

Avery and Elliot were surrounded by cries of terror as people scattered and sought shelter from the danger

Avery's skin was cold to the touch.

Elliot cradled her face in his hands, stared at her terrified face, and said hoarsely, "Don't be scared. It's over now."

Avery's chest rose and fell at a frantic pace. Uncertainty flickered in her eyes, but she kept her gaze fixed on his face.

"Elliot... Elliot..."

There was so much that she wanted to say, but nothing except his name escaped her lips.

"I'm fine, Avery."

Elliot picked up her hand and placed her palm against his cheek, then said, "It's warm, isn't it?

Avery nodded and tears continued to stream down her face.

"I'm so scared... I don't want you to die..."

"I'm invincible! Nobody can take my life away unless I allow them," Elliot said as he held her hand tightly in his. "Let's go for ribs."

Avery grabbed onto the handles of his wheelchair and quickly wheeled him into a nearby restaurant.

They had not been sitting for long before Ben and the others rushed over.

“Are you okay, Elliot?” he asked as he sat down next to Elliot. “I knew someone was coming for you when I heard that d*mned gunshot!”

“I’m fine,” Elliot answered. “Let’s eat.”

He picked up a piece of meat and placed it on Avery’s plate.

She was much more settled than she had been earlier.

“Who shot the gun?” she asked as she glanced at Elliot.

She probably would not be having ribs here with Elliot if someone had not blown up the tires on that black sedan.

“We buffed up security after Elliot’s last accident. There was a bodyguard on the roof of the building where we were eating earlier,” Ben explained.

“I see...”

“You must have been terrified, Miss Tate,” Ben said, then passed her a bowl of soup and said, “This will calm you down.”

“I’m not hungry.”

All of the hunger Avery felt earlier had escaped her body.

“I bet you aren’t.” Ben chuckled, then said, “Let’s get the driver to send two home!”

Elliot glanced over at Avery.

“Why are you looking at me?” Avery asked.

Elliot pulled out his phone and began typing.

As Avery was wondering about his strange behavior, she received a text message on her phone.

She picked it up and read his text.

(Do you want to know what I wished for earlier?)

Avery felt like her phone was heating up in her hand!

They were sitting right across from each other, but he sent her a text?!

She wanted to look up at him, but she was too embarrassed with all eyes on the both of them.

Avery: (Tell me if you want.)

Elliot: (I wished that you would come home with me.)

Avery was baffled.

Elliot: [My birthday wish is that you would come home with me.]

Chapter 120

Avery placed her phone on the table.

Her mouth suddenly felt dry, so she picked up the bowl of soup that Ben had passed her. Ben knocked on the table, then said, "Hey! Do you two think we don't know you're secretly texting each other right now?"

Avery was afraid that Elliot would blurt out something shocking, so she quickly said, "We're both full now, so we're heading home!"

"Sure! We're full too," Ben teased. "Full from watching your PDA!"

Rosalie heard the news of the assassination attempt on Elliot and rushed through the night to the Foster mansion.

Her face turned cold at the sight of Avery.

"When Mr. Foster was about to get hit by the car earlier, Miss Avery threw herself at him and wrapped him in her arms!"

The bodyguard had witnessed the entire scene and felt obligated to report what he saw to Rosalie.

"If I hadn't shot its tires, the car would have crashed right into them. Miss Avery would have been crushed to a pulp and died on the spot. However, her shielding Mr. Foster might have actually given him a chance at survival.”

Bloody images flashed into Rosalie’s mind as she listened to the bodyguard’s description of that night’s events.

“We haven’t had dinner yet, Mother,” Elliot said. “We’re going to get something to eat.”

“Oh... Hurry up and eat, then! I’ll leave in a bit.”

All of the resentment that Rosalie had felt for Avery slowly vanished.

It was during the most dangerous of moments that someone could determine if another ‘person was genuine or not.

Avery had thrown herself in harm’s way without hesitation; all to protect Elliot.

If that courage was not born out of love, then what else could it possibly be?

Elliot and Avery emerged from the dining room after dinner.

Avery was about to return to her room when Rosalie spoke to her.

“I know how to distinguish right from wrong, Avery. Thank you for tonight,” Rosalie said. She rose from the couch and stood before Avery. “Let’s leave our grievances behind. I won’t give you trouble as long as you’re true to Elliot. He is my son, and I only hope for the best for him.”

Avery was not used to the sudden change in her demeanor.

After a moment of stunned silence, she said, “It’s late... You should go home and get some rest!”

Rosalie nodded, then said, “Both of you get some rest, too.”

Once Rosalie left the room, the living room faded into silence.

Avery felt like her feet were glued to the ground.

She was too embarrassed to go up to the second floor with Elliot, but how was she supposed to come up with an excuse that would allow her to leave?

He had already told her that his birthday wish was for her to come home with him.

Would he not be disappointed if she left now?

“I took all of my clothes with me when I left last time”

“You can wear some of mine for now,” Elliot interrupted before Avery could finish her sentence. “Change out of the clothes you’re wearing now. They’ll be washed and dried by the morning.”

Avery pursed her lips as her mind went blank.

“You don’t want to?” asked Elliot as he fixed his deep eyes on her. “It’s fine if you want to go back to your mother’s place. I’ll get the driver to take you.”

Avery was speechless.

Setting aside her willingness, or lack thereof, she could tell from Elliot’s tone that he was upset.

Suddenly, Mrs. Cooper appeared out of nowhere and said, “You left behind a set of clothes before, Avery. Let me get it for you.”

This time, Avery had run out of excuses to leave.

After Mrs. Cooper walked away, Avery went behind Elliot and wheeled him toward the elevator. “It’s your birthday today. You can’t get mad on your birthday,” she said, trying to reason with him.

“I’m not mad,” Elliot responded in a calm voice. “I just didn’t want to force you.”

“What is it?”

“I left with such confidence and pizzazz before, but here I am again a few days later. It just feels a little bit like a slap in the face.”

“I was not there the last time you left. Your return should be more like a slap in my face, not a slap in yours,” said Elliot.

Avery felt a little better, then asked, “Who helps you wash up at night? Is it still the nurse from before?”

When the elevator arrived on the second floor, Elliot lifted his gaze and looked at Avery with a spark of curiosity in his eyes.

Chapter 121

“I deal with it myself,” Elliot answered in a level-headed tone. “However, you may assist me if you’re worried.”

Avery felt like she had just dug her own grave.

Of course, she would be concerned if Elliot were to take care of his hygiene needs on his own, but what was the difference between her giving him a shower, and her taking a shower with him?

They entered the bedroom, and Avery shut the door behind them.

“Could you pass me the walking stick, please?” Elliot asked in a deep, low voice.

Avery was just about to ask him where the walking stick was when she spotted it and handed it over to him.

Elliot held his walking stick and used it as a support as he struggled out of the wheelchair.

“Are you okay?” Avery asked in a panic.

“I’m fine. I’ve been taking a shower by myself for the past few days,” Elliot answered with a hint of humor in his voice. “Did I scare you?”

Avery blushed, then said, “Were you messing with me on purpose?”

“I just wanted to see your reaction,” Elliot said, then made his way to the bathroom.

Avery was still worried and ended up trailing along behind him.

Elliot stopped, then asked, “Are you going to watch me?”

Avery shook her head at first, then frantically nodded and said, “I’m a little worried... Can you take your pants off by yourself? Won’t you scrape your wounds?”

“These trousers are pretty loose, so they’re easier to take off,” Elliot explained.

Avery grunted in response.

As if to reassure her, Elliot unbuckled his belt and was about to take his pants off in front of her.

Avery's face turned a feverish red.

She stumbled a few steps back, then said, "I – I better wait outside! Shout if you need help."

She escaped the bathroom in a hurry and shut the door.

She sighed heavily and wanted to walk away, but she was afraid that he might call for help. At that moment, Mrs. Cooper knocked on the bedroom door and entered with Avery's clothes in her arms.

"Is Master Elliot taking a shower, Madam?"

Avery nodded and took the clothes from Mrs. Cooper.

"Does she normally wash up by himself?"

"He does! He never wants any help."

"He's stubborn," Avery muttered.

"Master Elliot is rather stubborn, isn't he? It can be an unfortunate characteristic.

He insists on dealing with everything by himself no matter how difficult things are,” said Mrs. Cooper.

Avery agreed wholeheartedly, “I sometimes hate that about him.”

“Don’t hate him,” Mrs. Cooper said, then withdrew the smile on her face and added, “I don’t know what Master Elliot went through in the past, but from what I can tell, he is an extremely kind man.”

Kind?

It was not exactly the most suitable word to describe Elliot Foster.

However, it would not be right to call him unkind either.

Mrs. Cooper continued, “The doctor said those who suffer from depression tend to be the kindest people,”

“He was depressed?” Avery asked with raised brows.

Mrs. Cooper nodded and answered, “He was on antidepressants for a week.”

Avery’s heart turned heavy as she felt like she never truly got to know the real

Elliot Foster.

He was cruel yet vulnerable, and heartless yet persistent.

After his shower, Elliot emerged from the bathroom in a white bathrobe with the help of his walking stick

When Avery walked over to help him, she noticed his wet hair and asked, "How do you wash your hair?"

"Sitting down."

"Oh, I'll dry your hair for you," Avery said, then grabbed the blow dryer from the bathroom.

While she dried his hair, Elliot sat down quietly and did not move a muscle.

Avery wanted time to stop at that moment.

Elliot's hand suddenly grabbed onto her wrist.

"It's dry," he said.

"Oh, right," Avery said as she snapped out of her daze and turned off the blow dryer.

From the corner of her eye, she noticed blood seeping through the bandages on his leg.

"You need to redress your wounds. I'll get the first aid kit."

Avery placed the blow dryer back in the bathroom, then hurried downstairs to ask Mrs. Cooper for the first aid kit.

Chapter 122

Avery reentered the bedroom with a first aid kit in her hand.

She knelt down by Elliot's legs and began to undress his wounds.

His injuries were more severe than she had imagined.

A large piece of skin was missing from his leg, revealing the bloody red flesh underneath...

He must have been in agony!

Elliot barely twitched while Avery treated and dressed his wounds.

He noticed that her breathing had turned heavy.

"It looks worse than it is. It doesn't hurt," he said, his voice piercing through the silence.

He wanted to make her feel better, but she did not want his false consolation.

Avery poked his wound with her finger, causing Elliot to inhale sharply.

"Tell me again how much it doesn't hurt," she said as she glared at him with reddened eyes.

Elliot placed his arms behind him, then narrowed his eyes and said, "It doesn't hurt."

He was betting on her not poking at his wound again.

Her heart would ache at his pain.

"Go to bed! You have to be on bed rest for at least another week. Don't go running around!" Avery snapped, then turned and entered the bathroom.

Elliot leaned against the bed's headboard and picked up his phone from the nightstand.

He made a call, then asked, "What did you find out?"

The bullet had found its mark, but it had not punctured any major organs. It was not a lethal shot.

The culprit was being interrogated at that very moment.

•"He's stubborn and won't say a thing. We're going to have to use some more drastic measures to get him to talk. We'll get what we're looking for before dawn," reported the man on the other end of the line.

"Don't let him die before he talks!"

Elliot wanted to know exactly who was the one who went through such lowly means to try to take his life.

The car crash half a year ago had put him in a vegetative state.

He refused to let the same thing happen again.

Elliot hung up and grabbed his pills from the nightstand drawer.

He was on four types of medication and had to take a handful of pills every time.

He swallowed the pills, then placed the glass of water back on the nightstand.

At that moment, the bathroom door opened and Avery emerged.

“I thought about it, and I don’t think it’s a good idea for us to sleep on the same bed with the state of your injuries. I’m afraid I’ll end up bumping into you during the night,” she said as she approached the bed.

“Are you really worried about hurting me?” Elliot asked as he stared at her with clear yet deep eyes. “Or are you trying to run away from me?”

With flushed cheeks, Avery climbed into bed and sat up next to him.

“Are you happy now?” she said as she glanced at him with a well-behaved expression on her face. “The way you are now, I guess I won’t have to worry about you doing anything to me. What do I have to be afraid of?”

Avery's unbridled appearance aroused a desire in Elliot to overpower her.

He grabbed onto the back of her head and forced her to lift her chin.

His kiss came suddenly and unexpectedly.

At three in the morning, Elliot reached over to Avery and pulled her into his arms.

She was afraid of hurting him and had been sleeping on the edge of the bed the entire time.

He was worried that she would fall out of bed in her sleep.

She had groggily returned to the edge of the bed the last few times he had attempted to pull her to him.

This time, however, Elliot did not loosen his grip around her.

Avery's rigid body slowly relaxed in his arms.

Suddenly, Elliot's phone screen lit up.

He had placed his phone on silent mode so that it would not ring. •

He picked up his phone and answered the call.

"We got it, boss! He said he was following Cassandra Tate's orders! She's Miss Avery Tate's half-sister."

Elliot's breathing turned heavy upon hearing the news.

“What do you want us to do with Cassandra Tate?” asked the man on the phone. “Do we kill her or send her to prison?” Elliot planted a soft kiss on Avery’s forehead, then ordered in a hoarse voice, “Kill her.”

Chapter 123

The news of Cassandra’s death came out around 7 a.m. the next morning.

She had jumped out of the window of the hotel room she was staying in and had died upon impact.

The police retrieved Avery’s contact information from identification that Cassandra had left in her hotel room.

Jack was dead and Wanda was abroad.

The only person who could identify Cassandra’s body was Avery.

Avery was still half asleep when she answered the call.

Even after she had hung up, she thought she was dreaming.

It was not until she snapped out of her trance and checked her phone’s call history that she realized she was not in a dream.

She leaped out of bed, skipped breakfast, and rushed to the hotel where the incident had taken place.

“She had jumped, Sir. When we opened the door, she ran to the window and jumped before we could do anything. It was obvious that she was ridden with guilt.”

Elliot’s subordinate reported the events surrounding Cassandra’s death to him.”

Elliot took a sip of coffee, then ordered coldly, “Keep an eye on Cole Foster.”

Cassandra and Cole were close.

Cassandra wanting Elliot dead meant that Cole had the same idea in his head.

It was yet to be determined if Cassandra was the mastermind behind the assassination attempt, after all.

She could be nothing but a scapegoat, but she still deserved to die.

The police had closed off the hotel when Avery arrived.

She followed a police officer to the crime scene.

“Miss Tate, our initial investigation identified the victim as your sister, Cassandra

Tate. However, we will still need a positive identification from you,” said the officer. “She died upon impact after the fall around five in the morning.”

Avery’s heart raced frantically in her chest as she felt like an invisible force was strangling her.

It was not long until they arrived where Cassandra's body was.

The thick, metallic smell of blood permeated the air.

Avery's hand shot up to cover her nose as she stared at the bloodstains on the ground.

The officer pulled back the white sheet covering Cassandra's body, revealing the bloody, unrecognizable face underneath it.

Avery immediately began to vomit violently.

It was impossible for her to identify that mangled mess of flesh and blood.

Throughout her time in medical school, she had dissected small animals and human corpses...

However, this was the first time she had come face to face with such a disfigured body!

"Are you alright, Miss Tate?" asked the officer as he helped Avery up.

Avery's chest rose and fell at a rapid pace.

"I'm sorry... I can't tell... Just do a DNA test or something!"

"We can do that, but it will take some time..."

"I can't tell... I really can't..."

Avery took another glance at Cassandra's mangled face, and tears began to stream down her cheeks.

Her emotions were a mess.

This was not just a simple matter of losing a so-called family member.

Her relationship with Cassandra had always been unpleasant.

However, not being fond of a person and seeing their lifeless body were two completely different things.

The police moved Cassandra's body away.

They also took away all of the personal items that she left in her hotel room.

Avery sat in a squad car and sobbed.

Why would Cassandra kill herself? Did she get into a fight with Cole?

Chapter 124

Avery pulled out her phone and called Cole.

"Hello? Avery?" Cole answered.

"Cassandra's dead. Did you know?"

"What?! What do you mean she's dead?! I'm at the hospital for a checkup...."

"She was fine when I talked to her on the phone last night,"

“Did you fight?” “No!” Cole exclaimed.

A few seconds later, almost as if he had remembered something, he added, “I remember now. Cassandra was here when Uncle Elliot came home for dinner last time. It wasn't a pleasant night. Uncle Elliot told her that she won't have much longer to live, and she's been terrified about that conversation ever since-”

“That's impossible! I was with Elliot all night. He didn't do anything!”

Cole sighed, then said, “Why do you lose all reason every time Uncle Elliot's involved? I'm just saying what I know. You're the only one I'd tell this to. If the police asked me, there's no way I'd mention this...”

“Listen up, Cole Foster! You better not have anything to do with Cassandra's death. The police will get to the bottom of this!”

“It wasn't me. I don't have a motive! I wouldn't resort to murder even if we got into a fight,” Cole responded coldly, then added, “Avery... Ever since you fell in love with Uncle Elliot, I've become nothing to you.”

“Please keep that bullsh*t to yourself! What was I to you when you were messing around with Cassandra behind my back?!” Avery snapped, then furiously hung up the phone.

“Who were you talking to?” asked the officer.

“Cole Foster. He’s Cassandra Tate’s boyfriend,” Avery said.

She gave the officer Cole’s number, then said, “Cassandra’s been hanging out with him a lot recently. I’m sure he knows why she killed herself.”

Avery walked out of the police station that afternoon and took a cab to her mother’s place.

After reporting the news of Cassandra’s death to Laura, Avery muttered, “I couldn’t recognize her, Mom... It was just all blood... I couldn’t see her features....”

Laura wrapped her arms tightly around her daughter and said, “Don’t be scared,

Avery. It was her life! It had nothing to do with us! All we need to do is live our own lives!”

“Cole said that Elliot did it...” Avery said. “I don’t believe it! Elliot would never commit murder!”

“Did you ask him?” Laura asked. “Even if it was him, I’m sure he had his reasons.”

“Come on, Mom. There’s never a reason to kill someone. If Cassandra broke the law, then the law should be the one to deal with her.”

“Did the law do anything about her uncle’s crimes?” Laura said, then held Avery’s hands in hers and added, “I didn’t say that murder isn’t wrong. I’m just saying that Cole might not be telling the truth.”

Avery quickly composed herself and said, “I just dropped by to tell you this... I’m leaving now ... I need to see Elliot.”

“I’ll take you there,” Laura said. “You’re not in your right mind right now. I’m worried.”

Avery had ordered Elliot to be on bed rest for at least a week, and so, he was obediently resting at home.

Avery arrived at the Foster mansion at two in the afternoon.

The sight of her aloof expression and pale complexion made his heart tighten in his chest.

“I need to talk to you, Elliot,” Avery said as she took a seat next to him.

Elliot's large hand clasped Avery's small one. His hand was like a lion's large paw. It wrapped around hers in a gesture of reassurance.

Avery was not used to the affectionate act and withdrew her hand on reflex.

After a few seconds of pondering, she tried to ease into the subject but ended up getting straight to the point.

"Cassandra's dead. Did you have anything to do with it?"

This was always the straightforward, no-nonsense way that she got along with

Elliot.

•Elliot's eyes darkened, and his voice was chilling as he asked, "Why aren't you asking about who was trying to kill me last night? Is Cassandra Tate's life more important than mine?"

Cassandra's death had taken up so much of Avery's mind that day that she almost forgot about the events of the night before.

TIT

"Who was it?!" she asked with fiery eyes. "Did you find out who was behind it?"

"Would you still feel sad about her death if I told you it was Cassandra?"
Elliot

asked as he fixed his eyes on Avery.

He watched as her expression went from one of shock to suspicion, then turned into anxiety.

“So... You really had something to do with Cassandra’s death,” Avery said through the lump in her throat. “Was there no other way to go about it? Why did you have to go to such extremes?”

“Don’t look at me like that, Avery,” Elliot said as the earlier tenderness disappeared from his face. “I’ll send whoever crosses me straight to hell. I’ve always been like that.”

Chapter 125

The tension between Elliot and Avery grew drastically.

They were seated next to each other, but it looked like they were on the verge of war.

Afraid that they would break into a fight, Mrs. Cooper quickly brought over a fresh fruit platter.

“Have you had lunch, Madam? I left some food out for you.”

Avery shot to her feet and stormed toward the dining room.

Elliot watched her walk away. He could not figure out her thoughts.

If she was furious, she probably would not stay for lunch.

However, the rage in her eyes made it impossible to deny that she was mad.

Avery had skipped breakfast and lunch, so her stomach was beginning to ache from hunger.

She took over half an hour to finish her food since wolfing it down would only cause indigestion and add to her current discomfort.

When she walked out of the dining room, Elliot was no longer in the living room.

“We tend to act impulsively when we’re angry, Madam. Maybe you should get some rest for now,” Mrs. Cooper said.

Avery’s head was throbbing in pain, so she nodded and made her way up to her room on the first floor.

Mrs. Cooper walked next to her and said awkwardly, “I thought that you would be sleeping in the master bedroom from now on, so I already unmade your bed.”

Avery raised her brows and said, “I’m not sleeping in his room.”

“Madam, please. Master Elliot’s injuries are going to take some time to heal, and he refuses to let anyone help or take care of him,” Mrs. Cooper said as she tried to reason with her. “You’re the only one that he allows to get close to him. If you don’t watch over him, he might fall one day and—”

“He looked fine to me with the walking stick. I doubt he’ll fall,” Avery said coldheartedly.

“You’re just saying that out of anger.”

“I’m not. I’m being serious.”

“When you asked me for the first aid kit last night to redress his wounds, your eyes were all red—”

“That’s enough. I’m going up,” Avery said, then walked up to the second floor.

Elliot was taking a nap in the master bedroom. The curtains were half-drawn, allowing only some of the warm sunlight to shine in.

When Avery entered the room and saw Elliot’s sleeping face, all of the emotions in her heart hit a wall, and had no way of escaping.

She had always been taught to follow the rules and not to behave in the arrogant crazy way that Elliot often did.

She walked over to the bed and sat awkwardly on the edge for a while.

After what felt like an eternity, a large hand clasped around Avery's arm and yanked her into bed.

Elliot had never fallen asleep.

From the moment Avery walked into the room, he had already given in.

"She jumped out of the window herself," he explained in a hoarse voice.

He hated explaining himself to other people.

However, when it came to Avery, it was impossible for him to be as self-centered as he used to be.

He would rather swallow his pride than hurt her.

"Even if she didn't kill herself, I wouldn't have let her live."

Elliot opened up and revealed his true self to Avery.

"Just because I didn't get run over last night, doesn't mean that I'll never die.

There are plenty of people who want me dead. If I show mercy to every single one of them, do you really think that they would repent and not come after me

again?"

Avery stared silently at Elliot.

She took in his chiseled face and felt her heart shrivel up into a tight ball.

He was right. He was not invincible.

Chapter 126

If Elliot had been run over last night, would it be guaranteed that the perpetrator would be punished?

Even if the murderer paid for his crimes, would it bring Elliot back to life?

Absolutely not.

“I’m not blaming you, Elliot... I just can’t immediately accept the way you handled things...” Avery said in a voice as soft as cotton.

“You don’t need to accept it. You just need to know that I would never hurt anyone who was innocent.”

“Okay.”

“Get some rest,” Elliot said, then gently caressed Avery’s back to get her to fall asleep.

Wrapped in his arms and surrounded by his unique scent, Avery quickly fell into a deep slumber.

At 5 p.m. that evening, Avery got a call from the police requesting her presence at the station right away.

She hung up the phone and rushed out of the house without telling Elliot.

When she arrived at the station, her gaze immediately fell on Wanda's bloodshot eyes.

Those same eyes filled with revulsion at the sight of Avery.

The two women were escorted into the station by a police officer and seated down in a private room.

"The DNA test confirmed the victim's identity as Cassandra Tate."

Wanda burst into tears upon hearing those words.

"My daughter was murdered! She was always a happy-go-lucky girl! How could she be dead?!"

"From our investigation, we suspect Cassandra Tate of being the person responsible for a car .crash on Concord Street last night," revealed the police officer. "She is also suspected to be behind the attempted assassination of Elliot Foster. Here is the evidence we collected."

A stack of documents and a cell phone were laid out in front of Avery and Wanda.

Avery simply glanced at the items and did not pick them up.

“That’s impossible! She’s not that brave!” Wanda cried as she violently shook her head in denial. “She’s still in college! How could she possibly try to murder anybody?!”

“She hired an assassin. If Mr. Foster’s bodyguards had not reacted in time, he would be dead,” said the officer. “Mr. Foster is a well-known entrepreneur in Avonsville and has contributed a lot to the city’s welfare. Cassandra broke the law. If she had not committed suicide, she would have had to answer for her crimes in the end.”

“You’re saying my daughter killed herself?!”

Wanda was at her limit after receiving blow after blow.

She held her head in her hands and looked like she was about to fall from her seat.

“Yes, ma’am. Surveillance footage from the hotel revealed your daughter getting out of bed and jumping out of the window, all on her own.” The officer then played the video on his phone for Wanda.

Avery watched with her.

It was dark, but the fear on Cassandra’s face was clear as she ran toward the window and jumped.

The whole thing lasted less than ten minutes.

“Is that it?!” Wanda snapped as she slammed her hand on the table. “Why did she jump out of the window? Something obviously scared her! Someone forced her to do it!”

“We looked into it and found out that it was the hotel’s housekeeping manager that opened the room door. The assassin that your daughter hired admitted that she was the one who ordered him to murder Elliot Foster, so Mr. Foster’s subordinates had gone to the hotel to confront Miss Tate about it. She could not handle the guilt and decided to commit suicide.”

“It was Elliot Foster... He’s the one who killed my baby...” Wanda hissed through gritted teeth.

The police officer corrected her, “Your daughter was the one who hired an assassin to kill someone. The fact that she was able to do something illegal like this has a lot to do with her lack of proper upbringing, ma’am.”

“Shut up!” Wanda snapped. “My daughter would never kill someone! You b*st*rds! Not only are you not going after the real murderer, but you’re also insulting my dead daughter! I won’t let this go!”

•Wanda was filled with rage and stormed out of the room.

Avery stayed behind to sign some documents.

The evidence was solid, so the case was closed.

Avery walked out of the station and made her way to the side of the road to hail a cab.

Wanda suddenly appeared in front of her and grabbed Avery’s arm.

“I know it was you and Elliot Foster! You wanted to take revenge on me and killed Cassandra!

You’re a cold-hearted b*tch, Avery Tate! Your father would have never left the company to you if he knew how evil you were!”

Wanda was in such a rage that, if she had a knife in her hand, she would have stabbed Avery on the spot.

The sound of a car's horn suddenly pierced through the air.

A black Rolls-Roice sped toward Wanda and Avery, and came to a screeching halt right in front of them.

Chapter 127

Avery violently shook off Wanda's grip on her arm.

She recognized the car as Elliot's and strode over to it.

When the door to the driver's side opened up, the bodyguard got out and charged straight at Wanda.

Avery was afraid that he was about to strike Wanda.

She rushed to the bodyguard's side and held him back.

"Don't touch her! Her daughter just died. It's only natural that she'd be emotional.

Avery violently shook off Wanda's grip on her arm.

She recognized the car as Elliot's and strode over to it.

When the door to the driver's side opened up, the bodyguard got out and charged straight at Wanda.

Avery was afraid that he was about to strike Wanda.

She rushed to the bodyguard's side and held him back.

"Don't touch her! Her daughter just died. It's only natural that she'd be emotional.

"Shaun told me everything!" she yelled. "You took your father's Super Brain program for yourself! Shaun said that your father spent hundreds of millions of dollars to develop the program. What right do you have to chastise me?!"

"Of course, I have the right," Avery responded. "The things I have were given to me by my

father, but you stole from him! You're all a bunch of thieves! I'll make sure your brother coughs up every last penny that he took from Dad. I'll make sure he rots in prison!"

Wanda's blood pressure was soaring, but she had no words to fight back.

All she could do in the end was watch Avery get in the car and speed off.

The moment she shut the car door, Avery quickly composed herself.

She turned to Elliot and asked, "What are you doing here?"

Elliot passed her a bottle of water and answered, "I knew Wanda was coming. I was afraid she would pick a fight with you."

"Am I that weak?" Avery asked as she took a sip of water.

"You only put up a strong front in front of me," Elliot replied blandly.

Avery glared at him, then said, "I'm hungry. I don't have the energy to argue."

"Should we eat out?" Elliot suggested. "What do you feel like?"

"Anything's fine," Avery said, then a thought suddenly popped into her head and she added, "I feel like having my mom's cooking."

"Should we go to your mom's place?"

Avery glanced over at Elliot's legs, then said, "Forget it! The building isn't wheelchair accessible. It won't be convenient for you."

"We could head home and get the walking stick."

"If we're going home, we might as well just eat at home. Why bother going to my mom's?"

"You said you wanted to eat your mom's cooking."

"I was just saying that."

Avery did not expect him to take her words that seriously.

Elliot pulled out his phone and made a call.

•Avery stared at him and wondered who he was calling.

A moment later, Laura's voice came through his phone. "Hello? Elliot?"

Chapter 128

"Yes, Mom. It's me," Elliot answered.

Avery choked and began to cough violently.

He actually called her mother "Mom"!

"Here's the thing. Avery said she feels like eating your cooking, but it's not convenient for me to go to your place. I'm thinking of booking a restaurant nearby, and I was wondering if you'll be able to come and cook there," Elliot said in a gentle and calm voice.

"Sure! Just send me the address and I'll be right over," replied Laura.

"Thank you," Elliot said, then hung up the phone and sent an address to Laura.

Avery stared at him in complete shock, completely bewildered by his actions.

"Are you insane? I was just simply saying that... You actually called my mom out to cook for me?!" Avery exclaimed. "You never used to take my words seriously. What's going on with

you?”

“I’ll take you seriously from now on,” Elliot said as his eyes and tone turned serious.

A wave of warmth washed over Avery and turned her cheeks red. She felt like she could hear her heart thumping wildly in her chest.

“Don’t!” she cried. “What if I say I want to kill you the next time we fight? Would you just go ahead and kill yourself?”

“Can you stop thinking about picking fights with me all the time?”

“That’s because we always have different opinions. I think that’s normal, though.

Where in the world would you find two people who agree on everything?”

“Perhaps they exist. We just haven’t met them yet.”

“I wouldn’t want to find someone who agrees with everything I say to spend the rest of my life with. What’s the fun in that?” Avery said as her gaze lowered and her ears turned a rosy pink. “The occasional bickering keeps the spark alive.”

‘Elliot gazed deeply at her.

“You can go find someone more agreeable if you want. I won’t stop you,” Avery said.

Elliot's smoldering eyes made her heart race, so she could not help but run her mouth at him.

"There are more important things in my life than dating," she added.

"I didn't say anything. Stop overthinking," Elliot said in frustration.

Avery opened up the bottle of water and took another sip.

"Don't you think you're going too far by calling my mom out to cook like this?"

she mumbled. "It's not like she's a servant. I'd be mad if I were her."

"You've never been a mother yourself, Avery, so you wouldn't understand how your mom feels about this."

What Elliot meant by his words was that Laura was probably not angry.

How could she be mad about cooking for her own child? It was not like she was cooking for her every day.

Elliot had no idea that his words pierced through Avery's heart.

"Do you think I don't want to be a mother? You're the one who wouldn't let me!"

When Elliot saw Avery's reddened eyes, he realized that he made a huge mistake.

His lips moved as if he was about to say something, but he was at a loss for words.

“Is your depression the reason you don’t want children?” Avery asked softly after a moment of silence. “Depression won’t necessarily affect the child. The doctor would recommend terminating the pregnancy if they find something wrong during the checkups. You don’t get to decide whether or not a child gets to be born.”

Elliot looked out the window and clenched his jaw.

It looked as if he was trying his best to hold back and control his emotions.

Moments later, his cold voice echoed through the car, “Don’t bring up children with me ever again. As long as you don’t mention kids, I’ll do whatever you want.”

“What if all I want is to have children?”

Avery held Elliot’s hand in hers, then said through the lump in her throat, “What if I beg you?”

Before she could say another word, Elliot pulled his hand back. This was his refusal.

Chapter 129

At the restaurant, Laura laid out the completed dishes on the table. "Come with me for a second, Avery," Laura called out to her daughter.

Avery followed her mother and walked toward the bathroom.

"Did you and Elliot get into a fight?" Laura asked.

"Is it that obvious?" Avery responded, her face void of emotion.

Perhaps it was because she had been disappointed so many times that she became numb to the feeling "It is. You look like a couple that's on the verge of divorce," said Laura. "The expression on your faces is exactly what your father and I looked like when we went to sign the divorce papers."

Avery could not hold back a bitter laugh.

"We didn't talk about the divorce. It's just... About having kids... We can't talk about it."

"I see. Is he still not willing to have kids? Did he say why?" Avery shook her head and said, "He has depression. Every time I think about that, I tell myself not to dwell on things."

"That poor thing." Laura sighed. "What's the point of having all of that money?

Your health is more important than anything else. I think we're more wealthy than he is in that regard."

"That's because you don't know how rich he is," Avery said with a grin, then held her mother's hand and said, "Thanks for cooking, Mom!"

"Don't mention it. I wish I could cook for you every day, but I'm sure the chef at the mansion is a much better cook than I am."

"No matter how good they are, nobody's cooking suits my taste buds more than yours," Avery said with a warm smile. "Let's go eat!"

"I ate at home before I got here. Besides, I lost my appetite seeing the looks on your faces," Laura teased. "I'm going home. Stop fighting with him. We can't afford to offend him."

"Don't worry, Mom! I'll deal with him myself."

After sending her mother off, Avery returned to her seat at the table.

In front of her was a plate of peeled shrimp.

Elliot was the one who peeled them for her.

“You’re pretty good at hitting on girls, aren’t you?” Avery said, then picked up a piece of shrimp and shoved it in her mouth.

“I’m usually the one getting hit on,” Elliot responded honestly.

Avery almost choked on her food.

“It’d be great if you could always be this way, Avery.”

Avery took a deep breath and suppressed her negative emotions.

“I’ll try not to pick fights with you from now on,” she said gently, then added after a brief pause, “I’m going to the Christmas concert on campus next week. Do you have anything going on at the company?”

“We do, but I won’t go.”

“That’s true. You should take care of your legs.”

Avery picked up a piece of shrimp, dipped it in some sauce, then offered it to

Elliot.

He froze for a moment, then parted his lips.

He felt a warm, fuzzy feeling inside of him after eating the shrimp that she fed

him.

The harmonious atmosphere between them drew a veil over their earlier disagreement.

“Are you performing?” Elliot asked.

“Of course! It’s the last Christmas concert of my college life.”

“I see. I’d like to go,” Elliot said nonchalantly.

Avery was taken aback.

“How would you get in? We’re not even allowed to invite family!”

“I have my ways.”

Avery looked at Elliot’s stoic face and felt a sudden wave of relief.

“I guess that’s true. With your money, all you’d have to do is donate a building.

Forget about the concert, they’d probably let you peep around the female dorms, too.”

Elliot lifted his head and stared at Avery.

She was the one who just said that she would stop picking fights with him.

Christmas arrived in the blink of an eye.

Avery took off for campus first thing in the morning, and Elliot got out of bed after she left the house.

Chapter 130

Elliot's legs had been recovering well, and he was able to move around more freely with a walking stick

He got out of bed and walked into the closet to pick out his outfit for the day.

Most of his clothes were in dark shades and colors.

His brows furrowed as he took in the gloominess of his closet.

Elliot walked out of the closet after failing to pick out a suitable outfit, then gave Chad a call.

"Chad, I need a light-colored suit."

"Of course, Sir. Are you looking for something casual or a formal suit?"

"Something casual."

"Roger that. I'll get it ready right away," Chad said. "By the way, the jewelry designer you asked me to contact has finished the sketch you asked for. I've emailed it over to you. They can start working on it once you approve the sketch.”

“Alright,” Elliot responded.

He hung up, then entered his study and turned on the computer.

The upcoming New Year’s Eve was the first one that he was going to spend with Avery, and he wanted to give her something special to commemorate it.

He clicked on Chad’s email and opened up the sketch of the custom diamond ring he had commissioned

The ring was designed to resemble a snowflake, as Avery was like a snowflake to him- pure and angelic.

Over at Avonsville University, Avery and Tammy were having lunch after their morning rehearsals.

“Why did you back out of the dance performance?” Tammy asked.

•“Dancing is too tiring. I’ll just focus on my song,” Avery answered, then glanced at her phone and asked, “Is your boyfriend coming to the concert?”

“He wanted to, but he won’t be able to get in. He’s not a student here, anyway.

There’s no way they’d let him in!”

Avery nodded in response.

“Is your husband coming? I heard that both of you have been stuck at the hip! Is that true? You never reply to my texts when I ask you about it,” Tammy grumbled.

“Did Jun tell you that? When did he get so nosy? You should pressure him into focusing on his career and making more money.”

“All I want is to be in a lovey-dovey relationship right now! By the way, did you tell your husband about going to graduate school abroad? I told Jun to keep it to himself, so I don’t think he’s told Elliot.”

The light in Avery’s eyes dimmed.

Tammy took one look at her and found her answer.

“Why won’t you tell him about it? Are you worried that he’ll stop you from going?”

Avery took a sip of water, then said, “I’ll tell him after the new year!”

“Alright! So, is he coming to the concert or not? Ask him to bring my Jun along if he is!”

“He’s coming.”

Tammy sighed and said, “Yet you won’t admit that your relationship is going well! He is ditching his company’s party and coming to our concert! Doesn’t that tell you that he finds you more important than work?! Jun, on the other hand, wouldn’t miss the company party for the world! So, your husband won’t have to trouble himself with my Jun.”

Avery shuddered as goosebumps appeared all over her body

“Can you please stop saying ‘your husband’ and ‘my Jun’? When did you get so cheesy?”

“I’m not wrong, am I? Elliot Foster is your husband, and Jun might not be my husband yet, but isn’t it normal for couples to give each other pet names?”

Avery ordered some food, then passed the menu back to the waiter.

“Do you think he’ll go on stage and give you flowers after your performance?”

Tammy asked, suddenly looking to the night’s concert with anticipation.

“How’s he supposed to get up there? With his walking stick?”

Tammy sighed, then said, “What a pity! I was hoping to see the two of you go public with your relationship in front of the whole college!”

“You need to quit it with all your romantic dramas,” Avery said, shattering Tammy’s fantasy.

“What kind of relationship do you two have?” Tammy said with furrowed brows.

“You’re so boring! There’s no fun at all!”

Chapter 131

Avery did not react.

It was true that her relationship with Elliot was more boring than most.

Just last week, they had spent the entire time at home.

Elliot was either working in his study or reading a book in the living room.

Avery, on the other hand, was either writing her thesis or reading in the living room with him.

Elliot’s book was in a foreign language that Avery did not understand.

Avery was reading Professor Hough’s book on neurology.

She was sure Elliot would not understand a thing about it either, so she did not feel inferior to him.

“What do you think of my necklace?” Tammy asked as she suddenly took off the necklace she was wearing and showed it to Avery.

“It’s pretty. Did your boyfriend give it to you?”

“He did! It’s a Christmas gift. It’s even got my name engraved on it!”

“You can purchase jewelry which comes with a free engraving offer for under ten bucks,” said Avery in earnest. “You shouldn’t let these things go to your head!”

Tammy did not mind.

“It’s not about the engraving, I’m just happy that he got me something! When he stops being able to make me feel like this one day, I’d probably break up with

Avery had nothing left to say.

“You’re acting surprisingly cold about this. Has Elliot never gotten you a gift before?” Tammy guessed. “He might be old and unromantic, but you’re still young! Can you stop being so morbid? If he won’t make the first move, then you should!”

Avery ignored Tammy and began to eat her lunch.

The concert kicked off at seven that evening.

Avery and Tammy were getting ready in the dressing room backstage.

“Avery! Is your husband”

“Remember where we are!” Avery hissed as she glanced at their surroundings.

Tammy cleared her throat, then asked softly, “Is Elliot here yet? Has he called you? I took a peek at the audience just now, and it’s crowded out there. Where’s he sitting?”

Avery checked her phone and saw that there were no new messages.

A strange emotion hit her.

Was he not here yet?

He might not come after all.

“He didn’t call me. I don’t know if he’s here yet, nor do I know where his seat is.

Just because he’s coming to the concert, doesn’t mean he wants to reveal his identity. He might even pretend not to know me if he sees me, and I’d do the same.”

Tammy was surprised, while Avery’s words extinguished her passion for gossip.

Elliot arrived on campus at eight in the evening.

Avery's performance was the thirteenth on the program, which would be around an hour after the opening act.

Elliot timed his arrival perfectly.

He entered the performance hall under the protection of his bodyguard and campus security.

Elliot was dressed in a baby blue t-shirt, a casual, white jacket, and matching slacks.

He was not in a wheelchair, nor was he using a walking stick.

Since his legs were not fully recovered, he was walking at a slow but steady pace.

He looked as dashing as a prince straight out of a romantic drama!

Elliot caused a stir the moment he entered the hall.

Backstage, Tammy looked out to the audience and recognized him right away.

"Oh my god! I almost didn't recognize him in that light suit! He looks so good!"

Tammy exclaimed as she rushed over to Avery in excitement. "He's here! He's actually here! He definitely showed up for you! He's sitting in the front row! Oh my god!"

Avery's chest tightened.

She took a few steps towards the main stage and peeped at the audience through the curtains.

Elliot's white silhouette shone like a beam of light and shot right through her heart.

"Avery! You're up! Break a leg! Show your husband a side of you that nobody's ever seen before!" Tammy cheered as she tapped Avery on the back.

Avery was on the verge of tears.

"Stop spouting nonsense, Tammy Lynch!"

"Next up is the diamond of the art department, Miss Avery Tate. She'll be gracing us with her rendition of "Tim McGraw" on her guitar. Please give her a big round of applause!" Once the host introduced her, Avery made her way to the center of the stage.

Chapter 132

Avery's hair was pulled back in a simple ponytail, and she was dressed in a blue denim jacket over a long white dress.

With her guitar in her arms, she took a seat on the high stool placed at the center of the stage.

As she adjusted the mic stand in front of her, the room lights dimmed, and she was illuminated by the light of the spotlight that was trained on her.

The melodic strumming of Avery's guitar began to echo through the hall, followed by her angelic singing

Her gaze did not search the crowd for anyone in particular, but she could feel a pair of eyes watching her intently.

Avery shut her eyes to immerse herself in her performance.

Soon after, the stage lights lit up and a colorful wave of flower petals floated down from the ceiling

The audience burst into wild, frenzied cheers.

Avery opened her eyes, her thick lashes fluttering.

Her face was a picture of bewilderment as petals rustled down in front of her

eyes.

Nobody told her that there would be a flower shower during her performance!

Was this a last minute arrangement?

Avery's cheeks were hot with embarrassment, but she powered through the rest of her song.

Suddenly, a drone appeared out of thin air and flew towards the stage.

On top of the drone was a bouquet of flowers!

The audience broke into another roar of excitement.

Avery's heart pounded along with the enthusiastic applause and hurrahs.

· Tammy was so envious backstage that she began to sniffle.

“That old geezer sure has his ways!”

She had just called Elliot Foster boring that afternoon.

However, there was nothing boring about this flower shower and bouquet-sending drone!

Tammy felt like she was getting countless slaps to the face.

The drone stopped in midair right in front of Avery as she came to the end of her song.

With raised brows and pursed lips, she hesitantly picked up the bouquet of flowers from the drone.

Thunderous cheers and applause filled the room.

“Merry Christmas, everyone!” Avery said into the microphone as she held the bouquet in her arms.

Her gaze wandered through the crowd until it fell on the white silhouette in the front row.

“Thank you! Thank you, everyone!”

The drone flew off and the petals stopped falling from the ceiling.

Elliot, who was sitting in the front row, was also nowhere to be found.

It was as if it was all nothing but a dream.

Even now that she had awakened from the dream, Avery was still moved beyond words.

“Are you dating someone, Avery?! I bet the flowers were from your boyfriend! He even used a drone to give them to you! That’s so creative!”

“And that flower shower?! Your boyfriend prepared that, right? None of us got anything like that during our performances! That’s so romantic!”

Backstage, a group of people converged on Avery and surrounded her.

Tammy ran over and rescued her from the mob.

When they burst through the hall's exit, a tall, muscular student stood in their path.

“Hey, Avery. I heard that you got out of a relationship recently... I fell for you at first sight when I was a freshman, but I've never had the guts to tell you. You're about to graduate soon, So I—”

Before Avery could say a word, Tammy jumped in and shattered the student's dreams.

“She's taken! Who did you think arranged that flower shower just now? Also, did you think .that drone flew over and gave her that bouquet itself?!”

The student scratched his head, then said, “I guess I was too late again.”

At that moment, the sound of footsteps approaching came from behind them.

Avery turned and saw Elliot's handsome yet sophisticated face.

Under the pearlescent moonlight, his features looked particularly chiseled.

“Hello, you...”

The student watched as Elliot made his way to Avery's side, then tried to guess who he was. “You must be Avery's uncle?”

Chapter 133

Avery felt Elliot's body stiffen next to her.

His outfit had taken a few years off, however, people still wound up treating him like an older person.

It must have bothered him.

"I'm Avery's,"

Elliot began to speak, but Avery interrupted him by grabbing his hand, then explained, "I don't know this guy. It's cold out here. Let's head to the car!"

At the same time, Tammy pulled the male student out of their way.

Avery threw Tammy a look of gratitude, then helped Elliot back to the black RollsRoice.

"Your legs haven't fully recovered," she said in a concerned voice. "You shouldn't be walking around like this."

"It doesn't hurt anymore," Elliot said.

His eyes landed on the bouquet of flowers in Avery's hand.

"There's a gift in the bouquet," he said awkwardly.

"What?" Avery said as she stared at Elliot in shock. "You got me a gift? I didn't get you anything, though.”

The air around them turned thick with uneasiness.

They had spent the past week sitting at home.

How did he find the time to prepare a gift for her if he never left the house?

Elliot opened the door to the backseat of the car and let Avery in first.

“I didn’t ask for anything in return.”

His deep, sultry voice made Avery’s heart skip a beat.

•In the car, she sifted through the flowers and found a small, pink jewelry box.

She opened it up, revealing the diamond necklace inside it.

It was a simple design, but the diamond itself... was huge.

Once Elliot sat down next to her, she could not help but tease him.

“I never thought you were much of a showoff before, but why do you have such tacky taste?”

“You don’t like it?” Elliot asked as he locked eyes with Avery. “What style do you like?”

He assumed all women loved diamonds, and the bigger the diamond, the better.

Avery took out the necklace, placed it in her palm, and said, “Don’t you think the diamond's a little too big? Larger cuts like this can make me look bulky.”

Elliot stared at her dainty, little hand and did not agree with her at all.

Everything looked good in her hands.

He had his own reasoning when choosing gifts, so he said, “I couldn't bring myself to give out something too cheap.”

“Pretend I didn't say anything,” Avery said as she placed the necklace back in the box.” Thanks for coming to the show.”

“You're a good singer,” Elliot said.

Her angelic voice was on loop in his mind.

“Are you an art history major?”

Avery's arms tightened around the bouquet. “Do you know why I decided to major in that?”

Elliot shook his head.

“My stepmother was the one who chose it for me. She told my father that it was an easy major, so he just went with it.”

Avery took a breath, then continued, “It doesn't exactly have the best career prospects, though. Most of the people who major in art history at the college come from rich families.”

“Your father left you the company in the end. He wasn’t going to leave you without a future,” Elliot said.

“He never mentioned anything about it to me before he died. He cheated on my mother and was always indifferent when it came to me. I hated him.”

“Perhaps he thought that he had already let your mother down, so he didn’t want to do the same to your stepmother.”

“How would you know? Are all men like that?”

“Aren’t we talking about your father?”

“Even so, why do I feel like you can sympathize with him?”

At the end of that sentence, Avery felt like they were on the verge of starting a fight, so she quickly changed the subject.

“Did you pick out your outfit to match mine tonight?” she asked.

She was wearing blue over white, while Elliot was wearing white over blue.

Avery’s jacket may have been a deeper shade of blue, but it was hard to disagree if anyone said they were wearing matching outfits.

Her question put Elliot on the spot.

Why did she have to state the obvious?

“Yes, I did,” Elliot answered truthfully, leaving Avery speechless.

When they arrived home, Avery took a shower first.

Once she was done, Elliot entered the bathroom.

While Avery was lying in bed with her phone, Elliot’s phone screen suddenly lit up.

She picked up his phone and saw a text message from Ben.

Chapter 134

Avery could not help herself, and she tapped on the text message from Ben.

(Your wife’s got a great voice! It’s a shame she’s not a singer!)

Avery had not expected to be able to access Elliot’s phone.

She would not have been able to get in if he had set a passcode, but he did not have one set up.”

After Ben’s text came through, he sent over a video of Avery’s performance.

Tammy had sent her the same video earlier and told her that she was going viral on the college ‘s online forum

Avery returned to the home screen and placed the phone back where she had found it.

It was at that moment that her finger slipped and opened up Elliot's photo gallery, revealing the photos within

When Elliot emerged from the bathroom after his shower, Avery gestured at him, and he immediately sat on the bed.

"I suddenly feel like cooking. Should I cook for you from now on?" Avery asked.

Elliot looked at her, confused.

"Are you serious?"

"I am!" Avery answered with enthusiasm. "I can't guarantee that I'd be any good at it. I've never really cooked before."

"You could try tomorrow," Elliot suggested.

"Okay!" Avery responded, then glanced at his gray bathrobe and said, "You look good in light colors. You should wear it more."

"I still got called your uncle, though."

"How do you know he didn't do that on purpose?" Avery teased, then cradled

Elliot's face in her hands and said, "You looked very handsome tonight."

Elliot clasped his large hand over hers as a hint of suspicion flashed across his deep eyes.

"Why are you suddenly so passionate?" Avery's cheeks flushed under his smoldering gaze.

She nestled her face in the nook of his neck, then uttered sweetly, "No reason. I just felt like hugging you."

A wave of warmth enveloped Elliot's heart at the sound of Avery's words. He opened up his arms and wrapped them around her.

Time flew by after Christmas.

Elliot either spent his days working in his study or watching Avery cook in the kitchen.

Avery, on the other hand, spent all of her time and energy perfecting her cooking.

On New Year's Eve, Rosalie called first thing in the morning reminding them to visit her.

Avery and Elliot took their time with breakfast, then headed out for the old mansion.

“Should we have lunch with your mother later?” Elliot suggested as he held Avery’s hand.

She had rejected his idea to bring Laura along to the old mansion.

Even if Avery agreed, Laura would not.

Avery flashed a smile at Elliot and said, “It’s fine. I just want to spend time with you today. It’s our first New Year’s Eve together after all.”

“There will be many more to come,” Elliot said.

Avery looked out the window and said, “Look at that snow! It’s perfect for making a snowman. Let’s do that later!”

Elliot was about to tease her for the childish suggestion, but he kept quiet.

He did not want to ruin her good mood.

After lunch, Avery dragged Elliot out to build a snowman.

The rest of the Foster family huddled aside and watched them from afar.

It was the first time in years that they had seen Elliot laughing and behaving like a kid!

“Are you happy, Elliot?” Avery asked suddenly as she stared at the finished snowman.

“I am.” “I’m happy as long as I’m with you,” Elliot thought but kept those words to Himself.

Chapter 135

Avery and Elliot went home in the afternoon to rest because they planned on staying up to ring in the new year.

Once Elliot was asleep, Avery opened her eyes and stared at his face.

She felt as if she could never watch him for long enough.

It was a shame that she could not stop time.

It would be perfect if everything could come to a stop at this moment.

When Elliot woke up around four in the afternoon, Avery was not next to him.

He got out of bed and went downstairs to look for her.

“You’re up!”

Avery was in the middle of making dinner.

“I’m thinking of making steak tonight. What do you think?”

Elliot stood at the entrance to the kitchen and watched as she worked away.

“How about I make dinner?” he asked.

“You cook?” Avery exclaimed with a look of surprise on her face, then took off her apron and said, “Be my guest! I’ve never tried your cooking before!”

IT

“I’ve never cooked before, but I can follow a recipe,” Elliot said as he took the apron from Avery. “Take a break in the living room.”

“Can I stay here and watch?” Avery asked with sparkling eyes.

Elliot did not refuse but pulled up a chair for her.

Avery sat down and enjoyed the show as he prepared their dinner.

Elliot gave off an air of expertise no matter what he did.

.When Avery dug into the steak Elliot made that evening, she was singing his praises.

“Maybe you haven’t been to many good restaurants.”

“Can’t you just accept my praise?”

“Sure. I think I’m a pretty good cook, too.”

Avery burst into laughter.

“I don’t like broccoli,” she said as she deposited the broccoli from her plate onto Elliot's, and she took the cherry tomato from his plate and popped it into her mouth.

"Don't be picky, Avery," Elliot said earnestly as he chewed on her broccoli.

"I'm not! I just don't like steamed foods."

They took a stroll outside after dinner, then returned to the living room and watched TV.

Avery rested her head on Elliot's shoulder and dozed.

He woke her up at half past eleven and said, "Let's set off some fireworks. It's another half hour until the new year."

A wide smile appeared on Avery's face, but a hint of sadness flashed across her

eyes.

They threw on their coats and made their way outside where the bodyguard was preparing the fireworks.

Before long, a dazzling display of fireworks covered the night sky above them.

Avery lifted her head and felt the night breeze brush her skin.

"I have something for you, Avery," Elliot whispered in her ear.

Avery turned to him and asked, "A gift? Didn't we agree not to prepare anything?"

Once again, she had not gotten him anything.

"It's something I ordered beforehand," Elliot said as he pulled out a red, square box from her pocket.

Avery guessed what it was without opening it up.

"We've been married for over half a year. This is your make-up wedding ring."

Elliot opened the box to expose the exquisite diamond ring within.

Avery's eyes filled with tears at the sight of it.

Elliot took out the ring, picked up Avery's left hand, and carefully slipped the ring onto her ring finger.

"It's beautiful," Avery whispered hoarsely.

"I'm glad you like it," Elliot said as his hand tightened around hers.

The vibrant fireworks continued to light up the night sky.

When the new year's countdown began to display in the sky, Avery got on her tiptoes and kissed Elliot's cold lips.

Elliot felt something wet on his face, then noticed the tears streaming down

Avery's face.

He wanted to ask why she was crying, but the countdown came to an end, signifying the arrival of the new year. "Happy New Year, Elliot Foster," Avery choked as she loosened her grip on Elliot.

Chapter 136

"Happy New Year, Avery," Elliot said as he lifted his hand to wipe the tears off of Avery's face.

Avery took a big step back away from him.

"I'm leaving, Elliot," she said coldly.

Before Elliot could react, Avery had already taken the diamond ring off her finger.

"I can't accept this," Avery said as she shoved the ring into the pocket of his jacket.

"I love you, but I can't do this anymore."

Avery lifted her head as tears trickled down her cheeks.

"You have photos of that woman on your computer and on your phone. I'm sure you have her in your heart, as well. I admit that you're good to me, but you love her more. I won't force you to explain yourself, nor will I make you give her up...

Because I know that it would all be a waste of time,” Avery said.

“We’re done!”

This was not up for discussion.

Avery was informing Elliot of her decision.

Elliot was frozen in place, and his eyes were filled with disbelief.

Everything was going fine before this.

Avery was cooking for him every day and sleeping in his arms every night...

He thought that they would be in love for the rest of their lives.

When had she decided to break up with him?

Elliot had no idea.

It could have been after Christmas, or it could have been earlier than that.

“I’m leaving soon. I’ve hired a lawyer for the divorce proceedings. He’ll contact you after the holidays,” Avery said as she wipes the tears off her face.

She continued to step away from him, then said, “Let’s not see each other ever again, Elliot. Don’t contact me. Let’s just pretend like we never met!”

Avery clenched her fists and tried her best to hold back her tears.

She was merely curious the first time she saw the photos of that woman on Elliot’s computer.

However, seeing them again on his phone was the final straw for her.

The only photos on Elliot's phone were those of that woman.

Avery could no longer run away from the harsh reality.

The man she loved had another woman in his heart.

Avery hailed a cab by the street.

Before she got in the cab, she could not stop herself from looking back.

However, there was nothing but the lonely winter breeze behind her.

Elliot did not run after her.

It was just as Avery had thought.

No matter how much she had tried to get Elliot to talk to her about the woman, he would never tell her anything, and she had seen it as impossible for him to give the woman up for her.

The tears that Avery held back rolled down her cheeks like an exploded dam.

She got into the cab, then said to the cab driver in a hoarse voice, "Take me to the airport."

Laura had already moved out of her apartment and was waiting for Avery at the airport with their luggage.

The two of them would leave the city together in another two hours.

The cab sped through the night on the empty streets.

As Avery watched the city's skyline flash by through the window, memories of Elliot-poured into her mind.

Everything felt so real, yet so ethereal.

Her heart was broken, and her tears would not stop flowing.

Avery felt a sudden pang of pain in her stomach as the babies kicked.

The children she shared with Elliot were now seven months old and will be born soon.

It was a shame that they would never meet their father.

Four years later, it was three in the morning when a light illuminated the dark master bedroom at the Foster mansion.

Elliot opened his eyes and picked up his phone from the nightstand.

When he saw that it was a call from Professor Hough, he immediately answered.

"Elliot..."

The professor's voice on the other end of the line was weak.

"I-I'm afraid... I don't have much time left... That matter we discussed... I'll be leaving it to someone else... A student of mine... H-Her name is..."

What followed was the sound of a body falling to the ground.

Elliot leaped out of bed and felt his heart sink into an icy abyss.

There was no response no matter how many times he called out the professor's name.

It was not until another hour later that he received a call from the professor's assistant.

"Mr. Foster, I regret to inform you that Professor Hough has passed away from a chronic illness. I noticed that the last call he made was to you, so I thought you should know."

Chapter 137

A week later, Avery was carefully inspecting the property models at the sales department of the Starry River Villas.

The salesperson noticed her youthful face, then asked, "Which type of property are you interested in, Miss? We have detached villas, townhouses, and semidetached properties."

"Do you still have any detached villas available?" Avery inquired.

The salesperson's eyes lit up at her words, then said, "We do! There's one left, and the square footage is pretty big. It's over three thousand square feet... The price is also much higher than the townhouses and semi-detached houses, so—"

"Can we move in right away if I make full payment now?"

The salesperson nodded enthusiastically and said, "Of course! All of our villas are lavishly renovated and come fully furnished. All you need is your own belongings."

"Alright. How much is it?"

"Four and a half million dollars. It's pretty steep, but it's the last detached villa left in the neighborhood. If you think it's too much..."

Avery shifted her gaze to the other side of the room.

Laura was carrying Avery's sleeping daughter, Layla Tate, so they needed a place to put up their feet as soon as possible.

Avery turned back to the salesperson and said, "Show me the place."

The next moment, Avery left with the salesperson, leaving only Laura and the two children in the room.

Avery's daughter was fast asleep in Laura's arms while Avery's son was standing next to Laura.

The boy's youthful eyes were twin black obsidian orbs, bright with caution.

He was wearing a cap, a loose, white t-shirt, a pair of gray jeans, and sneakers.

•His features were exquisite yet soft, making him look like a young prince out of a storybook.

A saleswoman walked over and offered two pieces of chocolate to the boy.

"How old are you, young man?"

"What's your name?"

"Is that your little sister or your big sister in your grandmother's arms?"

Hayden Tate did not respond to any of the woman's questions and simply turned his back to

her.

Laura flashed the saleswoman an apologetic look and explained, "I'm sorry. He's not much of a talker."

"It's okay. Here's some chocolate for you," said the saleswoman as she passed the chocolates to Laura.

She then glanced at Layla's sleeping face and said, "You have a beautiful granddaughter."

Soon Avery returned from checking the villa.

She walked over to Laura and said, "The house doesn't look too bad. Should we just buy it?" Avery had chosen this neighborhood as it was closer to the old Tate estate.

"It's a little expensive," Laura said with furrowed brows. "Your father's old place cost under five hundred thousand dollars.":

Avery chuckled and said, "I wasn't even born when you guys bought that house!

Things aren't the same anymore."

She then pulled out a credit card and passed it to the salesperson.

Twenty minutes later, Avery had signed all the necessary papers and left the sales building with her family.

The salespeople gathered together and gossiped away once Avery left.

"I didn't expect that woman to be so rich! She actually paid for the house in full!"

“She’s so young and she’s already got two kids. I bet it isn’t even her own money!”

“I guess... Her husband must be super rich since she’s so gorgeous.”

At the new detached villa, Laura carried Layla into the bedroom while Hayden trailed along behind them.

“Hayden, I’m going to get some groceries for dinner later. Can you watch your sister?” Laura asked. Hayden nodded, and Laura left the room without worry.

Chapter 138

“Avery, I’m going to get some groceries. Get some rest if you’re tired,” Laura said.

Avery opened up their suitcases and took out their belongings one by one.

“Be careful out there, Mom. I’m not tired, so I’ll start unpacking our stuff.”

“Okay, I’ll head out now.”

Once Laura was gone, the house instantly fell into a calm silence.

Avery quickly finished unpacking, then got up and checked on the kids.

Layla was still fast asleep while Hayden lay next to her with his eyes shut.

When Avery left the room, she sighed as a hint of sadness washed over her face.

Hayden was a healthy child, but he was different from other kids.

He was a quiet boy that refused to speak to strangers.

He was already four years old, but he had never gone to school.

Avery had taken him for countless physical examinations.

Every single checkup came out normal, with the exception of his cerebral cortex being much more developed than the average person.

Hayden's problem was psychological.

However, even the psychiatrists they visited could not solve his issues.

It was a good thing that Layla was fine.

She might not enjoy talking to strangers, but she was at least capable of expression.

Avery's phone suddenly began to ring.

She picked it up and answered the call.

"Have you found a place to stay, Avery?"

On the other side of the line was Professor Hough's assistant, Wesley Brook.

"We did. Hayden and Layla are asleep, and my mom's out getting groceries,"

Avery replied." When are you coming back? We should meet up when you do." .

"I'll come see you when I get back," Wesley said, then his tone turned solemn as he continued, "There's something I need to tell you. About five years ago, Elliot

Foster commissioned the professor to do something for him. It was a top secret matter that the professor didn't even reveal to me. About three days ago, Elliot

Foster started gathering information on Professor Hough's students."

"What is he looking for?" Avery wondered.

"When the police were investigating Professor Hough's death, they found a recording of his last phone conversation with Elliot Foster. During that call, the professor told him that he would pass the case on to a student of his, but he died before he could mention a name. I'm guessing... You're the student that Professor Hough was talking about."

Avery was taken aback.

"There's no way I'll be able to figure out something that the professor didn't manage to solve after five years."

“No one else is more qualified than you are. Professor Hough told me once that your abilities have already surpassed his...” Wesley paused briefly, then continued, “I know you’re trying to avoid Elliot Foster, so I didn’t include your name in the list of the professor’s students. I only gave him a list of students who became doctors after they had graduated. Nobody knows that you stayed on at the professor’s lab once you had graduated. There’s no way he’ll be able to find out.”

“Thank you, Wesley!” Avery said as she let out a sigh of relief. “Drinks are on me when you get back!”

Her children were her top priority.

For the sake of their safety, she did not want to have any contact with Elliot.

“Don’t mention it. You’re in the same city as him now, so you need to be extra cautious.”

At 9 p.m. that night, Hayden and Layla lay in bed in matching pajamas.

The warm glimmer of the lamp on their nightstand twinkled in their bright, wide

eyes.

“Did you find out who our dad is, Hayden?” asked Layla.

Hayden’s face was stern as he answered, “Cole Foster.”

“Huh? Is that his name?” Layla asked excitedly as she grabbed ahold of her brother’s arm.” How did you find out? What does he look like?”

Hayden’s brows furrowed, his cool expression was the spitting image of Elliot.

He got out of bed, and Layla followed right behind him.

Hayden opened up a photo on his laptop and showed it to Layla.

“That’s Cole Foster. That’s our father.”

He had hacked into Avonsville Hospital’s system that afternoon and found Avery’s medical records from four years ago. Her maternal health file at the time stated that the father of the children was Cole Foster.

Chapter 139

Layla’s eyes widened as she gazed at Cole’s photo on the laptop screen.

“Whoa! Our dad’s so good-looking!”

Hayden shut the laptop, then thought to himself, "So what if he's good-looking? A spineless freeloader isn't worthy of our mom!"

"When can we go see Daddy? Do you think he'd be happy when he finds out about us?"

The only concept that Layla had about their father was a pure one, as Avery had never once spoken ill of him in front of them.

Every time Layla asked Avery who their father was, Avery would always patiently answer, "You don't have a father."

Hayden climbed back into bed, lay down, and stared at the ceiling.

"He won't," he answered bluntly.

Layla was upset.

"Why not? It's not like we want his money. I just want to spend some time with him!"

"Go to sleep."

"I can't sleep," Layla huffed. "I want Dad."

Hayden was disappointed in their so-called father, which put him in a bad mood.

“Shut up,” he snapped impatiently.

Layla immediately quieted down.

She could feel that her brother was annoyed, so she wrapped her little arms around Hayden, and cooed, “I’m sorry, Hayden. I didn’t mean to make you mad. If you don’t want to look for Dad, I won’t either.”

Hayden pushed Layla’s arms off of him, then said in a much calmer tone, “I’ll let you know.”

|

Layla ecstatically threw her arms around her brother once again and said, “Okay!

I’ll do anything you say!”

Avery stood in front of the floor-to-ceiling windows in the master bedroom and gazed blankly at the vista in front of her.

Four years had passed by in a flash.

It felt as if everything had changed, but it also felt like everything had stayed the same.

Avery had not been in contact with Elliot at all for the past four years, but they were still tied by the law.

Elliot had never signed the divorce papers.

Avery picked up her phone and called her lawyer.

“Ask him again tomorrow, Mr. Vaughn. If he still refuses to sign it, then please inform him that I will be taking this to court.”

She heard her own calm and determined voice and could not help but recall the way she almost fainted from crying in the airport on the night she left four years ago.

What a fool she was!

Elliot was completely unaffected.

When she had left the country, she had looked him up online because she missed

him.

That was when she saw all the news and photos of him attending all kinds of social events.

His world continued to turn even without her in it.

Avery moved on quickly after seeing how well Elliot was doing.

“Are you back in the country, Miss Tate?” asked Mr. Vaughn.

“I am.”

“Since you’re back, why not go and meet him yourself?” Mr. Vaughn sighed. “He stopped answering my calls a long time ago. I’m guessing he already blocked my number.”

Avery was surprised.

“However, if you insist on having me represent you, I can use a new number to contact him,” continued Mr. Vaughn. “To be honest, there’s a higher possibility of success if you meet him yourself.”

“In that case, please contact him using a new number!”

“Understood.”

Avery hung up the phone, then scrolled through her contacts.

Other than the fact that Aryadelle was her home, there was another reason had she returned to the country.

She wanted to rebuild the company that had gone bankrupt in her hands.

Not only did she want to rebuild Tate Industries, but she also wanted to make it even more glorious than it ever was.

She will get back every single penny and more that was stolen from her father.

She found the contact for the former HR manager of Tate Industries and dialed the number.

Chapter 140

The phone rang for a while before someone answered.

“Hi, Uncle Fred. This is Avery Tate. Do you remember me?”

“Avery Tate? Of course, I remember you! Our company wouldn't have gone under if it weren't for you! How dare you call me? Did you lose all of your money abroad and want to borrow some from me? Let me tell you right now that you won't get a penny from me!”

Avery remained calm despite the hostility coming from the other end of the line.

“That's not why I'm calling. I was just wondering if you have plans to switch companies.”

“Switch companies? Are you a headhunter now?”

“I'm planning on rebuilding Tate Industries. If possible, I'd like to bring back the old staff. If all of you are willing to come back, I can double your current salaries.”

Fred Dover’s jaw dropped!

“Are you interested?” Avery asked.

Fred took a deep breath, then said, “Did you hit the jackpot? Do you know how much doubling everyone’s salary would come up to?”

“I can afford it,” Avery responded.

“If you’re serious about it, then, of course, I’ll come back! I have nothing against money!” Fred said without hesitation, then muttered, “Did you actually hit the jackpot?”.

“Not exactly, but rebuilding Tate Industries isn’t a problem. By the way, I’ll need you to find out who bought the old company building before. I’d like to buy it back.”

“Looks like you’re for real! Give me some time... I’ll check it out right away! I’ll let you know once I find out.”

Avery glanced at the time, then said, “It’s late. Ask around tomorrow! I’m calling you now because I’m happy to be home.”

No matter how well things were abroad, she had always felt like she had never belonged there.

The next morning, Avery took Layla out for a tour of the private preschool in the neighborhood.

The preschool was designed and built to look like a castle.

It was only natural for a preschool in a high-end neighborhood to be impressive.

“Miss Tate, if you’re worried that Layla might not be used to things here, you’re more than welcome to send her here for a trial period,” said the school’s director.

She was especially fond of Layla because she looked as beautiful as a little princess.

Avery looked Layla in the eye before asking for her opinion.

“Do you want to give it a try, baby girl? It’d be a lot easier on Grandma to take you to school every day if you go here.” Layla’s hands were clenched into tiny fists as she stared at her mother with obsidian eyes and asked, “Are you sending Hayden to another school, Mommy? Can I go with him?”

Avery patted her daughter's head, then explained gently, "I'm sorry, Layla. Your brother's situation is different. Once he is ready, I'll make sure the two of you will never be separated, okay?"

Layla's expression was somber, but she nodded her head anyway.

After handing her daughter over to the school director's care, Avery made her way home.

Laura was washing the dishes in the kitchen while Hayden was playing with his new toys.

Avery walked over to her son, then said, "Shall we go take a look at a new school, Hayden? We' ll just check it out and come straight home if you don't like it."

Hayden put his toys away and got to his feet.

He was an obedient child most of the time.

He would cooperate when it involved things like seeing a new school, however, enrollment was a different matter altogether. Avery had tried both public and private schools, but none of them had worked. . .

Even the private tutor that she hired to homeschool him did not work out in the end.

She did not want to send her son to a special needs school, but she was out of ideas.

Angela Special Needs Academy was the most elite special needs school in Avonsville.

The school's exorbitant fees meant only the top one percent of families in the city could afford to send their children there.

Moreover, the academy's admissions followed a referral system.

Avery only managed to get a spot thanks to her connections.

Their cab arrived in front of Angela Special Needs Academy, and Avery and Hayden walked over to register themselves at the front gates.

Avery turned around once she was done with the registration, and she caught sight of a black Rolls-Roice that was nearing the school's exit.

Chapter 141

The black Rolls-Roice slowed down as it approached the school's iron gates and waited for them to open.

Avery instinctively picked Hayden up in her arms and turned the other way.

Soon after, the Rolls-Roice sped off in a flash.

Hayden watched as the black luxury sedan drove off into the distance, then glanced at his mother's anxious expression.

He had a feeling that she knew the person in that car.

He had never seen his mother afraid of anyone, and her fear at this moment piqued his interest.

Once Avery and Hayden walked into the school, a representative from the academy took them on a tour of the grounds.

Angela Special Needs Academy truly lived up to its reputation as Avonsville's top special needs school.

Not only was the campus an impressive sight, everything from the instructors to the facilities was world-class.

Even though the fees were high, Avery was very satisfied with the place.

She pulled her son aside and said, "Would you like to give this school a try,

Hayden? I can send you to class every morning and pick you up in the evening.

What do you think?"

Avery would not force Hayden to enroll at the school if he shook his head.

Even if he was different, he was still her baby boy.

g

She would gladly spend the rest of her life taking care of him. Which was why she was taken aback when Hayden nodded his head yes.

Was she imagining things?

Hayden actually agreed!

“Are you surè, sweetie?” Avery asked as she held her breath.

Hayden fixed his twinkling eyes on his mother and nodded once again.

Avery pulled her son into her arms; tears began to form in her eyes.

This was only the first step, but it was a giant leap from the past.

At 10 a.m. that morning, Mr. Vaughn had finally managed to get through to Elliot on the phone.

“Hello, Mr. Foster. I’m Miss Avery Tate’s lawyer, Vaughn...” Mr. Vaughn was worried that Elliot would hang up the phone, so he quickly got to the main point and added, “I’m calling because Miss Tate is back in the country.

Sure enough, Elliot did not hang up on him.

Mr. Vaughn let out a sigh of relief, then said, "Miss Tate called me last night and insisted that I get in touch with you today. She hasn't changed her mind about the divorce. She wishes for you to sign the divorce papers as soon as possible.

Otherwise, she will be taking this to court."

On the other end of the line, Elliot's breathing turned distinctly heavier.

"Mr. Foster, I can't quite understand why you refuse to go through with the divorce. Miss Tate isn't asking for a penny from you. All she wants is to divorce

you. You won't lose anything from this."

Vaughn's annoying voice led Elliot to rub the area between his brows.

"I'll only do it if she meets me face to face and asks me for a divorce!" he snapped, then hung

up.

Mr. Vaughn passed Elliot's answer over to Avery.

"Why won't you just go and meet him, Miss Tate? He said he'd divorce you as long as you meet with him!"

After a moment's consideration, Avery asked, "Will not divorcing him affect my life?”

Mr. Vaughn was shocked, then answered, “Of course, it will! First of all, all of the money you’ re earning would be considered a part of your marital property...”

“You’re kidding me. He makes a lot more than I do. Why should I be worried if he isn’t?”

“You might have signed a prenuptial agreement, but he did no such thing.

“I’ll just give him whatever he wants if he has the guts to ask me for it.”

“Has your relationship irretrievably broken down or not? I honestly can’t tell.”

“I see. Would you like to take this case to court, then? It’s a lot more troublesome than meeting him.”

Avery raised her brows, then said, “Let me think about it.”

“Alright. I wish you a smooth divorce,” Mr. Vaughn said, then added after a brief pause, “I still don’t understand why you’re divorcing him. He’s THE Elliot Foster!

Countless women couldn’ t marry him no matter how much they wanted to, and here you are insisting on getting a divorce from him.”

“I wish you good business,” Avery said, then hung up. Her head was killing her.

Chapter 142

Avery did not want to see Elliot at all.

The Rolls-Roice she saw at the school that morning was not the same one from four years ago.

He would not be driving the same car for four years, after all.

However, the driver was the same one as before.

What was Elliot doing at a special needs school?

Could it be that he was an investor at the academy?

Even so, it was unlikely that he would bother to check in on the school's operations.

After all, the Sterling Group alone was enough to keep him busy.

Chad noticed Elliot's somber expression at lunch, so he tried to cheer him up.

“Sir, Professor Hough might have a long list of students, but I'm sure we'll be able to find who we're looking for in no time.”

“Avery's back,” Elliot stated.

His voice was bleak and dull.

It sounded completely void of emotion, but it also had a deep undercurrent that was rich with feeling Chad was stunned, then snapped back to reality and asked,

“Did she contact you?” .

“No, but she will soon,” Elliot said, finally picking up his fork to eat. “She wants a divorce, but I told her lawyer to inform her that she’ll only get one if she meets me herself.”

“What if she doesn’t come to see you? It doesn’t look like the divorce has much of an impact on your lives after all.”

Elliot fired an icy glare at Chad, instantly shutting his assistant up.

Ben ordered a bottle of wine, then turned to Elliot and said, “How do you feel about her now? I’

•d hate her if I were you, but I have a feeling you don’t hate her at all. It actually looks like you kind of want to see her...”

When the wine arrived, Elliot poured himself a glass.

He took a sip of wine, then said, "I won't go as far as to say I hate her, but there's certainly no love left."

If Elliot was still in love with Avery, he would have signed the divorce papers a long time ago and granted her freedom.

He had given her everything in his power to give four years ago. Whether it was his money, his heart, or his soul, he had handed all of it to her unconditionally.

In the end, Avery threw him aside like he was nothing.

That was the first time Elliot had ever truly felt what it was like to get his heart torn into a million pieces.

Everyone had the right to their privacy, but Avery insisted on laying all of his personal matters out on the table.

If he had the courage and ability to open up, he would not have had to suffer from depression.

She had told him that she loved him and made him feel like he owned the world, then turned around and took it all away from him.

Elliot swore that he would never again love another woman, especially not Avery

Tate.

“That’s good. I thought Avery was different from other women, but I never expected her to hurt you more than anyone,” Ben said, then picked up his glass of wine and gave a toast,” Chad and I will always have your back.”

Once the glasses clinked together, a thought suddenly popped into Chad’s mind.

“By the way, Sir, your property manager told me earlier today that someone was interested in buying Tate Tower.”

“Who was it?” Elliot said as he tightened his grip around his wine glass. His fingers were white with the tightness of his grip.

“I looked into it. It was Tate Industries’ former HR manager.”

“Are you sure he can afford it?” Elliot mocked.

Chad had yet to look into the man’s finances.

He had to first confirm if Elliot was willing to sell or not.

“I can meet with him if you’re interested in selling. How much are you thinking of asking for?”

Elliot’s eyes flickered right before his body stiffened.

Ben guessed his friend's thoughts when he saw the change in Elliot's gaze.

"You're not thinking that the one who's trying to buy Tate Tower is—"

"Did you reveal your identity?" Elliot asked Chad, interrupting Ben.

Chad shook his head and said, "Not yet. They only know your property manager."

"Get the property manager to ask the buyer for his proof of assets," Elliot ordered.

"If he's not the one buying, get him to ask the real buyer for a meeting."

"Who was it?" Elliot said as he tightened his grip around his wine glass. His fingers were white with the tightness of his grip.

"I looked into it. It was Tate Industries' former HR manager."

"Are you sure he can afford it?" Elliot mocked.

Chad had yet to look into the man's finances.

He had to first confirm if Elliot was willing to sell or not.

"I can meet with him if you're interested in selling. How much are you thinking of asking for?"

Elliot's eyes flickered right before his body stiffened.

Ben guessed his friend's thoughts when he saw the change in Elliot's gaze.

"You're not thinking that the one who's trying to buy Tate Tower is—"

"Did you reveal your identity?" Elliot asked Chad, interrupting Ben.

Chad shook his head and said, "Not yet. They only know your property manager."

"Get the property manager to ask the buyer for his proof of assets," Elliot ordered.

"If he's not the one buying, get him to ask the real buyer for a meeting."

Chapter 143

Avery received a call from Fred at two in the afternoon.

"They want to meet us to discuss the purchase of the property, Avery. When will be a good time for you? Also, do you have proof of assets ready? The building is worth at least eighty million dollars at the current market price."

Fred's words took Avery by surprise.

"Didn't Tate Tower sell for half that amount back then?"

"It did, but it's prime real estate in a great location. With the rise in property prices in the past couple of years, of course, its price would increase."

"I see. I'm busy today. Let's meet them tomorrow!"

"Got it. I'll arrange it with them now."

Avery had promised to meet Tammy that afternoon.

The two best friends had kept in touch throughout the years.

They did not talk much, but their friendship remained strong.

Tammy walked into the restaurant she had agreed to meet Avery with a bouquet of red roses.

When the best friends spotted each other, they ran into each other's arms.

"You took your time coming home, Avery! I was considering breaking up with you if you still didn't come back!"

Avery and Tammy had met exactly twice in the last four years.

Tammy had been the one to visit Avery abroad both times.

Avery sniffed at the bouquet of roses, then said, "Flowers from my best friend really smell extra sweet."

"I was going to pretend like I didn't know you, but I couldn't do it! How could you not come back to see me for four whole years?!" Tammy said as she sat Avery down next to her. "You won't be leaving again after this, right?"

"Of course, I will... To travel, maybe."

"Look at you joking around with me! Where are you staying right now?"

Tammy ordered a few dishes, then passed the menu to Avery, who glanced through it and passed it back to the waiter.

“I got a place at Starry River.”

“You mean the famous Starry River neighborhood with all those luxury villas?”

Tammy gasped with wide eyes.

Avery nodded, then said, “I made a little money abroad.”

“Holy crap! Those villas cost millions! That’s not a little money, that’s a lot of freaking money! How did you do it? Can you teach me?” Tammy said as she jokingly batted her eyelashes at Avery.

“I started a company, and it did better than I expected it to,” Avery answered nonchalantly.

“You’re incredible! I doubt Jun’s made his first million since he started his own business. I don’t think he’s got the knack for business. My parents think so too, which is why they won’t let me marry him,” Tammy complained. “It’s been five years since we got together... I don’t know how much longer it’ll last.”

“Didn’t you say that your parents would let you marry him if he took over his family’s business?”

“They did, but that idiot refuses to take over his family’s company! He said that he’ll love me for the rest of our lives and take care of me with the peanuts that he makes,” Tammy said as she wiped an invisible tear from her eye. “It’s so hard,

Avery! I might never get married at this rate.”

“Don’t worry about it. If you really can’t wait to marry someone, I’ll marry you. I can take care of you. Since same-sex marriage is illegal here, we could just do it abroad,” Avery said in an attempt to cheer up her friend.

Tammy burst into laughter, almost spitting the water in her mouth.

Her tone then turned serious as she asked, “Tell me the truth, Avery. Why are you divorcing Elliot? Did he cheat on you? I never heard anything about him having an affair! He hasn’t even dated since you left.”

Tammy was always too embarrassed to ask Avery about her relationship with Elliot, but she no longer held back now that Avery was sitting right in front of her.

“If Jun had another woman in his heart, even if she never appeared in your lives, would you be able to accept it?” Avery asked.

‘Tammy was dumbfounded.

“Elliot’s got another woman?!”

Avery took a sip of water, then said, “It’s all in the past now. We broke up a long time ago, and now all that’s left is the divorce proceedings.”

“I never expected him to be such a sleazebag. All of his friends thought that you were the one who hurt him. They said he was the world’s most devoted man, and you were the cruelest woman... I think I’m going to throw up.”

“Don’t throw up. I’m eating,” Avery said calmly with an enigmatic expression.

“That’s it! Let’s not mention that b*st*rd anymore! What are your career plans after this?” “I’m thinking of rebuilding my father’s company.”

Chapter 144

Tammy gazed at Avery in astonishment.

“Exactly how much money did you make?!”

“It’s my desire to rebuild Tate Industries. It’s a wish, okay? I don’t know if I’ll succeed or not.”

Tammy felt relieved, then said, “Jun and I look like a couple of losers next to you.

I’m going to have to stay on your good side... How about I set you up with someone? I have a cousin who’s super cute. He’s only seventeen, but he’s a good kid—”

“Stop messing with me, Tammy,” Avery said as she held her head in her hand.

“You don’t like the young ones? Do you like older men? That works, too! My personal trainer is forty this year, but I drool every time I see his muscles... You should take him in, then make him your stay-at-home husband...”

Avery let out a heavy sigh.

After her breakup with Elliot, she had lost all interest in men, both young and old.

Once tea was over, Avery and Tammy made their way to a car dealership.

Tammy suggested a Bonz sedan, but a Rower SUV caught Avery’s eye.

“How’s this one? It doesn’t look too bad,” Avery asked Tammy as she pointed at a sports model.

Tammy gestured at the price tag on the car, then said, "It's perfect as long as your wallet's fat enough! It better be good for that price!"

Avery pulled out her credit card, then passed it to the salesperson and said, "I'll take this one."

She had to pick Hayden up from school later, so it would not be convenient for her to take a cab.

That evening, Avery arrived at Angela Special Needs Academy in her brand new SUV.

Hayden's teacher led him to Avery, then said, "Hayden was great today. I had a good time

•getting to know him."

Avery turned to her son with a surprised look on her face.

"Is that true, Hayden?"

Hayden shoved his hands into his pockets, then lightly tipped his head.

Avery was so moved that she was on the verge of tears.

She did not expect Hayden to finally pick a school.

Angela Special Needs Academy truly lived up to its name.

The school fees that cost hundreds of thousands of dollars were worth every penny.

The next morning, Avery and Fred made their way to the cafe where they were meeting Tate Tower's current owner.

"Did you not bring your proof of assets?" Fred asked in concern when he noticed that Avery had shown up empty handed.

"Let's see how much they're asking for first."

"They said it'd be the market price, then said we should meet up."

Once they entered the cafe, Avery ordered a cup of coffee.

The meeting was set for ten in the morning, which is exactly when her coffee arrived at the table.

When the glass doors to the cafe slid open, Avery looked up to see two men walking in... And one of them looked very familiar!

Chapter 145

The composure on Chad's face disappeared the moment he laid eyes on Avery.

The one who wanted to buy Tate Tower was none other than Avery Tate!

Avery's mind was also in a frenzy.

What was Elliot's assistant doing there?

Could it be...

When Fred saw the two men arrive, he got up to his feet and greeted the property manager.

"Good morning, Mr. Powell," Fred said, then glanced at Chad and asked, "And this is?"

"This is Mr. Elliot Foster's assistant, Chad Rayner," answered Mr. Powell. "Mr.

Foster was the one who asked me to arrange for the purchase of the building four years ago."

Fred nodded, then greeted Chad, "It's a pleasure to meet you, Mr. Rayner."

Chad shook Fred's hand and said, "Likewise."

"Let me present Miss Avery Tate," said Fred. "Miss Tate is my late boss's eldest daughter. She's the one who's interested in acquiring Tate Tower. Back when Tate Industries went under, she moved abroad for business and has now returned in hopes of buying the old building and restoring the company.”

Avery felt as if she was surrounded by an eerie silence. She could not hear a thing that Fred had said.

She found the entire thing absurd.

Life was once again playing a sick joke on her!

As if Elliot would sell Tate Tower if he found out that she was the buyer!

From what Avery learned from Tammy, Elliot probably despised her.

“Gentlemen, I’d like to speak to Miss Avery alone. Would you mind stepping out for a moment?” Chad asked as he smiled politely.

Fred immediately shot to his feet.

“I’ll wait outside,” he said to Avery, then made his way out the door with Mr. Powell trailing along behind him.

In an instant, Avery and Chad were the only two people left in the cafe.

An awkward tension filled the air.

Avery picked up her cup of coffee and took a sip.

Chad ordered a cup for himself, then turned to Avery and asked casually, “Didn’t you go abroad for graduate school, Miss Tate? How did you make enough money to afford a whole building?”

“That’s my personal business, and I’d rather keep that to myself,” Avery responded calmly.

Chad adjusted his glasses, then went straight to the point.

“Mr. Foster will go through with the divorce if you meet him face to face. Similarly,

I’m unable to comment on your interest in buying Tate Tower. You’re going to have to take that up with Mr. Foster.”

“I don’t want to see him,” Avery said bluntly.

“Is guilt what’s stopping you from seeing him, Miss Tate? All Mr. Foster wants is to end things with you face to face,” Chad said breezily. “He no longer loves you, so you won’t have to worry about him pestering you when you meet.”

Avery felt as if someone had plunged a sharp knife into her heart, but she had to maintain her composure. “I understand. I’ll meet him when I have the time. Also, I’m the last person who would feel any guilt in this matter.”

She then stood up and went to settle the check.

Chad watched Avery walk away. She was slender. Her final words echoed in his head.

It was true that there was no trace of guilt on her face.

Was there more than what meets the eye between Avery and his boss?

After Avery left, Chad returned to the office to report back to Elliot.

When Elliot received the news that Avery was the one who wanted to buy Tatě Tower, his expression did not waver one bit. He had already figured that out by himself.

Chapter 146

“She hasn’t changed much. She’s still young and beautiful, but there was something very different about her temperament.”

Chat reported to Elliot what had transpired when he had met Avery.

“She’s a lot more composed than she used to be. She has the air of someone who has made it. I wonder how she has managed to make that much money in a few short years.”

Ben pulled out a stack of files, then said, “I looked into it and found out that she had started a company called Alpha Technologies with a business partner three years ago. The company mainly sells drones. I'm guessing she used the program that her father had left behind. I heard that the program itself wasn't complete, so she probably found someone to perfect it for her. Otherwise, sales wouldn't be through the roof."

"She's no longer the same helpless, little Avery Tate from four years ago."

"I never found her to be helpless. She might not have had much money four years ago, but she had a mind of her own. How did you think she managed to drive the boss insane?" Chad mused.

"That's true," Ben agreed. "She's pretty impressive now! Even with the asking price of a hundred and fifty million, I'm sure she will be able to afford it."

Chad glanced at Elliot, who had been silent the entire time, and asked, "Will you sell, Sir? She's very interested."

Elliot shifted his gaze from his laptop screen, then responded coldly, "I'll wait for her to come to me."

That afternoon, a man and a woman were sitting by the window of a high-end restaurant.

The man was Cole Foster, and the young woman was the daughter of one of the city's top financial groups.

"My uncle is Elliot Foster. I see him every week, and he's really close to my father," Cole said, lying through his teeth. "I'll take you to meet him if we start dating."

"Why won't you work at your uncle's company, then? Sterling Group, wasn't it?"

asked the woman.

"I don't want to depend on him. I want to make a name for myself."

"I see. How many girlfriends have you had before?"

"Just two," answered Cole. "One in college, then one after I graduated. I haven't dated in the last four years because work's been busy."

"Do you stay in touch with your exes?" asked the woman.

"Not since we broke up. I don't like getting entangled in past relationships. We became strangers after we broke up. I wouldn't give them another look even if they came back begging on their knees."

The woman nodded at Cole's answer, seemingly satisfied with what she heard.

At that moment, a tiny hand reached out and grabbed ahold of Cole's sleeve.

"Daddy... Do you not want Mommy and me anymore? This lady isn't as pretty as Mommy, and Mommy's younger than she is. Do you like this lady for her money?

Daddy! Please don't leave Mommy and me!" Cole felt like he had just been shocked by electricity.

He was about to push away the little girl who had mistaken him for her father, but his eyes landed on Layla's adorable crying face, and his heart melted!

What a beautiful little girl!

Under her doll-like haircut and wispy bangs were a pair of sparkling, wide eyes.

Cole felt his heart skip a beat every time those eyes blinked.

"What the hell? You have a daughter? You sc*mbag!"

The young woman threw her drink at Cole's face, then picked up her bag and stormed out.

Cole wiped the tea from his face and got up to run after her.

Layla burst into a wailing sob and cried, "Daddy! Don't go! Don't leave me, Daddy!" Her heart-wrenching howl attracted the attention of everyone in the restaurant.

Cole was defeated.

“You got the wrong guy! I’m not your Daddy! I’m not even married! How could I have a daughter as big as you? Please don’t cry! I’m begging you! Stop crying, please!”

When Layla saw from the corner of her eye that the young woman had sped off in her car, her tears came to a halt.

“You don’t look like my Daddy. My Daddy wouldn’t leave me.”

Layla sniffled, then reached out her hand and asked, “Could I borrow your phone, Sir? I lost my Daddy.”

Cole clenched his teeth, but pulled out his phone and gave it to her anyway.

Five minutes later, Layla walked out of the restaurant.

With one hand covering the bluetooth earpiece in her ear, she said delightedly, “I did what you told me to do, Hayden. I have infected his phone with the Trojan horse!”

Chapter 147

That evening there was a family dinner at the old Foster mansion.

“How did your date with Jenny Gibson of Gibson Group go?” asked Rosalie, turning to Cole.

Cole looked dejected and did not lift his head.

“Your grandmother just asked you a question, Cole!” Olivia snapped as she threw a glare at her son. “Didn’t you say the other day that you’ve been texting her lately?”

“Things were going fine until a little girl showed up out of nowhere,” Cole explained with a frown on his face. “She grabbed my shirt and called me daddy.

She was screaming and crying the whole time. It was embarrassing! Jenny misunderstood and ended up blocking me. I haven’t been able to call her since.”

Henry and Olivia’s faces turned glum.

They were depending on their son to marry into money to secure their place in high society.

After all, Elliot would never give them a penny no matter how powerful and wealthy he was.

Unfortunately, their plans for Cole to snag the Gibson family's eldest daughter were ruined by a four-year-old little girl!

"How did something that absurd happen?" Olivia huffed angrily. "Could the child have done it on purpose?"

"I don't think so," Cold replied. "She couldn't find her father, so she probably only mistook me for him out of fear."

The little girl's adorable face popped into Cole's mind once again, and he felt there was something strangely familiar about her.

"Now that I think about it, the kid really reminded me of someone..." he mused.

When it finally hit him, he exclaimed, "I got it! She looked like Avery Tate! The more I think about it, the more alike they look!"

The moment Henry heard Avery's name, he let out a cough as a warning to Cole.

It was an unspoken rule to never mention Avery Tate in front of Elliot.

It was a slip of the tongue on Cole's part.

"I'm sorry, Uncle Elliot. I didn't mean to, but that little girl really was the spitting image of Avery-” Cole explained to Elliot.

“That’s enough from you!” Henry roared. “Finish your food! We’re going to the Gibsons’ to explain things later!”

Cole admitted defeat and continued eating his food in silence.

On the other side of town, Avery’s family of four were having dinner at home.

After a short while, the children put down their forks and rushed into their room.

“They ate at school before coming home, so they’re not that hungry,” Laura said, then smiled and added, “I still can’t believe that Hayden finally chose a school he likes.”

Avery checked that the door to the children’s room was closed, then whispered softly, “It’s a special needs school, so it’s different from an average school.

Hayden doesn’t have classmates there. It’s just him and two teachers.”

“Classmates aren’t that important. What’s important is that he gets to have an education, which will end up giving him some advantage in life. It would be even better if he could find a stable job and take care of himself,” Laura said with a heavy heart.

“Don’t get ahead of yourself, Mom,” Avery said as she tried to cheer Laura up.

“His good health is the best happiness we can hope for.”

Laura nodded in agreement.

In the children’s room, Hayden and Layla were having a secret conversation by the window.

“Daddy’s a dirtbag,” Layla grumbled, rolling her bright eyes as her cheeks puffed in anger. “I don’t want a dirtbag for a dad, Hayden.”

Hayden’s eyes were filled with rage as he exclaimed, “Dirtbags aren’t worthy!”

“Exactly! A dirtbag isn’t worthy of being our daddy! I’d rather not have a daddy at all!” Layla huffed furiously. “Let’s teach him a lesson, Hayden! Just thinking about how he was following that lady like a puppy tonight makes me so mad!”

Hayden hopped off the bay window and said, “I’ll show him!”

At 10 p.m. that night, Avery was pacing back and forth in her room after she had taken a shower.

Even if she did not want to see Elliot, it looked like she did not have a choice in the matter. She would have to contact him soon.

Fred had contacted Tate Industries' former employees, and everyone expressed that they were willing to join the company again.

It was imperative that she reclaimed Tate Tower as soon as possible.

If Elliot refused to sell, Avery would have to give up and find another building.

She had tapped on Elliot's contact multiple times, but she had yet to find the courage to push the call button.

They had not broken up because she had wronged him, so why was she this nervous?

Avery went downstairs and out. She bought a bottle of wine and took it home.

By the time she was halfway through the bottle, her cheeks had a rosy tint to them.

Her eyes were slightly glazed from the alcohol, but her mind was clear.

Avery dialed Elliot's number, then stared at her phone screen with cold eyes. Her call was answered about ten seconds later.

Chapter 148

Avery spoke first

"Tomorrow is a weekend. Are you free?"

"In the morning or afternoon?" Elliot asked.

His voice sounded low and hoarse, yet it was still filled with the same magnetism and was just as attractive as it had been four years ago.

"In the morning!" Avery answered.

Her judgment was impaired by the alcohol. She felt particularly brave, and so, she spoke without thinking things through.

"Remember to bring along your ID and marriage certificate. If our meeting goes well, we could sign the divorce papers tomorrow morning itself!"

Elliot had not expected Avery to be this aggressive.

It was completely different from what Chad described.

"You'll regret this, Avery," Elliot said as his Adam's apple bobbed in his throat, and his grip around his phone tightened.

“I won’t f*cking regret it!”

Elliot’s words had struck a chord in Avery.

“If the divorce goes through tomorrow, I’m getting some fireworks and setting them off for the next twenty-four hours!” Avery said, then burst into laughter.

As Elliot listened to her charming laugh, he realized that something was off.

“Did you drink, Avery?” he asked.

She had never even used to touch a drop of alcohol!

Not only was she drinking now, but she was drunk.

A raging fury ignited in Elliot.

“What can you do about it?! I’ll drink when I want to. No one can control me!”

Avery yelled arrogantly.

“We’re getting a divorce tomorrow!” Elliot hissed through gritted teeth.

It was true that nobody could control Avery.

As the head of Alpha Technologies, she was worth billions.

They may be husband and wife, but that was purely in name.

No, their relationship no longer existed even in name!

Everyone around them knew that they had broken up.

Since that was the case, then it was time to put a full stop to this marriage!

Avery was clapping her hands.

Elliot was livid and hung up on her.

If he stayed on the phone, his blood pressure would reach a breaking point.

When her phone screen turned dark, Avery let out a dry laugh, then fell back heavily on the bed.

“I’m finally free! We’re finally getting a divorce!”

Avery chuckled, staring at the ceiling as hot tears rolled down from the corners of her eyes.

“Elliot... I do feel regret... I regret meeting you. I regret marrying you. I regret falling for you...

The next day, as sunlight poured in through the windows, Avery rubbed her tired eyes as she lay in bed.

Her head was pounding from all the alcohol she had consumed the night before.

She reached out to grab her phone, then saw a text message from Elliot.

He had sent her the meeting location at midnight.

Avery put her phone down and massaged her aching temples.

Once the pain began to subside, she got out of bed.

Avery arrived at the cafe that Elliot reserved at ten in the morning.

She wore a black dress with her hair pulled back. She had even dabbed on some light makeup.

However, her exquisite makeup did not manage to cover her fatigued and bloodshot eyes.

She ordered a cup of black coffee.

Half an hour later, she was finished with it.

Avery glanced at the time, then ordered another cup.

By eleven in the morning, she had already finished her second cup of coffee. She did not order a third.

Avery pulled out her phone and dialed Elliot's number.

They had agreed to meet at ten, but why was he nowhere to be seen? Did he change his mind about the divorce, or did something happen?

Chapter 149

A black car came to a stop at the front yard of the Foster mansion.

When the door to the car opened, a familiar, exquisite face appeared.

“Long time no see, Miss Tierney,” said Mrs. Cooper.

Chelsea flashed a smile and said, “Long time no see, Mrs. Cooper. Is Elliot home?”

Mrs. Cooper nodded, then said, “Master Elliot has been waiting inside since he received your call this morning.”

Chelsea nodded contentedly.

Soon after, another woman emerged from the car.

“Watch your step, Miss Sanford,” Chelsea said as she helped the woman out of the car.

Miss Sanford looked to be thirty. She looked mature and had a dignified air about her. She gave people the impression that she was a professor.

She looked up and took in the mansion standing before her.

One could not tell her emotion from her eyes.

Mrs. Cooper did not dare to ask questions. She walked in front and led the two women to the living room.

When Elliot saw them walk in, he immediately got up from the couch.

Chelsea called him that morning and told him that she had found the student that Professor Hough said would be able to help him.

The fact that Elliot was the last person the professor had talked to on the phone prior to his death had made the local news.

Some money and connections were all it took to find out the contents of the phone call between Elliot and Professor Hough.

It had taken Chelsea a long time to find Miss Sanford.

She went through the trouble of escorting Miss Sanford to Elliot just so she could be by his side once again.

It had been almost five years since she had last seen Elliot!

Chelsea had spent all those years away from Elliot, living abroad.

Now that she had the chance to return to his side once more, she immediately reached out and grabbed it.

Elliot's familiar face and his cold, restrained aura made Chelsea even more attracted to him than she had been five years ago.

Her eyes instantly reddened. .

Elliot, however, merely glanced at Chelsea before he turned his attention to Zoe

Sanford.

“Hello, Miss Sanford,” Elliot said as he offered his hand to Zoe.

“Hello, Mr. Foster,” Zoe said as she shook Elliot’s hand.

Elliot released his grip, then offered Zoe a seat.

“I’ve looked through your resume, Miss Sanford. Is it true that you’re the youngest professor at Mercy Medical Center?” Elliot asked with a twinkle in his eyes.

Chelsea drank Elliot in, but he did not pay her any attention at all.

However, Chelsea did not care even if Elliot did not see her.

She had no regrets as long as she could stay by his side.

The only thing she did not understand was why he was looking for Professor Hough and Zoe Sanford.

Elliot was healthy, and Rosalie was also in good health for her age.

Who was he seeking out medical help for?

Zoe nodded, then answered, “I am. You should have a good idea about my overall background if you’ve read my resume. I got into medical school at the age of fifteen, and I have devoted all my time since then to medicine and the sick.”

“I see,” Elliot said, then added, “I’ve arranged a place for you to stay, so you can get some rest for now. Let’s talk once you’re rested.”

“Alright,” Zoe responded with a nod.

Once Zoe was gone, Chelsea said, “Elliot...”

After watching Zoe leave, Elliot turned around and thanked Chelsea.

“Thank you, Chelsea. If you hadn’t found her, it would have taken me a long time to find her.”

There were simply too many of Professor Hough’s students to filter through.

On top of that, every single one of them had an impressive resume.

“It’s my pleasure,” Chelsea replied, then added, “Can I come back to Sterling Group, Elliot? I haven’t just sat around the past few years. I studied abroad for a year, then worked for over two years...”

She wanted to express that she was qualified for a managerial position at Sterling

Group’s PR

department

Elliot did not like owing favors, and Chelsea had done him a huge favor.

He was not particularly fond of her suggestion, but it was something that he could consent to.

“I’ll grant your request, but if you return to Sterling Group, our relationship should remain purely that of superior and subordinate.”

Elliot might as well have told Chelsea to keep her distance.

Chelsea’s heart ached, but she nodded her head.

Before she left, she asked cautiously, “Elliot, could I ask who you’re seeking medical help for? I ‘m not trying to invade your privacy. I’m just worried about

you.”

Chapter 150

“Thank you for your concern, but I don’t need it,” Elliot said.

Met with a sharp rejection, Chelsea turned and left.

The sound of a phone ringing pierced through the silent living room.

When Elliot saw Avery’s name flashing on his phone screen, his temples twitched suddenly.”

It was almost noon.

He had agreed to meet Avery that morning.

He received Chelsea’s call while he was getting ready to leave and had completely forgotten about the meeting

Elliot answered the call and said, "I'm sorry. Something came up, and I couldn't make it. I'll get my lawyer to handle the divorce proceedings."

Avery was taken aback, then said calmly, "Alright. It's the weekend, so we can't do it now. Ask your lawyer to contact me on Monday."

"Alright," Elliot said.

They were done discussing the matter, and it was logical that the call would come to an end, but Elliot prolonged it. "I will sell Tate Towers to you."

He no longer had the desire to take revenge on Avery.

All he wanted was for Shea's illness to be treated.

Shea was Elliot's fraternal twin sister, but she had a mental disability.

Their father was very strict with children.

He could not accept having a disabled child, and he refused to allow others to use her to turn the Foster family into a laughing stock.

Shea's birth had been a calamity.

- Nobody ever knew that the Fosters had a daughter named Shea.

Elliot's mind was filled with memories of his father abusing Shea during his drunken bouts.

His sister had suffered through a lot...

She had even come close to death once.

She had not escaped her father's clutches till their mother moved her and hid her.

Elliot would always feel sorry for his sister.

To him, Shea was the source of the deep pain and concern in his heart.

He was willing to do whatever it took in exchange for his sister's health.

i

He hoped that Shea could one day enjoy life as a normal person.

With the advancement in medicine, Elliot had searched for famous doctors from all over the world in hopes of finding a cure for his sister.

Zoe Sanford's appearance gave him a new sliver of hope.

Avery felt an indescribable sense of disappointment.

Elliot had spent the last four years refusing to sign the papers, and now, instead of meeting her, he had given in and agreed to sign them.

However, now that she was sitting here waiting for him, he entrusted his lawyer to deal with things.

It was hard for Avery not to think that this was Elliot's idea of revenge! At the same time, he had agreed to sell Tate Tower to her without making things difficult or asking a high price.

This was not vengeance.

This was indifference.

Elliot no longer cared for her at all.

Avery walked out of the cafe and into the blistering sunlight.

The temperature in her car was over a hundred degrees when she got in, but Avery felt nothing.

She sat in a daze, and her mind was empty of thought. It was almost as if she had destroyed all the memories she had of Elliot.

Avery snapped back to reality when her phone rang. She took a deep breath, composed herself, then answered the call.

“Hey, Wesley. What’s up?”

“Avery, do you remember Zoe Sanford?” Wesley asked with a hint of mirth in his voice. “Back then, Professor Hough chose you over her to be his protege, because she couldn’t come close to you.”

Avery's cheeks flushed as she said, "Why are you bringing this up? I don't know her that well."

"Well, Elliot Foster met with her. He thinks she's the one Professor Hough was talking about."

Wesley snickered mockingly. "Zoe Sanford can't help the person he's trying to save."

Chapter 151

Avery instantly became clear-headed.

She had a very strong feeling that the person Elliot was trying to save was probably the woman in his heart and mind.

It was impossible for her to wish them happiness.

Avery got the car on the road and turned on the air conditioning, filling the car with cold air.

She decided to go home and take the kids out for the day.

She had yet to have a day out with them since their return to Aryadelle.

"Where are we going to play, Mommy?"

Layla and Hayden were both seated in their individual car seats.

Both children were obediently seated in the back seat of the car.

Avery had not decided where to take the kids.

Compared to other children, Layla and Hayden were far more mature.

“What about the amusement park? There’s a huge one in the city that looks like a castle!” Avery suggested enthusiastically.

Layla exhaled, then said in a baby-like voice, “It’s too hot, Mommy! Can we find somewhere cooler to hang out?”

“How about a water park, then?” Avery asked.

Layla furrowed her brows and said, “I don’t like playing in a pool with all those people... It’s so dirty! Let’s just go get some ice cream, Mommy!”

Avery was speechless.

Layla was an eating machine.

“Let’s just ride around in the car, Mommy! Then we could get something nice to eat and go home once we’re full!” Layla said warmly after noticing her mother’s frown.

Hayden, who was a boy of few words, said, “Agreed.”

This was his way of seconding his sister’s idea.

Avery was defeated and gave in.

It was as if the children had social anxiety. They especially hated going to crowded places.

Even if other children found something fun and exciting, Layla and Hayden would find it childish and boring

Avery took the kids for a joyride around Avonsville.

In a flash, two hours had gone by.

At four thirty in the afternoon, Avery drove into the city, found a parking spot, and entered a nearby restaurant with the children.

It was an expensive high-end restaurant. Therefore, there were not many customers.

Avery picked a table by the window for them.

Layla and Hayden seated themselves across from their mother.

The siblings got along extremely well.

They argued occasionally, but Layla was always the one to compromise.

Avery glanced at the menu, noticed that there were pictures next to every item, then passed the menu to the children, allowing them to decide on what they wanted to order.

“Mommy, If I eat like a good girl, will you buy me an ice cream cone?” Layla asked before ordering her food. “Hayden wants one, too.”

“I don’t,” said Hayden.

“Be a good girl and eat first, okay, Layla? I’ll buy you ice cream after this,” said

Avery with a gentle smile.

Layla nodded happily.

The night before, Cole visited the Gibson family with his father to apologize and explain.

Seeing their sincerity, Jenny Gibson decided to give Cole another chance.

That day, Cole invited Jenny out for dinner.

“I’m sorry about yesterday, Jenny. Of all the men in the restaurant, that little girl just had to

•mistake me for her father. I blame it on bad luck... It’s my fault for putting you in that embarrassing situation. I thought about it all night, and I think the reason why my luck sucks is because I’ve used up all of my good luck to meet you.”

Cole was a handsome and elegant man with a good figure. He was also good at dressing up, which made him look more outstanding.

His good looks, paired with his sweet talk, amused Jenny and made her laugh.

“This is something I picked out especially for you. I hope you accept it. It’s not just a gift, but my sincerity towards you,” Cole said, then placed a red gift box in front of Jenny.

Chapter 152

Jenny glanced at the gift box, then said, “I’m getting old, Cole. I want a family and my own

kids.”

“I’m just like you, Jenny. I want a family of my own, too. We could try dating each other, and if everything goes well, we could get married and have kids,” Cole said as he stared at Jenny with eager eyes.

Jenny lowered her gaze and said, “My father has one request. If we get married, our first child, no matter boy or girl, has to take the Gibson last name.”

Cole’s face instantly changed.

“If you’re not willing, then there’s no point in continuing with dinner,” Jenny said as she picked up her bag. She looked like she was about to leave.

Cole instantly grabbed her arm and said, "I'm okay with that, Jenny. The child would be mine no matter whose last name they take. It's just... I think my parents might not be happy about it. How about we have two kids. The first one will take your last name, and the second one will take mine."

Jenny felt relieved after hearing Cole's words.

"Would your parents agree to that?"

"I'll change their minds. Listen to me, Jenny. After getting to know you the past few days, I've found myself completely infatuated with you. You're elegant and generous. You're also dignified and calm. You're nothing at all like those young girls in their twenties. You've captivated me!"

Jenny blushed from the praise.

She accepted Cole's gift.

"I've got this woman in the bag," Cole thought.

Once he married into the Gibson family, his place in high society would be secure.

He picked up his glass of wine and took a sip.

From the corner of his eye, he noticed the silhouette of a child.

It was the little girl who had mistaken him for her father yesterday!

Cole had never expected to see her again!

The little girl was holding hands with a boy who was slightly taller than her,
and they were headed for the washroom.

“Excuse me, Jenny. I’m going to the washroom,” Cole said with a soft smile. He then got up and strode toward the little girl.

He caught up to her very quickly.

When Hayden heard the approaching of swift feet, he cautiously glanced behind

him.

The moment he noticed Cole, he immediately pulled his sister into the women’s bathroom.

“Hayden! I don’t need to pee! Why did you take me in here? I just need to wash

my hands!” Layla said with furrowed brows as she looked at her brother in confusion. “You’re a boy, Hayden. You can’t come into the girl’s bathroom!”

Hayden shot her a stern look, then said quietly, “Cole Foster’s out there.”

Layla's hands shot to her mouth as worry flashed across her sparkling, obsidian

eyes.

"What do we do, Hayden? Did he see me? He's not here to catch me, is he?"

Hayden opened up the backpack he always carried around and pulled up a thin laptop.

"Lights out. Fire alarm," he said calmly in a low voice.

Five minutes later, the lights in the restaurant went out.

A second later, the restaurant's fire alarm went off. All of the customers poured out of the restaurant in a frenzy.

Avery was the only one who ran toward the bathrooms.

"Layla! Hayden!"

The children leisurely walked out of the bathroom.

One of the restaurant's staff noticed them and cried out, "Miss! Please hurry and take your children out of here!"

Avery was so terrified that she felt faint.

It was a good thing the kids were safe.

She held Hayden's hand in one hand and picked Layla up with the other, then hurried out of the restaurant.

At the same time, Cole saw the little girl from his car.

She was being carried in her mother's arms.

The mother was also holding a little boy's hand.

The car was parked quite a distance away, so Cole could not clearly see the little girl's mother's face.

However, the more he looked at the woman, the more he noted how familiar she looked.

Chapter 153

Cole could not help but think of Avery.

Avery was abroad, so the woman he was looking at could not be her.

After he sent Jenny home that night, Cole happily returned to the old mansion.

Olivia noticed the delighted look on her son's face and asked with a smile, "Did everything go well today?"

"It's in the bag. She brought up kids and said that our first child should take the Gibson last name, so I agreed.”

Cole saw the change in his mother’s expression, then quickly added, “Don’t worry,

Mom. I’ll make sure she’s on my side after we’re married. I’ll get her to willingly hand over everything the Gibsons own!”

Olivia felt relieved, then said, “I trust you, Cole. You must have the strength to ignore all these trivia matters if you want to achieve great things!”

“I’ve got this!” Cole exclaimed.

At 10 p.m. that night, Henry’s phone rang.

He answered it, only to hear Jenny’s father yelling furiously at him on the other end of the line.

“Henry! What the hell is your son doing?! How could he send those photos to my daughter? My little girl is so disgusted that she’s in tears! The marriage between our families is off!”

Henry froze.

“What photos did my son send your daughter?”

“Naked photos! Is your son sick in the head? I could brush it off as some weird fetish if he's got a good body, but he's tiny! Is he not embarrassed to show people a photo like that?!"

Henry's face reddened as the corners of his mouth twitched.

He did not know whether or not his son was well endowed, but it was a shameless act to send naked photos to a girl!

How could Cole go that far with a woman he had just met not too long ago?

Henry tightened his hand around his phone, then stormed over to Cole's room.

He kicked the door open with a bang. He went up to Cole, who was lying in bed, then yelled, "You shameless piece of sh*t! You ruined the marriage! Why did you have to send naked photos to Jenny Gibson?!"

Cole was in the middle of playing a mobile game, but his eyes widened when he heard his father's accusations. He was dumbfounded.

He got out of bed. His cheeks were flushed as he walked over to Henry and launched his defense.

"Dad! What are you wrongly accusing me of?! Why would I ever send her something like that? I 've never sent photos like that to women before!"

Henry shoved his phone in Cole's face and roared, "Mr. Gibson called me just now and told me himself! Did they wrongly accuse you? You know yourself if you did it or not! I'm so disappointed in you!"

He then turned and stomped out of the room.

With reddened eyes, Cole exited the game on his phone and opened up his text conversation with Jenny.

"Look, Mom! I never sent her those photos! The last time I texted her was when we agreed to meet this afternoon!"

Olivia glanced at the phone, but she was still disappointed.

"You could've deleted the chat history. It's over, Cole. Just sit and think about what you've done!"

After that, Olivia also walked away.

Cole was beyond outraged!

Why were they accusing him of something he did not do?

Besides, Jenny even kissed him when they said goodbye that night.

Logically speaking, she would not frame him.

Where did it all go wrong?!

In the children's room at Starry River Villa, Layla and Hayden were having a secret discussion in bed.

•"Do you think that rich lady would dump the dirtbag?" Layla asked.

"Yes," Hayden responded.

"Did we go too far, Hayden? He's still our daddy after all."

"He isn't as long as I don't acknowledge it."

Layla exhaled, then said, "By the way, where did you dig up his naked photos?"

"From his private photo album."

"I see... Why won't you show me the photos?"

Hayden pulled a long face and said, "You'd go blind."

"Why didn't you go blind, then?!" Layla said discontentedly. "I'm a boy! You're a girl, so you can't see it!"

"Fine!"

After a short tantrum, Layla reached out to hug her brother, then said sweetly,

"You're amazing, Hayden! I don't need Daddy with you to protect me!"

Chapter 154

Hayden did not respond to Layla's words, but a firm conviction materialized in his mind.

He had to become stronger and more powerful!

He had to protect his sister, his mother, and his grandmother!

On Monday, Avery met Elliot's lawyer.

Once the divorce paperwork was dealt with, the lawyer said to Avery, "Miss Tate, I've prepared the contract for the building you want to purchase."

Avery was taken aback, then asked, "He entrusted that to you?"

The lawyer nodded, then pulled out the contract from his briefcase and said,

"Please take a look. What's important is the price."

Avery took the contract and looked straight at the asking price.

Forty million dollars!

That was the amount Elliot had first bought the building for.

He would lose money if he sold Tate Tower to Avery at this price!

In the span of four years, one could get a decent interest from putting forty million in a deposit account at a bank.

"What does he mean by this?" Avery asked in confusion.

“I believe Mr. Foster decided to sell the building to you at the original price due to the fact that you were once married,” explained the lawyer.

“I don’t need him to do me this favor. I heard that the building is worth around a hundred and twenty million dollars based on its current market price,” Avery said.

“I won’t allow him to sell the building to me at a loss. I’ll give him a hundred million dollars for it.”

“I’ll give Mr. Foster a call and ask,” said the lawyer.

“There’s no need for that. Just take the contract back and change the price. We’ll just sign it ourselves. I no longer have any connection to him. He’s a businessman; profit is the priority. He won’t give you trouble for it.”

After a moment’s consideration, the lawyer nodded and said, “In that case, I’ll contact you again once the new contract is ready.”

“Alright,” Avery replied.

Over at Angela Special Needs Academy, a tragedy was playing out in the splendid, castle-like building “Stop crying! I’ll stop being nice if you don’t stop!”

“Exactly! Your parents died in a car crash last month! They may have paid us thirty years’ worth of your fees, but nobody would ever come see you again! If you don’t quiet down, then you can forget about having lunch and dinner today!”

The sound of harsh yelling intermingled with the weeping of a girl. Hayden walked by the room and took a peek inside.

In it was a teenage girl with cerebral palsy who was unable to fend for herself.

The nursing staff were chastising her for getting her breakfast on her clothes.

Hayden took a seat on the floor and booted his laptop.

His fingers began to clack away expertly at the keyboard.

Soon after, the nursing staff’s terrified screams came from the room behind him.

“Why did the roomba suddenly run into me?!”

“I don’t know! Huh? Why is the microwave lighting up?!”

21

“That’s creepy! Is this place haunted? Ahhh!”

Both nurses instantly ran out of the room, and the roomba ran right after them!

Hayden yawned lazily, then shut his laptop.

The moment he stood up, he was met with a pair of pure, beautiful eyes.

The owner of those eyes was a beautiful woman.

She had a hime haircut and was wearing a pink puffy dress.

She looked like a fairy who had mistakenly wandered into the human realm.

•"You're so cool, Big Brother! Can you get me out of here?" Shea Foster blinked her heartbreaking, wide eyes and said helplessly, "They want to open up my brain... It's going to hurt for sure... I'm so scared..."

Hayden's brows furrowed.

This woman looked at least thirty years old!

Yet she was calling him "Big Brother"! From the looks of it, she was mentally no older than three!

Chapter 155

Elliot was in his study at the mansion, passing some documents to Zoe.

"She is physically weaker than the average woman, and she is autistic, but apart from that, there is nothing wrong with her," said Elliot. "I was hoping that her I would be a little higher so that she is a little more aware of the world around her."

“Mr. Foster, is your sister enrolled in Angela Special Needs Academy?”

Elliot replied, “Yeah.”

“Can I meet her?” asked Zoe. “I need to talk to her. After that, I will conduct a full medical examination.”

Elliot raised his head and said, “Sure.”

Zoe looked at the time. “Let’s go!”

“Miss Sanford, we should discuss payment!”

They had not once talked about payment after Chelsea had brought her over.

Zoe smiled and said, “Let’s not talk about payment yet. I won’t charge you a penny if I can’t cure your sister. We can talk about payment after I cure her.”

Elliot noted that the freest service tended to be the most expensive.

He preferred that the other party state their price upfront.

“How do you deal with Chelsea? It must affect your work to come back to the country.”

Zoe replied, “Mr. Foster, I’m here on vacation. I have just finished a major project, so I’m taking two months off work.”

Elliot said, "I should give you a deposit first!"

Zoe noted his insistence. Finally, she caved in and said, "Alright, I will give you my bank details. Do what you will with that!"

He stopped frowning.

Elliot and Zoe hopped into the car at ten that morning. They were headed toward Angela Special Needs Academy.

At that moment, Angela Special Needs Academy was a mess.

Shea Foster was missing!

Elliot had hired the person responsible for her care. She used to be a nanny at the Foster family.

She was loyal to the Fosters, and she took care of Shea.

She was frightened when Shea went missing!

Shea had always been a good girl. She would not go anywhere without the company of her nanny.

Shea's nanny had instantly informed the academy when she had discovered that

Shea had gone missing

The authorities instantly got all their staff to search the entire academy.

Meanwhile, they headed toward the security room to check the security footage.

For some reason, there was no footage to be found as there was a system error!

“I called for maintenance!” A member of the security staff said. “The footage suddenly blacked out half an hour ago. We tried everything, but we couldn’t get it back on.”

The headmaster looked severe when he asked, “Will anything happen to the data?”

A member of the security shook his head and said, “We don’t know what’s the reason for the blackout. If it’s just an ordinary system error, the footage won’t be affected. I’m afraid this might be an intentional attack.”

The nanny went soft in the knees. She almost passed out. “Did someone kidnap Miss Foster? No... I have to call Mr. Foster!”

The headmaster supported her and said, “I will contact the security at the gates right away! The security guard would know if Miss Foster went out! They didn't call me to report it, that means Miss Foster has not left the academy yet!"

The nanny sighed in relief.

The headmaster called the security guard at the gates.

"I didn't see Miss Foster exit," said the security guard.

The guard, however, did not mention that there had been a blackout twenty minutes ago.

The security guard instantly left his post and checked on the electrical vault.

•The headmaster wiped the sweat off his forehead. He told the nanny, "Miss

Foster did not exit the building. As long as she's here at the academy, we will find

her!"

Chapter 156

The nanny felt awful. She nodded and said, "I will look for her!"

Thirty minutes later, Elliot had parked his car at Angela Special Needs Academy.

After he parked the car, he and Shea walked to the pink building where Shea was staying at.

She was staying alone.

She had workers tend to the chores, teach her, and take care of all her medical needs.

Elliot opened the door. The room was quiet.

He furrowed his brows.

The nanny was informed of his arrival and rushed over.

“Mr. Foster! Miss Shea is missing!” Her eyes were red from crying. “We searched the entire campus, but we still don’t know where she is... My Shea... My voice is hoarse from all the yelling. She wouldn’t ignore me if she heard my voice.”

He instantly tensed and clenched his fists!

“I told her last night that you hired an amazing doctor. I said she would recover after the surgery... She asked me what the surgery was about... I shouldn’t have told her. My answer scared her. She cried from having nightmares last night. I think she is hiding because she is afraid.” The nanny knelt on the floor in guilt.

Elliot was hurt, but he could not be mad at the nanny.

Throughout the years the nanny had tried her best to care for Shea. She had never made a mistake before.

Shea was probably hiding because she was afraid.

“You searched the entire campus, but you can’t find her?” Elliot yelled.
“Has she left the campus?!”

The nanny cried and said, “The security guard at the gates said that he did not see Miss Shea walk out the gates! Should we tell the staff to drain the campus lake? What if Miss Shea fell into the lake? She can’t swim!”

He instantly looked furious.

“I’ll order someone to drain the lake immediately!” The headmaster called someone immediately before Elliot could speak.

Suddenly, the head of security rushed over.

“Sir! Mr. Foster! The security room blacked out this morning around ten o’clock.

The security guard at the gates went to check on the electrical vault! He left his post for ten minutes! We can confirm that Miss Shea did not run out during those ten minutes.”

Elliot instantly looked furious.

Shea had the mind of a three-year-old child. She could not survive in the outside world!

People would treat her as an adult because of her appearance. They would not treat her like a child.

What if some miscreant could tell that she was atypical... Elliot felt a sharp pain in his head. He did not dare imagine what could happen to her!

He strode out of the room and ordered his entire staff to search the city!

He also rang the police and told them to acquire the security footage from the camera that lay outside the academy.

He had to find Shea as soon as possible!

Otherwise, she would be in danger!

Meanwhile, Laura was at Starry River Villa, looking at the woman Hayden had brought home. Her expression did not betray how shocked she felt.

“Grandma, someone wants to slice her head open,” Hayden explained. “I don’t want her to die. She’ll stay with us for a while.”

Laura hugged Hayden and said, "Hayden, she must have a family. Let's take her back home. Otherwise, her family will be worried!"

Hayden asked Shea, "Do you have a family?"

She did not understand what family meant, so she shook her head.

"Grandma, she's sick." He furrowed his brows and said, "Let mom cure her before we let her go."

Laura sighed and asked, "How did you come home from school? Does the teacher know you left?"

"Oh... I have to go back to school," he said. He looked at Shea and said, "Behave yourself!"

'Shea nodded obediently.

Laura watched Hayden get into a cab and left for school. She quickly called Avery after he left.

"Avery! Are you free at the moment? Come back home if you're not busy! Hayden brought a woman back home!"

Chapter 157

Avery rushed back home after the phone call.

She could not imagine how her son could have brought home a woman!

Hayden would usually ignore strangers.

He would never bring someone home.

So, who exactly was that woman?

What had she done to change Hayden?!

Avery arrived home. She saw the woman...

She instantly lost her breath!

"Avery, you're back!" Laura walked to the door. She noticed how pale her daughter was, and the harshness of her breath. Laura quickly grabbed Laura's

arm. "What's wrong? Why do you look so ill?"

Avery was staring at Shea as if she could see through her soul!

The woman with the hime haircut and the pink puffy dress had always been on her mind!

She did not expect to see her in real life!

Most unexpected was that her son had brought her home!

How had that happened?

What was her goal?

Was she there for Elliot?

Avery had a headache.

She could not figure out what was happening because she had divorced Elliot!

She would never talk to Elliot again!

That woman did not have to show up!

“Mom, go to your room! I want to talk to her alone!” Avery told her mother.

Laura could tell she knew that woman.

She could also tell that they did not get along.

However, she did not understand why her daughter held a grudge against a mentally disabled person.

Was she that vengeful? Laura looked at them with mixed emotions before she went to her room.

She did not wish for the

However, she did not know who to help.

Avery walked toward Shea after Laura left.

She was tense, and she looked angry.

“Why did you approach my son? What the hell do you want?! Elliot and I have divorced! From today on, I have nothing to do with him! Do you want to harm my child? I won't have mercy on you if you dare touch my child!"

As Avery issued her warning, she began to calm down.

The woman in front of her looked scared.

Her eyes were full of tears. Then, she wailed loudly.

The sound of a childlike sobbing filled the room!

Children sobbed differently from adults.

Adults cried in a more subtle manner. However, children cried in a primal instinctual way.

The woman in front of her cried without a care in the world.

She looked pitiful, mistreated, and helpless.

She sobbed and walked toward the bedroom.

Avery was very confused.

What was going on?

This woman was behaving strangely!

Avery followed her.

"Why are you crying? Answer me. Why are you talking to my son? Why are you in my house? Speak!" Avery sounded calmer. She was trying to be reasonable.

“Didn’t you come to my house to look for me? I’m here now. What do you want to say to me? Say it!”

Laura opened the door.

“Avery, she doesn’t understand what you’re saying!” Laura walked out. Shea instantly hid behind her. She peeped at Avery with a frightened look.

Avery was troubled. She asked casually, “Did I speak in an alien language? Or is she mentally challenged?”

“Yes! She is mentally challenged. She doesn’t understand a word I’m saying either! She kept shaking her head!” Laura sighed and said, “Hayden said someone wants to hurt her, so he brought her back. He wants you to cure her.”

Avery was speechless.

Chapter 158

“Why are you hiding here?” Elliot looked at the boy in a flat cap. There was a hint of impatience in his voice.

It was the parking lot. If his driver had not seen him, he might have reversed into the boy.

The vice headmaster instantly explained, "Mr. Foster, this boy enrolled in our academy last week. He doesn't talk to strangers."

All the students in the academy, irrespective of whether they were adults or children, had some form of mental impairment.

Elliot remembered that the boy too was atypical, like Shea. He softened.

Hayden placed his notebook into his backpack. He slung his backpack and stood up in a coolly.

He stomped on Elliot's clean leather shoes when he passed him by.

Elliot was speechless.

That punk had done it on purpose, right?

"I'm sorry, Mr. Foster! The boy didn't mean it." The vice headmaster instantly knelt and wiped his shoes with tissue paper.

Hayden turned around and glared at him.

Elliot looked at him, but he could only his features in the boy. The boy resembled

him.

The top half of his face was concealed under his flat cap.

When he saw the boy's smirk, he knew that the boy was rebellious and unusual!

He had definitely stomped on him on purpose.

Fine! No one in that academy was normal anyway!

He did not hold grudges against atypical children.

Laura arrived at Starry Sky Villa at five in the afternoon. She had just gotten back from picking

· Layla up from pre-school.

She had forewarned Layla that there was a special guest at home.

Layla was ready.

However, she was still shocked when she arrived home.

The woman was very pretty!

Her hairstyle and her dress were so unique.

Also, she was so pretty to look at. She was like a princess from a fairytale.

“Hi, Miss!” Layla walked toward Shea and greeted her.

“Hi, Sis!” said Shea shyly.

Shea was less tense when she saw Layla.

She felt more relaxed to see “a girl her age”.

She had not said anything till she had seen Layla.

Layla covered her mouth with both of her little hands. She was shocked!

“Layla, I told you she’s a special guest. She’s sick. She thinks that she is younger than you,” explained Laura.

Layla thought it was incredible. “Oh... Can I treat her like my younger sister and play with her?

Laura looked at Avery and nodded.

Layla instantly pulled Shea into the room.

Laura walked toward Avery.

She had been sitting on the sofa in a daze since she came back.

“Avery, should I pick Hayden up from school?” reminded Laura.

Avery snapped out of her reverie and said, “I’ll pick him up, Mom. Is Layla back yet?” Laura sighed and said, “She’s in her room! Stay at home! You’re too distracted, and I’m too worried. There’s food on the table. If you’re hungry, you should eat something.”

Laura walked out after she said that.

Avery massaged her sore temples and stood up. She walked toward the washroom.

She washed her face with cold water. She felt slightly more refreshed.

She walked toward the children’s bedroom and pushed the door open.

“Sis, her eyes are moving!” Shea had a doll in her hand. She had an innocent smile on her face.

“And she talks too! Pull her hand and she will speak,” said Layla. Shea tried to pull the hand of the doll. The sound system in the doll was instantly activated.

Chapter 160

Shea’s face instantly lit up. She did not seem to be pretending.

This woman did not seem to be smarter than Layla. Avery’s hatred and prejudice toward Shea gradually dissolved.

Yes, Elliot loved this woman, but the more Avery looked at her the more pity she felt for her.

After dinner, Hayden walked over to Avery.

“Is there something you’d like to tell me?” said Avery as she looked at her beloved son.

Hayden nodded. He looked rather pitiful with his doe like eyes. “I pity her,” he said.

Pity.

The word brought back a wealth of memories of the night she had left Elliot.

That night, Avery had felt as if her heart had been smashed into a million pieces.

She felt as if she had died that night, and it was all because of this pitiful woman.

She wasn't going to tell Hayden any of it.

"Yes, she is a pitiful woman," replied Avery. "I can't promise you that I'll treat her illness though."

Hayden looked up, "Why?"

"Well, she has to undergo surgery to feel better. And there's a chance she might die from the surgery.

"Mommy cannot operate on her without her family's consent," Avery tried to reason with her son.

Though he really wanted to help Shea, he could not help but agree with his mom.

"Do you know her name?" Avery asked out of curiosity.

Hayden shook his head. He walked toward Shea and asked, "What's your name?"

Shea took her time and thought hard. Finally, she uttered, "She-a. Shea."

“Shea! We will be sleeping in the same room tonight, yes?” Layla excitedly asked Shea, and Shea nodded her head with enthusiasm.

Meanwhile, Elliot was at the police station, worried sick. His sister had been missing since the afternoon.

“Mr. Tate, I’m afraid the person you are looking for has been taken by someone,” deduced the detective.

“We have checked every surveillance camera near Angela Special Needs Academy, and there is not a sign of her in any of these cameras.

“Surely, if she had left on her own, she would have taken one of the roads.”

Elliot’s eyes turned red. He exclaimed, “I am not about to let anything happen to her! I must find her!”

“Well, you could try putting up missing person’s posters advertising a handsome reward for her return. As long as the reward is substantial, you will find her in no time,” the detective suggested

That though would be the last resort.

At eight in the evening, the neon lights and the starry skies lit up the entire city.

Elliot exited the police station and headed into his black Rolls-Roice.

“Where to, boss?” asked the driver.

“Home.”

As the engine started, Elliot’s phone rang

He answered.

“Elliot, Avery has transferred over a hundred million dollars!” The call was from Ben Schaffer. “It has been deposited into your account. Damn, this woman is loaded!”

“What a hundred million dollars?” Elliot furrowed his brows. He did not understand what Ben had meant.

“What was the transfer of one hundred million dollars for?” thought Elliot.”

suddenly changed the topic. “Where are you now? You don’t sound happy about the news, is something wrong?”

“One hundred million dollars?!” Elliot could feel the veins on his forehead pop.

“Wasn’t it forty million dollars?”

•”The market rate is eighty million dollars. Avery insisted on overcompensating you. So, one hundred million dollars it is!” Ben could not pass up the chance of mocking Elliot. “Can’t believe that face of yours is a moneymaker!”

Elliot hung up. He looked up Avery on his contacts and dialed her number.

This woman had never failed to infuriate him. Not then, and certainly not now.

Avery looked at the caller ID. Her heart rate accelerated, and she felt heat coursing through the hand that was gripping her phone.

“Elliot must be worried sick about Shea,” Avery thought. “Should I tell him that Shea is with

me?!”

Chapter 161

“Avery Tate! What are you trying to prove by pulling such an act?”

Elliot’s voice was glacial.

Avery was dumbfounded. What did he mean by ‘trying to prove’?

Then it hit her. Elliot was talking about the sale of Tate Tower.

“How about the fact that you are trying to sell it to me for a mere forty million dollars?” Avery countered. “Please, I don’t need your sympathy!”

Elliot frowned, and his brows formed deep furrows.

He realized then that their relationship was an unsalvagable wreck.

Elliot had bought the building with the intention of giving it to Avery as a gift, back when they had been inseparable.

He had never thought of profiting off Tate Industries.

He was selling it to her for forty million dollars. There were no reasons to spoil her with gifts. Furthermore, Avery would never accept it as a gift now.

“Fine, we will honor the market price of the tower then!” Elliot felt a burn in his throat. “You don’t need my sympathy, and I don’t need your generosity!”

“Fine then! Return the balance to me, and please be quick!” Avery clutched her phone tightly. She was furious.

Elliot was breathing heavily. He had no more to say and hung up.

Within five minutes, twenty million dollars were transferred into Avery’s account.

Staring at the figures in her bank statement, tears welled up in her eyes. The peaceful breakup that Avery had achieved had erupted into chaos.

He was a rose full of thorns, but so was she.

She was contemplating whether or not to tell Elliot about Shea. However, the phone call proved how little he had thought of her.

.Fine, good luck looking for Shea all by yourself!

Avery lay on the bed staring blankly at the ceiling.

She felt trapped in the situation, and this was all Hayden's fault. He just had to bring that Shea woman back home.

She had thought that she was finally free from Elliot's mess after the divorce, but Shea was now soundly sleeping in her daughter's bed.

She found herself falling again and again into the same sticky situation.

Avery thought that even if she were to send Shea back right now, he would not believe her story and accuse her of kidnapping Shea instead.

Avery was distraught. She pulled up her sheets and hid beneath them.

Moments later, her cell phone rang, dragging her back to reality.

Avery sighed and got up. She felt for her phone and took the call.

"Avery, I saw that woman Elliot was with!" It was Tammy on the phone. She sounded both shocked and furious, "Elliot Foster is a vicious, vicious man!

How

could he do this to you?"

"We got a divorce today." Avery felt energetic from her short nap. "How did
you

come to know about this?"

"His company put out a missing person's notice. They are looking for a woman

named Shea, and if anyone could provide a lead, they will be rewarded one hundred and twenty million dollars.

"And that is not all! If they find her, they will be given a whopping two hundred and forty million dollars as a reward! Oh dear god, it broke the internet!"

Tammy had yet to catch her breath, but she pushed on. "Avery, it's no wonder you fell for it. I even asked Jun about this, and he has not the slightest clue who Shea

is"

Avery's heart felt as calm as the dead sea.

She did not feel a thing, after all, she was already numb.

"Avery, I am fuming right now. He is spending two hundred and forty million dollars just to look for this woman. One can only imagine how important she is to him!"

“Alright. What time is it now?” asked Avery.

Tammy snapped, “It is almost twelve. Oh, come on now, is that you are going to say after everything that I have told you?” Avery forced a smile, “What do you want me to say? We have already gotten a divorce.”

Chapter 162

“That’s right! How silly of me. Best decision you ever made, divorcing that man!” Tammy let out a sigh of relief. “How’s your schedule like tomorrow? I’ll buy you dinner. We are celebrating you being single at long last!”

“My schedule is packed. I own the Tate Tower now,” said Avery.

“Yes, yes, I heard all about it from Jun. It cost you a hundred million dollars, my loaded friend.

“Eighty million dollars,” said Avery, unfazed. “He returned the extra twenty million dollars to me this evening.”

“Pfft! What is this between you two? Playing around like children,” Tammy scoffed.

“I’m setting some clear boundaries between us,” said Avery.

“Well, I agree. It’s a wonderful thing you’re doing. This man is vicious. I told Jun to stay away from him!” Tammy sounded resentful.

“It’s getting late. Have a good night’s rest, I can barely keep my eyes open.” Avery was really exhausted at this point. Her eyelids felt like they weighed a thousand pounds.

Elliot had proved his love and commitment for Shea. In the eyes of millions of people, it was all very touching

This was good. She could finally let go of her feelings for Elliot.

Meanwhile, in another luxurious apartment, Chelsea had seen the million-dollar reward on the news. To Chelsea, it looked as if Elliot had completely lost his mind.

“Shea... Who?” she thought.

When and where did this woman come from?

Chelsea had overseen Elliot’s business for years, and not once had she heard of this woman called Shea.

She noticed that Shea had a hime-cut hairstyle, and she was wearing a pink puffy dress in that missing person's notice.

She remembered the time that Avery had pulled a prank on her.

She could not understand why Elliot had gotten so mad at the time.

Now, after looking at Shea's photo, she had finally understood.

No other woman, save for Shea, had a haircut like that. Shea was special.

No one could imitate her.

Tears streamed silently down her face. Chelsea raised her wine glass and downed its contents.

Feeling tipsy, she picked up her phone and called her brother Charlie who was overseas.

"Charlie...you know... Elliot has someone else in his mind all this time..."

Chelsea

could barely speak. "He's willing to spend millions of dollars on Shea! Have you heard of this woman, Shea?"

Charlie spoke, "No I haven't. Chelsea, I told you not to go back to that country, and you ignored my advice. What good has it brought you?"

"Charlie, oh my dear brother, I feel foolish, even more so than Avery."

Chelsea

began sobbing before suddenly breaking into manic laughter.

“Guess what? Avery bought the Tate Tower and she paid one hundred million dollars for it. One hundred million! I would never be able to do that, but that woman is one hell of a loaded bitch!” said Chelsea.

Four years ago, Chelsea would not even look Avery in the eye. She had thought of her as some high street commoner, and she had thought that Avery would be nobody without Elliot.

Everything had changed since then. She no longer felt confident when she heard the name, Avery Tate.

Charlie was astonished. “Wow! Since when did Avery Tate become rich?”

“Yeah. I’m the only one who’s regressing. Elliot is never going to be interested in me. Even without Shea... Avery is younger and much more successful than I will ever be. I am a disgrace...

“Hey Chelsea, get over it already!”

Charlie felt sorry for his sister. “Elliot is not who you think he is. He is just a greedy jerk. He has you, Avery, and somehow he still manages to find space in his heart for someone else.

“Plus, there is that whole thing about him murdering his father. That is a clear sign of violent tendencies! You have to stop wasting your time on this jerk!”

Chelsea pulled her hair with her fingers and mumbled “Fine... Charlie... I know what to do now

It was three o'clock at night when Layla was rudely awoken. Shea was burning up.

She forced open her eyes and touched Shea. She was having a high fever.

Layla got up and switched on the bedside table lamp.

Shea's fever had caused her skin to turn red. Confused and half awake, Shea muttered in her sleep, “Big Brother... Big Brother hug... Hug Little Shea...” Shea was having a dream about Elliot, her brother.

Chapter 163

Layla jumped off her bed and yelled for her Mommy.

Avery rushed into her daughter's room with a medical kit in hand. Her hair was a mess.

“Go to your brother’s room, Layla,” instructed Avery. She felt Shea and realized that the fever was bad.

Layla nodded. Her eyes were filled with worry, “Mommy, did Shea catch a cold?

Do I turn off the aircond?”

Avery answered, “There are many ways to catch a fever. I don’t think she caught a cold.” The temperature in the room was fine, so there was no way she could have gotten sick that way.

Avery sent Layla to Hayden’s room before she went right back to Shea.

The thermometer read at one hundred and three degrees. She must bring down

Shea’s fever immediately.

Avery began running a saline drip, and she also brought a large bowl of warm water from the washroom in an attempt to bring down Shea’s temperature.

It was three o’clock in the morning, and Avery was tending to her rival.

After everything was done, Avery sat by the bed, and she could not help but feel sorry for herself.

Why did God make her go through this? How was she going to return Shea back to Elliot?

God knows that she had never intended to cause him misery.

Avery's head felt like imploding.

Meanwhile, in Hayden's room, Layla lay down in bed and woke Hayden up. Once

Avery walked out of the room, Hayden asked Layla, "What's going on?"

"Shea has a fever, and she keeps calling for her brother in her sleep. She must be missing you, but I knew you were asleep, so I let her be," Layla sounded slightly upset.

"Mommy's there for her. She will be fine," Hayden said. "Well, you see," Hayden replied, with a sigh, "if I were to go missing, Mommy's going to be very upset and nervous about it. Not just her, even you and Grandma would be worried too."

Hayden suddenly remembered something, and said, "Mommy has a husband."

Layla was stunned, "WHAT? Mommy's husband, who is he? Is he Cole Foster?"

"No. Mommy's husband is that dirtbag dad's uncle."

Layla sat up straight and made Hayden sit up as well.

“Tell me more about it, brother,” Layla’s eyes glistened in the dark room.

“Elliot Tate,” Hayden said. “Mommy has just divorced him.”

“Is he good looking?” Layla asked hopefully. She had always paid attention to looks.

“He is very old,” answered Hayden.

Layla scoffed, looking displeased. “But he is super wealthy,” Hayden added.

“Brother, do you have a photo of him? I want to take a look at it, please,” Layla said.

“But he’s not mommy’s husband anymore,” Hayden said.

Layla felt deprived. “I can’t sleep if you don’t show it to me. Just let me take a peek. One glance. Please?”

Hayden had no choice. He got down from the bed, turned on his computer, and found a photo of Elliot for his sister.

Layla stared intently at Elliot’s face, taking it all in. “...He looks dashing! Brother, he is a lot more handsome than that dirtbag of a dad!”

“He’s a dirtbag too,” Hayden replied half-heartedly. “Otherwise, why would Mommy divorce such a man?”

Layla snapped, “Brother, we are such unfortunate siblings! Our biological father was a dirtbag, and now the ex-stepfather is one too! The Fosters are all vicious!”

Hayden shut his computer, held his sister’s hand, climbed into bed, and said,

“Time to sleep now.”

Avery sat by the Shea till five in the morning now.

After two bottles of medical saline, Shea’s temperature was back to normal. Avery dragged herself back to her room.

It was seven in the morning now, and Layla and Hayden had both gotten up and had gone to check on Shea.

Chapter 164

Layla and Hayden found Shea in a state of unrest. She was mumbling in a low voice, “Brother... Brother...”

The siblings frowned and hurried to her bedside.

Shea’s face was red, and her skin felt really warm. “She’s got a fever again! I am going to get Mommy!" Layla said as she dashed for Avery.

Hayden held Shea's hands still and tried to comfort her, "Shea! Don't worry!"

Shea opened her eyes slightly when she heard Hayden's voice.

She thought that her brother, Elliot, had come to her at last!

Shea felt as if she was dying of heat.

"Brother... hug me..." Shea cried. Hayden felt helpless. He could not hug her as he was too small when compared to Shea.

Hayden waited for his Mommy to tend to Shea. "Brother, do you not want Shea anymore? Why don't you hug me?" Shea cried hysterically. Streams of tears flowed from her eyes.

Hayden looked just like Elliot as a child. It was no wonder Shea had mistaken him for Elliot.

Avery rushed over to Shea as soon as she heard the news.

She placed her hands on Shea's forehead. Shea was worse than she had been last night. "This is not good," said Avery. "We need to take her to the hospital and get a diagnosis now."

Layla looked at Shea's flushed face that was filled with despair and asked softly,

"Mommy, is she going to die?"

"Don't worry Layla. Mommy is taking her to the hospital right now." Avery comforted her daughter as she gave Shea some medicine to bring down the fever.

Laura had gotten up earlier, and she rushed over when she heard the situation.

"Avery, do you think we should call for an ambulance?" asked Laura. Avery considered her suggestion for a moment, struggling to come to a decision.

If she called for an ambulance now, someone was bound to recognize Shea, and they would surely inform Elliot.

Once Elliot got hold of Shea, he would definitely take her to Zoe Sanford.

James had once told her that Zoe was incapable of treating Shea.

Therefore, there was no good reason to return Shea to Elliot in the state she was,

right?

Is she just going to watch Shea suffer till she dies?

"Mom, do you think I should help her?" Avery turned to Laura. Her voice was hoarse, and her hands were clenched into a fist.

Laura looked at her daughter, understanding what she was going through,
“You are not obligated to help, my dear. There is nothing wrong with that.”

“But I’m not just Elliot Foster’s ex-wife. I am also a doctor!” cried Avery.

Moments later, she took a huge breath, wiped away her tears, and helped get off the bed.
Shea

At the Sterling Group offices, everyone was talking about the same issue.

“Have you heard of Shea? What’s the deal with her and the boss?”

“Must be his lover! An underground lover. I would do the same if I were him. A pretty doll face for a lover. Don’t you think Shea looks like one?”

“Agreed. She’s the prettiest woman I’ve ever seen! It’s no wonder our boss is spending millions looking for her.”

High and low, the entire corporation could not keep it to themselves.

Chad took a sip of his coffee, “I have never heard our boss speak of her.”

Ben took a sip of his coffee too, and snapped, “I’ve known him longer, and even I have not heard of her. I thought we were best friends, but now I’m starting to doubt that. It's humiliating."

Chad tried to make Ben feel better, "Ben, I heard that Shea had gone missing close to. Angela Special Needs Academy. I took the liberty to do some digging, and found out that it was a school for people who have special needs."

Ben looked serious. "I looked it up too. This woman is not simple. Never had I thought that Elliot had a taste for people like her."

Chad gasped. "...Are you making a pervert out of our boss?"

Ben smirked and said wryly, "Why would he keep it such a secret if he wasn't one?"

Chad was convinced.

"Now I know why Avery wanted a divorce, she must have found out about this."

Ben continued, "Avery left him because of them."

Chapter 165

Ben made assumption as though he were god or Avery.

Chad really wanted to call Avery for verification, but he did not dare.

She had divorced their boss. Perhaps she would not even pick up his call.

“Ben, have you called the boss?” Chad asked.

Ben sighed resentfully, “If this woman named Shea didn’t get lost, I bet he would hide it for the rest of his life. This is something he doesn’t want to disclose. If I ask, won’t it annoy him?”

Chad continued, “Well, Shea is has yet to have been found. I guess his mood has just gotten worse.”

Hayden was at Angela Special Needs Academy when he saw the news that Elliot had spent a fortune on trying to locate Shea. He had mixed feelings about that.

“What is the relationship between Elliot and Shea?” he wondered.

He typed (Shea) into the search engine.

However, no information about her could be found at all.

‘Shea’ was her first name, and he wondered what her full name could be.

Hayden hacked into Angela Academy’s system, but he in there as well, the only name listed was ‘Shea’.

Did she not have a last name?

Or did her family deliberately do this to protect her?

Who was her family?

Hyaden had no other information about her, so the only thing he could do was continue investigating Elliot.

•After searching out Elliot's family members, Hayden frowned.

There was no one named Shea amongst the Forster family.

Elliot had only one elder brother.

This left only one other explanation for the nature of the relationship between Elliot and Shea.

That was, the relationship between a man and a woman!

If Cole Foster was a sc*mbag, then Elliot was the king of all sc*mbags!

How could he carry on a relationship of that nature with a woman who was psychologically unsound.

At the same time, Chelsea had found Zoe.

Zoe was currently living in a mansion that Elliot had secured for her. There were twenty-four hour nannies and bodyguards in the mansion to care for her.

After Chelsea came over, she was saddened to see the luxurious villa and servants.

“Doctor Sanford, can we chat outside?”

Zoe nodded.

Shea was lost, and Zoe had nothing to do.

The two were walking in the neighborhood, with bodyguards following not far away.

“Doctor Sanford, do you know who Shea is to Elliot?” Chelsea had not slept.

Once she had sobbered up, questions plagued her.

Zoe shook her head, “Miss Tierney, I didn’t ask, and he didn’t say anything.”

“Can you ask him? I’ve been by his side for many years, and not once have I heard about this woman. I’m rather shocked and curious!” Chelsea was growing agitated.

Zoe looked at her calmly, “Miss Tierney, this is a private matter. I won’t ask, and if you’re that curious, you can ask him yourself.”

“I asked him before, but he wouldn’t tell me.”

“If he won’t tell you, then why would he tell me? I’ve only met him twice,” said Zoe rationality. “Didn’t he just get divorced yesterday? At least it’s certain that he and Shea are not husband and wife.”

Chelsea said, “I know they are not husband and wife. How could he marry an abnormal woman? But he did spend a billion dollars on her... It’s incredible.”

“If you’re jealous, you can always find ways to get him to spend money on you.”

Chelsea frowned, “I didn’t mean that! I didn’t want him to spend money on me. I just want him-“She did not truly want to reveal that all she wanted was to have

Elliot fall in love with her.

Zoe interrupted her, “The way a man proves his love for you is by his willingness to spend money on you.”

Chelsea felt enlightened.

“It’s hopeless for me now. I’m suffering because he found a woman with a disability better than me! He’s better off with Avery!” Chelsea murmured.

“You’re so selfless,” teased Zoe.

“Don’t make fun of me. I’m already miserable enough. I lost to Avery, and now, I have lost to a retard! And now I’m even doubting myself.”

Zoe looked at Chelsea and said nothing. She was suddenly very interested in

Avery.

Chapter 166

Avery definitely was an extraordinary person if she had managed to stay married to Elliot for more than four years.

Moreover, Zoe had heard about her when she was abroad.

Avery was also a student of Professor Hough, and she had published several good papers.

However, she had heard nothing more of Avery after Avery had graduated.

Avery had never worked for any major hospitals, nor had she joined the medical industry.

How far could she go with only theoretical knowledge? She lacked clinical experience.

Otherwise, why would Elliot have her treat Shea?

It was evening, and Laura looked at the two children in front of her and said, "Why don't you two eat?"

Layla puffed her cheeks and asked, "When is mom coming back?"

Laura replied, "She'll be back after she's done with her work. I can't tell for sure when will that be."

Layla asked, "Is she saving Shea?"

"Yes. Don't worry, Shea will be fine."

At this same time, Hayden said glumly, "Shea, bad woman!"

"Didn't you bring Shea back? Why did you suddenly say that about her?"
Laura

raised her hand to caress his head.

"She's with Elliot!"

Laura did not expect that he would know this.

"Hayden, these are adult matters; you don't have to worry about it. Shea is not even as smart as you or Layla. What can she do wrong? And even if she has done something wrong, it's Elliot's fault." Laura could not blame Shea for anything.

Shea was no different from a three-year-old girl.

Hayden blamed himself even more now.

If he had known about the relationship that Elliot and his mother shared and the relationship that Elliot and Shea shared, he would never have brought her home!

“Mom must be very sad,” he thought to himself. When his mother returned, he must apologize to her!

It was at eight when Elliot received a call.

“Mr. Foster, the hacker has been found! According to the trail left by the hacker, the hacker appears to be your nephew, Cole Forster!” said the person on the other side of the line, frantically.

Elliot was taken aback.

When did Cole become a hacker?

“Mr. Foster, I told the technicians to triple check it, and the results were always the same! According to the IP address, the current location of the hacker is the Foster family’s old mansion.”

Elliot clenched his hand into a tight fist. Murder flashed in his eyes.

The black Rolls-Roice whizzed out of the mansion like an arrow.

Ten minutes later, the car stopped at the gate of the old mansion.

Elliot got out of the car and strode into the living room.

“Where’s Cole Foster!?” Elliot yelled thunderously.

Henry and Olivia immediately went to find their son.

Cole, who was in his room, heard his uncle’s summons and dashed out without needing to be called a second time.

“Uncle, are you looking for me?” Cole was being forced into a divorce, and he had been down for the past couple of days. He did nothing more than play video games every single da

A loud thud echoed through the room.

Elliot was pummeling Cole in the head.

The phone in his hand fell to the ground.

“You were the hacker who attacked Angela Special Needs Academy? How dare you!” Elliot shouted angrily. “Hand Shea over! If anything happens to her, you will die, and I’ll see to it that you will be denied a proper burial!”

Cole was stunned.

“Elliot, what are you talking about? Cole isn’t a hacker. Don’t you know how useless he is? He’s just rubbish!” Henry latched on to Elliot’s hand, fearing for his son's life.

Elliot ordered Cole's notebook and mobile phone to be taken away and investigated.

Two hours later, Cole's phone was found to be faulty.

"Uncle, I don't know how my phone has been infected with Trojan! My phone is always with me... It was only the day before yesterday did I lend it to a little girl!" cried Cole bitterly. "That girl looked to be only four or five. She couldn't possibly have installed the malware, right?"

Chapter 167

"Why did that little girl borrow your phone?" asked Elliot cautiously.

"She got separated from her father, and she wanted to borrow my phone to call him. Since I met her, there is not a day that goes by that I haven't been plagued with bad luck! I think she cursed me!" Cole's cheeks were swollen, and he looked particularly miserable with the tears streaming down her face.

Elliot stared at him. He looked like a loser. "Do you still remember what she looks like?" he asked. His lips were pressed into a thin, grim line.

Cole immediately answered, "Yes! She's very beautiful! If it wasn't for her beauty,

I wouldn't have lent her my phone in the first place! As I said last time, she looks like Avery!"

When Elliot heard these four words, he looked a little defeated. "Go put on some medicine."

"Uncle, I'm fine... I want to know how my phone got set up! It automatically sent my private photos to my blind date, messing up my blind date. I suspect that it is also bugged!" Cole winced from the pain.

He had no idea how he had become a target for hackers.

He was clueless as to who he had offended.

"Cole, go back to your room and get your mother to help you with your medicine. I want to talk to your uncle alone," said Henry.

Cole got up and went to his room.

Once the two brothers were alone in the living room, Henry said, "This hacker is aggressive. First, he installed a Trojan virus on Cole's phone, and after that, he stole all of Cole's data. He then proceeded to hack into Shea's school. This is an organized attack! Why did they kidnap Shea? It's been a whole day, and they haven't taken the initiative to contact us."

This problem was also troubling Elliot.

If they wanted money, he could have easily given it to them!

- He was only worried that they would hurt Shea!

"Elliot, have you offended anyone?" Henry asked.

Elliot replied, "It must be someone in the academy. A month before the incident, I had asked someone to look through the academy's personnel records."

"Well, I believe your security must be very strict. Mother and I haven't been able to see Shea these past few years. It must be more difficult for outsiders to approach her," Henry sighed." If Shea hadn't walked off by herself, then this incident would not have happened."

"It's not Shea's fault." Elliot tightened his knuckles slightly and said guiltily, "She was just afraid, so she left."

“I don’t mean to blame her. She’s just a child. What does she know?”
Henry’s

eyes were a little red. “I hope she’s still alive.”

It was the morning of the next day, and Avery had still yet to return.

Layla’s eyes were red and filled with tears.

“Grandma, I don’t want to go to kindergarten...” Layla sniffed. “I want to see mom.”

Laura too was stressed, and she acquiesced. “Then let’s not go to the kindergarten today. Wait until your mother comes back, okay?”

Layla pursed her lips and nodded.

After breakfast, Hayden leaned toward Layla, “Do you want to see mom?”
he whispered into her ear.

Layla’s eyes instantly brightened up, and she nodded hastily.

“Grandma, I’ll take her to the neighborhood to play for a while, and we’ll be back

later.” Hayden took Layla’s hand as he spoke to Laura.

“Hayden, are you not going to school today? Ah, forget it. Go ahead and have some fun!” Laura sighed.

Hayden walked out with Layla in hand.

The siblings got into a taxi.

Hayden gave the name of a hospital.

Layla whispered, "Is mommy in this hospital?"

Hayden nodded.

Avery walked out of the operation theater of Elizabeth Hospital. She felt the world spinning around her, and she almost fell.

"Mom!" Layla threw herself in front of Avery and hugged her legs.

Hayden also came to stand by her side, and his little hand latched onto the hem of her clothes.

Avery looked at the two children as her red eyes filled with surprise.

"Why are you two here?" Avery's exhaustion was wiped away. "Who has told you that I'm here? Where's your grandmother?"

Chapter 168

Avery held Layla in her arms as Layla pointed her tiny finger at her brother.

"Big

Brother brought me here."

"Oh... Hayden, how did you know that I'm here?" Avery had a gentle smile on her face. She did not blame the child. “Did you ask Uncle Mike to check the location of my mobile phone?”

Hayden nodded.

It was Uncle Mike who had taught him how to hack.

Avery was unaware of what level his skills were currently at.

“Let’s go! Time to go home! I’m so sleepy now.” Avery could no longer think coherently.

She came out of the hospital with her two children, and she stopped a cab at the door. She fell asleep after getting in the car.

It was 11:20 a.m. when Zoe received a call from a stranger. She was instructed to go to Elizabeth Hospital.

When she reached Elizabeth Hospital, she saw Shea.

Her head was wrapped in bandages, and her eyes were closed. She looked pale!

About two hours later, Elliot received a call from Zoe.

“Mr. Foster, I found Shea! She’s in the hospital now! I performed brain surgery on her!” Zoe’s voice carried a hint of excitement.

In the past two hours, Zoe had performed a scan on Shea's brain. She found out that someone had performed a rather delicate brain operation!

Zoe asked the nurse who had performed the surgery, but the nurse said that she did not know

Seizing the opportunity, Zoe borrowed the operating theater and pretended to look busy.

After two hours had passed, she immediately called Elliot and took all the credit.

Since the good samaritan did not leave their name, Zoe herself could not be blamed for claiming credit!

Elliot rushed to Elizabeth Hospital.

After seeing Shea, his soaring heart rate began to come down.

"Dr. Sanford, what's going on?" Elliot grabbed Zoe's arm in excitement.

Zoe held his large hand and said, "Shea had fainted, and a kind person had sent her to the hospital. I happened to know one of the directors here, and he knew that I had returned to Aryadelle to work for you. So, he told me what had happened, and here I am.”

Elliot did not suspect her of lying, but he was still a little confused.

“Why do you suddenly operate on her?”

“She was not in a good condition when she was brought in. Had I delayed, even for a second, her chances of survival would have diminished. So, I performed the surgery first, and that is why I didn’t inform you of the matter sooner.” Zoe gave told her story quickly as she felt slightly guilty for the lie she told.

“Thank you!” Elliot’s eyes were filled with tears.

The fact that they had found Shea safely, and she had undergone a successful operation was the best thing that could have happened.

The past two days had been torture for him.

Fortunately, Shea was fine!

“Mr. Foster, do you want to transfer Shea to a better hospital? The conditions in this hospital are not very good,” Zoe said. “She needs to recover, and for that, she needs a better hospital.”

Elliot nodded, “I’ll transfer her now.”

Zoe nodded in satisfaction.

“Dr. Sanford, thank you for your hard work!” Elliot thanked her again. “Did you see the kind individual who brought her in? I must thank them personally.”

“When I had arrived, the person had already left. Since they didn’t stay, I presume they must want to keep their identity a secret.”

Elliot nodded, “You’re right.”

One hundred and fifty-five million!

In reality, how could anyone really resist the temptation of such a large sum of money?

He wanted to know who this kind person was.

After transferring Shea to the best hospital, Elliot called his subordinates and said, “Get the footage from Elizabeth Hospital’s surveillance camera at the main gate. I want this morning’s footage sent to me.”

Chapter 169

Elliot got a response to his request twenty minutes later.

“Mr. Foster, I contacted Elizabeth Hospital just now, and they told me that the surveillance system of the hospital is undergoing maintenance, so there is no footage.”

Hearing his subordinate’s answer, Elliot frowned.

Was it really a coincidence?

Was there truly no surveillance for that day, or was someone deliberately keeping it from outsiders?

“Clear all the news and pictures of this incident on the internet!” Elliot ordered.

“Okay, Mr. Foster. I’ll do it now.”

About an hour later, all the information pertaining to Elliot and his search for Shea, including the one hundred and fifty-five million dollar reward was gone. Even all the photos of her had been deleted.

Avery slept very deeply.

If it was not for the phone ringing, she would never have woken up.

Tammy had already called her many times before Avery finally answered her phone. Even then she had allowed it to ring for more than a minute.

“Hello...” As soon as she spoke, she yawned.

“Avery! Don’t tell me that you’re sleeping! It’s only seven! Are you taking a nap or calling it a day?!” Tammy’s voice was sharp.

Avery rubbed her sleep filled eyes and looked out the window.

It was still bright.

However, it was going to get dark soon.

“Tammy, do you have something important to say? If it’s not important, I’m going back to sleep. I’m just so sleepy.” Avery hugged her pillow. She sounded lazy.

“Didn’t you sleep last night? Are you getting a new job as a thief? Didn’t we agree to go out and celebrate your divorce? I’ve already booked the restaurant. If you don’t come, I’ll have all this food packed and sent to your place! Send me your address!” Tammy was always very decisive.

“No... You send me the address of the restaurant, and I’ll get dressed and meet you there.”

Avery got up from the bed with difficulty.

“Didn’t you just say you were sleepy? Just let me get them to pack the food, and I'll send it to you! I stole a good bottle of wine from my dad's collection...

I'm

taking it with me and storing it at your place. We'll drink it next time."

In an instant, Avery was awake.

If Tammy's boyfriend was anyone but Jun, she would not have been worried

about Tammy finding out about the children.

"Tammy! I'm not sleepy anymore! Where are you now? Send me your location,

and I'll go right there!"

"Okay! I'll send you the location! Your mom stays with you, right? Ask her to come along!"

"It's fine! She has already eaten."

With the conversation done, Avery got out of bed and gathered her long messy

hair into a ponytail. She walked to the closet and pulled out a long dress.

After changing into it, she walked out of the room.

The lights in the living room were off.

They were not at home!

She took out her phone and video called her mom.

Laura answered the call, "Avery, are you awake? I left your food in the kitchen."

"Tammy asked me to go out for dinner, so I won't eat at home. Mom, where are you?" Avery walked to the door, hooked a bag onto her shoulder, and walked out.

"I'm at the park! A parcel from abroad arrived today. It's a drone. The children really wanted to go out and play with it," Laura said as she pointed her camera in the direction of the sky.

A colorful drone, under Hayden's control, flitted here and there!

Next to it, many other children were flying kites.

Avery could not help laughing, "You guys keep on playing! I'm heading out."

•Half an hour later, she arrived at the restaurant that Tammy booked.

This was a high-class restaurant.

A handsome man was playing the piano on the stage.

"Tammy, you came alone?" Avery looked at Tammy and teased, "I thought you would bring your family along!"

Chapter 170

"It's our date, why would I bring him along?" Tammy poured a glass of wine and handed it to her. “What did you do last night? You have really bad dark circles under your eyes.”

Avery raised her glass and took a sip, “I stayed up late last night watching dramas!”

“You wish I believe that. Fess up, you have the fakest forced smile plastered across your face,” Tammy said. “Are you still into Elliot, and that is why you couldn’t sleep?”

Avery almost spat out her wine. “Tammy, do I look so gullible?”

Tammy nodded vigorously, “Although you make a lot of money, you’re still really gullible.”

Ben was pouring Elliot a glass of wine at their table in the corner of the restaurant.

This was the only high-class restaurant closest to the hospital.

“Elliot, I won’t ask about you and Shea. I asked you out to have a drink with you,”

Ben said.” By the way, is Dr. Sanford that serves you really that good?”

Elliot took the wine glass and took a sip, “She performed the operation on Shea, but she’s not awake yet.”

“Oh... If it works, how much are you going to give her?” Ben raised his brows, and his eyes were filled with curiosity

“I’ll see how much she wants.”

“What if she doesn’t want money but you?” Ben said. “Avery can’t accept that your heart belongs to Shea, but some women don’t care about that. For example, Chelsea. If Dr. Sanford doesn’t care either and wants to date you, what are you going to do?”

Elliot glanced at Ben, “She lives and works abroad. She only came here for a short time on vacation.”

“If you’re willing to marry her, she can completely give up living and working abroad,” Ben said. “You’re too attractive to women.”

“Dr. Sanford is not such a person,” Elliot said firmly.

Ben nodded and did not mention Zoe Sanford again.

“Elliot, look at that table in front. Isn’t that Tammy?” Ben pointed in a direction.

“That woman sitting opposite Tammy looks like Avery, or at least from the back it looks like it could be her.”

Ben squinted his eyes. He stood up once he was done speaking and walked over to the table.

Elliot looked in the direction that he was heading.

It was indeed, Avery.

He could recognize her back at only a glance.

Although they had not seen each other for more than four years, Chad said that she had not changed much.

“Tammy, why didn’t you come with Jun?” Although Ben addressed Tammy, he was looking at Avery. “Huh? Is this Miss Tate?”

Avery was startled to suddenly see Ben.

Ben looked at the glass in her hand and sighed, “You didn’t drink alcohol back then, but now you drink? It just so happened that Elliot and I are drinking too.

Let’s have a drink together!”

Ben did not wait for Avery to respond. He walked back to his table to get some wine and two wine glasses. He then dragged Elliot over.

Avery sat in stunned silence for a moment.

Tammy frowned. Dissatisfied, she said, "I'm having dinner with my best friend!

What makes you think you can suddenly join us?"

"The last time you had dinner with me, you had affectionately called me your brother. Don't you remember?" said Ben, teasing her. "Elliot and Avery were formerly married. Surely, they can still be friends despite their divorce. Isn't that right Miss Tate?"

Avery scratched her head in embarrassment.

Friends?

Even if she had plenty to drink, it was impossible for her to remain friends with

Elliot.

"Avery, I didn't mean to stand you up." Elliot stood beside her, holding a wine glass in one hand while his other hand was buried in his pocket.

He looked at her with his deep eyes.

She had not changed from the last time he had seen her.

However, she was more feminine now.

"You don't need to explain anything to me. I'm not angry." Avery met his eyes with a smile. "I have something to handle at the moment. I have to go."

She got up and made to leave. However, Elliot stood in front of her like a solid wall with no intention of budging.

Chapter 171

There was still plenty of wine in her glass and rice in her bowl.

If he had not shown up, she would not have excused herself. "You both enjoy your meal. I'll go." Once he finished the sentence, he stretched his long legs and walked away.

Ben immediately followed him with the wine glasses still in hand. "Elliot! Wait for

me!"

Tammy gave Avery a thumbs up, "Avery, you're still the best."

Avery gave her an innocent look, "He wanted to leave."

"Hahaha! I think he still has feelings for you," Tammy picked up her glass and clinked it against Avery's. "His eyes. His love for you is clearly reflected in them."

"Tammy, you should watch less of those idol dramas. You'll easily become stupider from watching too much."

“Didn’t you say you stayed up late last night to watch dramas?”

“I didn’t say I was watching an idol drama.” Avery took a sip of wine and continued slowly, “I’ m just living my life. I will not put men and romance above my person.”

Tammy agreed, “Avery, you’re right! It is clear that Elliot did not prioritize you.”

“Stop mentioning him. Let’s eat.” Avery whispered, “I came by car. I need to get my chauffeur to drive me home later.”

“There are many chauffeurs outside,” Tammy said. “Avery, I wanted to see your house. Why won’t you let me? I haven’t been to your new house yet.”

Tammy knew that Avery lived in Starry River, but she did not know which mansion belonged to her friend.

Avery took a sip of wine embarrassed. “Someday! My house is in a mess now...”

“Doesn’t your mother live with you? How could it be in such a mess?”

“Uh...” Avery tried hard to find a reason.

At that moment, Elliot had taken a call and made his way toward the exit.

Tammy looked at his retreating figure and said, “Avery, Elliot is leaving.”

Avery turned her head and saw Elliot leaving.

He left in such a hurry because... Has Shea awakened?

Shea had indeed awakened.

Zoe had called Elliot and told him to return to the hospital quickly.

Shea Foster was in the intensive care unit when she opened her eyes. She stared blankly at the unfamiliar room and the unfamiliar people that surrounded her.

“Shea, I’m your doctor. My name is Zoe Sanford.” Zoe wanted to instill in Shea that she was the one who had performed the surgery.

Zoe did not know what was going on in her mind now, and she could not predict how the operation had changed her.

Shea looked at Zoe blankly.

This face looked unfamiliar to her.

When Zoe held her hand, Shea instinctively pulled away.

Not long after, Elliot arrived.

When Shea saw her brother, her frenzied heart finally calmed a little.

She reached for Elliot.

Elliot immediately went to her bedside and held her delicate hand.

Seeing the unease in her eyes, Elliot said to Zoe, “Dr. Sanford, she’s uneasy around strangers. Please leave, and allow me to talk to her.”

Zoe nodded and strode out of the ward.

After the door to the ward slid shut, Elliot asked in a low voice, “Shea, does your head hurt?”

Shea nodded, “Big Brother, what’s wrong with me?”

“The doctor performed an operation on your brain. It will hurt a bit for now, but it will stop in a few days.” Elliot’s voice was gentle, and his eyes were gentler.

“Shea, how did you leave the academy? Do you remember?”

Hayden’s face appeared in Shea’s mind.

“Big Brother, you took me out with you!”

Hayden and her brother looked identical to her, and she thought them to be the same person.

Elliot frowned.

“Could she still be recovering from the surgery?” he thought.

“Big Brother, who was that person just now? I don’t know her,” Shea thought of Zoe’s face and furrowed her brows. “That’s Dr. Sanford. She performed the surgery on you.”

Chapter 172

“I don’t know her,” Shea was showing her dislike for Zoe. “I’ve never seen her... I don’t know her...”

“You fainted, and you were taken to the hospital. So, you haven’t seen her till now,” explained Elliot.

“Fainted?” she thought.

Shea cried, “No! No!”

The last thing she remembered was Avery’s face.

She had been lying in bed with a fever, and Avery had been talking to her.

She could not remember what had been said.

However, she vaguely remembered Avery’s gentle eyes and gentle voice. They comforted her greatly.

Her emotional outburst caused her head to throb and tears flowed from her eyes.

It felt almost as if her head was being torn apart.

“Shea, does it hurt? Close your eyes and don’t think about anything. When you fall asleep, it won’t be so painful.” Elliot wiped away the tears on her face with a tissue and then patted her shoulder, coaxing her to sleep.

She had just had brain surgery and needed more rest.

After coaxing her to sleep, Elliot came out of the ward.

Zoe immediately stepped forward and asked, "How is she?"

Elliot smiled, and excitement was clear in his voice. "She talks more than she has ever done before. She looks more alert as well. Dr. Sanford, the surgery was a success!"

Zoe breathed a sigh of relief. "That's great! I was worried that the surgery might not have had the desired effects, or it would not have met your expectations!"

Elliot was extremely grateful, and he could not help hugging Zoe. "Dr.
Sanford,

thank you!"

Zoe's heart beat faster, and she felt guilty, but at the same time, she also enjoyed

Elliot's gratitude

She tried to wrap her hands around Elliot. "Mr. Foster, this is my job."

Her voice made Elliot regain his composure.

He released her, but the smile remained on his face. “Dr. Sanford, it’s a tiresome job, and I thank you for it. It’s very late. You should head back and get some good rest. We’ll see you

tomorrow.”

Zoe nodded, “If Shea has anything urgent, you can call me at any time.”

Elliot nodded and sent her away.

Ben saw all this with his eyes.

Zoe Sanford. Even at first glance, he knew that she was not a simple-minded woman.

Ben had planned on entering the ward to see Shea.

The bodyguard stopped him.

Ben was confused, “What? You don’t know me anymore?”

“Mr. Schaffer, of course, I know you. It’s just that I can’t let you in without the boss’s permission,”

the bodyguard explained.

“Even if the boss’s mother and eldest brother came, I have to stop them as well.”

Ben was confused, “Why? She can’t see anyone else?”

The bodyguard answered, "She's scared of strangers."

Ben was speechless.

Elliot's protectiveness of Shea bordered on perversion!

Was she not allowed to meet anyone, just because she was afraid of strangers?

The more protective he was of her, the more it negatively impacted her illness.

"You open the door of the ward. I'll stand at the door and take a look," Ben said to the bodyguard.

The bodyguard did not comply, "Mr. Schaffer, don't put me in a difficult position."

Ben continued, "Your boss isn't here. Open the door and I'll give you a few bottles of good wine another day!"

The bodyguard was a little tempted.

At this time, Elliot appeared.

"Elliot, Dr. Sanford is gone? You said just now that the surgery was a success, and shea was now back to normal? It's amazing! Can I go in and take a look?"

Ben smiled as he walked to Elliot.

"No."

The smile on Ben's face disappeared, "You can't keep her under your protection her entire life.

It's not good for her. Let her meet other people and see new faces."

Elliot was adamant, "Now is not the time."

Ben said, "As long as you know the boundaries. How did you meet her? Does she not have a family? Are you planning on waiting for her to recover before you marry her?!" Elliot frowned deeply, "Ask another question then we're no longer friends!"

Chapter 173

Ben tugged at Elliot's arm and they walked toward the emergency exit.

"Elliot, you obviously still care for Avery. Why do you always act so irrationally?

This, Shea. No matter how beautiful she is, are you sure she can compare to Avery?" Ben wanted Elliot to wake up to reality.

"No one is more important than Shea!" Elliot shouted sharply.

"Did Avery divorce you because of this?" Ben asked him.

“Yes!”

“If that’s the case, Avery is not at fault! What is there for you to be sad about? It’s you who disappointed her!” Ben rarely spoke to him this forcefully. “As your friend,

I won’t judge you for who you choose to fall in love with. I just want you,”

“Then like Avery, you too should leave!” said Elliot, cutting him off. “I don’t need outsiders meddling in my personal affairs!”

He used the word ‘outsider’.

Ben exhaled heavily.

Forget it!

If he chose to be so obsessed, he would regret it later!

Avery was single now, but it did not mean that she would stay single forever.

Hopefully, he can continue living a life of no regrets when Avery married another man!

When Avery came home, it was already ten o’clock in the evening.

She opened the children's room door, and Layla immediately raised her little head. "Baby, why haven't you slept yet?" Avery walked to the bed and touched her daughter's little head.

"Mom! I was playing drones with Hayden today! It's fun!"

Layla said excitedly, "Uncle Mike sent them."

"Yeah, I saw it. It's getting late, baby. It's time for you to go to bed."

Layla said in an affectionate voice, "Mom, I was waiting for you to come back and kiss me."

Avery immediately kissed her daughter's cheek, "Good night, baby."

"Mom, you've been drinking!" Layla's little hand touched her mother's cheek.

Avery sighed into her hand. "I'm sorry baby. I forgot. I'll get a towel and wipe it."

Layla smiled innocently and cutely, "It's okay, Mom! You smell nice even after drinking!"

Avery's heart was instantly warmed.

She went to the bathroom to get a wet towel and wiped her daughter's cheek.

After her daughter fell asleep, she exited the room.

Back in the master bedroom, she called Mike.

“I’ve been waiting for your call! Why did you take so long to call me?” Mike was complaining on the other side of the phone.

“I had something to do today, and I just came home.” Avery switched on the hands-free mode and placed her phone on her bed. She walked to her closet and took her pajamas. “Is the drone you sent over a new product that you developed?”

“Yes! It’s amazing! Its battery life is super-duper long! And it has amazing sensors.

It’s not an exaggeration to say that it’s a robot!” Mike said excitedly. “Once it’s listed in Aryadelle, it will definitely take over the drone market here!”

Avery frowned slightly, “The team in my company hasn’t been established yet! I’ll do it as soon as possible.”

” know you’ve been busy with the divorce these last few days.”

“It was a success. Also, have you been secretly teaching Hayden how to hack?

I’ve seen him using the computer in my free time. Don’t teach him anything bad!”

“He’s interested in it, so I taught him. I didn’t charge you for those lessons, but now you are finding fault with me.”

“Let’s stop this here. I’m rather tired.” Avery ended the call and went to the bathroom with her pajamas.

It was one o’clock, and Elliot was at the hospital. He had just gotten yesterday morning’s surveillance footage.

Maintenance was indeed just a reason to refuse inspection.

He began going through the footage. He really wanted to know who was the one who had sent Shea to the hospital.

Even if they refused the reward, he just wanted to know the person’s name.

If they were to encounter any troubles in the future, he would offer his aid.

It was three in the morning, and his eyes were sore, and he was tired.

The coffee cup was empty.

There was still an hour of surveillance footage left.

He planned to get some rest after watching the rest of the footage.

Rubbing his brows, he looked at the screen again.

A familiar figure came into view! There were people entering and exiting the hospital, but he could recognize Avery at a glance!

Chapter 174

She was holding a little girl in one arm, and there was another one in her other arm!

He began to doubt himself.

Avery's face could not be seen clearly in the surveillance footage.

He suspected that this woman who looked like Avery was not Avery!

Otherwise, why did she have two children by her side?

Avery had no children!

He watched the surveillance video several times.

The more his suspicions grew, the more awake he became!

He copied the short video and closed the notebook.

It was too early for him to confirm the identity of the woman and children.

When it was dawn, he would ask Avery himself!

At six in the morning, Shea woke up.

When she woke up, she got out of the hospital bed.

She walked to the side of the escort bed, reached out, and tugged at Elliot's large hand.

"Brother... Brother..."

Elliot suddenly opened his bloodshot eyes.

“Brother, let’s go,” Shea did not want to stay in the hospital; she wanted to leave this place.

Elliot got up immediately.

He had slept only for an hour.

He felt very dizzy.

However, Shea wanted to be discharged from the hospital. He had to take her away, or she might cause him trouble.

Considering her improved intelligence after the surgery, he decided to take her home.

Half an hour later, Shea looked at the Fosters’ villa and asked curiously, “Brother, where are we?”

“This is my house. Will you live with me in the future?” Elliot asked her.

She was used to Angela Academy and had refused to leave the familiar place.

However, at the moment, she nodded.

The effects of the operation were remarkable.

Although Shea still looked like a child, her intelligence was definitely not at the level of a three -year-old.

Looking at Shea's change, Elliot could not help thinking of Zoe.

He must thank her well.

Avery did not wake up until ten o'clock in the morning.

The two children had gone to school.

Laura saw her coming out of the room, and she immediately brought breakfast to the table.

"Avery, did you sleep well?" "Yeah, I slept well last night." Avery smiled, "Mom, I'll be heading to the company later, and I'll only be back later tonight."

"If you're busy, you don't have to pick Hayden up. After I pick Layla, Layla and I will fetch Hayden," said Laura. "There are plenty of things to see to in the early stages of the company. I hope you will outdo your dad."

Avery answered, "I'll try my best."

Avery was in the meeting room of Tate Industries. She had sent the manual of their new product to all members of the staff.

“I believe that everyone here still remembers my father’s dream of building a driverless car. My idea is different from that of my father. I think it is better to take control of one’s own life. So, we won’t be building driverless cars.”

When she finished her sentence, the phone she placed on the table lit up.

She muted it.

However, she noticed the words, ‘Elliot Foster’ flashing on the screen.

Her heart was instantly disturbed.

“I’m sorry, I need to answer a call.” She picked up the phone and walked outside.

“Avery did you go to Elizabeth Hospital,” he asked the moment she answered the phone. “I saw you holding a child in your arm, and you were holding the hand of another one. Why do you have two children?”

Chapter 175

Avery felt suffocated as if someone was strangling her. It had never crossed her mind that her two children would go to the hospital to look for her.

Moreover, she did not expect Elizabeth Hospital to give out the security footage when they had promised her they would not do so.

Elliot had always been a suspicious person. Avery knew Elliot would investigate the person who brought Shea to the hospital. However, there was one thing that he would not have known. Shea was brought to the hospital the day before yesterday instead of yesterday. Hence, no matter how much of yesterday's security footage Elliot watched, he would not see that Avery was the one who brought Shea to the hospital.

"Elliot, we're divorced. It's none of your business whether or not I was at Elizabeth Hospital yesterday or however many children I was carrying or holding," said Avery with a stern voice after calming herself down.

"They are not your children. I could never have a child with you. Don't you remember you were the one who killed our child?" Avery continued to speak emotionally.

After that, Avery immediately hung up the phone. She did not want to hear any response from Elliot. She hoped that Elliot and Shea would stay together happily ever after and not try to hurt other people ever again.

When Elliot wanted to respond, the phone was already hung up. He had no chance to say the things on his mind. His mind went blank as he listened to the disconnect tone. It seemed like Avery would never forget the pain of losing their child when he forced her to have an abortion.

It was just that Avery had never mentioned it anymore. Hence, Elliot had also forgotten that they once had a child. The huge mansion was so quiet that his heartbeat could be heard clearly.

Elliot asked himself in his heart, did he regret it? After hesitating for a few seconds, the answer emerged in his mind. It was the same answer he had before.

“Master Elliot, Doctor Sanford is here,” said Mrs. Cooper when she stood beside

Elliot.

Elliot reverted to his calm self instantly. He strode toward the living room.

Zoe was in a good mood today. She wore a long bright-colored dress. She had light makeup on her face while letting her hair down. It was a different look from her previous capable and professional image.

Elliot had reached the living room and was stunned for a moment when he saw

Zoe.

“Mr. Foster, don’t tell me you can’t recognize me,” Zoe chuckled, “I am not feeling tensed anymore since the operation was a success. I’m planning to go shopping’later. I’m actually from Avonsville too. My father had brought me to settle abroad when I was very young. But I still have sentimental feelings here since Avonsville will forever be my hometown.”

Elliot nodded and asked, “Do you need someone to accompany you?”

Zoe’s eyes sparkled and she nodded, “It would be best if someone could accompany me.”

Elliot replied, “I’ll ask the driver to show you around.”

Zoe was out of words.

Elliot explained, “Shea needs someone to accompany her.”

Zoe accepted his blunt explanation and smiled to acknowledge it.

“Indeed. It’s a pity that she doesn’t like me. Otherwise, I can accompany her too,” said Zoe regretfully.

“Well, Doctor Sanford, let’s talk about your salary now,” said Elliot, “Tell me your desired amount.”

That was the reason why Elliot had asked Zoe to come over.

Zoe's face flashed with a trace of embarrassment, "Mr. Foster, the deposit you gave me is more than enough. You don't have to pay me anymore."

Elliot had given Zoe 780000 dollars before. However, he felt the amount was not sufficient enough. He had searched all over the world for professional doctors and yet, no one could make a breakthrough for Shea's condition. He had spent far more over the years than the amount of the deposit he gave to Zoe. Hence, Elliot felt he should pay Zoe more than that.

"I'll pay you 155 million dollars." Elliot offered. Elliot did not have the intention of owing Zoe any favors.

Chapter 176

It was the best way to avoid Zoe asking for other types of repayment. Giving a large sum of money was the best solution.

Zoe was shocked, "Mr. Foster, please don't. Shea's condition needs more than one surgery. You should know that even though her intelligence has improved, it has only improved a little. After she recovers from this operation, if you want to continue giving her the treatment, there may be a second, third, or more operations in the future.”

As Elliot listened to Zoe’s explanation, he kept silent. Zoe was here on her annual leave. She might not have so much time in the future.

“Doctor Sanford, what’s your future plan for your career?” Elliot asked.

Without a doubt, Elliot would want to continue the treatment for Shea. If her IQ could allow her to take care of herself, that would be the best.

Zoe understood why Elliot asked such a question. He wanted to continue treating Shea but Zoe might not have the time to stay in Avonsville in the future.

Zoe answered, “Mr. Foster. To be honest, I am at a stage where I feel lost. I am 34 this year but I haven’t had a relationship, ever. My family is extremely anxious about this. So my career is not the most important factor at the moment.”

As if Zoe had not expressed herself directly, she wanted to be blunt and said to

Elliot that he would just need to marry her to repay her or for her to continue treating Zoe.

Elliot frowned.

“Miss Sanford, I can introduce a boyfriend to you,” said Elliot after he hesitated for a moment.

Zoe felt a little disappointed. However, she said with a face, “I didn’t expect you to say such things.”

“Because I need you to continue treating Zoe,” Elliot said frankly, “I will never get married again in my life.”

Zoe looked at Elliot’s handsome face and was attracted by it.

“Mr. Foster, I don’t necessarily need to be married to someone. I think hardly any women who have been in contact with you could easily fall for other men. Why don’t we be together as a couple? Then my family won’t bother me anymore and I can concentrate on studying Shea’s case.” Zoe suggested.

Zoe had discovered Elliot’s weakness and that was Shea’s illness. She wondered since Elliot would spend such a huge amount of money to cure Shea, it was not too much to ask to be Elliot’s girlfriend.

Unless Elliot did not want to continue treating Shea. Zoe was forcing him to make a choice. Before Elliot could find another doctor to treat Shea, he could only continue to be threatened by Zoe.

At the Tate Industries, Avery had just finished her morning meeting. She was back in her office when her secretary entered the room.

“President Tate, Mr. Locklyn from Golden Technologies is here to see you. He used to work as the Vice President of our company,” the secretary reported.

Avery did not have a good impression of Shaun. When Tate Industries went bankrupt, Shaun had the nerve to call her specifically and cursed her to hell.

Avery strode into the meeting room.

Shaun stood up and walked to Avery, “Avery, it has been a while since I last saw you. You are getting more and more beautiful.”

Avery combed her hair with her finger and put it behind her ear. She said concisely, “Why are you here today?”

Shaun laughed, “You have offered to pay double the salaries in an attempt to recruit all of the former employees back. It has made Tate Industries the talk of the town. I wonder if I can come back too?"

Avery raised her eyebrows and said, "No."

The smile on Shaun's face disappeared. He thought Avery would have considered it and not be so frank

"I was just asking for fun. I am doing alright at Golden Technologies," said Shaun as he tried to recuperate some of his image.

Avery asked, "Then why are you here?"

Shaun stuttered, "I just came to visit."

Avery mocked, "Do you think Tate Industries is a zoo, or a cafe?"

Shaun got angry and left. Avery went back to her office without being affected by Shaun's actions. Her phone rang as she sat down and wanted to drink her water.

She put down the glass of water to pick up her phone.

"Avery! Elliot is in a relationship with the doctor!" Tammy said angrily, "I don't get it. Wasn't Shea the woman he loved the most? Why is he with another person then?”

Chapter 177

Avery massaged her temples with her fingers. She thought that she would not be affected by his affairs anymore after getting a divorce. So why did her heart still feel hurt? Since Elliot cared about Shea so much, why could he not just focus on Shea and be together with Shea forever?

After giving it some thought, Avery found her answer very quickly. She did not care which woman he was with. She just could not accept that he was such a scumbag. It was hard to admit that she fell in love with a scumbag as it would make her question herself about her choice in men.

“Avery, are you alright?” asked Tammy worriedly, “I shouldn’t have told you. But if I didn’t tell you, you would still find out eventually.”

“I’m alright,” said Avery as she picked up the glass of water and took a drink.

“This is his choice. As long as he is happy with it,” Avery continued to say.

“Jun said it was a request from Zoe. Her treatment was quite effective. Elliot wanted to pay her but she doesn't want any money," explained Tammy.

"You don't have to explain it to me," said Avery as she felt a little sick, "If he is not willing to, no one can force him."

"I heard Shea will need further treatment for her illness. Elliot wants Zoe to continue treating Shea so he had no choice but to agree with Zoe's request."

Tammy continued to explain. However, the more she explained, the more she felt like she was defending Elliot for his actions.

Avery sneered, "Good for them. Since Zoe doesn't mind Elliot being a womanizer, it's a win win situation for all three of them."

Tammy adhered, "That's right. Zoe has moved in with Elliot now. It's just weird.

Never mind, as long as they don't feel weird about it. Forget that scumbag. He will not exist in our topics anymore."

"Okay. I'm busy with work nowadays. Let me treat you to dinner when I'm done with work," said Avery

"Okay!" Tammy replied.

After finishing the conversation with Tammy, Avery fell into deep thought as she held the glass of water in her hands. She did not know anything about Zoe.

However, after this incident, she discovered that Zoe was quite courageous.

In actuality, Zoe was not the one who performed surgery for Shea and yet, she dared to use it as leverage to ask Elliot to be her boyfriend. Was she not afraid that Elliot would discover the truth? Nevertheless, it did not matter to Avery at all whether Elliot knew the truth.

Zoe wanted Elliot and Avery wanted nothing to do with him, not his money nor his person. The only thing Avery wanted was to live a good life with her children.

Hence, Avery did not plan on exposing Zoe's lie.

It was already nighttime when Avery returned home feeling tired. The TV in the living room

was on.

Layla rushed towards Avery, "Mummy, you are back! Are you tired?"

Avery shook her head, "I'm not tired, Layla. Do you feel tired going to school?"

"Since mummy is not tired, so is Layla," said Layla with her cute face.

She pulled Avery to sit down with her on the sofa. When Avery sat down, the TV was broadcasting financial news. Coincidentally, Elliot's face appeared on the screen.

"Layla, was it you who switched on the TV?" Avery wondered why her daughter was watching the financial channel.

Layla glanced at Hayden, "It was Hayden... I switched the channel..."

Since the financial news was showing Elliot on-air, Layla must have seen it and watched the news for the first time.

"Oh..." Avery put her arm around Layla and looked at Hayden, "Hayden, come over here. I have something to tell the both of you."

Hayden was working on a puzzle. He came over after listening to Avery. When Hayden came over, Avery pointed at Elliot's handsome face on TV and instructed her children, "You must remember his face. If you ever see him or bump into him, you must walk away and do not get close to him.”

Layla looked puzzled, “Why, mummy?”

Avery pondered and said, “He might strangle you to death if he ever finds out about the both of you.”

Those were the exact words that Elliot had said before. He said, he would strangle their children if Avery ever give birth. Since Elliot knew that Avery had two children around her, it was better to tell her children to stay away from him.

It would be best if Elliot did not look further into it. Avery was afraid that Elliot might find out that Layla and Hayden were his children.

Layla frowned immediately. She took the remote control and switched off the TV.

Originally, she was quite fond of Elliot since he was quite good-looking. However, it turned out that Elliot was a bad person.

Chapter 178

“Dinner’s ready. Go wash your hands,” said Laura as she walked out of the kitchen.

Avery immediately brought the two children to wash their hands.

It was 9:00 p.m. in the children's room. Hayden had his eyes opened as he wondered about what Avery had said before dinner.

"Layla," Hayden called out to his sister.

"Hayden, you are still awake too? I'm scared. Elliot is so handsome, but he is a bad person. Sob, sob, sob. Why does he want to strangle us?" Layla stretched out her hands hoping her brother would hug her so she would feel safe.

Hayden told Layla his speculation, "Maybe he is our father."

"What?" Layla shouted in surprise.

"Layla, we need to take matters into our own hands. We need to find the truth."

Hayden decided with a plan in mind.

"What should we do, Hayden?" Layla asked while she looked at Hayden with her big round eyes.

"Go to sleep first," said Hayden.

The next morning, the internet of the Sterling Group broke down. The network security team started to investigate the problem that caused the internet to break down.

Elliot rushed to the company as soon as he heard the news. How could the internet of such a huge organization break down so easily? It was the first time such a major disaster had happened since the company first started its operations.

When Elliot arrived at the company, the first thing he did was take a look at the IT department. After that, he returned to his office and switched on the computer. It turned out his computer was being hacked too.

All of the employees' computer screens were showing a green screen with a tongue sticking out emoji. Whereas, Elliot's screen was different. His screen was showing a provocative sentence, 'Come and strangle me, you *sshole!'. The wording was red-colored with a green colored background. The mixture of those two colors was high in contrast.

While looking at the sentence, Elliot squeezed his eyebrows tightly together.

*sshole? It was such a childish word. He tried hard and could not figure out what kind of an adult would have said it to him.

An hour later, all of the computers were recovered back to their normal operation.

However, it did not apply to Elliot's computer. The virus in his computer was different from the rest of the employees. As a result, all of the IT experts gathered in Elliot's office trying hard to decrypt the virus.

Chad guessed, "Mr. Foster, your nephew was once hacked too. Could it be the same hacker?"

Elliot said, "The previous hacker purposely used Cole's information. We have not found out his real identity yet."

"This hacker seems to be roaming around us," Chad analyzed, "First it was Cole's phone, then the security footage of Angela Special Needs Academy, and now he has targeted our company's internet. What is his goal?"

Elliot did not know either. When Shea was lost, she was not hurt. Hence, the hacker was not after Shea. Thus, the hacker must have targeted either Cole or himself.

At that moment, Hayden suddenly appeared in Elliot's mind. Elliot only knew that Hayden had just transferred into Angela Special Needs Academy. The principal said the boy does not talk to strangers. However, the teacher told Elliot that he had made a promise with Hayden that they would not get into each other's ways and that was why he continued studying at Angela Special Needs Academy.

The boy was definitely not as simple and pure as he looked. Elliot decided to go check on Hayden's detailed information once he exited the company.

Chapter 179

Elliot had reached the administrative department of Angela Special Needs Academy. He was reading Hayden's information after requesting for it.

Name: Hayden Tate

Mother: Avery Tate

Age: Four years and three months old

When Elliot saw Avery's name, it shocked him deeply.

The boy who stepped on him was actually Avery's son! In addition, the boy was already four years old. He and Avery had been separated for four years too. If the boy was Avery's son, it meant that Avery was pregnant when she left.

Elliot's body shivered as he held the information in his hand.

The administrative manager was unsure about what was happening and asked carefully, "Mr. Foster, what's wrong with this boy? Did he do anything wrong?"

Elliot swallowed his saliva and said with a hoarse voice, "Bring me to see this boy!"

The manager said awkwardly, "This boy did not attend school today. Why are you looking for him? I can call his mother."

Elliot said, "No need!"

With Hayden's information in his hands, Elliot left the administrative department.

He wanted to personally look for Avery to ask what was the deal with Hayden.

In the meantime, Chelsea was feeling awfully tense while standing outside at the garden in Elliot's house. She did not know that Zoe was such a wicked and egoistic woman, so much so that she would go as far as to lay her hands on Elliot. What was the meaning of it? Chelsea felt she had fallen into the trap that she had set up herself.

Initially, Chelsea had introduced Zoe to Elliot hoping that Elliot would forgive and accept her again. However, this woman whom she brought back was instead stealing Elliot away from her. Chelsea had totally underestimated Zoe.

“Zoe, what about your current career? Are you going to just leave it?” asked Chelsea while pretending to be calm. However, the tremble in her voice had already shown that Chelsea was in a rage.

If only Zoe was not an important person to Elliot, Chelsea would have slapped

Zoe in the face.

“It’s just a job. I can get a good job anywhere I want,” said Zoe indifferently.

Zoe knew that Chelsea was angry at her. Nevertheless, she didn’t care about it.

The fact that

Chelsea was the daughter of the President of Tierney Holdings did not bother Zoe at all. It was not as if Chelsea was the successor.

Besides, Zoe has Elliot now. She does not need to stick up for other people anymore.

“I guess you are determined to be with Elliot,” Chelsea said while gritting her teeth.

Zoe glanced and said, “Miss Tierney, are you saying no one should be together with the man you can’t have? Let me give you a piece of advice, move on. Either you try hard to increase your ability or face the reality. Elliot will never choose to be with a normal woman who has no use to him.”

Chelsea could feel her blood pressure increase tremendously. It had definitely hurt Chelsea when Zoe accused her of being useless and normal to Elliot. From Chelsea’s point of view, she was definitely better than any normal woman either through her appearance or her ability. It was very insulting for Zoe to say such a thing.

“Doctor Sanford, since you are feeling proud as a peacock, do you believe that I could pluck all of your feathers out now?” Chelsea sneered and teased.

Zoe glanced behind her and saw the bodyguards following her not far back and protecting her 24 hours a day.

“Do you believe that once I shout out loud, the bodyguards behind me will immediately rush over to protect me?” Zoe deliberately mocked, “Or should I call my boyfriend now and ask him to seek justice for me? Are you sure you want to be my enemy, Chelsea?”

Zoe did not wish to become Chelsea’s enemy. She knew that the lesser the trouble, the better it was.

Chapter 180

The most important thing was to cure Shea. Only then, could Zoe stay beside Elliot for a longer period of time.

Chelsea felt so angry that red blood vessels started appearing in her eyes, especially when Zoe mentioned ‘her boyfriend’. However, there was nothing

Chelsea could do. In the end, she could only leave.

Zoe looked at Chelsea’s back and sneered, “What a loser. I don’t even have to put in any effort.

At the Tate Industries, Avery was busy recruiting employees for various departments. Although most of the former employees have returned, the nature of their business had changed so there was a need to recruit more experienced personnel.

Mike would be flying in to help out today. Avery might be able to relax a little when Mike arrives.

“President Tate, should we look for a celebrity to be our ambassador?” asked the marketing manager while discussing the marketing plan with Avery.

Avery shook her head, “No.”

“The popular trend is endorsing a famous celebrity or cooperating with influencers...” the marketing manager tried to persuade Avery.

Avery interrupted, “No. We solely rely on our product.”

The manager was stunned, “So we don’t have to do any marketing or advertising?”

Avery replied, “I don’t mean that. It is still necessary to promote the product, just not with celebrities or influencers.”

The manager nodded, “Then how should we promote it?”

Avery put down the documents in her hand and said, "We should hire those professionals and experts in this industry to promote. If our product is irreplaceable, then we will automatically see sales coming in."

It was definite that the manager knew and understood the theory. However, the actual product was still nowhere to be seen and it caused the manager to worry quite a bit.

"President Tate, are you really feeling very confident with the product?" asked the manager.

Avery raised the corner of her lips and said, "I don't know how to explain it to you

yet. Just wait till you see the product yourself."

The manager nodded to show that he acknowledged.

Someone knocked on the door.

"Come in," said Avery.

The door was opened. A young man with exquisite facial features appeared. He was wearing asymmetrical fashion clothing.

The manager frowned and asked, "Who are you? Are you in the wrong place?"

This is Tate Industries...”

Mike strode passed the manager and gave Avery a very passionate hug.

“It’s been only a few days but I have been missing you so much!” said Mike cheesily.

The manager felt awkward and left the office immediately. It seemed like
the man was Avery’s boy toy. He guessed Avery must have changed her taste in men after living overseas for a couple of years. When the manager walked out of Avery’s

office, Avery’s secretary was on her way to knock on the door.

“Don’t go in! President Tates’ boyfriend is here. They are snuggling together,” the manager hinted to the secretary, “You should wait for him to come out before

going in.”

The secretary looked anxious, “But Elliot Foster from Sterling Group is here and wants to meet with President Tates. I can’t just let him wait downstairs, can

I?”

The manager was shocked. After taking a deep breath, the manager said to the secretary, “I’ll go down and talk with him first. I will find out why is he looking for

President Tate.”

After speaking, the manager marched towards the elevator. Coincidentally the elevator door slowly opened once the manager was in front of it. A tall man walked out from it.

The manager looked up and saw Elliot’s stern and solemn face. He was so scared that he did not even dare to breathe out loud. At that moment, he had forgotten what he had said to the secretary.

“President Foster, you are here. Let me lead you to President Tates’ office,” the manager flattered. He swiftly walked ahead of Elliot with his back bent a little to show respect.

When the manager was in front of the office door, he became a wuss. He had no courage to offend neither Elliot nor Avery.

“President Foster, this is President Tates’ office. You may go in,” said the manager.

Elliot frowned and did not hesitate to open the door with his long arm. He saw

Avery sitting in her chair while Mike was sitting on the table facing Avery and playing with her hair. They were both very intimate with each other. Bang!

Elliot

kicked the door with his leg.

Chapter 181

The loud sound startled Avery and Mike and they looked at the door with surprise. From there, they saw Elliot's face looking horrible and sunken as if someone had offended him.

"Hi, Avery's ex-husband!" Mike jumped off the table and marched towards Elliot as he greeted Elliot cheerfully.

Avery felt pain in her temples. Mike had no idea what a scary person Elliot was. It was up to Avery to stop Mike from inviting his own death. Avery quickly strode toward Mike and pulled him backward.

This action caused Elliot's anger to slowly rise. What was the relationship between the both of them, Elliot wondered? Why was Avery being so protective of this inappropriate-looking man?

"Why are you here?" Avery stood in front of Elliot as she looked up at him,
"Is

there still reason for us to meet anymore?"

Elliot clenched his fingers so tightly that the paper in his hand almost ripped apart.

He walked a step forward so that his body got closer to Avery.

Avery could feel the anger in Elliot rising and he could lash out at any time. She quickly pushed Mike out of the door and said, "Wait for me outside."

After she pushed Mike out of the office, she closed the door.

"Who is that man?" Elliot questioned Avery with her cheek slowly turning red.

There was no one else in the room spectating, so Avery was no longer afraid of

Elliot.

"Elliot, don't force me to be rude. I don't want to fight with you," Avery said as she took the piece of paper away from Elliot's hand, "This is..."

Before she could finish her sentence, she saw Hayden's name on the piece of paper. Her body started to shiver and her face was full of terror and nervousness.

Elliot looked at the change of expression on Avery's face coldly. His intuition became stronger.

"Avery Tate! Is this child mine?" said Elliot with a cold and sharp voice, without any trace of warmth.

Without any hesitation, Avery responded very quickly, “No. Our child was aborted a long time ago. This child... I adopted him while I was abroad.”

The only way to get through this was to lie. Avery must lie. If she did not, then Elliot would use all means to take the child away. He hated children and he vouched to never have children in this life.

In addition, Hayden was different from normal children. Who knew what would happen to Hayden if Elliot had custody over him.

“Adopted?” Elliot frowned as he did not expect that answer, “Why did you want to adopt a child?”

“Because he was different from a normal child. I think he’s pitiful and that’s why I adopted him. This will be the only and last time that I’ll explain it to you, Elliot.

Stop messing around in my private life. If you have so much free time on your hands, why don’t you go take care of your girlfriend?”

Avery threw the piece of paper into the shredder.

Looking at how emotional Avery was, Elliot suddenly felt as if he was being doused with a bucket of cold water. The anger he felt was instantly extinguished.

News traveled so fast that even Avery now knew he had a new girlfriend. He wanted to explain to Avery, but he realized everything he said would be funny.

“Avery, the new boyfriend of yours doesn’t seem good. You should have better taste in men.”

It was supposed to be just an advice and yet, it turned out to be mockery.

Avery was agitated by him and wanted to show him what it felt like, “Your new girlfriend is nothing good as well. You should have picked Chelsea instead. I wonder what were you thinking.”

Elliot gritted his teeth, “Have you ever seen Zoe before? To me, she is far better than Chelsea!”

Avery raised her eyebrows, “What do you know about my Mike? He may look messy and playful but he has a pure heart. Unlike someone who is not only in two but even three relationships at the same time!” Elliot’s face turned pale after being agitated. Soon, he stormed out of Avery’s office.

After Elliot left the office, Mike returned into the office.

“What does your ex-husband want with you? He looks very fierce. Did he bully you?” Mike asked as he brought Avery to her chair and gave her a glass of water.

At first, Avery was feeling very angry. After seeing how attentive Mike was, Avery felt a little relieved, “He thought you were my boyfriend and I did not deny it. Will it cause any trouble to

you?”

Mike blinked his eyes and said, “Just your boyfriend? If you want, I can be your husband. We can get married now.”

Avery said, “I don’t plan on getting married. Leave the space to write your true love’s name on it.”

Mike said with a depressed face, “I don’t plan on getting married too. My ex hurt me too deeply. I don’t think there is a true love for me in this world.”

Many years ago, Mike had a tumor inside of his brain. Avery was the one who operated on it and the operation was successful. However, in the midst of his illness, his boyfriend who Mike had been with for five years, dumped him. After the operation, Mike and Avery founded Alpha Technologies.

“Stop thinking about the unhappy thoughts. Have you found a place to stay? I can book a hotel for you if you haven’t.” Avery took out her phone and wanted to search for a hotel.

“I’m going to stay with you. I have already brought my luggage to your house.

Your mother was very friendly to me,” said Mike pleasingly, “Think about our relationship. Your house is my house. Why should I stay in a hotel?”

Avery was speechless. However, she was not going to argue with him since Mike was gay.

Hayden did not attend school today. He and Layla went to Cole’s company. They wanted to know who their real birth father was. Since Elliot was a harder target to get close to, they had no choice but to start with Cole.

During the lunch break, Cole walked out of his office and planned to have lunch at a nearby restaurant. Layla appeared in front of the office with her backpack.

Cole immediately recognized Layla since Layla had given him a long-lasting impression with her doll-like hair. He had been having nightmares for a few nights.

He dreamt that Layla was the one who had hacked his phone with a trojan horse virus.

Every time Cole woke up, he would not believe it. Who could have thought such a small child who might still be drinking milk could master the skill of the trojan horse virus.

“Kiddo!” Cole walked toward Layla and grabbed her arm, “Why are you here? Are you looking for me?”

Layla blinked her round, energetic eyes and nodded her head, “Uncle, I have been looking for you!”

“Why are you looking for me? You borrowed my phone to call your father previously but I did not find the number you dialled.” Cole held Layla’s hand and headed toward a nearby restaurant.

The sun was scorching hot.

“Because I forgot my father’s phone number. I found him afterward and my father wanted me to say thank you to you. He even asked me to bring you a gift,” said

Layla with clear pronunciation of words and perfect sentence structure.

Cole could not help but blame himself. How could he suspect such a small kid to input a trojan horse virus into his phone? Look at how pretty and pure she was.

Her father must be a well mannered gentleman.

“Did your father bring you here?” Cole asked.

Layla nodded and tried to explain, “My father works around here. He had something to do so he went back to his office.”

Before Cole could ask another question, Layla took out the gift and put it on the floor. It was a small electrical toy.

“Uncle, can you switch it on?” Layla asked.

Cole squatted down and looked for the switch. At that time, Layla moved quickly and used her fingers to pull a few strands of Cole's hair.

Chapter 183

"Uncle, don't move!" Layla screamed frantically.

Originally, Cole wanted to stand up and ask what was Layla trying to do.

However, Layla's shouting gave him a scare, so much so that he paused his movement.

"Uncle, you have grown plenty of gray hairs. Let me get rid of them for you.

People might think you are an old man." Layla took the opportunity and put the hair she pulled into a plastic bag and put it back into her backpack.

After finishing what she was doing, she patted Cole's shoulder and said, "Alright, I have removed all of it."

Cole stood up while enduring the pain he felt from his scalp, "Let me see. I don't remember having gray hairs."

Layla pointed at the air innocently, "I have already thrown it away. Why do you want to see it? It's just any normal type of gray hair."

Cole was speechless.

Layla continued to hurt Cole's heart by saying, "Your hair is very oily. I need to go wash my hands or else my hands will be stinky."

After that, Layla left while feeling disgusted after touching Cole's hair. As Cole watched Layla's back, he had dozens of questions appearing in his mind. He reached out for his hair to check the status of his hair and scalp. It was unlike what Layla said, his hair was just dry and soft, not oily at all. Why would Layla say his hair was oily? He remembered clearly that he did not have any gray hair.

What a strange little girl. That was the same feeling Cole felt the last time he met Layla. Could it be another conspiracy? With that thought in mind, he quickly took out his phone to check if his phone had been planted with another virus.

Layla trotted towards her brother. She took out the hair to show her brother.

"Am I amazing?" Layla asked proudly.

Hayden was very satisfied with Layla's performance, "I'll buy you ice cream."

"Oh yeah! Will mummy be angry since I skipped kindergarten today?"

It was more fun being out with Hayden than going to the kindergarten.
However,

Layla was worried that her mother would be upset with her.

Hayden said with a calm face, "No."

Their mother was aware every time they skipped class. However, their mother had never spoken to or scolded them for skipping. From Hayden's point of view,

kindergarten was too easy and childish for him.

"Hehe! Let's go buy ice cream. I want chocolate-flavored ice cream!" Layla hugged her brother's arm and smiled brightly.

Hayden put Cole's hair into his bag and took his sister for ice cream.
Fifteen minutes later, the two children were sitting down having ice cream.

"What should we do if our father is Elliot?" Layla looked worried, "Mummy said he would strangle us."

Hayden said, "Don't worry. I will protect you."

"Are we going to call him daddy? Didn't you say he is very wealthy?" Layla was confused.

Hayden answered, "No."

Looking at Elliot's house, Shea was recovering pretty well after her surgery. Other than experiencing headaches and refusing to eat, she was pretty quiet most of the time. Mrs. Cooper took care of her with extra caution.

It was only on the third day that Shea started to trust Mrs. Cooper a little. Although Shea still did not talk to Mrs. Cooper, she would accept the food and water Mrs.

Cooper gave her.

Mrs. Cooper was curious about the relationship between Elliot and Shea. Due to her professionalism, she did not dare to ask anything. Of all the years Mrs.

Cooper had worked for Elliot, this was the first time she saw Elliot being so tender, caring, and spoilt towards a woman.

It was different from the way Elliot treated Avery and Zoe. Although he was good to the both of them, the way he treated Shea was more like a parental type of love. He was at his most tender loving moment when he was with Shea.

Whereas, Elliot fought with Avery most of the time they were together. Perhaps it was because Shea's IQ was below average and that caused Elliot to be more patient with her, Mrs. Cooper thought. "Play outside," Shea requested after her headache eased.

Chapter 184

Mrs. Cooper replied troublingly, "Shea, the doctor said you have to be in bed for at least half a month. It's not even one week after your surgery. If I bring you out, Master Elliot will be mad at

me."

Shea raised her head slightly, "Who is Master Elliot?"

Mrs. Cooper answered, "Elliot Foster," and she paused for a while and asked again, "What do you call him?"

Shea thought for a while and pointed at the window, "Play outside."

Mrs. Cooper was lost for words. She did not dare to make the decision, so she called Zoe.

After a while, Zoe came into the room.

"Shea, you want to play outside?" Shea asked with a smile, "I can bring you out, but you'll have to sit in the wheelchair. I'm scared that you will get dizzy walking by yourself." Zoe offered.

All Shea wanted was to get some fresh air, it did not matter to her if she had to sit in the wheelchair. Hence, Shea agreed and Mrs. Cooper took out the wheelchair Elliot had used before.

“Mrs. Cooper, I’ll push Shea out,” said Zoe to Mrs. Cooper as she took over and pushed Shea out to the front yard.

In order to reassure the status of being Elliot’s girlfriend, Zoe would need to make a good connection with Shea. Zoe must make good use of each opportunity she has, such as pushing Shea out now.

Shea was starting to show less resistance toward Zoe. It was very good progress.

Zoe believed that with a little progress each day, her relationship with Shea would definitely get a huge improvement.

The temperature was over 86 Fahrenheit today, even when the sun was not out entirely.

“Shea, are you still having headaches? I can prescribe you some painkillers if you can’t take the pain,” Zoe asked softly.

According to Zoe's analysis, Shea now had the IQ of a ten year old child. Hence, she would just need to treat Shea like a ten year old child.

Shea replied, "No."

Shea would not take any medicine given by strangers, especially Zoe. Unless Elliot was the one giving it to her.

Zoe smiled, "Shea, it's good that you are talking. Elliot and I are hoping you get well soon."

Shea did not respond. After having some fresh air, she suddenly asked, "Is it really you who did my surgery?"

If Zoe was the one who did the surgery, why did Shea not remember her face before she lost consciousness? Shea could only vaguely remember Avery's face in her mind. Unfortunately, she did not know Avery's name.

Zoe was shocked to hear Shea's question since Shea did not talk but instead would only act like a ten year old child. Could it be that Shea remembers the person who performed the surgery?

At that moment, Zoe's face blushed, and she started to think how would Elliot react if he knew of the truth.

"Doctor Sanford?" Shea called since Zoe did not respond to her question.

Zoe took a deep breath and decided to take a chance, "Yes, it was me. Did you remember anything? You can tell it to me."

Shea pursed her lips and stopped talking.

The next morning, Avery's phone rang when Avery was still asleep. She looked at her phone and saw that it was Tammy calling.

"Tammy, it's seven in the morning. Why did you wake up so early?" Avery asked after answering the call.

Since Avery had to work through the night, Laura was the one sending the children to school.

Tammy replied, "My parents are away traveling. I sent them off to the airport. I stopped by Starry River Villa on my way back since it was on the way. Which villa are you staying at? I bought breakfast and I want to visit your new home."

Avery was so shocked that she jumped off her bed vigorously and it caused her brain to spin as her blood supply to the brain was insufficient upon getting up so swiftly.

“Avery! I’m already at the entrance. Surely you won’t reject me, right?”
Tammy

said angrily as she put her hand on her hips.

Avery quickly stormed out of her bedroom. Seeing that both children had went to school, she ‘quickly took all the toys to the children’s room. After she finished tidying up, she gave Tammy her location.

Three minutes later, the doorbell rang. Avery walked out of the toilet while brushing her teeth. Just then, Mike dashed over and opened the door while wearing just his pants.

Chapter 185

The toothbrush in Avery’s hand fell to the floor. Even Tammy was shocked and dropped the bag of breakfast when she saw Mike.

Luckily, Mike reacted quickly and caught the bag of breakfast.

“Avery, is this your best friend?” Mike asked with a head of messy hair.

After that, he opened the bag of breakfast, took out a pancake, and stuffed it into his mouth. Later, he took another pancake and wanted to feed it to Avery, “Not bad, do you want it?”

Avery saw Tammy’s shocked expression and quickly pushed Mike into his room.

“Tammy, wait a second. Go sit down first,” Avery told Tammy.

Suddenly, Tammy came to her senses. She took a deep breath and took out her phone and sent a message to Jun.

Tammy texted Jun, “Oh my! Avery really knows how to enjoy. She is living together with a handsome man!”

Jun replied, “Who? Avery?”

Tammy replied, “If I hadn’t seen it with my own eyes, I would not have believed that she is such an open woman. I don’t feel sorry for Elliot anymore. Elliot knows how to enjoy himself, and so does Avery. That man is so handsome. Other than being a little too slim, everything else looks good.”

Jun asked, “Did you take any photos? I want to see!”

Tammy answered, "Avery pulled the man back into the room. I will interrogate her when she comes out. Wait for the updates!"

Jun replied, "Alright." After Avery sent Mike back to his room, she went back to the living room to pick up her toothbrush and continued to freshen up in the bathroom.

Five minutes later, she finally calmed herself and went looking for Tammy.

"Avery, are you going to explain it to me, or do I have to force it out of you?"

Tammy asked.

Avery sighed, "That's my business partner."

"Oh, so you guys got together privately too?" Tammy asked.

Avery stopped drinking the water, "Did you see us sleep together with your own

eyes?"

"Isn't it obvious? If both of you are not sleeping together, then why doesn't he stay at a hotel?" Tammy refuted.

Avery put the glass of water onto the table and gave up arguing, "Is it wrong for me to be with another man since I am single now?"

“Of course not! If that man is really your new lover, then I’m happy for you,” said

Tammy happily as she sat beside Avery, “I didn’t know you made such quick progress. Elliot will go mad once he finds out.”

“He already did, the day before yesterday,” Avery told.

Tammy replied, “What? Was he mad?”

Avery spoke calmly, “We are both adults, not children.”

Tammy desperately wanted to know Elliot’s reaction when he found out about it.

Hence, once she left Starry River Villa, she quickly called Jun and asked Jun to convey the information to Elliot.

Jun did what he was told. He called Elliot.

“Elliot. Tammy was visiting Avery just now,” Jun said while adding more flare to the story,” She said there is a man staying with Avery. She even said that the man was very handsome.”

Elliot thought of the man he saw in Avery’s office. He did not expect them to be living together.

“She can live with anyone she wants. You don’t have to call and tell me specifically,” Elliot scolded and hung up the phone.

Jun was feeling wronged and complained to Ben. Ever since Ben fought with Elliot, both of them had not spoken for a few days. However, after knowing that Avery has a new boyfriend, he no longer felt depressed.

Could Avery purposely find a new boyfriend just to make Elliot angry? If that was the case, good on Avery. If it was not, then it was still good too. It was nice to see Avery torment Elliot for once.

Changing the scene to Angela Special Needs Academy.

Hayden had received the DNA report. The report stated that Hayden, Layla, and Cole were not father and child. It meant that Cole was not their father.

‘However, the report stated that Hayden, Layla, and Cole were related somehow.

Summing it up, Hayden could conclude that Elliot was their birth father.

When Hayden thought Cole was his father, he was quite dissatisfied. However, he now felt like he was faced with a bigger problem since he knew that Elliot was his father.

Chapter 186

It did not require much effort to teach Cole a lesson. However, it was a different story if Hayden wanted to go after Elliot.

Ever since Hayden successfully hacked into the cyber security of Elliot's company, Elliot had spent a huge amount of money to install a powerful firewall.

Now Hayden could no longer get past the firewall.

Uncle Mike had been busy with Tate Industries and had no free time to help him.

In the end, Hayden could only look at Elliot's photo and slowly unleash his dissatisfaction.

There was only one student in the classroom, Hayden. Whereas, there were two teachers looking after him in the classroom, a teacher who looked after him and another one who was responsible for teaching.

The teaching teacher was lecturing at the front while Hayden was wearing his headphones and playing with his computer. It was very harmonious.

Suddenly, a shadow appeared outside the classroom door. Hayden spotted it and quickly retracted his gaze.

Knock! Knock! Someone knocked on the door.

It was Shea. The teacher saw her and immediately walked to the door.

“Shea, why are you here? Are you here alone?” The teacher looked at Shea enthusiastically.

Since Shea was not having any more headaches, she could not stay put at home and was clamoring to go to school. As such, the driver drove her to school and would pick her up in the afternoon.

After reaching the school, she quickly walked around the entire campus with the nanny accompanying her. No one knew what she was searching for.

It was until she arrived at the classroom where Hayden was at. She looked inside and refused to leave. She saw Hayden and instantly recognized him.

Hayden was wearing a cap which made it easy to identify him.

Shea pointed at Hayden.

The teacher walked over to Hayden and asked, “Hayden, Shea is looking for you.

Do you know her?”

Hayden, “No!”

When Shea heard Hayden's reply, her mind got shocked. She moved her lips and shouted out loud, "Yes!"

The teacher was speechless. Why did these two who normally could not bother to talk, start talking now?

Hayden shouted back, "No!",

Shea countered, "Yes!"

After a few rounds, Hayden was feeling pain in his eardrums. He stood up from his chair and walked over to Shea.

Both of them acted like they had been friends forever and moved toward a corner where no one was around.

"You are a bad woman! I am not going to help you anymore!" Hayden said with disgust.

Shea felt wronged, "Why? Why? I am not a bad woman! I am not!"

Hayden said, "No one would ever admit that they are a bad person. Don't come looking for me. I won't talk to you anymore!"

After saying that, Hayden hurried and left.

Shea looked at Hayden leave and tears started welling up in her eyes. The nanny walked over to her and took a tissue out to wipe away Shea's tears, "Don't cry,

Miss Shea. Why did the both of you argue? When did you get to know that little boy? How come I don't know that you know him?"

At first, Shea was still holding back her tears. After listening to the nanny, she started crying.

The nanny took her back to her room and called Elliot to report the incident to

him.

"That boy's name is Hayden Tate. Miss Foster spent the entire morning looking for him. They started arguing when they saw each other. The boy insisted that he does not know Miss Foster but Miss Foster said he knows her," the nanny sighed,

"Master Elliot, you need to come over. Miss Shea is still crying."

Hayden Tate! Avery's adopted son. Why would shea cry over him? Since when did they know each other? Did Avery know about it? Elliot clenched his fists so tightly that his knuckles were turning white.

Chapter 187

When Elliot arrived at the school, he immediately held Shea in his arms and patted her back lightly upon seeing Shea's swollen eyes. .

"Stop crying, Shea," Elliot comforted.

Shea was having a headache because she had been crying too hard. After hearing Elliot's voice, she felt safer and leaned on Elliot's chest while her emotions began to stabilize. After a while, she fell asleep

Elliot carried her to bed and placed her on the bed. After that, he walked out of the room. He needed to go look for Hayden to find out what happened. Later, he arrived at Hayden's classroom.

The teachers saw Elliot coming and left the classroom. As such, only Elliot and Hayden were in the classroom.

Elliot walked over and stood in front of Hayden. Hayden saw him coming and started to pack his books into his backpack.

“Hayden Tate, I already know who your mother is,” Elliot pulled a chair over and sat in front of Hayden to block him from leaving.

Seeing how domineering Elliot was, Hayden knew that he did not have the chance to leave the classroom. Hence, he sat quietly and pretended Elliot was not there.

“Since when did you know Shea?” Elliot asked while looking at Hayden’s halfcovered face.

He had no idea why Hayden kept wearing his cap. It made sense to wear it outside, but why wear it inside the classroom too? Was it because Hayden did not have any hair or was he just trying to be cool?

“As long as you answer my questions, I won’t give you any trouble,” Elliot said while feeling his patience disappear little by little, “If you are not going to talk, then we can sit here until you do.”

It was a threat. However, Hayden was not afraid. He rested his head on the table and closed his eyes to sleep.

There was nothing Elliot could do, other than stare at how cool and snobbish

Hayden acted. He could not possibly bully a four years old boy, especially when this boy was actually Avery's son.

The classroom was so quiet that the both of them could hear their heartbeats. Ten minutes passed. Twenty minutes had passed and both of them were still at a standstill.

Elliot was convinced that if he still did nothing, the boy would just fall asleep. He walked over to Hayden's side and used his strong arms to carry Hayden.

Hayden was shocked and thought, 'What is this jerk trying to do?'

"Don't touch me!" Hayden shouted angrily.

As Elliot heard Hayden speak, he felt he had the upper hand and that he had regained control.

Looking at Hayden now, he had spoken even when he had a bad temper alongside his habit of not talking to strangers. It just meant that his illness was not that serious. If he was in the worst stage, he would not talk even under such circumstances.

“Tell me! When did you know Shea? Why did the both of you argue?” Elliot held Hayden’s body tight as Hayden struggled to break free.

Elliot could tell that Hayden disliked people touching him. If that was the case,

Elliot was determined to hold him until Hayden answered.

Hayden was outraged. How could this jerk hold him? Hayden decided not to answer the question.

‘Why didn’t Elliot just ask Shea if he wanted to know? Why should Elliot think it was other people’s fault just because Shea cried? No wonder, mummy decided to divorce him,’ Hayden thought in his mind.

Hayden’s eyes were reddened because he was really angry at Elliot. In the end, he took a bite out of Elliot’s neck.

Chapter 188

Hayden did not stop biting until he tasted blood in his mouth.

It was four o’clock in the evening. The school had called Avery telling her that Hayden had bitten someone and requested her to go to the school.

Avery did not understand. Hayden was the only student in his class. Since he did not have any classmates, who could he bite? Was it the teacher who got bitten?

With the possibility in her mind, Avery quickly shut down her computer and took her keys with her.

'How could Hayden bite his teacher? Even if he had an argument with his teacher, he should not resort to violence.' Avery kept on thinking.

She remembered Hayden was a well-mannered boy. When did he change?

Avery had been working very late and she had recently somewhat neglected her two children. She decided to have a good talk with the both of them tonight.

After reaching the school, Avery's teacher said apologetically, "Miss Tate, your child has been taken away."

Avery was shocked.

"But don't worry, Hayden was taken away by Mr. Foster. You should have heard about him. I can give you his address and you can go pick Hayden up," The teacher explained.

Avery was so angry that her cheeks started to turn red, "Why did he take Hayden away with him? Doesn't the school have any policies against it? Why didn't you inform me when he took Hayden away? I'm very disappointed with the school."

The teacher explained immediately, "Miss Tate, please listen to me. Mr. Foster has just taken Hayden away. I wanted to call you but since I knew you were coming, I did not call you. As for why Mr. Foster insisted on taking Hayden, it was because Hayden had a big argument with Shea. When Mr. Foster arrived, he asked Hayden for the reason they argued and Hayden refused to tell him. Shea woke up just now and wanted to go home. That's why Mr. Foster brought Hayden together with him. He wanted to understand why they had an argument."

Even though the teacher had explained in detail, Avery was still very angry. With the car keys in her hand, she strode off.

The teacher followed closely behind Avery and said, "Miss Tate, please don't be angry. I can go pick Hayden up with you. I can go with you since you don't know

Mr. Foster's address..."

Avery was having a headache, "Stop following me! I will go on my own!"

The teacher replied, "Oh, okay. Let me tell you the address. It is..."

"Stop talking and stop following me!" Avery's heart was on fire.

She had no idea how Hayden would be treated when he was in Elliot's house.

She was extremely anxious and needed to rush to Elliot's house immediately.

Her car sped off after Avery started the car engine.

The teacher mumbled as she saw Avery's car driving off, "Does she know Mr.

Foster's address? Why didn't she let me tell her?"

After Elliot brought Shea and Hayden back to his house, Mrs. Cooper quickly served them snacks and fruits.

Mrs. Cooper looked at Hayden and asked curiously, "Master Elliot, who is this boy?"

Hayden was wearing a baseball cap and carrying a large backpack. His hands were grabbing the shoulder strap of the backpack tightly. The baseball cap had covered his eyes. However, it did not prevent Mrs. Cooper from knowing that Hayden was very angry with his pouted cheek and pursed lips.

“Avery’s son,” Elliot answered plainly while sitting on the couch, “adopted.”

That last word had startled Mrs. Cooper and stunned Hayden ‘Adopted? When did I become mummy’s adopted son?’ Hayden thought. Soon, he realized his mum must have told Elliot that on purpose. He remembered his mum say that Elliot would strangle both him and Layla if he found out about them.

“Oh... Avery is such a kind-hearted person,” said Mrs. Cooper as she peeled a banana and gave it to Hayden.

Hayden refused to eat any food from this house. He turned his body around.

Mrs. Cooper put the banana down and went to the bathroom to take a bucket of warm water. Without asking for permission from Hayden, she took off his baseball cap, “Look at all the sweat on your face, let me wipe it off.”

The moment Mrs. Cooper took off Hayden’s baseball cap, Elliot finally had the chance to see Hayden's face clearly. The thought of Hayden looking similar to Elliot immediately sprung into his mind.

Chapter 189

"Don't touch me!" Hayden yelled out.

He quickly wore his cap back on his head.

Mrs. Cooper got shocked when Hayden yelled at her.

Elliot and Shea stared at Hayden while Shea was frightened because Hayden yelled out. Whereas Elliot was stunned because it was the first time he saw Hayden's full face. He even saw similarities between his and Hayden's face.

"Then can you wipe it yourself?" Mrs. Cooper asked after twisting the towel and handing it to Hayden, "You have sweat on your face. It'll be more comfortable after wiping it."

Hayden took the towel and threw it back into the bucket.

Since Hayden was very temperamental, Mrs. Cooper took the bucket and left.

"If you don't tell me how you know Shea and why did you both argue, don't even think about going home tonight," Elliot returned to his senses and threatened

Hayden.

Hayden turned a deaf ear and walked towards the door.

Two bodyguards appeared outside of the door and stopped Hayden from going any further. Hayden raised his head and stared at them.

The two bodyguards felt stressed as Hayden continued to stare at them. They wondered why this boy had such a fierce expression.

Hayden was unlike any other normal kid. The bodyguards could tell that Hayden was a threat to them when he looked at them so fiercely. Hayden had a similar aura as Elliot and that pressured the bodyguards.

Hayden looked at his watch. It was 4:50 p.m. He knew his grandma would inform his mum if she failed to pick him up from school at 5:30 p.m. He was certain that his mum would come looking for him. All he needed to do was wait patiently.

When Elliot saw Hayden sitting down beside the door, he knew that he had lost.

There was nothing else he could do. It was impossible for Elliot to use any tactics against him. He knew 'Avery would never forgive him if he had tried anything.

"Shea, when did you get to know Hayden?" Since Elliot could not get an answer from Hayden, he asked Shea instead.

Shea was eating the banana that Mrs. Cooper had peeled for Hayden. As she listened to Elliot's question, her eyes flashed with anxiousness and nervousness.

At that moment, she remembered the time when she begged Hayden to bring her away from the school. She knew if she told it to Elliot, he would be mad at her.

It did not matter if Elliot was mad at her. The most important factor was that she did not want Hayden to be mad at her. Hayden would totally ignore her if that was the case.

Hence, she slowly ate her banana and looked at Elliot with a pair of innocent eyes. Her eyes were telling Elliot that she would not answer his question, and it was best if he stopped asking.

A sense of failure slowly appeared in Elliot's heart. There were so many similarities between Shea and Hayden. Both of them disliked talking. They did not like to interact with strangers.

Elliot was flustered as he kept thinking about how both of them knew each other and what had they said to each other.

"Master Elliot, how did you hurt your neck?" Mrs. Cooper was shocked to see the bite marks on Elliot's neck, "I'll go get the first aid kit."

Elliot glanced at Hayden and said, "You don't have to."

He presumed that Avery would arrive anytime now and she would be very angry.

He wanted to save the bite mark and show it to Avery.

A Rower parked up outside in the front yard. Avery got off from her car. Hayden immediately stood up when he saw his mum.

Chapter 190

It was only five in the morning. He did not expect mom to be here so soon!

Although his mom had always said that he was adopted, he knew his mom loved him greatly.

“Hayden!” Avery saw her son sitting on the sill with two muscular men beside him.

Tears welled up in her eyes.

Hearing Avery’s voice, Elliot stood up from the sofa and walked toward the door.

The bodyguards dared not stop Avery.

They had witnessed how much Elliot had loved this woman.

Although she was now his ex-wife, she was different from all the other women that Elliot was acquainted with

Elliot saw Avery carrying Hayden as her eyes reddened, she looked as if her son was being mistreated.

“Avery, let’s talk.”

Avery was fuming, “What gives you the right to bring Hayden to your house!? Did you have my permission? What you did was against the law!”

Elliot’s brows furrowed, “I did not hurt him! I only wanted to know when did he meet Shea? Why did they fall out?”

Avery refuted, “Can’t you ask Shea instead?! Elliot, I know Shea means a lot to you, but this is not a reason for you to bully my son!”

Elliot’s head was hurting badly. Indeed, he did not have her permission to bring Hayden home.

“I did not bully your son!” Elliot said.

“You brought him to your house by force and made him sit on the floor. Is this not bullying? Then, tell me! What is bullying?” Avery suddenly saw the tooth mark and dried blood on Elliot’s neck.

Did her son bite him?

Suddenly, she grew uncertain.

Mrs. Cooper saw the two of them fighting in the front yard, she walked out and helped Elliot explain, “Avery, Master Elliot did not bully your son. I brought him food and drinks but he turned them down.” .

When Avery saw Mrs. Cooper, she calmed down.

She had not seen Mrs. Cooper for years but she still seemed as friendly as ever.

“Fighting won’t solve the problem.” Mrs. Cooper walked to Avery and patted her shoulder,” Don’t stand outside, come in and have a seat.”

Avery was unwilling to go in but Mrs. Cooper pulled her by her arm as she walked in.

The interior design and decoration were the same as they were four years ago.

Avery had an unsettling feeling inside her.

“I’d like to have a chat with you,” Elliot said.

Avery was worried about Hayden so she glanced at him.

Somehow, she saw Shea.

Shea was standing by the sofa as she looked at Avery blankly.

Avery quickly retrieved her gaze from Shea. She followed Elliot into the study room on the first floor.

Shea saw Avery’s face and instantly recalled the memories from before!

Instead of Doctor Sanford, she hoped that Avery could stay with her brother.

That way, she would be able to see Avery more often.

However, Avery seemed hostile toward her brother. She was scared of her.

After the study room door was shut, Hayden instantly walked over.

Shea saw and followed.

The two of them leaned on the door of the study room, listening to the conversation inside.

Mrs. Cooper saw the two of them and found them amusing.

Inside the study room.

Elliot broke the silence, "Before Shea went missing, she had no friends from school. So I'm guessing that she met your son when she was missing."

Avery remained a calm look, her tone was calm too, "Oh, go and ask them, then! I don't know anything."

When Elliot saw her hardened face, he did not feel good, "Your son never mentioned anything about Shea?"

"No. My son doesn't speak most of the time." Avery ended the topic quickly, "Stop asking about my son. If you want to know, ask shea. If there's nothing else, I will leave now."

Elliot said, "There's another thing."

Avery halted.

"I heard that you've moved in with that dude," Elliot said directly, "Moving in so soon, were you two together before our divorce?"

Chapter 191

When Avery heard him, she frowned.

“What do you mean by that dude? He has a name.” Avery corrected him, “Can you show some respect?”

Elliot said, “Respect? You’re speaking of respect? You were together with that dude before our divorce, did you show me any respect?”

“Please be clear. I filed for divorce four years ago. You were unwilling to sign

then!”

“As long as I haven’t signed, we’re still legally married. How could you cheat on me!?” Elliot interrogated her.

Avery saw how serious he looked, she was almost convinced by him that she had cheated on him!

“Since when have I admitted that I was with him before our divorce?” Avery refuted, “It’s all your speculation! If you want to suspect yourself of being cheated

on, don’t blame me!”

Elliot took a deep breath to calm himself down, "Then, what's his name?"

"Why would you want to know his name?" Avery asked cautiously.

"Didn't you ask me to show some respect? How am I supposed to respect him if you don't tell me his name?!"

"Oh...even if I do tell you, you would not show him respect anyway." Avery did not want to tell him because she did not want Elliot to run a background check on Mike, "Elliot, you already have a new girlfriend. Since we both have new lives now, let's stop bothering one another!"

Avery finished speaking as Elliot's phone rang.

He took out his phone and looked at the screen.

It was Zoe calling

Today was Zoe's birthday. Yesterday, she had invited him to eat out with her today.

Since this was Zoe's first birthday on her return, Elliot agreed.

Zoe had arrived at the restaurant so she phoned Elliot to ask him when he would arrive.

Elliot looked at his phone screen and hesitated.

Avery saw the name on his screen and turned to leave.

He grabbed her arm and did not want her to leave. He had not finished talking to

her.

Even though they got divorced, he did not want her to self-sabotage.

That dude looked like a gangster!

How could she find this type of man!?

He accepted the call, "Doctor Sanford, apologies, something's up..." Zoe, "Oh, it's okay! I can wait for you. It's still early."

Elliot said, "I won't be able to come."

Zoe felt as if she was splashed in the face with water, she said disappointedly,

"Elliot, can you tell me why?"

Elliot looked at Avery and said, "Shea is not feeling well. I need to stay with her."

Zoe said, "I see, why don't I come to join you two?"

Elliot said, "No need. Shea needs to be alone."

After ending the call, he tossed his phone on the table.

Avery found it ironic.

It seemed that he was not so into his new girlfriend.

To him, Zoe was merely a chess piece of his to treat Shea.

How ironic and sad!

“Elliot, your wrongdoings will come back at you.” Avery kindly warned him.

“This was her choice, I made it clear to her in the beginning.” Elliot ended this quickly and changed the subject back to her.

“Why did you find such a man? Did you do it to trigger me?”

Avery was speechless.

Outside the study room.

Shea almost wanted to knock on the door to go inside.

“I hear nothing...nothing at all...”, she frowned.

‘Hayden did not hear anything as well.

Either the room was sound-proofed or they were not fighting at all.

Hayden went back to the living room and Shea followed behind him.

“I’m sorry!” Shea grabbed the hem of her skirt. She stopped for a moment and said bravely,” Hayden, I’m sorry!”

Chapter 192

She thought about the reason why Hayden got angry.

Could it be that she asked him to bring her out of school, and he was scolded for

that?

Other than this, she could not think of anything else.

When Hayden heard her apologizing, he grew increasingly furious!

Was she admitting to her inappropriate relationship with Elliot? She was the reason why his Mom and Dad had a divorce?!

“Stop following me!” Hayden yelled at her, “I hate you!”

Shea stopped and her eyes teared up.

When Mrs. Cooper saw this, she instantly helped Shea to sit on the sofa, “Shea, don’t cry. If he doesn’t want to be your friend, stop following him.”

Since Hayden was so ill-tempered, Shea would hurt herself doing so.

However, Shea did not want to lose a good friend like Hayden. She shook her head vigorously.

Mrs. Cooper held on to her head and did not want her to keep shaking her head, “Stop shaking your head, you might hurt your head. Sit here, I will go and ask Hayden what it takes for him to befriend you, alright?”

Shea nodded diligently.

Mrs. Cooper picked up two pieces of chocolate from the table and walked toward Hayden.

“Hayden, I was close to your mom in the past.” Mrs. Cooper had a friendly smile on her face as she gave the chocolates to Hayden.

Hayden recalled how calm his mom was when she saw this woman earlier so he did not toss the chocolate away.

“Shea is just a kid and I hope she did not hurt you. Why do you hate her?” Mrs.

Cooper asked.

“I don’t need a reason to hate her!” Hayden said and walked toward the door.

Mrs. Cooper did not follow him.

She knew that Hayden was looking down on Shea’s lack of intelligence. Mrs.

Cooper felt bad for Shea but she could not bring herself to hate Hayden.

Hayden showed some traits of Elliot but he was not his son. Perhaps it was pure chance that they looked alike?

Mrs. Cooper went back to Shea and gave her tissue papers to wipe away her tears, "Shea, there'

s a way for everyone to like you."

Shea looked at Mrs. Cooper curiously.

"That is, to focus on your studies and accept your treatments. Get well soon."

Mrs. Cooper looked at Shea with sympathy, "By then, everyone will like Shea."

Shea believed her.

Inside the study room, the topic of Avery's man finally ended due to Avery telling Elliot that, the more Elliot looked down on Mike, the more she liked Mike.

This was reverse psychology.

Avery knew very well how to beat Elliot in arguments. Therefore, he stopped mentioning Mike.

She thought she could leave now, but he was not done!

Avery saw him taking out a photo.

It was a screenshot of the CCTV from Elizabeth Hospital.

It was taken on the day when Avery performed surgery on Shea. Two children went to her and she left with both of them.

“The girl in your arms, you adopted her?” Elliot’s eyes were fixed on her face.

Avery tossed the photo into the bin, she said nonchalantly, “Yes! I adopted both of them. Why do you ask me? Do you want to adopt a child? Oh, I almost forgot, you don’t like kids.”

Elliot said, “You don’t even have time to take care of a child, so why did you adopt two children?”

Avery said, “I want to and I like to. What can you do?”

Elliot was speechless.

Avery saw that it was almost six. She had to bring Hayden home.

She marched out of the study room and went to the living room. She saw a woman with her long hair down. She had a lavender-colored long dress on. Was she Elliot’s new girlfriend, Zoe Sanford?

Chapter 193

“You must be Avery.” Zoe went forward to greet her, “Nice to meet you, I’m Zoe.”

Avery glanced at her and said without enthusiasm, “Yeah, I’m leaving now.”

Avery and Hayden left.

Zoe watched as she left and zoned out for a moment.

Avery was younger and more beautiful than she imagined.

Why did she look for Elliot today? She even brought a boy here...was that Elliot's son?

So, she came here with the boy, trying to get back with Elliot?

Thinking of this, Zoe felt disgusted.

Would Elliot get back with Avery because of this?

"Elliot, sorry to show up unannounced." Zoe pointed at the cake on the table, "My friend bought this cake for me but I can't finish it on my own so I brought this over."

Elliot glanced at the cake, "Happy birthday, did you receive your gift?"

Zoe halted, "Someone did send me a parcel in the afternoon. I didn't know it was you who sent it, so I haven't opened it."

Elliot nodded, "I don't eat cake, and neither does Shea. You can eat with Mrs.

Cooper!"

With that said, he walked toward Shea and brought her back to her room.

After they had left, Zoe took out the cake.

“Mrs. Cooper, when did Avery come?” Zoe smiled as she cut a slice for Mrs.

Cooper.

Mrs. Cooper said, “Not long ago. She came to pick up her son.”

“Oh...that boy was her son! He doesn't seem too young!”

Mrs. Cooper said, “He was adopted.”

Zoe was shocked and at the same time, the alarm in her was lifted, “I thought he was a child of hers and Elliot.”

“They did have a child. If they did not abort the baby, the baby should be around the age of that kid now.” Mrs. Cooper thought there was no harm to say this. After all, this happened a long time ago. “I guess Avery adopted this kid to make up for the aborted baby.”

Zoe asked, “Why did they abort the baby?”

Mrs. Cooper said, “Master Elliot didn't want it. He doesn't like children. Miss Sanford, my advice to you is that, if you want to stay with him, don't mention having a baby.

Even if you have it, he will ask for an abortion.”

Zoe nodded quickly, "Thank you for reminding me."

On the way home, Avery asked her son, "Did Elliot bully you?"

Hayden said, "No."

Avery asked, "Was he mean to you?"

Hayden said, "No."

Avery let out a sigh of relief, "Hayden, why don't I transfer you to another school?"

"You don't need to," Hayden said.

"You like this school a lot?" Avery asked.

"I don't hate it," Hayden replied.

It was because he had no friends and nobody bossed him around.

The teachers worshipped him and let him do anything he wanted. He had more freedom than when he was at home.

"I'm afraid that you might bump into Elliot next time, what if he brings you home again..." Avery was worried.

She claimed that Hayden was adopted, how long would this excuse work?

If Elliot started to suspect her one day and ran a DNA test on Hayden, her lie would be exposed.

By then, both of her children would be in danger.

“He is my father, right?” Hayden said as he fiddled with a piece of paper.

Avery glanced at her son, “How do you know?”

“He looks like me,” Hayden replied. Avery did not know whether to laugh or cry,

“Was it that obvious?”

Chapter 194

“Layla looks like you.” Hayden said.

“Hayden, he’s indeed the father of the both of you. However, he doesn’t like kids so it’s best if the both of you don’t go to him. If he finds out that you’re both his kids, I don’t know what he’ d do.” Avery said.

Hayden replied, “We don’t want a father like him!”

“Hayden, I feel that after you’ve come back home, you’ve changed and improved a lot,” Avery said.

“Mom, I’m not ill, I just find those people childish and boring, ” Hayden said.

Avery nodded, “I know. You like smart people like Uncle Mile. However, when you’re older, you will realize that the people who are not as smart are equally special. We must learn to focus on the merits of others, such as kindness and innocence.”

Hayden did not agree with that but he did not refute her.

Perhaps when he was older, he would understand what she meant.

Zoe arrived home at seven in the evening. She opened the gift she received in the afternoon.

She was disappointed in Elliot because it was likely that this gift was not chosen by Elliot.

The shop assistant sent it over, it could have been Elliot’s assistant choosing it.

She was right. Elliot made Chad choose it. Chad picked her a Chavel handbag.

Zoe looked at this bag and the image of Avery’s face came to her mind.

Elliot lied to her for Avery.

He claimed that Shea was not feeling well and that he had to stay home with her.

The truth was that he was staying home for Avery.

He canceled their date for Avery.

Normally, she would not mind if he had done this to her. However, today was her birthday!

She felt very mistreated.

On the next day at Tate Industries.

The front desk called and announced that Elliot's girlfriend came.

"Miss Tate, this woman would like to meet you." The secretary said to Avery, "I phoned Sterling Group to verify her identity. They confirmed that he did have a new girlfriend."

Avery looked down and thought for a moment. She put down the work she was working on.

On the first floor, Avery saw Zoe.

Zoe did not have makeup on today. She had a white t-shirt and jeans.

She did look younger in this outfit.

"Miss Tate, I heard that you're a student of Professor Hough. So I came to you to have a chat... I wonder if you have time in the afternoon to have lunch together?"

Zoe smiled politely.

It appeared as if Zoe merely wanted to catch up.

Avery knew her intentions. Though she still agreed to have lunch with her.

The both of them went to a restaurant close by.

After getting a table, Zoe smiled and asked, "Miss Tate, you started your business right after graduation? I heard that Tate Industries is your company. You're so successful, unlike me. I have been working at the hospital and don't earn much."

Avery asked, "Didn't Elliot pay you for treating Shea? No way! He spent a billion bucks searching for her, he should have paid you at least a billion, right?"

Zoe's smile stiffened, "He did try to pay me one billion but how would I take that from him?"

"Oh, you're afraid that if you take that, you won't be able to ask him to be your boyfriend?" Avery said directly.

Zoe was speechless.

"Please excuse me, Miss Sanford, for being blunt. Hope you don't mind." Avery picked up her green tea and took a sip.

Zoe smiled, "It's fine, I know you have your opinion on me. Without me, you might have a chance to get back with Elliot."

Avery said, "Miss Sanford, you've mistaken. The reason I have an opinion on you is because of how insensitive you are.”

Zoe looked wronged, “Why would you say that? Is it because of how I took Elliot away from you and so you hate me?”

Chapter 195

Avery almost spat the green tea from her mouth. She took a tissue to dab on her lips.

“Miss Sanford, I was the one asking for a divorce with Elliot. As for you taking Elliot from me, what I hate is that you’re not married yet! Look at how alike you two are! He’s handsome and you’re beautiful, you’re made for one another! When are you two getting married? I will send a grand gift!”

Zoe had an awkward smile on her face, “Now I know this is what you’re thinking.

However, I’m sorry to disappoint you, as we don’t plan to get married yet.”

“Why not? Do you not want to? Or does he not want to? If he doesn’t want to, why don’t I help you talk to him?” Avery took another sip of green tea.

Zoe said, “You don’t have to. We will let things happen at their course. Right, Miss Tate, you called me insensitive earlier, I don't understand why. This is only our first meeting, so why did you insult me?"

Avery sensed how fake this woman was.

Zoe looked pitiable and wronged, one would easily sympathize with her!

"Didn't your teacher teach you this in school? One has to keep one's greed at bay." Avery thought she had made it clear.

However, Zoe continued to look at her, waiting for her to continue.

Avery found it exhausting to talk to her.

Did she think nobody would see through her lies?

Instead of using the operation as an excuse to force Elliot to be with her, if she just took his money, Avery would not dislike her.

How could she be so greedy?

Although Avery had divorced Elliot, she still did not like seeing how he was being played by Zoe.

;"Miss Tate, do you think I'm crossing a line by asking to be with Elliot?"

Seeing that Avery did not speak, she continued, "You might not know, Shea's illness can't be cured in one treatment. There are follow-ups. While my work was mainly overseas. Elliot hoped that I could stay here to treat Shea. This would affect my overseas work. Therefore, I resigned from my overseas work to come back here and treat Shea specifically..."

"Miss Sanford, you've sacrificed so much." Avery mocked, "Didn't you say you don't earn much from the hospital? You could easily ask Elliot to compensate you two-fold. Unless you think that by asking him to be your boyfriend, you can get half of his assets?"

Zoe's face turned pale, "Are you jealous of me? Just because my skills are better than yours?"

Zoe could tell from Avery's tone.

Avery was hungry but now she was full.

"Jealous...Miss Sanford, how can your skills be so good? We're both students of Professor Hough, how can you be so skilled while I'm so ordinary?" Avery sighed,

"I heard that Elliot spent a lot of money to ask Professor Hough to treat Shea but he dared not perform the surgery on her! Who'd have thought that Miss Sanford could have so easily treated her! You're more skilled than Professor Hough..."

Zoe was taken aback by her!

She felt that Avery was mocking her but she could not tell for sure.

After all, there was no way for Avery to find out that she was not the one treating

Shea!

If Avery knew, she would have told Elliot a long time ago!

"Avery, stop being so passive-aggressive. I worked hard for my success. If you're not as skilled as me, you should reflect on whether you worked hard back in school." Zoe said calmly, "I remember how Professor Hough praised my hand when he saw me for the first time. He said I was born to be holding the scalpel."

Zoe spoke as she showed Avery her hands.

Avery did not want to look at her hands.

She had hands too!

Zoe was insensitive, it was obvious that Avery had no interest in her hands but she kept showing them to Avery.

Avery felt as if she was in a nightmare.

If not, how could this be happening?

Avery pushed Zoe's hands away...

"Ah!" Zoe cried out!

- Avery gently pushed her hands away but the teapot was knocked over. It was boiling water inside... The water happened to splash onto her special hands!

Chapter 196

Even porcelain would not crack!

Avery looked at her bad acting in shock!

In her head, she already pictured the dramatic scene from romantic movies when the female lead bickered with the other woman.

The staff rushed over and helped Zoe up to treat her burn.

Avery sat on her chair as she felt an incoming threat.

Now that Zoe was hurt, she had the upper hand. She could say that this was an accident. She could also say that Avery burned her intentionally and her words were to be taken seriously.

Avery asked for the bill.

Soon after, the news of Avery burning Zoe got to the ears of Elliot. Out of all parts of Zoe's body, her hands meant the most to him.

This was because Zoe had to perform surgery on 'Shea.

And now, Avery had burned her hands...

"There's no way Avery would do this!" Elliot said.

The bodyguard showed the video footage to Elliot.

The camera was facing Avery, it clearly showed how when Avery pushed Zoe's hands away, the teapot was knocked over.

When Elliot saw the footage, he said again, "Avery did not intend to."

Knowing Avery, he knew for sure she would not do this kind of thing.

The footage was showing video without audio.

If Zoe did not extend her hands in front of Avery, Avery would not have pushed her hands away.

The bodyguard did not expect Elliot to side with Avery!

"Boss, we have their audio recording here." With that said, the bodyguard played it for Elliot.

“Look at how alike you two are! He’s handsome and you’re beautiful, you’re made for one another! When are you two getting married? I will send a grand gift!”

“Why not? Do you not want to? Or does he not want to? If he doesn’t want to, why don’t I help you talk to him?”

While Elliot listened to the recording, his face darkened.

His fingers clenched tightly.”

What Avery said stabbed him in the heart.

She wanted him to marry Zoe?

How funny!

At the Tate Industries.

Avery was waiting for Elliot’s call.

Zoe spent so much effort coming all the way here to create this incident. This was a perfect opportunity for Zoe to badmouth Avery to Elliot.

Suddenly, her phone rang.

She saw Elliot’s name on her screen.

After picking up, Elliot’s voice was heard, “Avery, Zoe’s hand was burned. Did you intend to do this?"

Chapter 197

When Avery heard his questioning, she had a wave of emotions.

"What did your girlfriend say to you?" she asked.

Elliot halted. He had not visited Zoe.

After listening to the recording, he got triggered and so he called her first.

"Avery, I'm asking you! Don't change the topic!" His tone was more serious this time.

When Avery heard him yell, she began fuming, "Isn't it obvious? I burned your girlfriend's hand with boiling water! Tell her to stay away from me, if not, I will burn her face!"

Elliot was speechless.

Avery, "Why're you not speaking? Are you not trying to speak up for your girlfriend?"

Elliot gulped and gritted his teeth.

"If Miss Sanford's hands are damaged, who will operate on your Shea? sigh, I'm suddenly so worried. Elliot Foster, will you take revenge on me?" Avery continued.

“Avery Tate, even a fool knows you didn’t mean that! Even so, I do get angry listening to what you say!” Elliot responded to her triggering words.

“Then stop calling me! You called on behalf of her, did you think I would cry to you saying I didn’t do it and then ask for your forgiveness? This is more absurd than a dream!” Avery refuted coldly. There was a knock on the office door.

Avery held on to her phone as she called out to her door, “Come in!”

Her assistant came in, not knowing that she was on her phone, “Miss Tate, a man named Cole Foster claimed to be your friend. He would like to meet you.”

Avery said to her phone, “Your nephew is here, I’m not talking to you anymore!”

After hanging up, Avery walked to the washroom.

Five minutes later, Cole was brought to Avery’s office by her assistant.

Avery had already calmed herself down.

Looking at that familiar face of Cole’s, she felt disgusted as ever.

Her assistant closed the door when leaving.

“Avery, I can’t believe you’re back! I just found out you’re back a few days ago.

You spent six hundred million buying the building for Tate Industries and it went viral! However, I was busy a few days ago so I couldn't visit you."

Cole walked toward Avery with a smirk.

"Cole, you're more annoying than before." Avery looked at him, "What brings you here?"

"I came here to catch up with you..."

"Okay, then let's talk about Cassandra's death." Avery walked over from her table, ready to "catch up" with him.

Cole's face changed, "She's dead, why do you mention her?"

"How could you be so cruel! Back then, during your Uncle and my wedding, you two were so happy! Have you forgotten?" Avery saw his face turning red and white, she continued, "If this is the attitude you show to a woman you slept with, why would you even remember me?"

Cole was extremely triggered but he dared not offend her, he wanted to please her but did not know how to.

"Since there's nothing left in us, you came here to talk about money?"
Avery

asked, "Unless you think starting my business is tiring and you want to lend me money? Right, how's your company doing? You're probably earning quite a lot? If you want to lend me money, you won't take interest, right?"

Cole was speechless.

Regret was all he felt.

He should not have come.

Avery attacked him with words.

"Avery, can we not go against one another." Cole sighed.

Avery took out her phone and texted Tammy to complain about him while speaking to him," How are we going against one another? I'm just trying to help you grow up. You're not young now and you're still thinking of using women to get rich? I'd rather adopt a dog than find you!

Chapter 198

Cole asked, "Avery! Are you comparing me to a dog?!"

Avery replied, "Yeah! I know Cassandra well enough to know that she won't have the guts to buy a killer! However, I'm not interested in the two of you, so whether you two die or live has nothing to do with me! If you keep bugging me, I won't hesitate to find someone to investigate this!"

Cole's face changed, "Avery! I didn't come here for you, I happened to...pass by. I will catch up with you another time!"

Avery did not anticipate that random words from her would expose him.

Cole did not like Elliot but dared not use his name to buy a killer and sacrificed Cassandra.

The phone screen lit up as there was a message.

Avery clicked open the message, it was from Tammy: (How's Elliot so low?! He called you for that woman! What's wrong with him! He should have known you better!)

Cole saw that she was on her phone, so he stood up ready to leave.

Somehow, he glanced over and saw the chat background on her phone.

The background photo was two children. One boy and one girl.

The girl looked familiar!

"Avery, who's the girl in the photo? I might have seen her before..." Cole walked toward Avery and asked.

Avery instantly turned the phone away. She glared at him coldly, "You can go now!" Cole was taken aback by her look, "I'll leave now...I have been pestered by the girl, the girl seemed strange. She looks like the girl in your photo...maybe I'm wrong. I'll leave now."

After Cole had left, Avery was feeling uncertain

Could it be that Layla had gone to look for Cole?

.She knew that Hayden and Layla had been taking days off. She did not blame them. Perhaps they just came back and were getting used to the lifestyle here.

Therefore, Avery gave them a lot of freedom.

The more she thought about it the more uncertain she was.

Why did these children look for Cole?

To her, Cole was as dangerous as Elliot.

On the other side.

After Elliot had phoned Avery, he went to visit Zoe.

Her hands were burned so they were bandaged.

He could not see the extent of the burn, so he did not know how severe

“Have you been to the hospital?” Eliot asked.

Zoe shook her head, “I can sort it out myself.”

“Severe?” he asked.

Zoe continued to shake her head, “Probably not, it’s just hurting a lot.”

Elliot’s face sank, “Why did you look for Avery? We had a divorce, you shouldn’t have looked for her.”

Zoe looked apologetic, “Sorry, Elliot. I heard that she’s a student of Professor Hough, so I thought we would have some mutual topics. I went over to look for her but didn’t see this coming.”

Zoe spoke and grimaced in pain with tears falling.

When Elliot saw her like this, he could not blame her any further.

“It hurts...” Zoe sobbed and leaned her head into Elliot’s chest. She said with a hoarse voice, “If my hands are badly burnt, what if I can’t perform surgery anymore?”

Elliot frowned and carried her in his arms, “I will bring you to the hospital.” Zoe put her arms around his neck and cuddled into him. She had a sly smile on her face.

Chapter 199

It was six in the evening.

Avery was driving back to Starry River Villa. The villa door was open.

There was a red Bmw parked in the front yard.

Avery recognized this car, it was Tammy's car.

Why did Tammy come all of a sudden?

"Avery!"

When Tammy saw Avery come home, she ran out, "I saw your two children! If I didn't hear from other people about you adopting the children, were you going to hide it from me forever?

Once Avery heard Tammy's complaining voice, she almost dared not get out of her car.

She realized that whenever Elliot found out anything about her, the rest of the world would know!

Furthermore, whenever Tammy found out anything, Elliot would get the news, too!

One could only blame Tammy's relationship with Jun Hertz. Though, she could not cut Tammy off just because she was seeing Jun.

“How could you?!” Tammy walked toward Avery and pulled her out of her car, “Isn’t it just adopting two children? Why did you hide it?”

Avery was speechless...

“Also, the two adopted children do look like you and Elliot! Did you adopt them because they look beautiful?” Tammy asked.

Avery said, “...Yeah! Hayden did not look like Elliot when he was younger. If he did, I wouldn’t have adopted him.”

Tammy said, “Oh! How magical! They look alike even though they are unrelated!”

• Who knows. Kids change a lot as they grow.”. Avery said guiltily.

“I see...Avery, why did you adopt the children?” Tammy did not understand, “I heard from your mother that Hayden has some issues, he’s not easy to work with.

How exhausting it must be to adopt this kind of child!”

Avery knew Tammy was being kind, so she explained with patience, “Tammy, the kids are angels even if they have issues.”

“I didn’t say they’re bad, I just feel that you must be exhausted.”

“He’s a good kid. He never makes a mess.” Avery walked forward to change her shoes.’

Hayden and Layla walked over instantly.

“Mom, is Aunt Tammy your best friend? She bought a lot of pretty dresses and hairpins for me. Can I keep them?” Layla asked curiously with her chin up.

“Of course! Aunt Tammy is my best friend.”

“Oh...thank you, Aunt Tammy!” Layla thanked Tammy right away.

Tammy ruffled Layla’s hair and said sadly, “It’s a shame that Hayden doesn’t like the gift I got him.”

1:22

“Aunt Tammy, my brother likes to solve puzzles. You can give him difficult puzzles next time. “Layla explained, “My brother solves the easier puzzles very quickly.”

Tammy agreed, “Okay! I will buy one tomorrow. Layla, you’re so pretty, you look just like your mother when she was young!”

Layla said proudly, “I’m my mother’s daughter, of course I look like her!”

Tammy was speechless...

Avery instantly pulled Tammy who was in shock into the bedroom.

“Avery! These are your kids? No wonder I thought they look like you and Elliot!

They are yours, right?!” Tammy saw that Avery’s lips parted, but she cut her off, “Don’t lie to me! If you lie to me, I will tell Elliot that these are his kids!”

Avery was speechless.

She should have known better about these secrets getting exposed.

The secrets could only be kept if she never came back and avoided the people

she knew

However, the world was too small. How could she avoid the people she knew?

Now it was too late.

Chapter 200

Tammy knew.

“Avery, why didn’t you tell Elliot? If he finds out that these are his kids...”

“He doesn’t want kids, Tammy. If you tell this to anyone or even Elliot, we won’t be friends anymore.” Avery said with a cold voice and her face was even colder as if she was a whole different person.

“If this is serious, of course I won’t tell. This is your privacy and I will keep your secret.” Tammy said anxiously, “I really don’t understand Elliot. What do you think, does he have a mental problem?”

“Not unlikely.” Avery sat by the bed and articulated each word, “I only want to take care of the kids until they grow up.”

“Avery, don’t worry. I promise you I won’t tell anyone about this.”

At the Foster family mansion.

It was seven in the evening when Elliot came home.

“Elliot, is Zoe okay? Why was she so careless? A doctor’s hands are the most precious body part of them all!” Rosalie heard about Zoe’s burn and she was worried.

He sent Zoe to the hospital and saw the burn on her hands.

They were quite severe.

The skin surface was completely damaged.

“That’s good. We need Zoe to treat Shea’s illness!” Rosalie mumbled.

“Mother, let’s not talk about this.” Elliot helped his mother up to the dining table and sat her down.

*There was a feast prepared on the table. Everyone did not eat and waited for him to come home.

“Uncle, do you remember the girl I told you about?” Cole was anxious, so he started the conversation with Elliot, “I went to see Avery in the afternoon and saw a photo of the same girl on her phone.” .

Elliot’s eyes darkened and his movement halted.

“I’m quite certain that she’s the same girl who came to me. The girl looks just like

Avery, I can’

t forget that! I suspect that she’s Avery’s actual daughter.” Cole told Elliot about his speculation.

Elliot instantly put down his fork.

Henry glared at his son, “Don’t make things up when you’re not sure! Also, why did you go to Avery today? Even though your Uncle had a divorce, she's still your ex-Aunt! Wake up!"

Cole, "Dad, I passed by Tate Industries so I went over to have a look. I won't look for her again.

Avery's mouth was as dangerous as poison! How poisonous!

Elliot fidgeted and stood up from the chair.

"Elliot, you haven't finished your dinner! Even if Avery has a daughter, she's not yours! Why' re you so excited?"

Rosalie held onto her son's arm and tried to talk him out, "You have Zoe now, don't go back to Avery."

At night, Elliot had trouble falling asleep.

He had not met Avery's daughter.

He wondered what she looked like. He wondered if she was adopted or Avery's.

He had a strong gut feeling that Avery was keeping something from him.

He must not trust everything she said.

Including how she claimed to have burned Zoe on purpose. How could he believe

her?

Also, he was disgusted by Zoe's act of recording their conversation to hand it to the bodyguard.

He hated indirect and tactful women like her.

Although he fought with Avery very often, Avery would never do silly things like this.

The next morning, he phoned his assistant with his eyes red. He said with a hoarse voice, "Find out Avery's current address for me."

Chapter 201

He had two voices inside him. One voice was telling him not to get back with Avery. Another voice was telling him to find Avery's daughter.

Even if the daughter was not his, he wanted to see how alike the girl was to Avery.

And for that dude! A thorn to his heart!

At the Starry River Villa.

Tammy came with the newly bought puzzle.

As a result, it was Mike who opened the door for her.

“Why don’t you have clothes on again?” Tammy looked at Mike’s naked top and complained, “You’re not alone at home, there are Laura and Layla! Can you care more about your appearance?”

Mike looked half awake, “Why didn’t you bring breakfast? The buns you bought the other time were not too bad!”

Tammy was speechless.

She put down the puzzle and walked toward the master bedroom.

However, Avery was not around.

“Is Avery at work?” Tammy walked out from the bedroom and asked.

Mike yawned, “If she’s not around, then she’s at work!”

“Where’s Laura? Sending the kids to school?”

“If she’s not around, she must be out!” Mike went back to his room and put on a tshirt.

Tammy chased after him and asked, “You don’t sleep in the same room as Avery?”

It seems like you two are not at that stage yet!”

“Why’re you so nosy? Even though we’re not sleeping together, no other man is closer to her than I am!” Mike said proudly as he walked out of the room.

Laura had already prepared breakfast and left it in the kitchen.

He walked over to have breakfast in the kitchen.

Tammy followed him and wanted to get more information out of him.

“How did you meet Avery? Since when did you two start seeing each other? My Avery is not someone who sees two men at once. Did you two meet after her divorce?”

IIT

“You should ask Avery. If she doesn’t tell you, I can’t tell you.” Mike ate the noodles, “If you want information from me, you should trade it with other information.”

Trading with other information?

“How’re you so stingy? Is this how you treat Avery as well?” Tammy sat opposite to him and frowned.

“Of course I don’t treat Avery this way. I will do anything for Avery. As long as she says the word, I will do it.” When Mike said those sweet words with his charming and handsome face. Tammy had goosebumps all over her.

“I don’t even know your name! I am Tammy, Avery’s college friend.”
Tammy said.

“I know you’re Tammy, I also know that you’re her college friend. Can you give me

some more useful information?” Mike complained.

Tammy took a deep breath and a sip of water, “Did you know that Avery
was framed by another person yesterday?”

Mike raised his eyebrows, “Oh?”

Tammy said, “Tell me your name first and I will tell you how she was framed.”

“Mike.”

“Oh, Mike. So, do you know Elliot? He has a new girlfriend and her name is Zoe.

She went to have lunch with Avery and during the meal, she purposefully used boiling water...”

“D*mn it! She used boiling water to splash at Avery?!” Mike dropped the fork and he was ready to fight.

Tammy pulled him back, “Hear me out! She did not splash at Avery! She did it to herself! She then framed Avery for splashing it at her! How mean is she?!”

Mike was flushed red with a glint in his eyes, “How could she do this?! My feels bad even when she kills an ant, how would she splash boiling water on another person?"
Avery

"I know right! Most frustrating of all, the stupid Elliot even phoned Avery to question her for Zoe! Don't you find it triggering?"

.Mike said, "D*mn it! If I were Avery, I would have cursed at him badly!"

Tammy was overwhelmed, "That's too much."

Mike, "Too much? Is Zoe looking for trouble? How dare she frame my Avery!"

Mike had already started coming up with ideas to take revenge on Zoe.

Chapter 202

Meanwhile, Hayden walked over to them.

Tammy was shocked, why was Hayden not in school?

Mike was equally shocked, "Big H, why're you not in school? Let's go out and play!"

Tammy was speechless.

Mike called Hayden "Big H"?

Hayden pulled on Mike's arm and pulled him away.

Tammy was speechless.

It appeared that the two of them were quite close.

No wonder Mike won Avery's heart. He got along with her kids.

At the Sterling Group.

After Elliot arrived, Chad came in to report to him.

After the report, Chad pushed his glasses over the bridge of his nose, "Mr. Foster, Miss Tate's current address is at the Starry River Villa. Are you looking for her?

You had a divorce, I'm afraid she might not let you in."

Chad did not want Elliot to get into trouble.

Elliot, "Chad, keep looking for a doctor to treat Shea for me. No matter how much they want, we can negotiate as long as Shea can be treated."

Chad was surprised, "Miss Sanford is no longer treating Shea?"

Elliot threw him a glance and Chad instantly got it.

"Miss Sanford did cross a line. How could she threaten you with this." Chad said,

"I will keep looking. Right, Miss Tate has been quite busy recently. I have a friend who went over to work at Tate Industries. Miss Tate stayed back late every day."

"I want to see her daughter. I heard that she looks just like Avery." Elliot opened up, "I think she's keeping something from me."

Chad, "I see. You could go over in the evening. Right, my friend also said that the golden haired man is the Director of Operations at Tate Industries. His name is

Mike."

"Director of Operations?" Elliot had a glint of surprise in his eyes, "Is he good?"

Chad said, "I can't find anything on him online. I can't get his information from his country

as well. He is a mysterious guy."

Elliot's eyes dropped.

A mysterious man?

How did Avery meet him?

"Chad, ask your friend to keep an eye on him. I want to find out more about him."

Elliot said.

Chad smiled, "I already told my friend to. To be honest, I don't believe that Avery is in a relationship with Mike. He is too different from you. A person's taste can't change so much."

Elliot had a pen in his hand as he said in a low voice, "Cole said that Avery's daughter went to him twice. Avery would not have let her daughter do so.

Someone else must have asked her daughter to do so."

"You're suspecting Mike?"

"Not sure. They are strange."

"Yes, not long ago, Angela Special Needs Academy's server was hacked. I wonder if Mike did it.

"Therefore, I need more information on this man."

Five in the afternoon.

Laura went to the kindergarten to pick up Layla.

"Grandma, two boys got me snacks today but I didn't take them." Layla mumbled,

"I'm not a foodie! Also, my brother told me to not play with the boys. I will get unlucky!"

Laura asked, "Your brother actually said that?"

Layla said, "Yeah! Brother said that other than him and Uncle Mike, other men are bad!"

Layla spoke with her eyes sparkling when she saw a tall and well-built man standing in front of their house. “Grandma, why is that man standing in front of our house? Who is he?”

Chapter 203

Laura walked toward Elliot.,

When he saw Laura walking toward him, he said, “Hello, Aunt.”

Laura looked cold, “Did Avery invite you over?”

“No.”

“Then, why’re you here? You had a divorce, please stop disturbing our lives.”

Laura’s attitude was harsh. This was their house and Elliot came uninvited out of the blue.

Elliot looked at the closed gate and then at Laura’s face. He had to leave, “Sorry for disturbing.

He could not break inside.

When he left, he caught a small white object moving behind the bushes.

The small object must have been Avery’s daughter.

He really wanted to see her but not through this way.

He walked away.

After he left, Layla ran out from the bushes.

“Grandma! Why did Dad come?”

Laura held Layla’s hand and walked toward the villa’s gate, “How do you know he’s your Dad?”

“Because he is Mom’s ex-husband!” Layla said worriedly and sighed, “What a pity that he’s a douchebag. My brother and I won’t have a Dad for the rest of our lives.”

Laura smiled, “Not necessarily. Your Mom is still young. Who knows, she might meet a nice man. Your step-father will love you just as much!”

Laura spoke because, as a mother, she hoped that her daughter could find a better man.

After all, life is long and it would be less lonely to have a partner.

· Layla pouted, “I don’t want a stepfather! Brother also doesn’t want a stepfather.”

The gate was opened and the both of them went inside before Laura closed it behind them.

“Brother!” Layla knew that Hayden was not in school today, so she called out, our brother is not home. He went to your Mom’s company with Uncle Mike.”

“Brother, I’m home!”

Laura

brought Layla to the living room.

“What is my brother doing in Mom’s company? To play? I also want to play there!

Grandma, don’t make dinner, bring me to find Mom and Brother!” Layla pulled on Laura’s hand and pleaded.

Laura could not resist, so she had to bring Layla over.

This was the first company dinner after Tate Industries was re-built.

As the owner, Avery made a toast before walking out from the restaurant.

Her mother and two children were waiting for her outside.

The two children did not like places with a lot of strangers.

She had to send them home.

“Avery, did you drink?” Laura asked.

Avery shook her head, “I had juice. I need to drive, they understood.”

The mother and daughter each held onto one child and walked toward the parking lot.

Not far away, in the darkness, part of Elliot's face showed under the lamppost

He looked at the four of them darkly. How much he wanted to walk over but he knew he had to hold back

Laura had made it clear to him earlier in the evening.

As long as he had dignity, he must not disturb them.

"Mr. Foster, the girl that Avery is holding must be her daughter?" Chad looked over at Avery and said.

Elliot gulped and said in a hoarse voice, "Chad, should I stop harassing them? No matter who her daughter belongs to, it won't be mine. She already aborted the baby that we had."

Chad said, "Even though you had a divorce, it's still okay to say hi. I don't think you're harassing them."

"They stay away from me like I'm a monster and they clearly don't want to see me." Elliot stood transfixed on the spot. His voice was cold.

"Mr. Foster, why don't I say hi to them? I can have a look at her daughter." Chad wanted to help him.

“No need. Your mission tonight is to get close to Mike.” “Okay.”

Chapter 204

After the Tate Industries dinner had ended, there was a series of entertainment.

Chad’s friend promised him to let him join them.

This way, Chad could get close to Mike.

After Avery and her family sat inside the car, Chad said to Elliot, “Mr. Foster, get some rest! Zoe’s hands are hurt, you haven’t visited her today, right? Why don’t you check on her so that she’s not disappointed.”

Elliot spent the whole day working today. Chad could tell that Elliot was not feeling well and so he used work to numb himself.

However, Elliot had to face her eventually.

Now Shea needed Zoe’s treatment. As Zoe’s boyfriend, Elliot must not be too harsh.

Around half an hour after Elliot had left, Chad’s friend came out from the restaurant.

There was a group of men coming out along with him. Including Mike.

“Our Director of Operations will wing us to continue drinking at the bar...Chad, I remember that you can drink a lot. Come and join us.” Chad’s friend patted Chad on the shoulder and said in a low voice, “I feel like he is more of a sister to Miss

Tate...normally a couple won’t act like this. I don’t know if you get what I mean...

find out when you drink with him later.”

Chad was shocked but pleased.

If Mike was merely a friend of Avery, then that would be ideal

In the past two days, Elliot was feeling down due to Mike and Avery.

And yet, since they already had a divorce, Elliot could not do anything.

“To be fair, I’m not sure about my boss’ relationship with Shea. They’re not a couple but they... do have something. I can’t tell.” Chad said in a low voice, “Don’t spread this, if not, my boss will fire me.”

“Well, don’t tell anyone about what I told you as well. After all, he’s our Director of ‘Operations. If he’s not gay, he will definitely fire me.”

“Yeah!”

At the bar.

Under the dim light and with the alcohol working, one could lose consciousness easily.

Mike had two drinks when Chad's friend brought Chad forward.

"Director, this is my friend, Chad. He is good at drinking, let him drink with you!"

Mike glanced at Chad.

Chad had an ordinary look but his eyes were special. Mike had not seen such clear eyes for a long time.

"How much can you drink?" Mike held on to his glass and touched it with Chad's.

Chad said, "Half a bottle maximum, I don't really drink a lot."

"Oh, that's not a lot. Well, then drink half a bottle with me, then!" Mike's face was red, forming a stark contrast with his neck.

Chad had a drink with him. Based on their conversation and eye contact, Chad felt that Mike did not seem gay.

However, his friend said Mike seemed gay, so Chad decided he would test it further.

Chad took a deep breath and as the alcohol worked in their heads, Chad moved his legs toward Mike.

Mike saw it and he was quite shocked.

Chad coughed and moved his legs away.

When he did this, Mike did not move his legs away.

This showed that he might actually be gay.

However, he was not sure yet.

Both of them finished their second drink. They were talking when Mike's legs leaned forward out of the blue!

Their legs were touching very closely. Skin to skin.

Chad was speechless.

Mike was definitely gay, but he was not! He stood up right away as he was going to leave but Mike hugged him tightly!

Chapter 205

At 5 a.m. the next morning, Elliot's phone vibrated. He had received a text message.

It was not until two hours later that he woke up and saw the message from Chad.

(Sir, according to Mike, he's an expert hacker.)

(He's gay.)

(I'd like to take the day off, Sir.)

Elliot's brows furrowed as he read the three messages.

How did Chad manage to find out this much crucial information in the span of a night?

Mike was not someone who was easy to deal with.

He would not simply reveal personal details to a stranger for no reason.

At that thought, Elliot dialed Chad's number.

"Chad, how did you get all that information from Mike?"

Chad remained silent for two seconds, then said with a hint of exhaustion in his voice, "I was drinking with him last night. He told me after a few drinks."

"That's it?"

"Yes. Also, I had too much to drink, so I'd like to take the day off."

"Okay. Stay home and get some rest."

Chad's eyes were red at the end of the phone call.

No one would believe what happened to him the night before.

He had no plans to talk about it, anyway.

It was too humiliating.

At eight in the morning at Starry River Villa, Avery was getting ready to take the children to school.

“Didn’t Uncle Mike come home last night, Mommy?” Layla asked with her backpack on her back and a curious expression on her face. “I checked his room and he wasn’t there!”

Avery had called Mike at 11 p.m. the night before.

I hope

He had told her he was out drinking.

When she called again at midnight, he had not answered her call.

“He probably had too much to drink and ended up staying at a hotel,” Avery answered. “Don’t worry about him. He’ll be fine.”

Mike had always had an entertaining nightlife, so it was normal for him to be out all night.

“Oh. Will you and Uncle Mike get married, Mommy?” Layla pried nosily. “I won’t be mad if you and Uncle Mike got together.”

Avery found her daughter’s words both laughable and infuriating.

“I know you like him, and I will be friends with him forever,” Avery said, then led the children out the front door, where their eyes landed on the black Rolls– Royce

out front.

Elliot was standing by the car outside the gates, and his gaze was fixed on and the children.
Avery

The expression on their faces instantly changed.

It was only eight in the morning, so what was Elliot doing at their front gate?

When did he get here?

Why did he come?

Avery felt the blood rise inside of her. Avery felt as if weights had been attached to her feet, and she could not move.

From the living room, Laura noticed the three standing still outside and walked out to check on them.

“What’s wrong, Avery?” Laura asked as she walked out to the front yard.

When she noticed Elliot outside the gates, Laura immediately began to charge at

him.

Avery ran after her and caught up to her.

“Take the kids to school, Mom!”

Worried that her mother would start a fight with Elliot, Avery quickly grabbed onto

Laura’s

arm.

“I forgot to tell you that he came by last night. Now he’s here again... What’s he doing hanging around like this?” Laura’s face was flushed with anger.

Chapter 206

Avery glanced at the children, then turned to Laura and said, “Take the kids to school. I’m sure he has a reason for being here.”

As Laura led the children past Elliot, he noticed Layla’s face.

It was true that Layla looked similar to Avery.

Layla’s glistening wide eyes had a hint of hostility in them, and she glared at him when they walked past.

He wondered what thoughts could have been instilled in her for her to despise him to this extent.

Avery approached Elliot soon after.

“Why are you here this early in the morning?”

Elliot looked at Avery’s cool, clean face, then asked with a complicated expression on his face, “Is she your biological daughter, Avery? She looks a lot like you.”

“Did you come by just to look at my daughter?”

“Who’s her father?” Elliot asked in a raised voice. “Since she’s already in preschool, she’s definitely more than three years old.”

It seemed like Avery could not get away with saying that Layla was adopted.

Her daughter resembled her too much. Layla looked exactly like her when she was a little girl. It was as if someone had created Layla out of the same mold that had been used to create Avery.

“That’s right. She’s my biological daughter, but you’re not the father,” Avery answered with a smile. "I found a random sperm donor from a sperm bank abroad to fulfill my wish to become a mother."

What a wish!

Avery's words rendered Elliot completely speechless.

"If that's the only reason you're here, then you can leave now," Avery said curtly.

Elliot's face turned cold as he said, "That man who lives in your house is gay."

The smile on Avery's face froze.

"How did you know that?"

It was impossible to find any information on Mike online.

Mike was the world's most notorious hacker.

No one was able to find out his personal information unless he revealed it.

Elliot felt a sense of relief.

"It looks like you already knew."

"Do you have too much time on your hands, Elliot? How's your girlfriend's wound?"

How's Shea recovering? With all these women waiting for you to dote on them, there's no reason for you to waste what little energy you have left on me. Do you think there could be anything left between us?”

Avery gave Elliot a hard shove, then turned and walked back into the front yard.

“Avery! My relationship with Shea isn’t what you think it is!” Elliot called out at Avery’s slender back as his fists tightened.

Avery gritted her teeth.

How long had she waited for those words?

She had given him countless chances to explain himself.

Why did he not say anything before? What was he trying to salvage by telling her

now?

“Are you having fun messing with me like this, Elliot?” Avery turned and said mockingly several feet away from Elliot. “The one who you owe an explanation to and who you should feel responsible to is Zoe Sanford! Not I!”

Her words woke him up, but he did not agree with her last statement.

“I’m not obligated to explain to or feel beholden to any woman unless I feel I am.

You know I don’t love Zoe.”

“What’s that got to do with me? I don’t care who you date!” Avery snapped, her words stabbing at Elliot's heart. "You've never truly loved me, so I won't let you fool me again!"

If he had truly cared for her, he would not have held back. He would have told her everything he needed to say.

"You said your relationship with Shea isn't like that," Avery said with a tremble in her voice." Even so, she's the most important person in your heart. Please let me go, Elliot! I'm done being toyed with!"

When Chad returned to the office after his day off, he noticed that Elliot's mood was worse than before.

He was surprised, then went to ask Ben.

"What's wrong with Mr. Foster?"

Ben was drinking a cup of coffee, then sighed, "According to his driver, Elliot went over to Avery's yesterday to make up with her, but ended up getting heartlessly rejected."

"It looks like I suffered through that work-related injury for nothing, then."

"What work-related injury?"

Chad dejectedly explained everything that happened the night he met Mike at the bar.

That afternoon, escorted by his bodyguards, Elliot appeared at Tate Industries surrounded by a murderous aura.

Chapter 207

Avery rushed to the technical department the moment she received the notice.

“Our director isn’t here today, Mr. Foster.”

The manager at the technical department had no clue what had happened,

However, judging from the coldness on Elliot’s face, he guessed that Mike had somehow offended the man.

“Perhaps I should escort you to the president!” said the manager just as Avery walked into the room.

Avery approached Elliot, noticed his rage, then said, “Let’s talk in my office.”

He probably came up to the technical department to see Mike about something that had happened between them.

Mike did not tell Avery anything but based on how livid Elliot looked, she guessed that it must be something serious.

Once they were in Avery's office, Elliot and Ben sat down on the couch while the bodyguard waited at the door.

"What happened?" Avery said as she served each man a glass of water.

"Miss Tate, I'm afraid your director of operations violated Chad," Ben said.

Avery was speechless.

Chad was Elliot's most trusted assistant and right-hand man. Anyone who picked on Chad picked on Elliot.

Avery's head began to spin.

She did not expect Mike to do something this outrageous!

She picked up her phone and called Mike. He was quick to answer her call.

Avery lowered her voice and hissed, "Come to the office right now!"

Mike was bewildered, "I'm eating out! What's going on? Why are you snapping at me?" "Did you mess with Elliot Foster's assistant?!"

"What are you talking about? How am I supposed to know his assistant?"

"Elliot Foster's sitting in my office right now. He wouldn't be here if it weren't true!"

Avery snanded as her breathing quickened. “Did you sleep with him without even knowing his

name?!”

“Of course not! I’ve only slept with one person since I arrived -”

“What was his name?”

“Chad. I haven’t been able to contact him since that night.”

Avery inhaled a slow tortured breath and said, “That’s Elliot Foster’s assistant!

Get your *ss over here right now!”

Once she hung up, Avery walked over to Elliot and Ben, then sat across from them. Her cheeks were flushed.

“How’s Mr. Rayner doing? My apologies. Mike didn’t tell me what he did,” she said apologetically, then added with a hint of suspicion, “How do they know each other?”

Aside from work, Mike spent his time bar–hopping.

Avery could not imagine how he could have met Chad.

After thinking over the matter for a few seconds, Ben said, “Mike went to a bar after your company dinner the other night, and Chad was there, too. I admit that Chad went to that bar to dig up information about Mike—”

Avery instantly understood.

“So, you sent Chad Rayner to get close to Mike, and by some strange circumstances, they ended up sleeping together,” she said, then turned to Elliot and added, “That’s how you found out Mike was gay.”

Noticing that they were about to get into a fight, Ben quickly jumped in, “There’s something you don’t know, Miss Tate. We investigated Mike because our company had recently been hacked. Our entire network had been disabled. The hacker even left a written challenge on Elliot’s computer. We suspect that this hacker is the same one that hacked into Angela Special Needs Academy.” Avery’s heart tightened, and her fists clenched slightly as she asked, “Why do you suspect it was Mike?”

“That’s because he’s your director of operations. I bet his technical skills are amazing! Besides, we found it suspicious that we could not find any information about him,” Ben said. ” We never asked Chad to sacrifice his body like that. Mike was the one who forced him into it.”

Avery lowered her gaze as she lost confidence in her argument.

If Mike really forced himself onto Chad and hacked into the school and the Sterling Group, then Avery would not stand up for him.

There was nothing she could do even if she wanted to help.

Elliot would be showing him great mercy if he decided not to kill him. Soon after,

Mike arrived at the office.

Chapter 208

Mike burst through the doors and strode into Avery’s office.

“Avery! Chad was the one who had initiated it!” Mike said. His pale blue eyes filled with apprehension, “We were just drinking and chatting at first when his leg slid against mine... If he didn’t mean anything by it, then why did he bump my leg with his? Wasn’t that a signal for sex?

Avery’s face turned scarlet.

“Chad was trying to find out if you were gay or straight,” Ben said awkwardly.

Mike was determined to argue his case.

“I didn’t know what his true intentions were! Besides, he had the time of his life that night!”

The entire room dipped into pin-drop silence.

Elliot picked up his glass of water and took a sip.

Ben followed suit.

Avery changed the subject, “Did you ever hack into Angela Special Needs Academy? Also, were you behind the system breach at Sterling Group before

this?”

Mike raised both his hands and swore, “It wasn’t me! I’d admit it if it were me. It’s true that my hacking skills are impressive, but it really wasn’t me.”

He then shot a meaningful look at Avery.

His eyes said, “It was your son.”

Avery was at a loss for words. Finally, she composed herself and said, “So... I haven’t had lunch. What about you guys? Let’s go get lunch together!”

In order to protect her son, she had no choice but to muster her courage and treat

Elliot and Ben to lunch.

Ben glanced at Elliot and decided to help him win this round.

“Miss Tate, that’s—”

“Didn’t you say you love Mexican food? Give it a try!” Elliot interjected before Ben could finish his sentence, and accepted Avery’s offer.

Ben was bewildered.

Since when did he like Mexican food?

“Ha! Serves him right getting tortured by Avery!” Ben thought.

“Could you ask Chad out for me? I’d like to talk to him,” Mike said.

He was not interested in joining them for lunch. All he wanted to do was to set things straight with Chad.

“Just head over to Sterling Group if you want to see him. I doubt you’d act recklessly once you’re on our turf,” Ben said.

“I never picked on him!” Mike said with an innocent expression on his face. “That night, he was a little reluctant and twitchy at first, but then he—”

Avery did not want to listen to the details, so she interrupted him and said, “Go apologize to him right now! And don’t harass him again after this!”

Mike instantly turned meek and said, "Okay."

Once they were at the restaurant, Avery ordered a few of the specials, then passed the menu to Ben, who then passed it to Elliot.

"Didn't you say you loved Mexican food?" Avery asked.

"Elliot likes it, too," Ben said with a grin.

"I see... Did you suffer any damage from the hacking attack?" Avery asked.

Ben and Elliot had both seen Mike communicating something to Avery with his eyes.

Whoever the hacker was, even if it was not Mike, it was definitely someone close to Avery.

"Of course. We failed to close a hundred-million-dollar contract that day, and another company swooped in and got the contract. What's worse was all the important information on Elliot's computer was wiped clean! We're still looking into the whereabouts of that hacker! Once we find out who he is, we'll make sure he pays for his crimes financially and legally!"

Ben's words made Avery turn pale.

Noticing her reaction, Elliot said, “He’s just scaring you. We can excuse the financial matters, and I still have all the data that was on my computer. However, the written challenge the hacker left behind annoyed me. I’ll definitely find him and throw him in prison!”

Chapter 209

Avery’s chest tightened.

She could hear the nervous tremor in her own voice as she tried to stay calm.

“I see... What did the challenge entail?”

Elliot’s thick brows furrowed as he said with a chilling expression, “Come and strangle me,

you *sshole!”

Avery was speechless.

Ben did not know whether to laugh or cry.

“I suspect the hacker’s pretty young!”

“Not necessarily!” Avery said. “You can’t tell much from that one sentence!”

“An adult probably wouldn’t add in the term ‘*sshole’ right? Other than in those old, corny soap operas, of course.”

To prevent them from suspecting a minor, Avery looked at Ben and muttered, “*sshole,” then turned to Elliot and once again said, “*sshole.”

Both Ben and Elliot sat in stunned silence.

“See, there’s nothing silly about the word!” Avery said. “Adults can easily use it, too.”

She was hard at work, trying to clear her son’s name.

Her expression had unwittingly given her away.

Ben and Elliot exchanged glances for a moment as they came to the same conclusion.

“How did you and Mike meet, Miss Tate? It’s hard to imagine that you would know someone that special,” Ben said, changing the subject to something more lighthearted. “Also, it looks like he’s especially obedient. He listens to your every word.”

Avery took a sip of water and made up an excuse.

“We met at a networking event when I was studying abroad. We’re friends, so there’s no such thing as obedience.”

“I see... Did he follow you to Aryadelle?”

“He came because he felt like it, and he’ll leave when he feels like it. What’s this about following me around?” Avery said as she picked up a taco and placed it on her plate.

Mike was at Sterling Group trying to explain his intentions to the receptionist at the front desk

“I’m sorry, but you need an appointment to see Mr. Rayner.”

“Exactly! It’s lunchtime, so you may make an appointment after lunch at two in the afternoon, ” said the receptionist.

“That’s not what I mean... Elliot Foster and Ben Schaffer sent me to see him. Do you know who those two are?”

The receptionist was taken aback.

How could she possibly not know who the president and chief financial officer were?

“One moment, Sir. I’ll call Mr. Rayner and bring the matter to his attention.”

After a short phone call, the receptionist turned to Mike and said, “Mr. Rayner doesn’t want to see you.”

“I know he doesn’t want to see me, but your boss told me to come here. Are you going to listen to him or your boss? Just take me to where he is,” Mike said.

He was determined to see Chad because he was absolutely furious!

The receptionist hesitated for a moment, then led Mike to Chad’s office.

The moment Chad saw Mike, he began to seethe with anger.

Mike closed the door to Chad’s office behind him, then snapped coldly, “You spy!”

Faced with Mike’s chastising, Chad refused to back down.

“I admit, I had ulterior motives for getting close to you that night, but you—”

“It’s good that you’re admitting to that! Avery gave me an earful! She even made me come here to apologize to you! There’s no way I’m apologizing!”

Mike was infuriated, but he was still relatively level – headed.

“Nothing would’ve happened between us if you hadn’t deliberately approached me, so don’t act like the victim here!”

“Delete my number!” Chad hissed through gritted teeth.

“My pleasure!” Mike said as he pulled out his phone and deleted Chad’s number.

At the same time, Chad also got rid of Mike’s number.

“Let’s never meet ever again! Even if I run into you, we should pretend like we don’t know

each other,” said Chad.

“Ha! I’d rather run into the devil than run into you!” Mike responded.

After a heated argument, the two men parted ways.

Mike walked out of Sterling Group, then entered a cafe nearby and ordered a cup of black coffee.

He then gave Hayden a call and said, “Hey, Big H. Your mom knows about what you did. I’ve got my own butt to worry about, so you’re on your own this time!”

“It looks like I’ll have to bring the plan forward,” Hayden mumbled.

“I think so! I bet your mom’s going to confiscate your laptop and give you a piece of her mind. Elliot Foster gave her some trouble today, so I’m guessing she’s in a terrible mood! Shouldn’t you just run away from home?” suggested Mike.

“I’d

rather get a beating than break Mommy's heart," said Hayden.

Chapter 210

Avery returned home earlier than usual that evening.

Once Laura took Hayden home from school, she picked up Layla and went into the bedroom.

Hayden already knew what was about to happen when he saw his grandmother carry his sister

away.

"Give me your bag, Hayden," Avery said as she stretched a hand out to Hayden

Hayden passed his bag to his mother with both hands.

Avery opened the bag and took out the laptop.

She did not open the laptop, but said, "Uncle Mike told me everything. You've used the skills he taught you to do a lot of bad things. Did you know that was illegal, Hayden? Do you know what you would have to face if they caught you?"

Hayden answered his mother without batting an eyelid, "I'm only four. Can they throw me in jail?"

Avery was at a loss for words.

Even if Elliot ruled over Aryadelle, he probably had no way of sending a four-year-old to prison.

However, that was not the point.

The point was that Hayden's values were beginning to get twisted.

"You won't be four years old forever. You're bound to grow up," Avery said as she tried to educate her son. "I can't watch you make the same mistake again, so I'm confiscating your laptop for now."

"Uncle Mike would just get me a new one," Hayden said.

Avery felt her head throb, then sighed and said, "Are you planning on acting up

again?!"

Hayden shook his head and said, "I won't mess with Elliot Foster again."

As long as he left Elliot Foster alone, nobody else would be able to figure out that it was him.

"No dinner for you tonight," Avery said, then walked towards her room with the laptop in her arms. Her eyes were red.

Hayden knew that his mother would never lay a finger on him, but the thought of Avery's angry face upset him.

All he wanted to do was punish the person who picked on his mother.

At seven in the evening, Zoe received a text message.

(Meet me tonight at 10 at the Scenic Hotel, Room V809. I want to get to know you better. Elliot.

Did Elliot just invite her to a hotel at 10 p.m.?!

It was hard not to let one's imagination run wild considering the meeting place and time.

They were both adults.

Even someone who had never dated would know the deeper meaning behind that text.

Why was Elliot suddenly changing his behavior toward her?

Zoe did not overthink it, because her head was spinning with joy.

She had to dress up tonight and make sure to leave a lasting impression on him.

She was determined to completely take over Avery's place in Elliot's heart.

Over at the Starry River Villa, Hayden and Layla climbed in bed after washing up.

Layla pulled out a piece of chocolate from underneath her pillow, then said, “Grandma asked me to give this to you, Hayden. She was worried you’d be hungry... Hurry up and eat it!”

Hayden shook his head and refused.

Layla shoved her hands back under her pillow and fumbled around.

Suddenly, she pulled out yet another piece of chocolate.

“This was from Mommy. She’s also worried you’d be hungry. Just eat one of them, Hayden! We ‘ll take one piece each. How’s that?” Layla begged gently.

“Did Mommy really ask you to give that to me?” Hayden said as he stared at the chocolates in his sister’s hand.

They were clearly identical.

“That’s right! Actually, they’re both from Mommy. She told me to say it was from Grandma at first because she felt bad...”

A hint of warmth washed over Hayden’s cold face. At 10 p.m. that night, an alluring person appeared at the entrance of the Scenic Hotel.

Chapter 211

Zoe had worn a strappy red dress to the hotel. She pushed open the door to Room V809.

The darkness of the room took her by surprise, but she very quickly noticed the flickering of red candles inside.

Red candles!

Sitting by the candles was a decanter of red wine and some desserts, and on the chair next to the arrangement was a bouquet of red roses.

Zoe was melting in the romantic atmosphere.

Elliot was unexpectedly sentimental!

Zoe was filled with anticipation for what was about to happen that night.

As she picked the bouquet of roses, she became intoxicated by the strong floral fragrance.

She placed the bouquet back on the chair, then pulled out her phone.

It was almost ten o'clock, but why had Elliot not arrived?

Was there traffic on the streets?

When another fifteen minutes passed with no sign of Elliot, Zoe began to feel anxious.

Was he not coming?

He could not possibly have painstakingly decorated the room on a whim, right?

Or perhaps, did he mistakenly send the text to her?

Zoe poured herself a glass of wine. She wrapped her fingers around the glass and gently swayed the red liquid inside of it, before taking a sip.

It was not bad at all!

It was a fragrant, full-bodied wine.

It was not until 11 p.m. that the unlocked door was pushed open, and a tall figure walked in.

A spark of great excitement flashed in her blurry eyes.

She hurried toward the tall figure, threw her arms around him, and whispered softly, "I knew you'd come, Elliot... It was a painful wait, but you showed up in the end..."

Scanned with CamScanner

The man's entire body suddenly stiffened, as if he was shocked

She ignored him and kept her arms tightly wrapped around him

After two glasses of wine, her reason had already flown out the window

All she wanted was to be with him right now!

Zoe was woken up by a splitting headache at seven the next morning

She squinted her eyes and took in her unfamiliar surroundings as everything that happened the night before floated in her mind.

A grin appeared on her face.

Last night, Zoe took a substantial step forward in her relationship with Elliot,

She did not expect things between them to progress this quickly, let alone for the experience with him to be this amazing

Elliot was gentle and patient with her, and he had given her a taste of the joys of being a woman.

Zoe was even more in love with him now!

At that thought, she turned to look at the man lying beside her.

He was on his side, and there were faint scratches on his pale back.

She had scratched him in the heat of the moment last night,

She had deliberately left her mark on his body as a sign that she had become his

woman,

She moved closer to him until their bare skin was touching and their body heat was entangled together.

“Hmm? Do you want to go another round?”

The man’s hoarse voice hit Zoe’s ears, leaving her speechless. Why was it not Elliot’s voice?!

Chapter 212

Zoe’s entire body went rigid as she felt her body instantly turn cold.

Cole turned to face her, then teased bashfully, “I didn’t know you were that rough in bed, Dr. Sanford. You almost squeezed me dry...”

Zoe finally took a good look at Cole’s face.

This was not their first meeting.

Back when she had burned her hand, Cole was the one who had driven Rosalie over to visit her.

Zoe had too much to drink the night before, and the room was lit up with nothing but a few candles, so she did not realize that this man was not Elliot!

How could something like this happen?

Elliot was the one who had invited her here last night!

What was Cole doing here?!

“How are you here? Why you?!” Zoe picked up her pillow and repeatedly smacked Cole's face with it.

Cole covered his head and cried, "Dr. Sanford! Don't hit me! I don't know what's going on either! I got a text from Avery last night telling me to come to Room V809, so I came! Who knew that you'd hug me the moment I walked in... I tried to loosen your grip a few times, but you refused to let go... Not only did you not let go, but you also kept throwing yourself at me... Who would be able to resist that?!"

Zoe threw the pillow onto the ground, then burst into tears.

"Don't cry, Dr. Sanford! I know the whole thing is fishy, but it's true! I can show you the text! I wasn't trying to trick you on purpose! Let's just pretend that what happened last night was a dream! I swear I won't tell my uncle. He wouldn't let me live if he found out about this. I won't dig my own grave!"

Cole dropped to his knees in front of Zoe and swore to her.

Through red eyes, Zoe stretched her hand out to him and snapped, "Show me the text!"

She wanted to know exactly what went wrong.

Cole quickly found his phone and opened up his messages, but despite his wide eyes, he could not find the text he had received last night.

“Huh? Where is it?! The text last night disappeared! I remember I didn’t delete it!”

Zoe picked up another pillow and hit Cole with it once again!

Cole was devastated!

“Let me explain, Dr. Sanford! I bet it was a hacker! My phone was hacked into not too long ago!

“Are you saying that the text from Avery Tate was the hacker’s work? So, the hacker was the one who sent me that text from your uncle, too?!” Zoe sneered.

She did not believe that the text she had received from Elliot was actually the work of a hacker.

However, why did Elliot not show up last night?

Zoe took a deep breath, found her phone, and opened up her messages.

She instantly became livid!

“Did the text my uncle sent you disappear? Looks like you got hacked, too!”
Cole

said as the gears in his head turned at full speed. "Last night was a setup to trap the two of us!"

"Who did it?! Who could it be?!"

Zoe was about to lose her mind.

If Elliot found out about what happened between her and Cole, he would surely not want her!

"I don't know... This hacker's too good, and I couldn't find out anything about him,"

Cole said as he passed a couple of pieces of tissue paper to her, then added,

"Don't worry, I'm sure this wasn't my uncle's work. He's still counting on you to treat Shea. He won't do something this despicable to you."

Zoe wiped her tears with the tissue, then said hoarsely, "Could there be surveillance cameras in here? Is there a possibility that what we did last night was recorded?"

Cole glanced around the room and said, "There wouldn't be... Right? This is a five-star hotel after all. I'll sue them if we were recorded!"

“Send someone over to check and see if there are any cameras in here!”
Zoe

ordered.

“Oh... Okay...” Cole responded.

Elliot had personally sent Shea to school that day.

Once he dropped her off at her classroom, he walked over to Hayden’s classroom.

After their meeting with Avery yesterday, Elliot and Ben had come to the conclusion that the hacker who had hacked into Angela Academy and Sterling

Group was someone close to Avery.

Moreover, it was someone who she cared about very much.

someo

Otherwise, she would not have treated them to lunch,

From that list of people, there was nobody else apart from Laura and the children.

Elliot had also once seen Hayden with a laptop.

Although common sense would argue that it was impossible for a four-year-old child the hacker that challenged him, there were times when the impossible was possible.

Elliot walked into the classroom and walked over to the little boy wearing a flat

cap. "Hayden Tate, give me your bag."

Chapter 213

Hayden pretended not to hear Elliot and ignored him.

Hayden's behavior shocked the teacher, who then quickly walked over and said,

"Mr. Foster, may I ask why you need Hayden's bag?"

These were two individuals that she could not afford to offend.

However, after weighing the pros and cons, the teacher decided that the consequences of offending Elliot Foster were graver, and she picked up Hayden's bag from the desk.

"Don't be scared, Hayden. Mr. Foster isn't a bad person. He's just worried about you," she said, then handed the bag over to Elliot and said, "He passed the security clearance when he arrived at school. There aren't any dangerous items in there."

"I remember he had a laptop with him," Elliot said as he took the bag from the teacher.

The bag was light, causing him to raise his brows.

When Elliot opened the bag, he found only a change of clothes but no laptop in sight.

“Oh... Hayden does have a small laptop. He enjoys watching cartoons on it,” said the teacher.

Elliot placed the bag on Hayden’s desk, then loomed over him and said, “Why didn’t you bring your laptop today?”

Hayden rested his head on the desk and went to sleep.

“Should I give his mother a call?” said the teacher with an embarrassed smile as she tried to smooth things over.

Hayden shot to his feet, glared at the teacher with his obsidian black eyes, then grabbed his bag and walked out of the room.

The teacher ran after him, yelling, “Come back, Hayden! I won’t call your mother!”

Hayden ignored her and continued walking away.

Shea was standing at the door when she noticed Hayden had walked out of his classroom.

“Hayden,” she called out timidly.

Hayden glanced coldly at her, then quickened his pace.

When Elliot saw his sister following Hayden, he grabbed onto her and asked,

“Where are you going, Shea?”

“Hayden!” Shea cried as she pointed a finger at Hayden with a face filled with worry. “Where’s

he going?”

“His teacher will take care of him. Let’s get back to your classroom.”

Just as Elliot finished his sentence, Shea broke free of his grip and ran after

Hayden

“Wait for me, Hayden!”

Shea’s behavior caused Elliot to furrow his brows.

Why did she like Hayden that much?

What happened between them?

Elliot went after them with long strides.

Hayden managed to successfully leave the school under the pursuit of the teacher and Elliot.

If nobody was following him, he would have taken a cab home.

However, he could not go home now with three people on his tail.

With his backpack on his back, Hayden walked along the street.

Elliot was holding Shea's hand, and he was right behind Hayden. The teacher was walking on the other side. The group of four strolled aimlessly down the street.

"Hayden, I can take you home if you want," said the teacher. "I don't want to!"

Hayden responded.

"Where do you want to go, then? I'll take you. It's dangerous for you to be wandering outside like this," the teacher said bitterly.

Hayden frowned and stopped talking.

They arrived at a crowded street about half an hour later.

It was Shea's first time out in public, and she found the outside world to be new and strange.

Elliot's eyes were fixed on her as she glanced around her without blinking.

Zoe had said that gradually allowing Shea to get in contact with society would be good for her condition.

Shea used to refuse everything that had to do with the outside world, so Elliot had never got the chance to take her out.

After the last surgery, there was an obvious change in her.

She was beginning to have a rising interest in the world.

This was a huge improvement.

Seeing the change in Shea made Elliot think of Zoe.

Perhaps he should treat her better.

She was the only one who could save Shea, after all.

Noticing their persistent pursuit, Hayden decided that he might as well just stop in the middle of the street.

Elliot saw Hayden's intentions, then said to Shea, "Let's head back, Shea! It's too hot out here You could get a heatstroke."

Despite being drenched in sweat, Shea shook her head and said, "Hayden could get a heatstroke, too."

"Why are you following him?" Elliot asked, confused. "Would you follow him if he went home?"

Chapter 214

Shea nodded without hesitation.

It was not like she had never gone to Hayden's house.

She actually quite liked it there and wanted to go back again.

Since Hayden had not brought his laptop to school, he was sure that Avery had taken it away from him.

He could basically confirm that the lawless hacker was the cool little boy in the flat cap in front of him.

Although Hayden was Avery's adopted son, Elliot wanted to teach him a lesson.

However, Shea's behavior toward the boy left Elliot in a dilemma.

Suddenly, a loud crash pierced through the air, followed by the ear-splitting sound of harsh cursing!

The group glanced over to where the commotion came from and saw two people in the middle of a fight.

Faced with the violent scene in front of her, the color drained from Shea's face and terror flooded into her eyes.

“Ah! Ahhh!”

She screamed at the top of her lungs as she covered her ears with her hands.

Elliot’s heart tightened at the sight of his sister’s breakdown.

She must have remembered the violent abuse she had suffered as a child!

Elliot took Shea into his arms and left in a hurry.

As Hayden watched them leave, Shea’s cries of terror replayed in his head.

What happened to her?

Was she frightened?

Those people were fighting each other, not her. Why was she scared?

The teacher grabbed Hayden’s arm and quickly led him away.

That afternoon, Avery made a trip to the police station.

Five years ago, Wanda Tate’s brother, Richard Worsley, had embezzled close to three hundred million dollars from Tate Industries before fleeing the country

Despite the conclusive evidence, there was nothing that the local police could do.

The country that Richard had fled to did not have an extradition treaty with Aryadelle which meant that the Aryadelle police could not arrest him as long as he was there

Moreover, Richard had gotten an entirely new identity once he had escaped.

Avery had spent the past few years looking into his whereabouts.

It was not until recently that the private investigator that Avery had hired finally sent over Richard's latest photos and address.

Avery had handed over all these clues to the police.

Today, they finally had a new breakthrough in the case.

"Miss Tate, we've sent Richard Worsley's old friends to persuade him to return to the country. According to our informant, Mr. Worsley's been living in rather difficult conditions. We're guessing that he's blown through most of the money he embezzled."

"I don't care if I don't get the money back. I want him to answer to the law! I've spoken to my lawyers, and they told me that the amount of money involved in the case is large enough for him to be given the death sentence. Is that right?"

"Yes. Once he's back in the country, we will arrest him immediately."

“Alright. Thank you for your hard work!”

When Avery walked out of the police station, she felt a strong sense of relief.

Returning to Aryadelle and rebuilding Tate Industries was part of her plan to bait him back into the country.

She wanted Richard to know that she was now incredibly wealthy.

He had succeeded in embezzling money from the company once, so he was sure to want to try his luck once again.

She had asked the company’s current chief financial officer to get in touch with Richard’s friends and give them the illusion that there was another chance to steal money from Tate Industries, and Richard had fallen for it.

Avery got into her car and was about to head back to the office when her phone rang.

When she saw who was calling, she immediately answered the phone and said,

“Hey, Wesley. Are you at the airport?”

“I am. Where are you right now? I’ll come to you,” said Wesley.

“I’m not busy right now, so I’ll pick you up.”

Avery arrived at the airport half an hour later to pick Wesley up.

She asked for his house address, then drove the car in that direction.

“How long are you back for this time?” she asked.

“For good,” Wesley said with a shrug. “I quit and decided to come back home.”

“That’s great! That way, we can see each other all the time,” Avery said with a pure and sincere smile.

However, a hint of worry flashed across Wesley’s eyes.

“Zoe Sanford called me, Avery. She’s more shameless than I imagined. You should be on your guard around her.”

Chapter 215

“What did she contact you for?” Avery asked.

“She said she needed an assistant and asked me to recommend one to her,”

Wesley said with an expression of irony on his face. Then he laughed and continued, “Guess what her requirements were for picking an assistant? She wanted someone who was Professor Hough’s student and whose skills weren’t worse off than hers... She might as well have just said that she wanted to find someone who could single-handedly take on Shea's case. As if someone who was better than her would agree to be her assistant! i don't know if she's shameless or just plain stupid."

Avery also found the entire thing ironic.

"She obviously doesn't have the skills for the job, but she insists on sticking around. Elliot Foster isn't an idiot. He'll find the truth out sooner or later," Wesley said. "You're too soft hearted, Avery. Not many people would treat their own rivals in love."

"As long as you're not uncomfortable about it."

"There's no point in punishing myself over this. We should look ahead in life," Avery said, then changed the subject, "I've got some good news. I'm almost done rebuilding my company. Everything is going smoothly."

Wesley was happy for her and said, "That's great. How is Hayden doing at the special needs school?"

The smile on Avery's face vanished at the mention of Hayden.

“He has learned to hack from Mike, and his skills are way beyond my imagination.

Elliot’s got his eyes on him,” she said as her head began to ache. “I’m afraid that Elliot might uncover more things if this continues.”

“It’s rare for secrets to be kept under wraps for a lifetime, Avery. You’re no longer the same person you were four years ago. Even if he finds out that he’s the father of the children, he won’t actually kill them.”

“That’s exactly why I need to make more money and become more powerful.

That’s the only way I can protect my children,” Avery said. “I’ll keep this a secret for as long as I can! Considering the mess his personal life is in right now, the children are better off without a father.”

Meanwhile, Elliot had taken Shea back to the Foster mansion where the family doctor had given her a sedative.

thepletalo

Once Shea was asleep, the doctor asked Elliot, “Mental illness is beyond my scope I suggest you find a psychiatrist to treat her.”

This was not something Elliot had not considered before.

“She’s wary of strangers.”

“It’s worth a try. Didn’t you say that her condition is better than it was before the surgery?” comforted the doctor. “You never know, maybe solving her emotional woes could help her overall recovery.”

Elliot nodded, then asked, “Do you have a good psychiatrist to recommend?”

“I happen to know one of the country’s more well-known psychiatrists, but I can’t guarantee that they will be available. I’ll ask and find out,” answered the doctor.

“You could also ask for Dr. Sanford’s opinion. She’s better than I am, so she might have a more professional view on this.”

Elliot nodded in response.

Zoe rushed over half an hour later.

She was dressed in a long-sleeved top and long pants, while her face and neck were covered in a thick layer of makeup.

“Are you alright, Dr. Sanford?” Elliot asked as he took in her appearance. “I heard you spent the night out last night.”

Zoe had not allowed the bodyguard to follow her to the hotel last night.

All the bodyguard knew was that she spent the night out, but not where she went or what she did.

“Yes. A friend of mine came to see me, so I spent the night with her,” Zoe answered with a light smile, then changed the subject quickly and said, “Did something happen to Shea?”

Elliot explained everything that happened that afternoon to Zoe.

“Did she suffer similar trauma in her past? If that’s the case, we need to keep her away from anything that might trigger her. It’s better for her to get plenty of rest after brain surgery,” said Zoe.

“Could we get a psychiatrist to see her?”

“We could give it a try with an expert psychiatrist, but this will also depend on Shea’s reaction. We don’t need to rush things if she’s against it. Once her mental capacity recovers to a certain level, her psychological endurance will also increase accordingly.”

“Go get busy with your work, Elliot. I’ll look after Shea,” Zoe said.

As Elliot walked in the direction of his study, Zoe watched his back and felt a huge sense of relief.

Cole had sent someone to search the hotel room that morning and did not find any hidden cameras.

She did not have to worry about what happened the night before for now.

Although she did not know who set the trap, she could deny everything since they did not have any proof.

Chapter 216

Zoe was now using Elliot to climb the social ladder.

Instead of being an accomplished doctor, she would much rather be at the top of

high society

Moreover, she was aware of her own skills, and she knew that she would never reach Professor Hough's level of expertise.

There was a limit to how far she could go if she remained in the medical field,

Things would be different if she married Elliot.

When the time came, she would be the envy of everyone around her.

Not long after Elliot sat down in his study, he received a phone call from Ben.

“Hey, Elliot. How did things at the school go?”

“He didn’t bring his laptop today. I’m guessing Avery took it away from him.”

“It looks like it really was Avery’s son! Isn’t he only four years old? Is he a so-called child prodigy?” Ben said enthusiastically.

Elliot did not respond.

“What do you plan on doing with the kid?” Ben asked.

He found the entire thing especially entertaining.

It would have been boring if the hacker turned out to be some creep.

Who would have thought that the person who disabled Sterling Group’s entire network was a little brat?

“Why did he challenge you to strangle him?” Ben continued to ask. “Why don’t you ask him that yourself if you’re so interested? He always ignores me,” said

Elliot.

“Hahahaha! This kid’s got personality! I really want to meet him.”

“In your dreams!”

What Hayden did was wrong, but he was an “atypical” child after all.

Elliot would not do anything to him, nor would he allow Ben to bother him at school.

“Avery’s birthday is coming up. What if they invite us to the party? Wouldn’t I get to see the kid, then?” Ben said excitedly. “Do you want to get her a present beforehand, Elliot? You may be divorced, but you once shared an unforgettable relationship. You won’t be so stingy as to not wish her a happy birthday, right?”

Elliot’s hawk-like eyes narrowed, then he said in a deep voice, “Do you think she’ll accept a gift from me?”

“Wasn’t she pretty friendly when she treated us to lunch yesterday? Even though it was only because we had something on her.”

“How much would a birthday present cost? I could give it to her for you if you’re embarrassed. I really want to take a look at that son of hers,” Ben said.

After a few seconds of deep consideration, Elliot gave in and asked, “What would be a suitable gift?”

“How about jewelry? Women love sparkly things,” Ben suggested.

“Jewelry isn’t suitable. We’re divorced after all.”

“What else if not jewelry? You wouldn’t be able to give her something cheap, right? She’s a millionaire now!”

Elliot raised his hand and massaged the space between his brows, then said,

“Let’s just go with jewelry, then!”

On the other side of the study’s door, Zoe’s heart was overwhelmed by jealousy as she listened in on their conversation.

Elliot had asked his assistant to give her a handbag worth a few thousand dollars on her birthday a while back.

Now, he was about to give Avery expensive jewelry for her birthday!

Who exactly was his girlfriend?!

How could he do this to her?

She was the only one who could save Shea now!

As Zoe’s eyes reddened with hatred, she pulled out her phone and texted her father.

(Avery Tate has two children. Look up where she adopted them in Bridgedale, and for what purpose.)

Chapter 217

It was dinner time at Starry River Villa,

“Avery, Wesley came by to see you this afternoon,” Laura said with bright eyes.

“He told me that he was going to settle down here in Aryadelle...”

Avery figured out what her mother was thinking from the grin on her face.

“Mom, I know you’re hoping I’ll find someone to get married to soon, but please don’t pull that face while we are in public. Otherwise, people would think I’m desperate for marriage!” Avery pleaded. “I’m still in my twenties. I’m still young!

This is the time I should be focusing on my career. Once I’m successful, men will be lining up to marry me.”

The smile on Laura’s face vanished.

“I’m not pestering you... I just really think that Wesley’s a great man. He took care of you the whole time you were abroad! Don’t you see how well he treats you?”

“Am I supposed to marry anyone who’s good to me? In that case, Professor Hough was good to me, too!”

“Fine! Keep acting blind! Wesley really is a good man. You might never find someone like him again if you miss out now.”

“Can’t you have a little more faith in me? There will be men who will be attracted to me in the future,” Avery said as she comforted her mother. “Besides, did you ask the children what they think? They don’t want a stepfather.”

Avery shot a meaningful look at her children.

Layla cleverly expressed her opinion and said, “I don’t want a stepfather, but I’ll make myself accept anyone Mommy likes.”

It was clear that her daughter did not understand what Avery was trying to signal to her.

Avery pinned her hopes on her son.

“Let’s eat, Grandma,” said Hayden,

“Alright, I won’t say more,” Laura said. “I’m just worried that your Mommy will regret this, so I’m just reminding her. I won’t waste my time worrying about it, since she has no such intentions.”

Avery chuckled and said, “Mom, if you’re so eager to play matchmaker, then find someone for Mike. He's been hanging out at bars every day recently. I bet he's dying to find a better half."

Laura was left speechless.

It was dinner time at Starry River Villa.

"Avery, Wesley came by to see you this afternoon," Laura said with bright eyes.

Laura was left speechless.

At Tate Industries the next day, Wesley’s visit took Avery by surprise.

“Aren’t you resting at home from the jet lag?” Avery asked as she invited him to take a seat on the couch.

“Do you have coffee here?” Wesley asked.

“I do, but you shouldn’t have coffee now. Otherwise, you won’t be able to sleep at night,” Avery said, then poured him a glass of water. “How about I take you on a tour of each department later?”

Wesley nodded, then said, “I’ve actually come to talk to you about something.”

He then placed a photo in front of her.

Avery picked up the photo, and her eyes were filled with curiosity as she asked,

“Who’s this?”

“He’s a patient. He’s been bedridden for three years, but he is somewhat conscious. He is a little better than someone who is in a vegetative state.

His

parents contacted Professor Hough half a year ago. He took on the case but wasn't able to put together a treatment plan in time..." Wesley answered.

"I see... Since the professor gave his word, please send over his medical records

for me to take a look at," Avery said.

"Would it get in the way of your work? You just started your company after all,"

Wesley said hesitantly. "Let's talk about this again once things settle down here."

Avery glanced at the photo, then said, "Send over his records first. It's a waste for such a handsome face to be lying on a hospital bed for so long!"

"I'll send it to you later today," Wesley responded. "Now, take me on a tour of your empire!"

Avery could not help but laugh.

"Don't tease me. I didn't make fun of you like this when I was at Elizabeth Hospital."

As Avery and Wesley left the office, they engaged in cheerful talk and laughter.

Very quickly, the news of Avery Tate's new boyfriend spread through the entire

Tate Industries.

Chapter 218

That afternoon, Ben showed Elliot a photo of Avery and Wesley together

“Avery's new boyfriend.”

Elliot glanced at the picture, and his eyes darkened as he asked, “Isn't that Professor Hough's assistant?”

He took Ben's phone from his hand and zoomed in.

“Do you know this man?” Ben asked as his interest rose. “Rumor has it that Avery took him around Tate Industries all afternoon. They were walking side by side, chatting and laughing with each other. They looked especially close to each other!”

Elliot passed the phone back to Ben and said, “I know him.”

“Oh. I think they look pretty good together,” Ben said deliberately when he saw Elliot's expressionless face. “One has a gentle aura, while the other is elegant”

Elliot looked up and shot a cold look at Ben.

“You never have anything nice to say, do you?”

“I’m innocent! It’s just that, looking at the jewel you picked for Avery makes me think you still have some love for her,” Ben teased. “You didn’t want to give her a necklace, earrings, a bracelet, or a ring because you think those are things you give your lover. You ended up picking a brooch, which is fine, but you went with such a huge diamond... Do you know what the jewelry designer said to me? He said that if someone wore such a massive diamond brooch right on top of their heart, it’d probably be able to block a bullet.”

A wave of gloom instantly washed over Elliot’s face.

“Are you giving her a birthday present or compensation for the divorce?” Ben said as he continued poking fun at Elliot. “Do you think Avery would dare accept such a gift?”

“Forget it, then,” Elliot said.

He put down his knife and fork as he had lost his appetite.

“That’s not what I meant... I heard from Chad that you gave Zoe a bag worth a few thousand dollars for her birthday,” Ben sighed. “How could you give her something that cheap? Aren’t you worried she’d be upset when she finds out that you gave Avery such a huge diamond?”

“Chad was the one who picked the gift. I didn’t know how much it cost.”

“Weren’t you the one who signed off on it?”

“I didn’t take a good look at it.”

Ben was utterly speechless.

“Since you have no interest in Dr. Sanford, then hurry up and find a way to break up with her!” Ben suggested. “I don’t believe that there isn’t a better doctor than her in the world.”

“That’s what’s giving me a headache,” Elliot said with furrowed brows. “You saw how much Shea recovered after the surgery Zoe did on her. Every doctor I’ve met so far had no way of treating Shea, but Zoe managed to do it.”

If it were not for the fact that Zoe could treat Shea, Elliot would never have given in to her threats.

“Wasn’t Avery also a student of Professor Hough’s?” Ben asked.

“She was, but she started Alpha Technologies when she was in grad school,”

Elliot said. “She’s a businesswoman now.”

Ben shook his head and sighed, then said, “It would be great if Avery could save

Shea.”

His words made Elliot’s chest tighten.

As if something that perfect would happen!

His entire life, the heavens had never truly watched over him.

A week later, Zoe gave Avery a call and asked her to meet.

“No, thanks,” Avery refused without hesitation.

She already witnessed Zoe’s cunning and treacherous ways during their last meeting.

She was not about to give her another chance.

Zoe chuckled coldly, then said, “Since you won’t meet me, then let’s just talk on the phone! You said you adopted your children, but my people searched through all the orphanages in Bridgedale and didn’t find any information on the adoptions.

You never adopted them. They’ re your biological children!”

Zoe's words left Avery frozen in shock.

"If I'm right, the children are yours and Elliot's," Zoe said as her wicked laughter traveled through the phone.

Avery could not help but feel a chill run through her body.

"Adoption papers are private and confidential!" she retorted as she clenched her fists tightly.

"Of course! Adoption papers wouldn't typically be disclosed, but my father isn't just your average Joe," Zoe said as she let out an arrogant, maniacal cackle. "My father's connections in Bridgedale confirmed that you lied! I heard Elliot hates children and had always been determined not to have them. I wonder what he'd do if he finds out that your children are his!"

"Zoe Sanford! You're going too far!" Avery snapped furiously.

"Am I the one going too far, or are you?! Elliot is my boyfriend now! You're his exwife! You're divorced! Why do you keep getting in between us?" Zoe shrieked in a much sharper voice than Avery.

"I'll keep your secret on the condition that you never meet Elliot again!" Zoe threatened.

Her woman's intuition told her that Avery would obediently follow her orders.

Avery's children were her Achilles' heel.

Avery would easily give in to Zoe's request.

After all, whether or not she met Elliot had no effect on her life whatsoever.

However, Avery was not willing to surrender!

She never did anything wrong, so why should she endure such injustice?!

"Let's meet!" Avery said as she quickly composed her emotions. "I'll see you at the restaurant we met in before."

"Fine!"

Half an hour later, Avery and Zoe sat in the same seats at the restaurant from their last meeting.

As Avery took a seat, she said mockingly, "There's no hot water today, Miss Sanford."

A look of embarrassment appeared on Zoe's face.

Avery turned on the voice recorder on her phone, then showed it to her and said,

“Do you want to turn your voice recorder on? Let’s record this whole thing together!”

Zoe was at a loss for words.

How arrogant!

Why was Avery behaving this cockily when she had something on her?

Avery leisurely looked through the menu, ordered a glass of juice and dessert, then handed it to Zoe.

Zoe ordered a glass of juice, then handed the menu over to the waiter.

Once the waiter was gone, Zoe turned to Avery and said, “You’ve got it rough,

Avery. Other women’s worth and status rise after they give birth to a man’s child, but you’re the exact opposite.”

“I’m afraid I don’t have it as bad as you do. You think that way because you treat yourself as nothing but a baby-making machine. I’m not like you. My children belong to me. I didn’t have them for a man, nor did I have them to increase my worth,” Avery said as she flashed a charming smile. “It’s hard to believe that you’re an extremely educated woman.”

Zoe's shoulders trembled with rage, but she could not think of a good comeback at that moment.

"It looks like you're not afraid of Elliot finding out about this at all," she said through gritted teeth. "If that's the case, we better make sure the happy family of four quickly gets to know each other!"

"Ha! Do you know why I asked you to meet? I wanted to see how twisted your face would be when you threatened me," Avery said. "It looks like I was right."

Zoe wanted to slam her hand on the table, but she had yet to recover from the burn.

Her eyes reddened as she held back.

"Were you surprised by how easily things went for you when you used Shea's treatment as an excuse to threaten Elliot into becoming your boyfriend?"

Avery watched nonchalantly at the drastic change in Zoe's expression.

"I bet you have nightmares at night. After all, you're not the one who operated on Shea." The color instantly drained from Zoe's face.

Chapter 220

Zoe's body trembled uncontrollably.

"You! You –

Her head was buzzing as she turned blue in the face.

"I was also at Elizabeth Hospital that day, and accidentally caught a glimpse of the person who operated on Shea," Avery said sternly as she watched the fear and anxiety on Zoe's face "11 you want to threaten me, then you must first properly consider if you can handle being discarded!"

At that moment, the drinks and desserts arrived.

Avery casually began to enjoy her afternoon tea.

"I underestimated you, Avery Tate!"

Zoe went from having the winning ticket in her grasp to being completely helpless in a matter of minutes.

"We're even! Let's just pretend like nothing happened! I won't tell Elliot about your secret, so I hope you can keep your lips sealed, too!"

"Weren't you pretty cocky just now?" Avery mocked. "All you had was a tiny bit of leverage, and you decided to act so conceitedly. How could you be in research with that attitude? Even after ten years, you won't be able to treat Shea's illness."

"Unless your skills surpass mine, you shouldn't insult me!" Zoe snapped as she glared at Avery. "The kind of person Professor Hough despised the most was people like you who gave up on medicine to pursue business!"

Avery took a sip of her juice.

The tart sweetness of it was refreshing.

"Aren't you curious about the person who operated on Shea?" Avery asked as she lifted her gaze and stared coldly at Zoe. "You're not thinking that your lie won't ever be exposed, are you?"

"Don't you think I've looked into it? I just haven't found out yet... You have information on them, but you won't tell me. You've been so jealous seeing Elliot and I together—"

"Don't make me sick. If I really wanted to break you up, all I have to do is give Elliot a call and he'd dump you."

“Don’t you dare threaten me!” Zoe roared angrily.

Scanned with CamScanner

“It doesn’t feel too nice being threatened, does it? Don’t do unto others what you don’t want to be done unto you.”

Avery took a bite of her cake, then said casually, “The person who operated on Shea was a middle aged man with very short hair. He was on the skinny side and was about five foot six...”

Zoe’s eyes widened.

“Why are you helping me?!”

“That’s because I don’t ever want to see you again,” Avery answered coldly.

“Don’t contact me again. I’m too busy for your constant bickering.”

“You got it!” exclaimed Zoe. “Thank you for giving me this important clue!”

A week until Avery’s birthday, Ben burst through Elliot’s office doors.

“Did you receive an invitation to Avery’s birthday party, Elliot?”

“I did not,” Elliot responded as his eyes dropped slightly. “Did you?”

“Me neither. I definitely wouldn’t be invited if you weren’t,” Ben said. “I suspect she might not even have plans to celebrate her birthday.”

“That’s a possibility.”

Avery always kept a low-profile.

“You already prepared a gift, so you have to send it out,” Ben said. “Should I call up Tate Industries and ask around?”

“Ask all you want. There’s no need to report back to me.”

Ten minutes later, Ben returned to report his findings to Elliot.

“Elliot! Avery’s gone too far!” Ben ranted. “She’s going all out for her birthday this year! She booked the biggest ballroom at the Oasis Hotel to celebrate, but she didn’t invite us!”

Elliot felt like a sharp knife pierced through his heart.

Perhaps in Avery’s eyes, he was nothing but a stranger.

“She has her own reasons for not inviting me,” Elliot said calmly and indifferently.

“Are you done with your work? Should I arrange more for you to do?”

Ben immediately fled.

The room instantly fell silent.

However, Elliot’s heart was anything but calm. Half an hour later, he called the Oasis Hotel.

Chapter 221

Since Avery booked the largest ballroom at the hotel, Elliot went ahead and booked the smaller ballroom right next to it.

He wanted to see for himself exactly how grand Avery's birthday party would be

That weekend, everyone who received an invitation to the party gathered in the largest ballroom—Astor Hall— at the Oasis Hotel.

“Why isn't Avery here yet?” Tammy asked Mike the moment she stepped into the banquet hall. “She hasn't even replied to my text from last night.”

Mike shrugged, then explained, “She's been busy lately. I don't know what she's busy with, but I already sent her the address, and she promised to be here.”

“Okay... Isn't she busy with stuff at the company?” Tammy asked.

“She isn't! I really don't know what she's been so busy with. Everyone has the right to their own personal space. We might be close like sisters... I mean, brother and sister... I won't force her to tell me anything she doesn't want me to know about.”

“I see... Since she’s been busy, who’s the one who organized the party?”

“It was me!” Mike declared.

“Who put the guest list together?”

“That was me, too!”

Tammy let out a “pfft“, then turned and walked over to Celestial Hall next door.

Celestial Hall was much smaller in size than Astor Hall.

Thanks to Mike, Elliot’s friends were having a gathering at Celestial Hall.

Tammy walked in and immediately sat down next to Jun.

“Where’s Elliot? Why isn’t he here yet? Didn’t you say he was upset that Avery didn’t invite him?” Tammy asked excitedly as she picked up Jun’s glass of wine and took a sip.

“He said he was stuck in traffic half an hour ago,” Ben said as he looked at Tammy, then asked, “Isn’t Avery here yet?”

“She isn’t! Mike said she’s been busy, but he has no idea why. She didn’t have time to plan a party at all. Mike was the one who invited the guests. Since he’s not on good terms with any of you, of course, he wouldn’t invite you!”

When he rushed over, he realized that things were not as simple as they seemed.

Mike was getting beaten up by two men, and one of those men was Avery's ex-husband, Elliot Foster.

Wesley quickly yanked Mike to his side, then asked Elliot, "Why are you hitting

Mike?"

Elliot had arrived three minutes ago.

When he saw Mike pinning Chad down and beating him up, the blood shot to his head, and he kicked Mike without another word.

Once he had leveled the playing field, the fight became a to-against-one brawl.

"He was hitting my assistant, Mr. Brook," Elliot explained as he dusted himself down. "Chad's weak and can't handle a fight.

Chapter 222

Wesley noticed the fight as he left the hall

When he rushed over, he realized that things were not as simple as they seemed.

Mike was getting beaten up by two men, and one of those men was Avery's exhusband, Elliot Foster.

Wesley quickly yanked Mike to his side, then asked Elliot, “Why are you hitting

Mike?”

Elliot had arrived three minutes ago.

When he saw Mike pinning Chad down and beating him up, the blood shot to his head, and he kicked Mike without another word.

Once he had leveled the playing field, the fight became a to-against-one brawl.

“He was hitting my assistant, Mr. Brook,” Elliot explained as he dusted himself down “Chad’s weak and can’t handle a fight.”

Wesley noticed Chad’s broken glasses, then shot a glare at Mike.

“Avery’s phone’s turned off. We don’t know if something’s happened to her,” he said. “I’m going to look for her now. You can either go back to the hall and entertain the guests, or you can come with me to search for her.”

Mike suppressed his rage and said, “I’m coming with you!”

Elliot strode over to them and blocked their way.

“What happened to Avery?!”

“Mr. Foster, we don’t know what’s happening right now either. When I called her this morning, she said she would be here by six. However, it's almost seven and she's not here yet."

"It's the weekend. Isn't she at home?" Elliot said as his eyes filled with worry.

"She isn't. We're going to search for her now, Mr. Foster. If there's more you'd like to know, we can talk about it once we find her," Wesley said, then rushed off with

Mike.

Elliot watched the two men leave, then walked over to another elevator.

Chad followed him and explained, "Sir, Mike was the one that organized Miss Tate's party. He was also the one who set the guest list. It wasn't Miss Tate's intention to exclude you."

Elliot frowned, then asked, "Didn't she go through the guest list herself?" "I heard she's been busy with something," Chad responded.

Elliot glanced at him, then said, "Don't follow me. Go and get yourself a new pair of glasses."

"Yes, sir."

“You should use your head and not your fists when faced with someone who’s obviously stronger than you are. You’re usually a rational person, so what happened tonight?” Elliot asked as he looked at Chad’s flustered face.

Chad lowered his gaze and answered, “I’m sure he didn’t invite you because of our previous run-in.”

“You’re overthinking it. Even without your history, he still wouldn’t have invited me,” Elliot said calmly. “Don’t be so rash next time.”

“Yes, Sir.”

Elliot exited the building and got into his car.

“Where to, Sir?” asked the bodyguard.

“I need to make a phone call first.”

Elliot called up the telecommunications company and inquired about the last location of Avery’s phone before it had been turned off.

He received the approximate location soon after.

“Take me to the Starry River neighborhood.”

The last location her phone had recorded was near that neighborhood.

When they were nearing their destination, Elliot asked the bodyguard to slow the car down.

Among the busy street, he vaguely noticed a white Rower stopped by the road.

It looked like Avery's car!

"Stop the car!" Elliot shouted, causing the bodyguard to bring the car to a halt.

Elliot jumped out of the car and rushed over to the white Rower.

The winds of early fall carried a slight chill. When he arrived at Avery's car, he saw her slumped against the steering wheel. She looked lifeless.

Elliot's heart tightened.

"Avery!

Through bloodshot eyes, he called out her name and violently yanked at the door handle.

Chapter 223

Avery's car doors were locked!

There was only a piece of glass between them, and Elliot had no way of getting to

her.

The bodyguard rushed over with an emergency hammer, smashed the windshield open, and jumped into the car.

Once he was in the bodyguard unlocked the doors.

Elliot opened the door to the driver's seat and took Avery in his arms.

She had no visible injuries, but her breathing was shallow!

She looked as if she was in a coma.

Otherwise, she would have been startled awake when the bodyguard broke the windshield.

At the hospital, after giving Avery a thorough examination, the doctor said, "She fainted from lack of oxygen. You sent her here just in time, so she's not in any danger. All she needs is some rest. She'll be fine when she wakes up."

"How did she end up with a lack of oxygen? Did her test results show that something was wrong?" Elliot asked.

"Her blood tests showed that all of her vitals are fine... Apart from some low blood sugar, there weren't any issues," answered the doctor as he took a look at the report, then handed it over to Elliot.

"Why is she still unconscious? When will she wake up? Does she really not need to be hospitalized?”

Seeing Avery's haggard face, Elliot could not help but feel that things were not as simple as they seemed.

There were no external injuries, but she had ended up unconscious in a locked car.

This meant that she had most likely suffered some kind of internal injury.

“She's probably tired, Mr. Foster. That's why she's sleeping deeply and hasn't woken up,” the doctor explained, then added in case Elliot did not believe him,

“Look at the dark circles under her eyes and her bloodshot eyes.”

The doctor gently lifted Avery's eyelid for Elliot to see.

Elliot finally felt a sense of relief after seeing the redness in Avery's eyes.

He thought of how she must have nodded off while she was driving and finally fell asleep on the steering wheel

What exactly had she been so busy with? Was she not getting any sleep at all?

Otherwise, how did she get so tired to the point of locking herself in her car?

If he had not found her, or if he was a little late, she would have been in grave danger.

An hour later, Elliot took Avery back to the Foster mansion, then called Laura to explain things to her.

“Why did you take my daughter to your house?!” Laura demanded as a chill went down her spine.

“The doctor said she didn’t need to be hospitalized, so I brought her here to rest,”

Elliot answered.

“You know where we live, so why didn’t you send her back here?!”

Laura wanted to go pick Avery up, but she had to look after Hayden and Layla.

She could not very well bring the children along to the Foster mansion.

It was too big a risk.

“You wouldn’t be so quick to blame me if you knew what happened.”

Elliot had intentionally brought Avery back to his house.

He wanted to know the reason why she was so tired.

His voice made Laura’s heart skip a few beats.

“What does that mean? What’s wrong with Avery? What happened?!”

“She’s fine for now. She’s sleeping right now, but she’ll go home once she wakes up,” said Elliot. “If you’re worried, you can come over with the children. I won’t mind.”

“... I’ll get Wesley to go check on her,” said Laura.

An hour later, Wesley arrived at the Foster mansion.

“Did you say she fell asleep at the wheel?” Wesley asked in disbelief. “She locked herself in her car?!”

Elliot looked at him with cold eyes as he asked, “What’s your relationship with Avery, Mr. Brook?”

Chapter 224

“We’re friends,” Wesley answered.

“Professor Hough had plenty of female students. You’re not this close to Zoe Sanford, are you?” Elliot said mockingly. “Do you have feelings for Avery?”

Wesley felt a strong sense of hostility from him.

“Isn’t Avery allowed to start a brand new relationship?” Wesley asked with a gentle smile.” Mr. Foster, has Avery ever said anything about your relationship with Miss Sanford?”

Elliot's eyes filled with a frosty chill as he said, “That's one thing I find strange.

When I asked you to help me find the student that the professor mentioned before he died, you gave me a list of names. Why didn't you just tell me that it was Zoe?

She said she knew you. You probably know her, too, right?”

Wesley was surprised to find that Elliot was not as clueless as he had thought.

“Of course, I know her. However, it's been many years since she graduated, so I can't comment on her skills now. Which is why I gave you the list for you to find out for yourself.”

Elliot was not fooled by his answer.

“Didn't the professor ever mention her to you? Professor Hough did not dare operate on Shea, but he said he had a student who could. That means that the professor greatly respected that student... It's impossible that he never mentioned someone that incredible to you.”

Wesley was rendered speechless by Elliot's questions.

In a panic, he picked up his glass of water and took a sip.

“I think you’re keeping this from me on purpose, Mr. Brook,” Elliot said as he saw the guilt in Wesley’s eyes. “Are you lying to me for Avery’s sake?”

“This has nothing to do with Avery,” Wesley explained. “Professor Hough didn’t always tell me everything. He never said a word to me about your case, so I knew nothing about it. I’m a cautious person. Even if I knew how great Miss Sanford was, I wouldn’t dare tell you that she was exactly who you were looking for.”

Elliot stared at Wesley in silence.

To gain credibility, Wesley had no choice but to reveal his feelings.

“Even if I have feelings for Avery, I wouldn’t tell her, because I know that she only sees me as an older brother.”

The coldness in Elliot’s eyes instantly vanished

“It’s late. You should go. She’ll get in touch with you once she wakes up,” Elliot said as he chased his guest out.

Once Wesley was gone, Elliot made his way over to the master bedroom

The room door was open, and Shea was standing by the bed with her eyes fixed on Avery

Elliot walked over to Shea's side and saw the innocence and curiosity in her eyes

"Do you like her, Shea?" he asked in a low voice.

Shea instinctively avoided strangers.

She was like that with Zoe, too.

However, she had voluntarily come to see Avery herself.

"Yes, I do!"

The memory of how Avery had gently nursed her back to health back when she had a fever filled Shea's heart with warmth.

"Why do you like her?" Elliot asked, then glanced at Avery and added, "Is it because she's pretty?"

"She's much prettier than Dr. Sanford," Shea said as she reached out to hold Elliot's hand and looked earnestly at him. "Don't you think so?"

"You're right," Elliot said with a bitter laugh.

"Why aren't you with Avery?" Shea mumbled as if Elliot was an idiot.

Even she knew that Avery was prettier than Zoe, so how could he not realize it?

The question made Elliot's heart ache.

Shea had made great progress since the last surgery.

He believed that she would be able to live a normal life as long as they continued her treatment.

This was the reason why he could not break up with Zoe before they found a doctor who could continue to treat Shea's illness.

"That's between me and Avery, Shea. All you need to do is be happy," Elliot said as he gently

caressed Shea's hair and buried the bitterness in his heart.

"Are you happy, Big Brother?" Shea asked. She looked at Elliot's handsome face, then frowned and said, "You don't look happy at all."

Avery vaguely heard the sound of people talking. She wanted to open her eyes and see who was speaking next to her.

Chapter 225

After struggling for a while, Avery did not open her eyes in the end.

She could make out Elliot's voice, but who was the woman talking to him?

It was an unfamiliar voice... Calling him "Big Brother",

Was Elliot flirting with that woman?

Ha!

She was fast asleep, and he was flirting with another woman by her bed.

How shameless!

If she could wake up right now, she would definitely kick the two of them out of the room!

Half asleep, Avery was so angry that her heart ached.

Just like that, she fell asleep again.

Elliot took Shea's hand and took her back to rest.

Once Shea was asleep, Elliot returned to his room.

Avery turned in bed, still deep in her slumber.

Elliot walked into the bathroom and took a shower.

When Zoe heard that Elliot brought Avery home to spend the night, her eyes reddened with rage.

Who exactly was his girlfriend now?

She knew that the only reason Elliot agreed to date her was so that she would treat Shea's illness.

Even so, he still should have maintained outward appearances!

What did he mean by taking Avery home for the night?

Was he publicly cheating on her?

The humiliation Zoe felt from accidentally sleeping with Cole before vanished.

She could not help but think that Elliot would not bat an eyelid if he found out that she slept with Cole.

She opened up a bottle of wine and took it back to her room.

Wesley arrived at the Foster mansion first thing the next morning to check on Avery's condition.

Elliot was dressed in casual loungewear, and he frowned when he saw Wesley.

"Avery's mother asked me to stop by, Mr. Foster. She's worried that Avery hasn't been home," Wesley explained.

He knew that it was rude to show up at someone's house this early in the morning, but he could not refuse Laura's request.

Elliot led Wesley to the bedroom.

Wesley was concerned about Avery's safety.

However, after seeing how she practically took over the entire bed with no space for Elliot to join her, he was relieved.

“Excuse my intrusion, Mr. Foster,” Wesley said, then walked out of the room.

Elliot returned to the guest bedroom to continue resting.

It was only seven in the morning!

He did not fall asleep until two in the morning, so he was especially cranky.

When Wesley walked out of the Foster mansion, he gave Laura a call.

“Avery’s still fast asleep. Elliot Foster is sleeping in another room,” he said. “Don’t worry. She’s safe. She’ll definitely go home after she wakes up.”

Laura let out a sigh of relief, then said, “Thank you, Wesley. I wouldn’t know how to head over there with the kids.”

“I’ll come see her again if she’s not home by noon,” Wesley said.

“Alright. Thank you so much!”

“Don’t mention it. I’m partly responsible for Avery’s condition,” Wesley said regretfully. “She wouldn’t be this tired if I didn’t ask her to pick up a new case.”

“Don’t say that. Avery wouldn’t have grown up so quickly if it weren’t for Professor Hough. Saving lives is her duty. It might be a little hard on her, but you're not to blame."

Laura felt much better after the phone call. "I'm going to get some groceries, Hayden. Stay at home with your sister, alright?" Laura said to Hayden.

Hayden nodded in response.

The children sprung into action the moment Laura walked out the door.

Layla picked up her backpack while Hayden retrieved his laptop from Avery's room.

"We should tell Grandma, Hayden! Otherwise she'll be really worried," Layla said as she held onto Hayden's sleeve and blinked her wide eyes.

Chapter 226

Hayden's expression was stern as he said, "Grandma won't let us go look for Mommy if we told her about it."

Layla puffed her cheeks and looked a little torn as she said, "Okay... Let's just go find Mommy, then! What if Dirtbag Dad's picking on her?"

Hayden pursed his lips, then came to a decision after a quick deliberation.

“I’ll go alone. You wait at home. Come up with an excuse if Grandma comes back,” he said, then left the house by himself.

As Layla watched the room door close behind Hayden, her long lashes fluttered, followed by streams of hot tears rolling down her cheeks.

How could she allow Hayden to go after Dirtbag Dad by himself?

What if he got caught?

She could not lose her big brother!

At that thought, Layla ran over to Mike’s room in tears.

She opened the door, rushed to the disheveled bed, then yanked at Mike’s arm and wailed,” Wake up, Uncle Mike! Hayden’s gone! He left the house alone... He didn’t take me with him...”

Over at the Foster mansion, a servant walked out of the kitchen and wondered,

“Why’s the power out?”

“We didn’t get a notice about a power outage. I’ll go turn on the backup generator,” said Mrs Cooper.

Everything went back to normal once the backup generator was connected.

However, about ten minutes later, the backup power also went out.

When Elliot walked down the stairs, Mrs. Cooper approached him and immediately reported,” That power is out. It seems there’s an issue with the backup generator, too. I’ve called someone over to work on it. I called up the electric utility company to ask about it, but I was told that we don’t have a power outage in the area.”

Elliot’s expression was unwavered by her words,

He walked towards the front door as a bodyguard approached him.

“Sir, there’s something weird about the power outage today. I’ve sent more people over.”

Elliot nodded, then continued to walk towards the front gates.

Chrapifical

The bodyguard had no idea what he was planning to do, but followed him anyway

Once he was at the gates, Elliot narrowed his eyes, then pointed at a tiny figure not too far away and ordered his bodyguard, “Bring him to me.”

The bodyguard noticed Hayden earlier, but did not think much of it since he was just a small child.

“Do you want me to bring that little boy over here, sir?” asked the bewildered bodyguard.

When Hayden heard their voices, not only did he not run away, but he walked over to them by himself.

The bodyguard was speechless.

Elliot kept his cold gaze on the child.

Hayden had changed his clothes and was wearing a different cap that still covered his face and features, but Elliot recognized him right away.

Elliot was sure that Hayden was behind the power outage.

If everything went according to plan, he would have hacked into the house's network, too.

It was certain that he was there for Avery.

Hayden arrived before the two men very quickly.

As he walked past Elliot, he “accidentally” stepped on his foot.

Elliot remained silent.

The bodyguard watched in horror as Hayden walked into the house nonchalantly, then immediately got to his knees and brushed off the dust on Elliot's shoe.

“What a rude kid, sir! You can tell right away he’s a wild child whose parents never educated him!” cursed the bodyguard. “He might just be an orphan! Don’t stoop to his level. I’ll go kick him out right away.”

Elliot’s expression was ice cold as he said, “You’re right. He is, in fact, an orphan.”

He then marched past the front yard towards the house.

When Hayden entered the living room, a few servants curiously stared at him.

“Avery Tate! I’ve come for you!” he yelled at the direction of the staircase.

Mrs. Cooper very quickly remembered the child.

“You’re Hayden, right?” Mrs. Cooper asked as she bent down.

Once she saw his face, she pulled him over to the couch and said, “Your Mommy’s still asleep! She’ll come down after she wakes up.”

Elliot walked into the living room just in time to see Mrs. Cooper graciously placed a generous platter of fruit and snacks in front of Hayden.

With a sullen face, Elliot walked over to Hayden, picked up his bag and pulled out the laptop inside of it.

“Did you cut the power? Bring it back this instant! Otherwise...”

Upon hearing Elliot's words, Hayden lifted his head and threw a defiant look at him.

When Elliot saw Hayden's face, both the words coming out of his mouth and his heartbeat came to a halt!

Chapter 227

Elliot felt a strong sense of familiarity every time he caught a glimpse of Hayden's face.

It was as if he had traveled back in time and was looking at his younger self!

Hayden shot a glare at Elliot, then averted his gaze.

"Did you really cause the power outage, Hayden?" Mrs. Cooper asked in a panic.

"How did you do it? Is this your laptop? Do you know how to use it at your age?"

Hayden pursed his lips, then quietly placed his laptop back in his backpack.

He carried his bag, then walked over to the bottom of the stairs and sat waiting for Avery to come down.

Mrs. Cooper glanced over at Elliot to see his livid expression and the raging fury in his eyes.

If Hayden were not a child, he would not be able to sit there safe and sound.

About half an hour later, the bodyguard walked in and reported, "Sir, there's a suspicious foreigner who keeps looking our way. Should I bring him in for questioning?"

Mike's face popped into Elliot's mind.

He walked towards the front yard, but saw Mike's golden hair before he reached the gates.

"Avery! Are you being falsely imprisoned? Scream if you are! I'll call the cops right away!" Mike yelled in Elliot's direction.

A wave of wrath washed over Elliot's face.

Mike still had bruises on his face from the beating last night, but here he was causing a ruckus again!

"Get him!" Elliot ordered as watching Mike hang around upset him.

Two bodyguards immediately grabbed onto Mike's arms.

"Hey! What are you doing? I didn't break the law, so why are you seizing me?"

Doesn't the law exist anymore? I'm calling the cops! I'm calling them right now!"

Mike hollered as the bodyguards dragged him into the living room.

Surprise flashed in Hayden's eyes when he saw Mike.

After throwing a look at Hayden, Mike freed himself from the bodyguards' grapples, then swaggered around the living room.

The bodyguards followed right behind him.

"Is this your hundred million dollar mansion? Did you get scammed by the renovation team?" Mike ridiculed. "It's nothing compared to the villa that Avery got for four and a half million dollars!"

Elliot sipped his tea on the couch and ignored him.

It seemed like Mike was not here for Avery, but to pick a fight.

After all, he must still hold a grudge from getting beaten up the night before.

When Mike tapped on the light switch on the wall, the room lights did not turn on.

He was instantly excited.

"Is your power out? I was wondering why it was so hot in here! Aren't you hot in that huge robe, Foster? Hurry up and give your electricians... I mean, give your technicians a call and get them to fix this!”

Mike’s cackle was ear splitting, while the smirk on his face was even more blinding.

Elliot’s entire body stiffened, and his fists were clenched so tightly they had turned pale.

Just as he was about to teach Mike a lesson, the crystal chandelier on top of them lit up.

The power was back!

The central cooling system turned on, and the room’s temperature quickly became pleasantly cool.

Mike stared at the crystal chandelier for two seconds, then sighed.

“Let’s start a bet, Foster! I’m still p*ssed about how you beat me up last night!

Let’s settle this once and for all. If you win, then I’ll let you punch me!”

Elliot raised his brows and asked, “What if you lose?”

“If I lose, then I’ll leave with Hayden!”

Elliot was at a loss for words.

Was there something wrong with this guy’s head?

The bet was not appealing to Elliot to the least, so he refused to join in.

At that moment, Hayden said, "Elliot Foster! Are you a scaredy cat?"

His clear, child-like voice brought with it a strong hint of contempt and ridicule.

Elliot knew that he was being provoked, but he changed his mind anyway.

"What's the bet?" he asked Mike.

"I saw a tennis court outside. Let's play against each other."

"Let's do it," responded Elliot.

After a change of clothes, Elliot and Mike made their way over to the tennis court.

Apart from the guards at the gate and Mrs. Cooper, everyone else rushed to the court to show their support for Elliot. Hunched over, Layla snuck into the living room from the front yard..

Chapter 228

Layla planned to search for her mother on the first floor, but suddenly heard the sound of footsteps coming from the kitchen!

She was so terrified that did not dare let out a breath, then ran straight up the stairs.

Forced to run up to the second floor, Layle held onto the wall and caught her breath.

At that moment, the footsteps were closing in on her!

That person was coming up the stairs!

Layla panicked and quickly found a place to hide.

Soon after, Mrs. Cooper appeared on the second floor and made her way to the master bedroom to see Avery.

She was worried about the match between Elliot and Mike.

Even though Elliot had recovered from the car crash years ago, the doctor had instructed him to avoid strenuous activities.

Mrs. Cooper did not want to see Elliot lose and get a punch from Mike, so she could only come to see Avery.

She opened the door, then walked over to the bed.

Mrs. Cooper glanced at Avery's sleeping face, and no matter how bad she felt about waking her, she decided that she could sleep whenever she wanted to.

However, everything would be over once the match was lost.

"Avery," Mrs. Cooper said as she reached out to pat Avery's shoulder.

"Avery!"

Avery's brows furrowed when she heard the calls.

"Wake up, Avery," Mrs. Cooper said as she raised her voice.

Avery slowly opened her eyes.

When her groggy gaze landed on Mrs. Cooper, she broke into a smile.

"Wake up, Avery. Mike and Master Elliot are over at the tennis court. You have to stop them! You know Master Elliot's legs aren't in the best shape," Mrs. Cooper said as she helped Avery sit up.

Avery rubbed her tired eyes, then mumbled, "Mike and Elliot are on the tennis court?"

"Yes!" Mrs. Cooper exclaimed, then told her everything that happened earlier.

As Avery glanced blankly around the room, her back broke into a cold sweat.

"How did I get here?!"

After a moment's hesitation, Mrs. Cooper answered truthfully, "You locked yourself in your car and fell asleep last night. I can't imagine what would have happened if Master Elliot didn't find you in time and send you to the hospital. Let's go to the tennis court now, Avery!"

The tennis match came to halt with Avery's appearance.

Avery's gaze brushed over Hayden and Mike, then finally landed on Elliot's face.

"Thank you for last night!"

"Don't mention it. You should get checked out at the hospital again."

Seeing Avery's delicate face calmed all of his emotions down.

"There were a few things off on your blood test last night."

"Got it..." Avery said.

Apart from feeling a little tired, she did not feel any other discomfort.

Mike grabbed her arm, then said forcefully, "I'll take you to the hospital!"

As they walked away, Avery could not help but gaze at Elliot.

She was exhausted after her work last night, but Mike called her to the hotel for a birthday surprise.

She declined, but Mike insisted, and she had no choice but to force herself to drive to the hotel.

In the end, fatigue took over and she brought the car to a stop by the street before she fell asleep.

She wanted to go home and wanted to call someone for help, but she could no longer move a muscle.

That's how she ended up falling asleep in the car.

Avery felt a shiver run down her spine as she recalled everything.

She probably would have died if nobody found her.

When Elliot returned to the living room, Mrs. Cooper placed a bowl of chicken soup in front of her.

"This is Avery's favorite soup. It's too bad she didn't get to drink it," Mrs. Cooper

said

regretfully.

Elliot finished the bowl of soup, then returned to his room to rest.

At three in the afternoon, an ear shattering wail pierced through the entire mansion.

Elliot was jolted awake by the child-like yet deafening howl.

It sounded like a child crying!

Didn't Hayden already leave? Could it be...

Chapter 229

Could there be another child in the house?!

Elliot took in a cold breath!

He walked out of the room and saw Layla's tiny body trembling with tears at the top of the stairs.

It was Avery's daughter!

How ridiculous!

When did she get in here?

How was he unaware of this?

Could it be that the mansion's most advanced security system was completely useless against them?

Elliot suddenly remembered how they only managed to get the mansion's network back up and running two hours ago.

Layla was carrying a backpack in the shape of a bunny.

She held a bunny doll in one hand and held onto the banister with the other, as she sobbed and carefully made her way down the stairs.

She did not notice Elliot following behind her.

The servants gathered at the bottom of the stairs and stared with eyes of shock at the little girl who appeared out of thin air!

“Mommy... My Mommy’s gone... I’m crying so loud... She’s not coming for me...

Ahhh!”

Layla’s cries came one after another, similar to the rhythm of an engine starting

up.

“Aren’t you Avery Tate’s daughter, little one?”

Mrs. Cooper walked over to Layla and carried her down the stairs.

Layla pouted and asked through teary eyes, “Did my Mommy and brother leave?”

“They did! They left hours ago. When did you get here? Why didn’t we see you come in?”

Mrs. Cooper carried Layla over to the couch, then wiped her tears with a napkin.

She was a beautiful little girl and was the spitting image of Avery.

One could tell right away that she was Avery’s biological daughter.

However, Mrs. Cooper did not dare ask about the child’s father,

She reckoned that Elliot had already looked into it.

“I came in when nobody was around... I’ve been here for so long... I came to look for my Mommy! I miss her so much...” Layla sniffled. “Why didn’t they call for me when they left? Uncle Mike knew I was here...”

Elliot walked to Layla’s side and glanced at her little face.

“I don’t want you looking at me!” Layla cried as she shot a glare at Elliot, then turned her back on him.

Elliot’s mood instantly turned foul.

How dare she put on such a righteous face after sneaking into his home?!

This was the result of Avery’s upbringing!

At that moment, Shea emerged from her room.

When she saw Layla, she happily rushed over to her.

Shea remembered Layla, but did not remember her name.

Once she was next to Layla, Shea offered her hand to her.

Layla lifted her gaze, then immediately frowned and glared at Shea.

As if that were not enough, Layla lifted her little chin and coldly huffed at her.

Not only did Layla’s behavior not drive Shea away, she took it another step further and held onto Layla’s hand.

Elliot had a splitting headache.

Why did Shea like Avery and her children so much?!

Did they meet before? Are they close?

Otherwise, why would she hold their hands every time they met?

Elliot was clueless!

“Go away!” Layla snapped disgustedly as she shook Shea’s hand off. “I don’t want to play with

you!”

Shea was stunned, and tears began to form in her eyes.

Elliot’s heart ached at the sight.

Not only were Avery’s children rude, they were also cruel!

What kind of sick joke was this?!

“Layla Tate! Take a look at whose house you’re in right now!” Elliot roared as he taught her a lesson. “Didn’t your mother teach you to knock before entering someone’s house? Also...”

Chapter 230

“Why are you shouting at me?! Of course Mommy taught me to knock before going into someone’s house, but she never said anything about knocking before entering a dirtbag’s house!” Layla retorted in a voice louder than Elliot’s as she glared at him with her brilliant eyes.

It was as if she was competing with him to see whose voice was louder and more powerful.

Elliot gritted his teeth.

Dirtbag?

Who taught her to say that?

“I didn’t want to come here anyway! I’m leaving right now!” Layla huffed angrily, then jumped off the couch and walked towards the front door with her doll in her arms.

At the hospital, after going through a series of routine tests, Avery asked Mike for his phone so she could call Laura.

Her phone was dead and she needed to let her mother know she was safe.

Mike pulled out his phone and handed it to her.

Laura answered the call soon after it rang.

“It’s Avery, Mom,” Avery said with a smile. “I’m fine. I was too tired yesterday and fell asleep. You don’t have to worry about me. Mike and Hayden are with me, so we'll head home soon."

"That's good," Laura said. "I'll start cooking now."

"Alright, Mom. Where's Layla? I miss her. I want to hear her voice."

Laura was shocked.

"Mike took Layla with him to go find you! Isn't she with you right now?!"

Avery's face changed drastically.

Her hand tightened around the phone as her emotions shattered.

Before she blew up, Mike smacked himself on the forehead and exclaimed, "I forgot about Layla! She must still be at Elliot Foster's house! I'll go get her right now!"

Avery followed him without hesitation.

"You need to wait here for the test results!" Mike said.

"You wait here with Hayden! I'll go get Layla!" Avery snapped in a tone that said she would not tolerate another word from Mike. "I'm taking your phone! I'll meet you back here once I have Layla."

Avery rushed out of the hospital and hailed a cab.

Once she was in the backseat, she pulled out Mike's phone and dialed Eliot's number.

She prayed that Layla was still at the Foster mansion and did not run off somewhere else.

That would be even more dangerous!

Over at the Foster mansion, Elliot picked Layla up and did not allow her to leave.

His gesture lit a fuse in Layla and she exploded in his arms!

"Let me go, you dirtbag! You've hugged other women and I don't want you touching me!" Layla yelled with furrowed brows as she repeatedly landed blows on Elliot's body with her tiny fists.

Shea felt bad for her brother, but she also did not dare touch Layla.

All she could do was watch them with reddened eyes.

At that moment, the phone Elliot placed on the table began to ring.

Mrs. Cooper quickly handed the phone over to him.

Elliot held Layla in one hand and answered the phone with another.

"It's Avery. Is my daughter there with you?" Avery said in a panic-stricken voice.

"I'm so sorry! I've caused so much trouble for you."

Layla vaguely heard her mother's voice, then snatched the phone out of Elliot's hand and cried, "Mommy! Is that you?! It's your little baby, Layla!"

Avery's eyes filled with tears when she heard her daughter's voice.

"Layla! I'm so sorry! I didn't know you came along so I forgot to take you with us when we left. Mommy's on the way now. Don't be scared..."

"I'm not scared! I knew Mommy would come get me!"

"Of course!"

Once she was done talking, Layla handed the phone back to Elliot.

Her sparkling eyes stared unblinking at his pale neck as she asked sweetly,

"Which side did my brother bite you last time?"

Elliot pointed out the spot on his neck to her.

"Oh... There's still a mark!" Layla said, then bit down on the other side of Elliot's neck!

Elliot was at a loss for words.

He thought she asked him about his wound out of the kindness of her heart and wanted to apologize for her brother, but this was her motive!

Elliot had run out of patience.

So what if she was Avery's biological daughter? He had to teach her a lesson once and for all!

Chapter 231

Avery arrived at the Foster mansion half an hour later.

She headed straight into the living room to find no one in sight.

She was stunned,

"Layla!" she called out.

Soon after, she heard the sound of Layla's child-like voice.

"Mommy! I'm over here! Come save me! The dirtbag wants to hit me!"

Avery followed the sound of her daughter's voice into the dining room.

Layla was hiding under the dining table with a panicked expression on her face.

She did not let go of her guard until Avery appeared.

"Layla! What are you doing under the table? Get out here!" Avery said as she walked over to the table and pulled her daughter out from under it. Layla threw herself in her mother's arms, then cried through reddened eyes, "He's trying to hit me! I was so scared... That's why I tried to hide! I ran away quickly so he didn't catch me... If he caught me, then he would have beaten me to death!"

Of course Avery did not believe a word Layla was saying.

Why would Elliot raise his hand to a child?

It was not like he knew that Layla was her biological daughter.

"He won't hit you, Layla," Avery cooed.

"Actually, I was about to hit her," Elliot said.

Avery's eyes shot up and met his gaze.

He was wearing a gray robe and there was a clear bite mark on his neck.

"Why did you bite him, Layla?"

Avery noticed the rage in Elliot's eyes and had to give him some sort of explanation.

Hayden had bitten Elliot last time because he had taken him home of his own accord.

This time, however, Layla was the one who showed up at his house herself.

Layla rubbed her swollen eyes, then said, "He carried me! I didn't want him to touch me... He did it anyway... I was so mad!"

"Even if that's the case, you can't just go around biting people!" Avery said.
"Look,

you bit him hard enough to draw blood. Hurry up and apologize.”

Layla puffed out her cheeks and said stubbornly, “I won’t apologize to him!

Hayden would laugh at me if I did!”

Avery had run out of ideas with her daughter.

“Let’s talk privately, Avery,” Elliot said hoarsely with a sullen face.

Avery handed Layla over to Mrs. Cooper, then followed Elliot out of the dining room.

Once they were out of the room, Elliot turned to her and questioned, “How exactly do you raise your children? Did you know how much they despise me?”

Avery absent mindedly shook her head and said, “I’ve never badmouthed you in front of them.

“It’s Mike’s fault, then,” Elliot said as his Adam’s apple rolled in his throat, then added mockingly, “Your children have each taken a bite out of me. Do you want a turn, too?”

Avery’s cheeks flushed as she said apologetically, “I’ll get the first aid kit.”

Elliot walked over to the couch and took a seat.

Avery returned soon after with the first aid kit.

As Elliot lifted his head, Avery's eyes landed on his slender neck and sensual collar bone.

Avery felt restless.

She tended to his wound as she found a subject to talk about.

"Did you go to my birthday party last night?"

"I didn't," Elliot said as his deep eyes filled with resentment. "I wasn't invited."

Avery was taken aback.

"Oh... Maybe Mike thought that since we're divorced..."

"Didn't you see the guest list?" Elliot was still upset about the matter. "I didn't. I only found out yesterday that Mike had planned such a huge birthday party for me."

Chapter 232

"What have you been so busy with?" Elliot asked as his seething gaze bore into

Avery.

Avery finished tending to his wound, then turned and packed up the first aid kit.

"I've been busy with work," she answered casually.

“You’re lying. If it’s work, then why aren’t you going to the office?”

Elliot sat up straight, then grabbed onto Avery’s arm and continued, “You’ve been giving me a weird vibe recently. I can’t read you at all.”

“What’s there to read?” Avery said. “Listen, Elliot. I’m thankful that you saved me

last night and I can buy you dinner... Or I could give you a medal.”

Elliot was taken by surprise as he released Avery’s arm and said, “I didn’t save you for your thanks. Take your daughter and go! Also, that bratty son of yours

messed with my home’s power and internet today. If you won’t discipline
him,

then don’t mind if I do so myself!”

“I’m sorry,” Avery apologized awkwardly. “I’ll teach him a lesson when I get back. I promise this won’t happen again.”

Avery put the first aid kit back where she found it, then picked up Layla and prepared to leave.

“Avery!” Elliot called out as he approached her and handed her a box.

birthday.”

Avery’s gaze landed on the giftbox in his hand.

She did not know exactly what was inside of it, but she could tell it was something expensive.

“Thank you, Elliot...”

She was about to say that she was grateful for his wish and that there was no need for a gift.

However, she did not get a chance to say any of that, because Layla already accepted the gift for her.

Avery was left speechless.

Elliot let out an inner sigh of relief because he expected Avery to reject him.

“Let’s go home, Mommy! I miss Hayden and Grandma...” Layla whined sweetly as she nuzzled against her mother’s shoulder.

“Alright, we’re going home now,” Avery said.

Her emotions were a mess as she lifted her gaze to look at Elliot and said, “Goodbye.”

Elliot watched as they left.

If Avery’s children could be as gentle and obedient around him as they were with her, he felt like he could perhaps treat them as his own.

Over at the Starry River Villa, Laura finally saw Avery and the children return home after much anticipation.

“Don’t drive when you’re tired ever again, Avery! That’s too dangerous!”
Laura

said through bloodshot eyes.

“I know, Mom. It smells amazing! Did you make my favorite clam chowder?” Avery

said as she made her way to the kitchen.

Mike was starving, so he sat himself down at the dining table after washing his hands.

On the other hand, Layla pulled her brother into their room.

“Do you have any idea how awesome I was today, Hayden?” Layla bragged. “I took something back from Dirtbag Dad’s house.”

Hayden stared at his sister’s face, then said sternly, “Layla, you can’t just take people’s things. How is this different from stealing?”

Layla hung her head and pouted as she felt a little guilty. It was not like she was taking someone else’s stuff.

She was taking something from her father.

She wished very much that Elliot Foster was not a dirtbag, so she could have a Daddy!

“I’m not blaming you,” Hayden said as he suddenly changed his train of thought.

“You can take whatever you want from Elliot Foster as long as you don’t get caught.”

Layla broke into an ecstatic beam and said, “Don’t tell Mommy, Hayden. I’d be in trouble if she knew.”

“Okay. Put it away for now. Let’s go eat.”

“Okay! Hayden, I was so scared when I was alone today. How could all of you leave me behind? ” Layla mumbled after placing the box under the bed. “It’s a good thing I was brave. Otherwise, I would have been scared to death.”

Hayden took Layla’s hand and said with remorse, “I won’t forget you ever again.”

“Good!” Layla said as she was instantly cheered up. “Dirtbag Dad gave Mommy a present, Hayden. Do you think he still loves her?”

Chapter 233

Hayden watched his sister's innocent little face, then shattered her fantasy.

"A dirtbag is called a dirtbag because he can love multiple women at once. Don't be fooled by Elliot Foster."

Layla felt a little disappointed.

She did not dare tell her brother that, even though Elliot was a dirtbag, she could not help but feel drawn to him.

After dinner, Avery called Hayden to her room for a private conversation.

"Do you know what I want to talk to you about, Hayden?"

Hayden hung his head and said nothing.

"What did you promise me before? You said that you would never mess with Elliot Foster again, but you broke your promise," Avery said as her heart filled with uneasiness. "I know you did it for me today, but this isn't the way..."

"I'm sorry, Mommy," Hayden apologized as he lifted his gaze. "I won't do it again."

"You don't want to get on his bad side, Hayden. We're already divorced. If you anger him again one day, and he decides not to take our past relationship into account, he won't let us off that easily... I just want you, Layla and Grandma to live a quiet and peaceful life."

"I know," Hayden said as he lowered his head once again.

"Bring me your laptop," Avery said.

Hayden went back to his room to grab his laptop and handed it over to his mother.

"Get your Uncle Mike for me," Avery said as she put the laptop aside.

Mike showed up soon after.

"I'm surprised you invited me into your room, Avery!" Mike said as he sat down next to Avery and hid his nervousness behind a smile.

Avery looked at the bruises on his face, then said with a sullen expression, "Did you fight with Chad Rayner again? You even broke his glasses? Great job!"

Mike lifted his hands in surrender and said, "He was the one who yanked at my necklace first. It was a gift from my ex boyfriend..."

"Who is it, Elliot?" she asked on purpose.

She said it for Avery to hear. She wanted Avery to know that Elliot was out on a date with her.

Chapter 234

If Avery had an ounce of dignity left, she would end the call immediately.

As expected, Avery suddenly became aware when she heard Zoe's voice. "I'm sorry for interrupting your date. I'll accept the gift, but I won't give you anything in return. Please don't give me anything ever again."

She then hung up the phone before Elliot could respond.

The sound of the call being ended made Elliot feel like his heart was pierced, and a dull ache radiated from it.

"I heard Avery locked herself in her car last night. Is she alright now?" Zoe asked.

"She's fine." Elliot was disinterested and did not want to discuss Avery. "You mentioned there was a doctor you wanted to recommend. Who is it?"

Zoe pulled out a business card from her bag and handed it over to Elliot.

"I heard that this is Aryadelle's top psychiatrist. Her appointments are booked up until next year. I used my connections and managed to get you a slot for next Wednesday morning. You can take Shea to see her, then.”

Elliot glanced at the business card.

It was the same psychiatrist that their family doctor had recommended.

Over at the Starry River Villa, Avery came out from her shower and walked over to the children’s

room.

Layla was watching TV while Hayden was working on a jigsaw puzzle.

Avery had set their bedtime at 9 p.m., so they were free to do whatever they wanted before

that.

“Mommy,” Hayden called out when he noticed Avery and put his puzzle away.

Avery walked over to her son, sat down and asked gently, “Are you upset that I took your laptop away?”

Hayden nodded.

Life was not complete without his laptop.

However...

“I still love you all the same,” Hayden said as he looked earnestly at his mother.

Avery’s heart melted instantly.

She pulled her son into her arms and sniffled, “I’ll give it back to you after a while.”

“Okay,” Hayden said as his eyes softened. “Go to bed, Mommy. I’ll tuck Layla in soon.”

“Okay.”

The room lights were turned off at 9 p.m. and the children lay in bed.

Layla’s gaze was fixed on the ceiling as her eyes filled with uneasiness.

“Hayden, I want to open up that box but I can’t. Can you open it for me?”
Layla

asked as she reached out and gently shook her brother’s arm.

“We’ll open it tomorrow.”

“I really want to see what’s inside right now. Do you think there’ll be some beautiful jewelry inside?”

“No way,” Hayden said firmly.

Elliot Foster was a man.

Why would he keep jewelry in his study?

Layla shot up, suddenly refreshed.

“I won’t go to sleep if you don’t open it right now, Hayden,” Layla whined. “I won’t sleep at all tonight... I’ll just tire myself to death.”

Hearing his sister’s gibberish made Hayden take a deep breath.

He sat up, turned on the bedside lamp and adjusted it to the lowest brightness.

Layla immediately leaped out of bed and pulled the box out from underneath the bed.

She handed the box over to her brother with both hands as if presenting him with a treasure.

“What if you can’t open it either, Hayden?” Layla mumbled as she stared at the box.

Just as she said those words, Hayden easily opened up the box.

Layla was stunned, then asked excitedly, “What’s inside?”

Hayden showed the open box to Layla.

It was not beautiful jewelry.

The light in Layla’s eyes instantly vanished.

“What is that?” she asked as she poured out the contents of the box.

Chapter 235

Hayden turned up the brightness of the bedside lamp.

The contents of the box were a CD and a piece of paper.

Layla opened up the piece of paper and stared at the words on it.

After inspecting it a few times, she cluelessly handed it over to Hayden and said,

“What does it say, Hayden? I don’t know how to read this.”

Hayden glanced at the piece of paper, then said indifferently, “I can’t read it either.”

After all, he was also just a preschool kid.

The words on the piece of paper looked like a foreign language to him, because it was filled with a bunch of professional jargon.

“What’s this, then?” Layla asked as she picked up the CD and inspected it.

There were no pictures nor words on it.

Hayden also felt curious about the CD.

However, there was no way for him to check its contents without his laptop.

“Don’t we need to put this in a computer to see what’s inside, Hayden?”

Layla

asked, then something hit her. “We could borrow Uncle Mike’s laptop!”

Hayden saw the spark in his sister's eyes as if she was eager for action.

"I'll go borrow it! Otherwise, Mommy would be mad at you again if she found out you were using a computer!" Layla said, then ran out of the room.

Hayden was worried that Layla wouldn't be able to carry the laptop herself, so he ran after her.

Mike did not go out to the bar that night.

With the bruises on his face, he would end up scaring everyone if he showed up at the bar.

When Hayden and Layla entered his room, Mike was in the middle of a video game.

"What are you two doing here? It's past nine. Why aren't you in bed?" Mike said as he glanced at the children, then shifted his gaze back to his computer screen.

Hayden and Layla stared at Mike's computer screen.

They were not interested in his game at all, but they had their eyes on his computer.

"Uncle Mike, could we borrow your computer for a second?" Layla asked charmingly.

Hayden did not have time to watch the entire recording, so he used the mouse to drag the progress bar and scan through the video.

It was a complete video recording of a funeral.

Hayden turned off the video, then tapped his sister's shoulder and said, "It's really scary. You shouldn't see it."

Layla pouted in disappointment, then said, "You're not lying to me, are you?"

"It's a funeral. Do you want to watch it?"

Layla shook her head without hesitation, then asked, "Who died?"

"No idea," Hayden said as he shut the laptop, then added, "I'm giving the laptop back"

"Okay..." Once Hayden left with the laptop, Layla placed the CD and piece of paper back into the box.

Chapter 236

7 If Layla had known about the contents in the box, she would not have gone through all the trouble to bring it home.

However, it would be difficult for them to return it now without anyone finding out.

She probably would never be able to go to her Dirtbag Dad's house ever again.

Forget it! She would just keep the box hidden under the bed.

It was nothing but a CD and a piece of paper, so it definitely was not anything important.

By the time Hayden entered the bedroom after returning the laptop, Layla had already fallen into a deep slumber.

In the other room, Avery was wide awake.

Perhaps it was because she had overslept that day that she was now wide awake.

When wide awake, one's mind would wander when they had nothing else to do.

At this moment, for example, Avery's mind was obsessing over Elliot.

Her head was filled with images of his handsome face, while every breath she took was his scent.

She could even remember the touch and temperature of his skin.

If he had not found her last night, she would either be dead or lying in the intensive care unit right now.

There were many things she wanted to say, but she did not dare express.

Elliot was no longer her husband.

He had Shea in his heart and Zoe by his side.

Avery was nothing but his ex wife.

They could no longer turn back on their relationship.

As tears rolled down her cheeks, Avery shut her eyes and forced herself not to think

A perfect life was never a guarantee.

She had Hayden and Layla, as well as a career.

She was more blessed than ninety nine percent of people in the world.

She should not be greedy

Three days later, Zoe noticed that her period was a week late.

Her suspicions arose because her menstrual cycle was normally on time.

She left for the drugstore first thing in the morning and bought a pregnancy test.

Instead of going home, she went to a nearby public restroom.

When she emerged from the cubicle fifteen minutes later, her face was void of color and she was holding onto the wall.

She was pregnant!

She was actually pregnant!

The night she messed around Cole at the hotel was all it took for this to happen!

Zoe bit down so hard on her lip that it turned purple.

Shivers ran through her entire body as she trembled uncontrollably.

Why was life playing this sick joke on her?

She wanted to become Mrs. Elliot Foster, not Mrs. Cole Foster!

Why did she get pregnant with Cole's child of all people?

Zoe clenched her fists so tightly that her nails dug into her palm, but she felt no pain.

She felt like a knife was stabbed into her heart.

She found a quiet corner and called Cole.

It was not until a while later than Cole answered the call.

"Yes, Doctor Sanford?" Cole said hoarsely as if he had yet to wake up.

"I'm going to kill you, Cole Foster!" Zoe hissed through gritted teeth. "Come see me right away! You have ten minutes! If you're not here in ten minutes, I'll kill you with my bare hands!

Cole leaped out of bed and broke into a cold sweat.

“Doctor Sanford, you...”

Zoe hung up the phone, then slumped down and sobbed into her hands.

She could never let Eliot find out about this!

She had to stay by his side!

She resigned from her job abroad because of him.

Everyone around her knew that she was Elliot Foster’s girlfriend and were green with envy.

No matter what, she could not allow the child she was carrying to be an obstacle in her plans!

The problem was that she had difficulty getting pregnant in the first place. If she were to get abortion, she may never have a chance to get pregnant ever again!

Chapter 237

Ten minutes later, Cole appeared in front of Zoe.

He was dressed in his pajamas and a pair of sandals,

His hair was disheveled because he had rushed over right after the phone call,

He wanted to throw a fit!

It was a strange phone call.

How could Zoe be so rude to him?

He was not the one who planned what happened at the hotel before. He was a victim, too!

However, when he saw Zoe's eye reddened with tears, the rage inside of him instantly vanished.

"What's wrong, Doctor Sanford?" Cole asked, then cleared his throat and said,

"My uncle didn't dump you, did he?"

Zoe let out a bitter laugh, then held onto the tree next to her and got to her feet.

"I'm pregnant, Cole Foster!" she hissed through gritted teeth as her mouth filled with the strong taste of blood. "You're the father!"

The corners of Cole's lips twitched.

"No way... We only did it once..." he said in disbelief.

Before he could let out a sharp cry, Zoe picked up her bag and violently attacked him with it.

“You b*st*rd! You human sc* m! It’s all your fault!” Zoe yelled as she continued to hit him.” What am I supposed to do now?! Tell me! What should I do?!”

Cole covered his head with his arms and answered without hesitation, “Get rid of it! What else can you do? My uncle will kill me if he finds out you’re pregnant with my kid!”

Zoe’s tears rolled down her cheeks when she heard his answer.

“I want to get rid of it, too! The mere thought of carrying your child makes me sick!

However, if I get an abortion now, I might never be able to get pregnant again!”

Zoe felt all of the energy get sucked out of her body.

She slumped down, wrapped her arms around her head and broke into uncontrollable sobs.

Cole realized the severity of the situation.

Scanned with CamScanner

it was no wonder Zoe had thrown such a fit.

Things were more complicated if she could not get an abortion

Cole sat down next to Zoe and patted her back.

“I’m sorry, Doctor Sanford! It’s all my fault. You had too much to drink that night, but I was sober. I knew that you were my uncle’s girlfriend, but I gave into temptation and slept with you anyway! I’m the worst!” he said, then slapped himself in the face.

Zoe lifted her gaze, and felt better after seeing Cole’s remorseful face.

“Let’s keep the baby for now,” Zoe said as she took a deep breath. “Your uncle doesn’t love me, so we probably won’t stay together til the end. If I get an abortion now, when he finds another doctor that can treat Shea, he will definitely break up with me without hesitation...”

She had always known that Elliot was secretly looking for another doctor who could treat Shea’s illness.

“I see...” Cole said with a tremor in his voice. “You can’t let him find out that the baby’s mine. Otherwise, he’ll kill me for sure.”

“Are you that afraid of dying?!” Zoe snapped resentfully.

“I’m still young! I’m not done enjoying life!” Cole said as he helped Zoe to her feet.

“Aren’t you afraid of death? Although, even if my uncle finds out your baby isn’t his, he still wouldn’t kill you. You’ve saved Shea once, after all.”

Cole’s words made Zoe decide to take a gamble.

If the worst case scenario was breaking up with Elliot, then what was there to be afraid of?

“Go home. I’ll go to the hospital for a checkup later. I’ll let you know once I confirm the results,” Zoe said as she withdrew her arm from Cole’s grasp.

“You have to listen to everything I say from now on, or you’re dead!” she threatened.

Cole did not have a choice.

The child Zoe was carrying was proof that he wronged Elliot.

Zoe had Cole wrapped around her finger.

On the other side of the city, a black Rolls-Roice pulled up at the entrance of Wedillia Psychiatric Treatment Center.

Elliot and Shea emerged from the car.

Once they entered the center, the doctor greeted Elliot, then asked him to wait in the waiting

room.

“Don’t be scared, Shea. I’ll wait at the door for you,” Elliot said as he tried to let go of Shea’s hand.

However, Shea’s grip tightened around his hand and refused to let go.

Chapter 238

Elliot took out a couple pieces of candy from his pocket and placed them in Shea’s hand,

Shea finally let go of Elliot’s hand when she saw the candy.

After watching Shea enter the treatment center, Elliot’s heart filled with uneasiness.

This was the first time he had taken her to see a psychiatrist.

Moreover, she was one of the country’s top psychiatrists.

He wondered if shea would be able to overcome her mental and emotional obstacles.

The doors to the treatment center opened about half an hour later.

Shea hurried out and ran straight into Elliot’s embrace.

Her emotions were relatively stable.

She was not crying, but she was just a little scared and nervous.

Elliot wrapped his arms around Shea and patted her back.

The doctor offered Elliot a seat on the couch next to them.

“Mr. Foster, I took a look at the information you sent over last night. From my interaction with Shea just now, I don’t think she’s suited for psychiatric treatment at the moment. Her issues aren’t purely psychological. I believe she requires professional surgical treatment first to regain her health. Once she recovers, she might not even require psychiatric treatment.”

“Did she say anything to you just now?” Elliot asked.

The doctor shook her head and said, “I asked her to nod or shake her head to answer my questions. She was quite cooperative.”

The doctor then handed a questionnaire over to Elliot.

It was the questions that the doctor asked Shea, as well as her answers.

The questions were simple enough. They were things about the people she loved, what was her happiest memory and her worst...

Every answer was related to Elliot.

“Her mental issues outweigh her psychological issues,” said the doctor.

no need for you to worry too much, Mr. Foster.”

“Thank you,” Elliot said as he picked up the questionnaire, stood up and prepared to leave with Shea.

At that moment, a mother and son walked through the doors.

Before Elliot could react, Shea was already making her way over to them.

Avery booked an appointment with this psychiatrist the moment they returned to the country.

She was concerned about Hayden’s inability to fit into a school environment.

Whenever she caught wind of a good psychiatrist, she would take Hayden there to give it a try.

Shea made her way over to Hayden and broke into a sweet smile.

Avery was taken aback when she saw Shea.

What was she doing here? Did Elliot bring her here?

Immediately after, a tall figure made its way over to them and held Shea by his side.

Elliot glanced at Avery, then said in a deep voice, "Your son should see a psychiatrist."

He bore no ill will.

He felt that Hayden's character was problematic, and the sooner he received treatment, the sooner he could recover.

However, Avery heard another meaning from his words.

"Is there really a reason for the president of Sterling Group to make fun of a four-year-old boy?"

Elliot's cheeks flushed slightly, then said, "I'm not making fun of him. I'm here with Shea, too.

Avery pursed her lips, then took Hayden's hand and walked around them.

Half an hour later, the doors to the treatment center opened up, and Avery walked out of the waiting room.

"Miss Tate, just because your child is different from others, doesn't mean he has psychological issues," said the doctor as she handed a questionnaire to Avery.

Avery glanced at the questionnaire, then thanked the doctor.

Soon after, she walked hand-in-hand out of the building with Hayden. Within two steps out of the center, a tall figure appeared before them and blocked their path.

Chapter 239

“Let’s have lunch together,” Elliot said, offering an invitation to

Avery.

Avery met his eyes and asked, “Have you been waiting out here this entire time?”

Elliot had no comment.

If he were not waiting for her, he would have left a long time ago.

Avery looked up at the sun.

It was early fall, so it was not as hot out, but the afternoon sun was still rather blazing.

“Where’s Shea?” she asked.

Elliot shot a look over to the parking lot, then said, “She’s in the car.”

“I see... You two go ahead! My mom cooked, so we’re going home for lunch,”

Avery said, declining his offer without hesitation.

She could not figure out what Elliot was thinking by asking her to eat at the same table as Shea.

Did he not feel shame?

Even if he wanted to two–time... No, three–time, there was no need for him to be this obvious about it!

“I made a reservation at that restaurant over there,” Elliot said as if he was unfazed by Avery’s rejection. “I need to send Shea to school later, and you need to send Hayden there, too. Let’s have lunch, then send them to school.”

Avery pursed her lips.

After a moment’s consideration, she refused once again.

“We’re going home for lunch. I’ll take the kids to school after a nap.’

Realizing that being civil with her would not work, Elliot decided to go with a more aggressive tactic.

“Why are you so afraid of having lunch with me? Can’t we have a meal together after the divorce? Or are you avoiding me because you’re still in love with me?”

Avery was speechless from rage.

She tried her best to remain calm, then held Hayden’s hand and walked in the direction of the restaurant.

Elliot went to the car to get Shea.

Once the four of them were seated, they ordered their food. The awkward silence made the atmosphere slightly strange.

Avery ordered a couple of dishes, then handed the menu over to Elliot.

Elliot then passed the menu to Shea and let her order.

Avery watched the entire thing as her heart burned with anxiety.

She poured herself a glass of water, then picked it up and threw her head back for a large gulp.

It was hot water!

She was burned!

Seeing this, Elliot immediately shot to his feet, grabbed the jug of water and walked over to the counter.

He returned soon after with a jug of iced water and poured Avery a glass.

“Wash it down with some iced water,” he said in a low, powerful voice.

Avery took a gulp of cold water, then said, “I’m fine.”

“What were you thinking? How could you be so absent minded?” Elliot said as he gazed deeply at her.

Avery blushed as her brows furrowed, then said, "You can ask what I'm thinking if you're the one I burned."

"Did I upset you?" Elliot asked, then withdrew his gaze, poured himself a glass of water and took a sip.

"I never wanted to have lunch with you in the first place," Avery said bluntly. "We'll see if you could eat if I brought a man over and flirted with him in front of you."

Since Hayden was around, she lowered her voice for the second half of her sentence.

Elliot frowned, then asked, "You think I'm being intimate with Shea?"

Avery looked down at her phone and ignored him.

If he did not think they were being intimate, then forget it!

If he were able to date two women at a time, then what values and principles could he possibly have left?

Elliot knew why Avery was upset.

The moment she burned herself was the moment he handed the menu to Shea.

If Avery was jealous simply because he allowed Shea to order their lunch, then it meant that she still cared for him.

“Don’t play with your phone, Avery,” Elliot said, then reached out and took the phone from her hand.

Avery was stunned.

Elliot wanted to place her phone down and have a proper conversation with her.

Although Shea and Hayden were with them, considering how they rarely spoke, there was no danger of anything getting leaked.

Chapter 240

This was Elliot’s chance to start a deep conversation with Avery.

“Shea and ...”

He began to speak, but the photo of Avery’s phone screen grabbed his attention

“Who’s this man?”

He looked a little familiar.

Elliot looked at the photo again and again.

He was sure that he had seen the man before, but could not recall anything about

him.

Avery snatched her phone back.

“You haven’t changed at all. You’re still just as controlling. Is this a common problem that old men face?”

She shoved her phone into her bag, then said mockingly, “He’s a celebrity I’ve been following recently. He’s handsome, right? Not only that, he’s also very young. I’ve recently been into this type of man.”

Elliot gritted his teeth in rage.

Was she calling him old?

He planned on having a proper conversation with her, but it looked like there was no need for that!

After all, she had no interest in old men and only liked young men!

“What did you want to tell me just now?” Avery asked.

The anger in Elliot’s face cheered her up. “It’s nothing!” Elliot snapped coldly.

“Just eat!”

It was an extremely unhappy lunch.

While Elliot was settling the bill, Avery left with Hayden.

At the hospital, Zoe’s tears escaped her eyes once again as she looked at her test results.

The entire morning felt like a neverending nightmare.

The worst thing about it was waking up and realizing that the nightmare was real!

She was pregnant with Cole Foster's child!

As she walked out of the hospital, Zoe began to think of ideas.

There must be a way out of this!

Life had shut a door in her face, but it surely opened up a window of opportunity for her somewhere.

As long as nobody found out that the child belonged to Cole, things really were not as bad as they seemed

Besides, Elliot depended on her to treat Shea's illness.

No matter how bad things went for her, she would not be worse off than Avery.

Her emotions calmed down at that thought.

Once Zoe returned home, she lay down in bed.

She had a throbbing headache, but could not fall asleep no matter how tightly she shut her eyes.

Half an hour later, she gave Cole a call.

“I need to find a way to sleep with Elliot,” Zoe said, revealing her plan to Cole.

“That way, I can pin the child on him.”

Cole was dumbfounded and filled with agitation.

“It’s not impossible... However, if my uncle insists on a DNA test after the baby’s born, wouldn’t our cover be blown?”

“I have a plan! You just need to do as I say!”

“Alright! I won’t say anything else. I’ll do whatever you say,” Cole yielded in fear of saying too much. “How do you plan on getting my uncle to sleep with you? He’s pretty difficult.”

“Would I call you if I had any ideas?!” Zoe snapped. “Hurry up and come up with something! If you don’t, then your uncle will definitely find out that the child is

yours!”

That afternoon, Avery got a call from Tammy.

“Avery, I heard from Mike earlier about your makeup birthday party.”

Avery massaged her temples and said, “That idiot’s doing this without telling me

again!”

Tammy burst into laughter, then said, “I think he just wants to have some fun and is using your birthday as an excuse to throw a party.”

“I think so... Did he call you earlier?”

“He did! I’ll definitely be there this weekend. Are you inviting Elliot this time? He was pretty upset when he didn’t get an invitation to your party a few days ago,”

Tammy said. “He even booked the smaller banquet hall next to yours. How childish!”

Avery held her head and said, “I just got into a fight with him. He probably won’t want to come to my party.”

“Why did you fight again?”

“I see. Should I get Jun to ask him? If he wants to go, then you could invite him,” Tammy said, then chuckled and added, “I heard you accepted his gift. Could you really not invite him after doing that?”

Chapter 241

Avery was left speechless by Tammy’s words.

It was all her own fault!

Why did she have to accept Elliot's gift?!

Things would not be this awkward if she had just rejected it.

Avery hung up on Tammy, then called Mike and said, "Don't you think you should tell me before organizing a makeup birthday party?"

"What if I told you first and you said no?" Mike said. He knew her too well. "If I inform everybody else before I tell you about it, then you would have no choice but to show up."

Avery let out a bitter laugh.

"You have fun with everybody on your own, then! I'm not going!"

"I already invited Elliot Foster! That shameless man accepted the invitation right away!" Mike said mockingly. "Your ex husband sure is thick-skinned, Avery. Why do you like men like him?

Avery lifted her hand to massage her temples, then hung up the phone.

Tammy called again less than a minute later.

"Elliot's going to the party, Avery! I figured someone as proud as him would definitely take the chance to decline!" Tammy said. "I can never predict his reaction. Is this a special trait that only successful people have?"

“You can never predict the reactions of a madman, either. Stop looking at him through rose tinted glasses, Tammy.”

“Hahaha! You always get so worked up when we talk about him,” Tammy assessed. “It looks like you still love him! Otherwise, you wouldn’t react like this!”

Avery took a large gulp of water, then found an excuse to end the call.

She suddenly missed the days when she was too busy for anything else.

After inviting Elliot to the party, Mike went into the bathroom to compose himself.

Once he was calm enough, he called Chad’s number.

Mike had deleted Chad’s number long ago, but for some god forsaken reason memorized it.

It took a while before his call was answered.

“I thought you wouldn’t answer my call! Why didn’t you reply to my text a few days ago?”

Mike was forced to send Chad an apology text a few days ago after Avery’s threats.

However, Chad did not respond to his text, and Mike could not stop thinking about it.

“You have the right to text me, and I have the right to not text back,” Chad said coldly. “Please don’t call me for no reason.”

“I do have a reason! Are you coming to Avery’s birthday party this weekend?”

“It depends if my boss is going or not.”

“Elliot Foster told me he was coming!”

“In that case, I’ll be going with him,” Chad said, then added, “I’m busy right now.

Please don’ t call me again during office hours.”

He then hung up the phone.

A raging fury boiled inside of Mike.

He was nothing but a puny assistant!

What could he be busy with?

Elliot did not say anything like that to him!

Mike was second in command at Tate Industries, but was he constantly saying he was bus Moments later, Mike created a text chain with some of the company’s managers.

The name of the chain was “Down with Elliot Foster“. When the heads of department and managers saw the shocking title, nobody dared come in the chain.

Mike: (We're bringing Elliot Foster down at the party this Saturday! Is everyone

in?!)

One of the managers replied: (How?)

Mike: (With alcohol, of course! How else?) Everyone in the group was relieved.

Chapter 242

(No problem! I can handle my drink!)

[I have pretty high tolerance, too!)

(It's all of us against Elliot Foster. We've got this!)

Mike broke into a grin as he read the enthusiastic messages in the text chain.

Why was he being gracious enough to invite Elliot to the party?

This was his true motive.

Picking on Avery meant picking on him.

There was not much Mike could do to defeat Elliot, but getting him blackout drunk was right up his alley!

That night, Rosalie asked Elliot to bring Zoe over to the old mansion for dinner.

Dinner began once the two of them arrived.

“You should visit more often when you have the time, Doctor Sanford,” Rosalie

said with a smile. “Elliot’s usually too busy to spend time with you.”

Zoe nodded and said, “Alright. I’ll come by more often as long as you don’t find

me bothersome.”

“Why would I? I like how outstanding you are!”

After a pleasant dinner, Rosalie called Elliot over to her room for a private conversation.

“Doctor Sanford seems like a good match for you, Elliot. You’re not getting any younger. Why don’t you get engaged?” Rosalie said.

“I won’t think about marriage until shea’s completely cured,” Elliot said as he searched for an excuse.

“Shea’s illness and your marriage have nothing to do with each other!”

“I hope Shea can be there at my wedding.”

“She’ll be there if you get married now, too! Didn’t you say her condition improved

after the surgery?”

Elliot shook his head.

“I’m asking you to get engaged first, not get married. Doctor Sanford gave up her high-paying job for you. You should show her some gratitude,” Rosalie said, then asked, “What are you thinking?”

“I’m not getting engaged,” Elliot said, then added, “I don’t love her. I’ll break up with her the moment I find another doctor who can help Shea. You’re a woman, Mom. You should know that I’d just be dragging her down by getting engaged to or marrying her.”

The expression on Rosalie’s face turned rigid.

“Do you think I had a deep, loving relationship with your father? Plenty of couples appear happy but are far apart under the surface. Even so, their marriages can last a lifetime.”

“Just because others can do that, doesn’t mean that’s what I want for myself,”

Elliot said.

“You’re too stubborn! Since you’re so adamant, I won’t pester you any further,”

Rosalie said bitterly, then changed the subject and said, “Your father’s death anniversary is coming up next month.”

Elliot pursed his lips, then turned away and said, “I know. I’m leaving if there’s nothing else.”

“Think about things with Doctor Sanford again, Elliot!”

Once he was out of the room, Elliot told Zoe he had to leave.

Zoe walked him out, then said, “I’ll leave after a little bit.”

Elliot nodded in response.

Half an hour later, Rosalie retired to her bedroom for the night.

Cole finally found the chance to speak with Zoe in private.

“I looked into it, Doctor Sanford. My uncle’s attending Avery’s birthday party this Saturday,” Cole said, explaining his plan to Zoe. “I’m sure he’ll drink at the party.

You should go fetch him once he’s drunk. If he’s blacked out, you can do whatever you want with him. If he’s not quite drunk enough, all you have to do is give him this...”

Cole pulled out a tiny bottle and handed it over to Zoe.

“As long as he drinks this, he’ll transform from a perfect gentleman into a beast in the sack!”

Zoe was rendered speechless.

It was shameless, but she had no other choice.

She took the bottle, then mocked coldly, “You sure are an expert at cheap tricks like this.”

Cole’s face flushed with embarrassment.

“You’re the one who asked me to think of something, Doctor Sanford. When it comes to my uncle, if we didn’t resort to cheap tricks, he would never sleep with

you!”

“Shut up! I know the one he loves is Avery Tate! So what? I’m his girlfriend now!”

Zoe said haughtily. “Once I’ve slept with him, I’ll make him marry me!”

Chapter 243

The wild ambition in Zoe’s eyes was clear and undisguised.

Cole felt his dying soul reawaken.

Now that he was on the same boat as Zoe, her success meant his own success.

Women could gain honor through their children, so could he.

He would gain honor from his child!

At 10 p.m. that night, a black Rolls–Royce pulled into the Foster mansion.

Elliot had attended a dinner event that night.

He had gone to the dinner because one of the country's top entrepreneurs in the drone sector was in attendance.

Elliot wanted to understand every aspect of Avery's company.

From the information he gathered at the dinner, he found out that Tate Industries may have rebuilt, but their sales had hit a wall in the country.

Alpha Technologies was formidable abroad. Their buzz and reputation were outstanding.

However, Avery did not use Alpha Technologies' brand in Aryadelle, but that of Tate Industries instead.

Although it was the same product, a different brand also meant a different worth.

Avery did not market or advertise their products, which led to the lack of sales.

According to the top entrepreneur, if Avery could not make it through the next six months in Aryadelle, she would move back to Bridgedale empty handed.

The next day, Avery showed up at the Pacific Hotel by herself for a business meeting.

The other party, Norman Puth, was the president of one of the country's largest drone distributors.

Avery met Norman at the restaurant, then took a seat at their table.

"Did you come alone, Miss Tate?" asked Norman.

He was a chubby, middle-aged man. Behind his glasses, were a pair of sharp eyes.

"Yes, everyone's been rather busy recently," Avery said with a polite smile.

She pulled out a file from her bag, then said, "Mr. Puth, here is some detailed information on our company's products. Please take a look."

“Ha, I’ve seen it. That’s precisely why I asked to meet with you, Miss Tate,” said

Norman

His eyes shifted from Avery’s face to her chest, then down to her slender waist.

“I know your products are impressive, Miss Tate. However, the market isn’t the same here as it is abroad.”

“I see.”

Avery felt uncomfortable under Norman’s wandering gaze. She picked up her glass of water, took a sip, then said, “Please elaborate.”

“If you make me an authorized distributor for your products, I can guarantee that you’ll take over the domestic market in no time,” Norman said as he suddenly tipped his leg in Avery’s direction, then added, “Could you consider lowering the price for me?”

Avery pulled her legs back, and her tone was cold as she said, “I’m sorry, the price we proposed to you is the best we can do. I’m afraid we can’t go any lower than that.”

“That’s too insincere of you, Miss Tate,” Norman said regretfully. “How are we supposed to do business without sincerity?”

Avery’s eyes narrowed as her lips curled up into a smile.

“What constitutes sincerity to you, Mr. Puth?”

Seeing Avery’s provocative smile, Norman shot to his feet and walked over to her side.

“You’re young and beautiful, Miss Tate. More importantly, you’re capable. I’m sure there are plenty of men who are after you, right?” he said as his sleazy hand fell onto Avery’s shoulder.

Avery’s hand tightened around her tea cup.

She silently counted down in her heart.

“Three, two...”

A gust of wind pierced through the room and Norman was thrown to the ground with a violent punch!

Avery’s head shot up and met with Elliot’s menacing face.

“Avery! I never expected you to stoop so low!” Elliot snapped as he yanked her from her seat.” Didn’t you say you didn’t like old men?! What are you doing right now?! Why don’t you resist when fat b*st*rds like this lay their hands on you?! Is money more important than your dignity?!”

Avery’s head was spinning from his relentless chastising.

If Elliot had not punched Norman to the ground, she would have thrown her drink right at his face.

“Can’t you lower your voice, Elliot?”

Avery blushed with embarrassment as she noticed that all eyes were on them.

Elliot may be shameless, but she was not.

She picked up her bag from her seat and planned to leave, but Elliot jerked her back into he seat.

“Are you willing to do anything for money?!” he roared through reddened, tear– filled ey Avery was repressing the frustration she felt for him, but his words set her off!

Chapter 244

Avery wrapped her arms around her chest and stared coldly at him.

She watched as Elliot took off his shirt, then covered her with us with the flick of his arm.

His warm, familiar scent surrounded her entire body.

Avery felt hatred for him, but she could not bring herself to truly despise him.

Elliot walked out the restaurant with his upper body bare.

Avery threw her head back and took breaths like a fish out of water.

When the phone in her bag rang, she finally snapped back to reality.

She took off Elliot's shirt, then picked up her bag and left in a hurry.

Over at Sterling Group, Chad took in a sharp breath after receiving a phone call.

Was the world going insane?

He could not believe that his boss, Elliot Foster, had run off to some hotel to throw a fit.

Not only did he make his bodyguards kick out all of the other guests, he also threw cash bills around the restaurant...

The most ridiculous part of it was the fact that he took off his shirt and left it there.

If this was a drama, then it would be an outrageous farce!

Half an hour later, the restaurant's manager personally sent over Elliot's shirt and cash.

Among the other items sent over were two buttons from a women's shirt.

"Whose buttons are these?" Chad asked as he held the buttons in his hand.

"I think it belonged to a certain Miss Tate."

"Avery Tate?"

"Yes! They broke into a fight at the restaurant, and almost started getting it on."

Chad was at a loss for words. Did "getting it on" mean what he thought it meant?

Chapter 245

Tammy brought out a t-shirt for Avery.

"What on earth happened to you? How'd you fall and got the buttons on your shirt broken off? Tammy looked at her all suspiciously and guessed, "Avery, did you get into a fight with someone?"

Avery replied as she put on the shirt, "Yeah, you guessed it right."

"And you lost right? You look terrible. Shall I hire you a bodyguard?" Tammy said as she poured Avery a glass of warm water, “You are the owner of a multi-billion dollar company now.; It’s essential to have one. Look at Elliot, he has a bunch of bodyguards following him around. I heard they were all extremely well trained...”

Avery smiled wryly and said, “If that’s the case, I don’t need to hire anyone else.”

Tammy asked, “Why?” and she understood as she asked it, “Is he out of his mind? What’d you have against that dirtbag?”

Avery took a sip of the water and put down her glass.

“Thanks for the shirt. I’ll make my way back to the office now.” Mike was calling her to get some updates on the discussions.

She needed to head back now. “I’ll see you out,” said Tammy as she was worried about Avery.

“No need, I’m fine I promise. This isn’t the first time we fought.” Avery responded half heartedly.

“I know, but this is the first time he’s laid his hands on you!” Tammy said as she thought of something. She turned around and walked to the cabinet and took out a bottle of pepper spray and handed it over to Avery, "Carry this with you. You can use it on him the next time he bullies you again."

At the Tate Tower, Mike was surprised to see Avery's wardrobe change.

"It didn't go as we planned?"

"Yeah," said Avery.

"It's fine," Mike comforted her and said, "We can recruit a few more sales agent and sell it ourselves."

Avery nodded and continued, "I thought so too. After all, we just started up. Slowly but surely we'll get there."

Mike was never interested in managing a business or moneymaking. He stayed with Avery out of gratitude. He'll let her steer the wheel.

"Mike, the money we made from overseas might be chipped in for this project...

We might make some or we might even lose it all," Avery confessed after a long pause.

“Don’t you worry about this, we can always make more money! Just stay put,”

Mike said as he placed his hand on her shoulders and continued, “We had some rough sails too when we started our businesses overseas.”

Avery felt a slight comfort after hearing from Mike, “Perhaps I was a nobody back then, so I wasn’t pressured about the outcome.”

“Just focus on your own business, don’t get sucked into other people’s opinion of you,” said Mike.

Avery sensed a huge relief as she laughed, “You sounded extra clever today,

Mike.”

“Ha–ha! Come on, I’ll take you shopping. This shirt is just awful on you,” said Mike with a slight averted expression, “It’s your birthday this weekend. You have to dress up!”

Mike pulled Avery away from the offices.

Late noon, Elliot arrived at the Sterling Group offices as Chad followed from behind.

“Chad, I’m not going to Avery’s party this weekend,” Elliot said with a familiar tone.

Chad knew of course, as to why Elliot had a change of mind. He had a huge argument with Avery that afternoon, it will be hard for him to recover from it.

He was sensitive about his reputation.

Taking off her shirt and throw money in the public... Elliot felt ridiculed.

Though the restaurant was mostly emptied, there must have been a bunch of people looking in from the outside. “I’ll go with Ben then,” said Chad, “We shouldn’t be absent altogether.”

Elliot was distracted by the black bag on the table and asked, “What’s this?” Chad coughed and couldn’t find words to say.

Chapter 246

Elliot opened up the bag and found the shirt and cash inside.

“Swoop —” he smacked the bag and it fell to the ground.

“Get rid of it!” exclaimed Elliot coldly.

“Yes alright,” said Chad as he picked it up and walked out the door.

At the mall streets, Mike threw on multiple pieces of clothing to Avery for her to try

on.

“You got to try it on before you know if it fits,” said Mike as he pushed her into the fitting room.

“You’ve such a good boyfriend, Miss. It’s rare to have an attentive man!” The salesperson grinned as she said to Avery, “Do you need my assistance?”

Avery shook her head vigorously, “I can manage.”

Mike and Avery spun around the whole stretch of mall street for that entire noon.

The back of the car was filled with shopping bags.

He bought clothes not only for Avery but also for Hayden, Layla, Laura, and himself.

This might be the last time Avery would agree to go shopping with Mike. Avery was famished at this point. They sat down at a random restaurant and she planned to head home right after.

“Hurry up and eat, Avery, I’ll bring you to a hair salon next,” said Mike.

“But I’m all drained up!” exclaimed Avery.

“You can just sit and relax at the salon. How are you going to look for your next love with that look of yours?” Mike said as he scrolled through his phone for a photo, “Look at this man from Edelweiss. Rich, tall, and handsome, so much better than that dirtbag Elliot. This man should be your standard from now on.”

Avery was dumbfounded.

She wasn't feeling hungry anymore.

“Do you think this man from Edelweiss will fall for me with me buying new clothes and changing my hairstyle?”

“Of course not. You have to go there if you want an opportunity to woo him,” Mike was adamant about it, “We will work towards the goal, baby steps.”

Avery put down her utensils and wiped off her mouth with a serviette.

“Are you all done? To the salon!” Mike dragged Avery to the next stop as soon as he paid the bill.

It was Avery's birthday party that Saturday.

She had it in a five-star hotel located in the city. Laura stayed home with the kids as they weren't too keen on joining a crowded event.

Mike arrived at the hotel together with Avery at four in the afternoon. Some of the guests have already arrived.

Avery let her hair down with her natural waves. She wore a v-neck cream-colored dress, and the hems were in brown ombre, and it was filled with sparkly sequins.

She looked as if she had an entire galaxy of stars shining on her.

The guests all looked in her direction as she walked in.

Ben and Chad walked towards Avery and greeted her, "Happy Birthday, Miss

Tate," Ben said as he passed a gift to her, and praised her earnestly, "You look beautiful today."

Chad passed over his gift as well and said, "My boss can't come over today as he had something else planned for."

Avery smiled and said, "Thank you for your gifts and wishes."

As she said it, Mike yelled and Chad and gasped, "Oh shit! Isn't that your boss,

Chad?"

Everyone in the hall looked at the entrance and there he was, Elliot, looking dashingly handsome at the entrance.

he paid the bill.

Chapter 247

Chad's face turned hot. Thought someone said he wasn't going to come today?

Why did Elliot suddenly appear? Do his words not mean anything?

Both Ben and Chad dashed towards Elliot as they tried to ask him.

Elliot answered, "I just happen to be around the corner, so I thought I'd drop by and check the party out." "I thought you'd be too chicken to come!" Mike walked towards Elliot as he pulled him to the drinking table, "Today we gather to celebrate Avery's birthday. Rule number one, no scolding is allowed. Secondly, no fighting.

Let's all drink!"

Mike handed out an empty glass to Elliot and filled it up with liquor.

Avery was stunned. Did they start on the drinks before dinner? She saw a group of men all staring at Elliot with Mike leading them.

She realized what it was! As she walked over, Tammy stopped her. "Let them be!"

She pulled Avery to the side, "Did you forget how he treated you a few days ago?

I have warned Jun not to save him. You too!"

Avery blushed, "But dinner hasn't even started yet..."

"I'll get dinner started," said Tammy.

"Okay,"

Moments later, food was served. Tammy got Avery to sit down and asked, "Avery, this dress looks gorgeous on you! It wasn't your idea to wear this, eh?"

Avery blushed and replied, "Mike chose it for me."

"I knew it. I'm going to ask him out next. He has great taste," Tammy made a decision to befriend Mike.

"He's an expert at it," said Avery as her feet were still hurting from all the walking that day. Mike was fine though.

“Avery, I think you should remind Mike that Elliot’s not very good at drinking,” Jun looked at Elliot worriedly.

“Thought you were on our side?” Tammy glared at Jun.

“Of course I am! But what if he was too drunk and something bad happens?” Jun took a look at Elliot’s table and continued, “They already finished a bottle of liquor in thirty minutes!”

Avery stood up, intended to walk over to stop them.

“Avery dear, Elliot is not alone by himself. He’s with Ben and Chad, they will take good care of him, don’t you worry.” Tammy held her hand and pulled her down on her chair, and added, “ Plus, he has a girlfriend now. He doesn’t need your concern.”

Avery calmed down as soon as she heard what Tammy said.

Ben and Chad both helped Elliot with the drinks, and not much went into Elliot’s systems. Mike pulled Chad away and said, “Let’s drink one on one, Chad!”

Chad walked away with Mike with his glass in his hand. Their table went quieter as Mike and Chad left. After all, Mike was the leading the ruse. The rest of them were not as courageous to intoxicate the boss of Sterling Group.

No one dared to go up against him.

Ben raised his glass and laughed as he said, "Let's toast!"

They resumed drinking again.

Avery felt relieved as she saw Mike leave the table. She picked up her fork and started eating." Avery, did you like the gift I sent you?" Tammy asked as they chatted away.

Avery laughed, "Of course! But how did you manage to keep so many ugly photos of me?" Tammy gave Avery a photo album for her birthday.

Chapter 248

Sage opened up the album Tammy gave to her, and it was filled with photos of them from college.

It was a precious gift. "We are best friends, that's how! Other than my own photos, the rest of them are mostly yours.” Tammy said as she looked at Avery lovingly, “Cheers to the friendship forever!”

Avery raised her glass and cheered, “Friendship forever!” She took a sip and put the glass down.

Someone patted her shoulder. It was Ben looking blushing red. “Come sit with us, Miss Tate!” Ben pointed at the table next to hers and said, “Tell your staff to behave themselves, we are getting hammered by any minute now.” Ben looked pitiful.

“You’re kidding Ben, you are a master at drinking!” teased Tammy.

Ben sighed and said, “That was all in the past. I’m getting older now...”

Avery got up and followed Ben to the next table. Ben signaled for her to be seated on Mike’s seat. It was next to Elliot’s. She glanced over at Elliot and saw him staring sharply back at her.

She sat down as he was making her uneasy.

“Miss Tate, have some juice,” Ben said as he poured her a glass of juice and asked Elliot, “Do you want some?”

No one was trying to make Elliot drink in her presence. Elliot raised his liquor glass and drank by himself.

Ben awkwardly put down the jar of juice.

“Miss Tate, Happy Birthday. Cheers to you,” a manager stood up and raised his glass at her.

“It’s not my birthday today, you don’t have to drink with me.” She sipped on her glass of juice as she said it. The manager felt embarrassed as the glass of liquor was still in his hand.

Elliot stood up and raised his glass with a hoarse voice, “I’ll drink with you guys!”

Avery took a deep breath and looked past Elliot with her eyes laid sight on Ben.

Why blame it on her staff when Elliot was the one asking for drinks from everyone?

Ben dug out his phone and sent Avery a text. It read, (He took a glance at your chest. I guess he didn’t expect to see you dress sexily.)

Avery replied and said, (I can wear whatever I like. If he doesn’t like it, he may leave!]

Ben replied, (I don't mean it that way, Miss Tate. Let him drink if he wants to. Just ignore him.)

Avery placed her phone on the table. Elliot glared first at Avery, then Ben. He meant that he knew they were texting about him behind his back.

He raised his glass, took a sip, and said, "Do you guys know, what's the most important thing about running a company?"

The supervising managers were dumbstruck. Where did that come from? Were they suddenly looped into a free seminar?

Avery looked stunned as well. She couldn't tell whether it was her or Elliot who was drunk

She looked at him as his face now looked surreal. Elliot felt hot and he tugged at his collar ajar with his fingers.

"To start a company is easy. But to maintain it is another story. To keep the company afloat, you got to have some management skills..." Elliot opened his mouth again.

The managers all put down their glasses and listened to him attentively.

Ben sent another text to Avery saying, (He's trying to warn you. He's worried that you will go broke.) Avery read the text as her face blushed red.

Chapter 249

Elliot suddenly held Avery's hand. She let go of her phone in her hands and he let go of her instantly. Ben was right, he was directing the speech towards her. The managers' jaws all dropped.

Oh shit! Is something about to happen between the both of them? Avery's face felt burning hot. She took a huge gulp of the juice she just poured for herself.

Fortunately, today wasn't her real birthday. It will be a real treat to have a lecture on her real birthday, Avery thought sarcastically. Elliot went on and on about his secrets of success while drinking with everyone.

It seemed as if he forgot today was her birthday celebration.

Avery had two plates of pasta and a plate of fresh fruits. An hour later, he's still at it with his speech. She held her head and looked at him.

Elliot cleared his throat and turned at her, "Avery, you got everything I said jotted

down?"

"Let's drink!" Avery looked down as she helped herself a glass, and poured one for him, "It's been ages since I knew you and we never drink together!"

As Elliot contemplated, Avery had already finished hers.

Tammy looked wildly surprised at the table next to them and gasped, "Avery has gone mad!"

Jun said to Tammy, "In the end, it was Avery who ended Elliot tonight, not Mike, and certainly not the managers."

As Jun said it, Tammy saw Elliot raise his glass and drank it all. She gasped,

"What are they trying at?!"

Jun continued, "It's obvious, these two are attracted to each other. Either they get back together, or they become each other's worst enemies."

"They are never getting back together. There's Zoe, and Shea...even if Avery's gone mad, she'll stay away from a relationship with him," Tammy said with a scoff.

They continued drinking for another half an hour.

Elliot was dead drunk, and Avery drank quite a bit too. She rubbed her fingers against her temples, forcing herself to stay awake.

Mike was the last man standing. Everyone was high from drinking except him.

Mike dragged Ben away for more drinks. Looks like Mike had planned to have all of them drunk today!

At 10.30 at night, Zoe appeared at the banquet hall with a cold expression. Her heels clicked against the marble floors as they caught Avery's attention. They looked at each other.

"Happy Birthday, Miss Tate," Zoe stood taller than Avery and she looked down as she spoke, "I 'm here for Elliot."

Avery had too much to drink. She tried to speak but nothing came out of her mouth.

She waved her hands signaling at Zoe. That's the best she could manage for now.

"Miss Tate, why did you get Elliot so drunk for? You knew that overconsumption is bad for health. I thought you would care for him since you used to be with him!"

Zoe reprimanded as she tried to get Elliot up with his driver.

They couldn't get him to the parking lot as he was heavily inebriated. Zoe had no choice but to get a room. The driver left as soon as they got Elliot to the bed. Zoe took out the bottle of liquid Cole gave to her. She must seize the opportunity tonight.

Ben replied, (I don't mean it that way, Miss Tate. Let him drink if he wants to. Just ignore him.)

Avery placed her phone on the table. Elliot glared first at Avery, then Ben. He meant that he knew they were texting about him behind his back.

"Have some water, Elliot!" Zoe said as she placed his head higher on the pillow and brought him the bottle of water, "You must be feeling lousy. Here, drink

and you will feel better."

Back at the banquet hall, Avery felt a lot sober. But it felt worse than being drunk.

She knew she can no longer be entangled with Elliot anymore. Nothing good will come out of this.

“Zoe was such a snob!” Tammy walked to Avery and comforted her, “Don’t bother with her words. She should look into a mirror herself.”

Avery carried her purse and prepared to leave as she said, “I’m only mad at myself.”

“You didn’t do anything wrong,” Tammy said.

“I’m being ridiculous,” Avery muttered to herself, “I still think we could be together one day... Tammy, please give me a good scolding if I still see him in the future!”

Tammy nodded, as she wanted the best for her friend. “I’ll get you home!” Tammy held her up and said, “Don’t worry about the rest of them, Jun will make the necessary arrangements.”

They went down on the elevator. Avery spotted Elliot’s car. “Oh dear, look at you!

You can’t even let go of the sight of his car,” Tammy turned over and mocked Avery, "I heard that Zoe got a room in the hotel. Elliot was too drunk tonight, nothing will happen between them tonight," she added.

"Was the added imagination necessary?" Avery asked.

"Tighten your seatbelts now!" Tammy teased her and then continued, "Get some sleep tonight. Avery, you deserve better."

Avery felt touched. Her phone rang as she was about to say something. It was

Mrs. Cooper calling. Avery felt weirded but she answered it anyway, and before

Mrs. Cooper could say anything, she heard a loud cry.

It was Shea crying on the other end of the phone. Tammy was about to start the car engine when she heard the crying sound from the phone.

"Avery, I can't get through Master Elliot. I had no choice but to call you... Shea kept crying for Master Elliot as she missed him all day. She wouldn't calm down.

Is Master Elliot there at your party? Can you pass on the message to him?" Mrs.

Cooper sounded anxious.

Just as Avery swears off seeing Elliot forever.

“Tell her you can’t,” Tammy reminded Avery.

She couldn’t form the words out of her mouth even when she wanted to.
The

crying sound was painful to the ears

“I’ll go get him,” Avery hung up as soon as she reassured Mrs. Cooper.

Tammy was about to lecture Avery. “I’ll go back by myself later, go home and get some rest, Tam,” Avery said as she’s fully sobered up now, though her eyes were red and voice hoarse, “I know what I’m doing.”

She got down and closed the door behind her.

Tammy thought of what Jun said as she watched Avery walk back into the hotel.

Either they get back together, or they will be enemies for life.

Avery checked with the receptionist for Zoe’s room number.

It was Room V906.

Avery took a deep breath and pressed the doorbell. There was no answer.

She tried again, no response.

As she was leaving, the door opened ajar. Elliot appeared with his shirt all buttoned wrong, his chest flushed red from the overconsumption of alcohol.

His

brows furrowed due to the migraine in his head. He grabbed Avery into his arms as his red eyes set sight on that familiar face.

Chapter 251

Avery's nose felt a sharp pain as Elliot pushed her face into his chest. She checked out the room with her red nose and teary eyes.

Where's Zoe? Why was Elliot left alone in the room? Wasn't she supposed to be taking care of her drunk boyfriend?

She pushed him away with her hands, but Elliot embraced her tighter than before.

"Don't leave me, Avery..." He lifted her up midair and begged with his voice, "I miss you so much... I've missed you every day..."

Elliot muttered as he carried her into bed. Avery's heart ached as she saw him like that. He was completely drunk! They said drunk words were sober thoughts.

Does it mean he had a place for her in his heart?

He pressed his body against her on the bed. He stared into her eyes lovingly. "Let go of me, Elliot Foster!" Avery breathed in and placed both her hands on his face, trying to wake him up, "Shea was crying at home because she needed you. Mrs.

Cooper called me and she wants to..."

He pressed his lips against hers before she could continue.

Did he just ignore the part where she mentioned Shea? Didn't he care about her?

Usually, he gets anxious upon hearing the name Shea, what's with him tonight?

She bit hard on his lips. The faint scent of blood lingered in between them.

"Elliot Foster, do you know what you're doing now?" Avery cried out with tears streaming down, "Shea is crying at home! Can you hear me? She's waiting for you to get home!"

Elliot pursed his bleeding lips as he gulped. His tears started falling down as

Avery thought he was going to speak

His tears fell on her cheeks. "I heard, I heard! Avery, I'm not going home tonight.

I'm staying with you..." His voice was determined though it was coarsened.

All of her defenses broke down as he said it. They kissed again.

Avery didn't push him away. She had no energy to defend him anymore. She kept replaying the scene of his crying face. It was all too painful to bear.

How did they end up here?

Zoe came back with the shirt she bought from a menswear store.

As she walked back into the room, she heard moaning sounds coming from the bedroom.

Her shopping bag dropped on the carpet. She couldn't believe her ears. She walked towards the

Her shopping bag dropped on the carpet. She couldn't believe her ears. She walked towards the door that was left slightly ajar. As she opened the door wide, Elliot was on the bed with... Avery. They were in the middle of it.

Avery again! Zoe's hand curled into a fist, her face darkened.

How she wished she could walk in and pulled on Avery's hair and chase her out of the room.

Alas, Elliot was on top of her. Wasn't Elliot dead drunk? She had to pull Elliot away first if she wanted to chase Avery off.

Zoe wouldn't dream of doing that.

She felt helpless, and she was only able to watch them from afar...

Zoe's tears fell off silently. She felt so wronged! She wants to turn away and leave, but she couldn't. Everything must fall according to plan.

Else, all her efforts in months will be gone down to drain. She clenched her teeth and close the bedroom door.

Chapter 252

back! He sat up and realized he was naked too. Memories slowly came back to him.

Avery came to him last night, and he couldn't control himself and they did it.

Where's Avery?

He got off the bed and got dressed. As he was about to awaken the woman beside him, Zoe woke up. She rubbed her eyes and smiled at him, "You got up?"

Why don't you come over and get some sleep?

Elliot was completely dumbstruck. He froze as his eyes were filled with shock and disappointment!

Zoe? Did he mistake Zoe for Avery?

“Elliot, what’s going on? Last night... you carried me to bed... I didn’t get in by myself...” Zoe explained as she held up the sheets with both hands covering herself.

Elliot’s palm curled into a fist. He quietly uttered, “I’m sorry.”

He really took Zoe for Avery by mistake! How could he make such a huge mistake?

“Why are you apologizing? I’m your girlfriend, and you’re my boyfriend, This is a common thing to happen between us right?” Zoe said as she tried to squeeze out some tears.

She felt a huge wave of relief in her mind.

Seemed as though Elliot really forgot who the woman was in bed with him last night. Take that, Avery Tate! You’ve lost him forever!

Chapter 253

“I’m sorry, Doctor Sanford,” Elliot said as he immediately calmed down his nerves.

He went back to his usual cold self and added, “It was my mistake last night, I need to calm down now.”

He left the room as he said it.

Zoe stood frozen. She thought her tears will soften him up, and that Elliot will take her into his arms and comfort her.

Why on earth was he still acting so cold? And just took off like that?

He wasn't like this last night with Avery.

Zoe wiped her tears off her face. Though she was heartbroken last night, at least there was a positive outcome for her. She looked for her phone and dialed Cole's number.

"I've succeeded," said Zoe. "Congratulations, Dr. Sandord! Let me know if I can be of any help in the future. I'll be here for you," said Cole with a laugh.

Zoe's heart turned sour as she heard that from Cole. If only Elliot was half as obedient as Cole to her. "Tell me, do I look like a man? Your uncle never batted an eye on me," said Zoe. "He had zero reaction even when I had no clothes on," she added.

Cole laughed even harder as he heard that from her, "My uncle is abnormal! Dr.

Sanford, He should seek medication as he's the ill one."

Zoe thought that was mockery, and she said sadly, "He was completely normal last night when he was with Avery!"

"Oh..." Cole toned down his voice, and said, "No man can refuse Avery, she's a real beauty."

"Did you just say I'm not as pretty?" Zoe asked,

"No, Dr. Sanford! You have a great body and a pretty face. Both of you are beautiful! I mean, maybe, men prefer Avery who's more seductive yet innocent—looking..."

Zoe hung up. She didn't need to hear more.

She knew Avery was younger and prettier than her. She doesn't even wish for Elliot's heart, as long as he was hers.

In another room of the hotel, Chad woke up looking for his glasses. He was blind without them. As he felt a warm body with his hands, he gasped! "Who's that?"

Chad asked nervously.

He had too much to drink last night. He couldn't recall how he got here last night.

He needed to look for his glasses and check what was going on.

Mike yawned and kicked him with his leg and said, "What the hell are you waking so early for? It's a weekend! "Where are my glasses? Where did you hide them?"

Chad could see a shadow moving in front of him.

"Why would I want your glasses for? Just say it if you want my help! Say please! If you just say please..." Chad kicked Mike down the bed before he could finish his sentence.

"You shameless prick! Why are you on my bed?" said Chad fuming with anger.

"Darn it! I was going to ask how did you end up on my bed! I can't remember a thing since last night as I got too drunk," Mike got hold of Chad's collar and they fought on the bed.

Avery was woken by a phone call. She spent the night on the bench at the bus stop. She took out her phone as she heard the ringing tone and put the phone close to her ears. Her fingers touched her ears, and her skin felt hot.

Avery had a fever.

“Avery, they beat me up again!” Mike cried from the phone, “I slept with Chad again last night as I got too drunk! How could they blame me if I blacked out?”

Avery held up her head and breathed in deeply, “If you think you’re innocent, just call for the cops this time.”

Chapter 254

Mike coughed and said, “There’s no need to get the cops involved!

Avery, where are you right now? You sounded weak and exhausted.”

Avery stood up with the support of the pillar next to her and lied, “I’m at home.”

“Oh, were you still sleeping? Get back to bed! I’m fine, just feeling wronged...

Chad blames me for everything, he’s so unreasonable!” Mike felt better after a rant session with Avery.

Avery got a cab and headed home.

She popped a fever pill and fell asleep in her bed. Laura didn’t manage to ask what happened to

her.

At the old mansion, Elliot had been in the shower longer than an hour. He was still thinking about last night, and couldn't accept that it was Zoe. He could settle Zoe anytime, but how could he face Avery?

He was more certain than before that he was still very much in love with Avery.

He couldn't lie to himself that he was unable to forget about her.

Elliot got out of the bathroom and stumbled upon Mrs. Cooper and Shea. "Master, Shea waited for you all night," Mrs. Cooper said.

Yes! Elliot recalled Avery came over to his room and told him to go home to Shea!

He felt a sharp ache against his heart. Did she or did she not come last night?

He remembered clearly that she did. The thought of them intimate on the bed...

How did Zoe end up on his bed?

"I couldn't reach you last night, so I called Avery for help. She promised to look for you, but you didn't come home last night... She didn't manage to get you." Mrs.

Cooper said to Elliot.

Shea cried till 3 in the morning, and only stopped because she was exhausted. As was Mrs. Cooper.

Elliot was shocked. His eyes looked down and uttered, "She found me... I heard her informing me..."

Mrs Cooper said, "Oh? Then you must be too drunk to come home. I'll go get you some aspirin to sober up."

She left Elliot and Shea in the room. He looked at Shea, her eyes still swollen from all the crying last night. "Shea, why did you cry last night? Did you miss big brother?"

Shea looked down and shook her head, "I'm afraid of them... They hit me..."

Elliot embraced Shea in his arms and asked, "Did you have bad dreams last night? They are already dead. Now, Shea, I will protect you forever! No one is going to bully you from now onwards!

"But...you weren't here last night." Shea sobbed.

"I'm so sorry, Shea." Elliot felt a heartache against his chest.

He got dressed as Shea fell asleep. Elliot was experiencing dream-reality consutions. He needed to talk to Avery.

VENNER

At the Starry River Villa, a black rolls-roice was parked right at the entrance.

Laura shut down the entrance as soon as she saw his car.

“Grandma, why did you close up the door?” Layla asked confusedly.

Laura’s face was grim, “Elliot Foster is outside, you’re not allowed to open
the door! Understand?”

Layla nodded her head vigorously and went looking for her brother. Elliot looked at the closed entrance. He took out his phone and dialed Avery’s number.

Chapter 255

“Sorry, the number you have dialed cannot be reached, please try again later.”

Avery had switched off her phone.

Elliot scowled. Despite being physically close to her, he felt as though they were miles apart.

Both Layla and Hayden were in the mansion when she told him that Elliot
was here. Hayden immediately went to his room to retrieve his drone the moment he heard her.

“Hayden! What are you doing?” Layla’s eyes widened as she watched him in confusion.

“I’m chasing him away!”

“Oh! Hayden, do you need my help?” Layla desperately wanted to help.

Hayden brought over a soft pipe and passed it to her.

Elliot stood majestically outside the door of the mansion. He was unwavering in his determination to see Avery today.

Twenty minutes later, a drone slowly flew down from the second floor balcony.

seco

When the bodyguard saw the drone, he frowned, “What in the world?!”

The bodyguard would not have picked up on it if it had been a normal drone, but this one was flying straight at them, and it had a pipe attached to it.

Elliot looked up and spotted the drone as well.

The drone was flashy with its colorful and stylish design.

Just as Elliot was trying to figure out who was controlling the drone, they heard a 'beep', and a stream of water trickled down from above.

The drone hovered over Elliot's head. The pipe was attached to the indoor tap, and it was there to drench Elliot with water.

"Crap!" The bodyguard immediately started dragging Elliot toward the car. "Avery is such a spiteful woman to have used such a trick!"

Elliot refused to get into the car and shook off the bodyguard's hand. "It's not her doing. She is not this childish."

Though he could not see who was controlling the drone, he could guess that this was probably Hayden's doing. If Hayden could master the art of hacking, controlling a drone would have been easy for him.

The drone continued to follow Elliot. It moved when he did and stopped when he stopped. Water from the pipe continuously rained down on him. Soon, his hair and clothes were completely drenched.

Furious, the bodyguard said, "I'm going in!" "Stop!" Elliot commanded.

If his bodyguard had barged in, it would have served to only deepen Laura's resentment, and he did not want to be in conflict with Avery and her family.

"Damn it! This has to be that brat, Hayden! I'm going to beat the crap out of him the next time I see him!" cursed the bodyguard as he searched the car for an umbrella. Unfortunately, they had not brought one.

When Laura saw what was happening outside from the first-floor window, she immediately went upstairs.

"Hayden! Get that drone back here right now!"

Hayden frowned and refused to take his hand off the controller.

Elliot had not left, and he wanted to chase him away.

Layla held the pipe and explained sweetly, "Grandma, we are making the bad guy Elliot go away!"

Laura went and turned off the tap, before saying to Hayden with a stern expression, "Hayden, if you don't bring that drone back, I'm going to tell your mom right now." Though Laura did not wish to see Elliot, she could not allow the two children to act so insolently.

Hayden immediately guided the drone back while Laura glanced through the balcony window.

Elliot was soaking wet, but he remained standing as his bodyguard helped wipe off the water with tissue paper.

Laura scowled. She struggled to decide whether she should go outside and apologize for what the children had done.

Chapter 256

She simply could not find a way to change her views on Elliot.

“Mr. Foster, let’s go back!” the bodyguard said. “Your clothes are wet. If we don’t go home and get you changed, you will catch a cold.”

It was early autumn, and even with the sun above their heads, the temperature had dropped significantly

“I’m not cold,” Elliot said in a steady and calm voice.

Seeing how stubborn he was, the bodyguard realized that Elliot was not going to change his mind and resorted to waiting alongside him.

Shortly after, a red Porsche Cayenne slowly drove toward. It stopped beside Elliot. The car window rolled down, and Mike poked his head out.

“Hey, why are you here?” Mike was shocked to see Elliot drenched from head to toe. “Did it rain?”

The bodyguard glared at him impatiently, “It’s that brat Hayden’s doing!”

“Oh... As expected of Big H! He always has the guts to do what I wouldn’t dare to!”

The bodyguard could only stare daggers at him. Mike cleared his throat and got out of the car. “You two look so silly standing here! Allow me to invite you in!”

With that, he strode toward the mansion’s entrance.

After a few moments of hesitation, Elliot followed.

Mike keyed in the password and unlocked the gate.

When Laura saw Mike leading Elliot into the house, her expression darkened, but she did not say a word.

“Laura, I’ll just take him to get a change of clothes. I won’t stop you if you want to chase him out after that,” said Mike to Laura.

Laura nodded, and so, Mike brought Elliot up to the second floor.

Hayden and Layla heard the sound of footsteps and immediately ran to stand outside the door of their mother's room.

"We are going to protect Mom! We won't let that jerk near her!" they thought.

When Elliot reached the first floor, he instantly spotted the two children, who were standing before a door. The look of determination on their faces betrayed their mother's whereabouts.

Elliot realized that was Avery's room, but he did not go over.

"Elliot, your assistant is way out of line!" said Mike as he led Elliot to his room.

"And so is your chief financial officer! What the h*ll! The two of them ganged up on me! The wound on my face has barely healed and now, I'm bleeding again!"

The siblings sighed a breath of relief when they saw Elliot entering Mike's room.

They opened the door to the master bedroom and snuck in.

Ever since Avery took the medicine, she had been sweating profusely; but the more she sweated, the colder she felt. Even with the blanket, she felt as though she was standing in snow.

Layla and Hayden stepped toward the bed, and they were both terrified when they noticed Avery shivering like a leaf caught in a gale.

Hayden placed his hand on her face and realized her skin was burning hot.

“Layla, stay here with Mom! I’ll go get Grandma!” Hayden said, before rushing out of the room.

He ran downstairs and brought Laura with him. When Laura saw the state Avery was in, her face paled in fear.

“Mike!” Laura came out of the room, calling for Mike. “Avery is running a fever!

We need to send her to the hospital!”

Mike darted for the door at the sound of Laura’s voice, but Elliot beat him to it. By the time they were in front of Avery’s room, Elliot had shoved Mike aside and entered the room.

Avery's mind was foggy, so she had no idea what was happening when Elliot picked her up.

Her head hurt and her body felt heavy. For a moment, she wondered why she was still feeling horrible after having taken her medicine.

"What's going on? She was just fine when I called her this morning." Mike followed Elliot downstairs. "Laura, stay home and watch the kids, I will drive Avery to the hospital!"

"Drive safe!" Laura said as she sent them off.

Elliot carried Avery into his black Rolls–Royce, and his bodyguard instantly drove off.

Mike was left standing alone outside, thinking, "What's going on? Did Elliot just kidnap Avery?"

Chapter 257

"Mike, hurry up and catch up to them!" shrieked Laura.

"Ohh!" Mike snapped out of his daze and drove after them.

Laura sighed in relief.

“Grandma, is Mom going to be okay? I’m so worried about her!” Layla asked as her eyes grew red with tears. She grabbed onto Laura’s blouse

Laura lifted her up. “Your mom is just down with a fever. It’s nothing to worry about. Once she is in the hospital, the doctor will help her, and as soon as her fever comes down, she will be okay.”

“Oh... but why did Elliot come here?” Layla could not help but have a bad feeling about it.

Laura frowned. “I’m not sure either, but I don’t think he will do anything while your mom is sick.” Elliot had wrapped Avery in her blanket before he carried her down.

Despite Laura’s prejudice toward him, she could not say that he had done anything wrong.

One could always tell from the smallest details as to whether a man truly cared for a woman. No matter how many women Elliot had out there, he still had feelings for Avery, and because of that, Avery should be safe with him.

In the hospital, Elliot carried Avery into the emergency room, and by the time Mike caught up to them, Avery was already on an IV drip.

“Elliot Foster! You run too damn fast!” Mike panted. “Give Avery back!”

The emergency room had run out of beds, and Elliot held Avery in his arms. He gave Mike a cold glare and said, “Get out of the way!”

“I’m in your way? If it wasn’t for you shoving me aside, I would have brought Avery here myself!” Mike probed his hands on both sides of his waist and retorted. Comment by Sharayu Tang: Hi, could you please tell me what this sentence means? Thank you. Comment by Lam Venise: I’m sorry, it’s supposed to be ‘propped’, as in the person rest their hands on their hips

The patients around them were starting to pay attention to them.

“Are you trying to be the face of tomorrow’s headlines?” Elliot said sharply.

“Pipe

down!”

Mike looked around him, before reluctantly quieting down and sitting down next to

Elliot.

“Why are the people around you so violent?” Mike touched the wound at the corner of his mouth. “I had too much to drink last night and someone put me in the same room as Chad. It's not like it's my fault."

Elliot cast him a sidelong glance. Mike was fair-skinned, so the bruise looked obvious.

"Why didn't you just hit them?" Elliot retorted.

"There were two of them, how could I?" "Don't you know how to call the police?"

Elliot said.

"... Why is he saying the same thing as Avery did?" Mike thought to himself.

"It's not that they punched me that hard... I am just pissed!" Mike continued complaining," Chad, that b*st*rd, he better hope he doesn't run into me when he is alone!"

"Are you interested in Chad?" Elliot frowned. "Keep your dirty mind away from

Chad!"

"What? How am I dirty-minded? Speak for yourself! You are the one cheating on three women at the same time! I am far from dirty when compared to you!"

Mike's voice was loud, and people began to stare at them again. Feeling as though his pride had been dragged across the floor, Elliot gave his bodyguard a look, and the bodyguard immediately dragged Mike outside.

The world finally quieted down. Shortly after, a few medics hurried over and led Elliot to a private room. He carried Avery into the room and set her down on the bed, before stretching out a hand to test her temperature.

Her fever was beginning to come down.

He frowned as he saw her pitiful condition. After a while, he stepped toward the balcony and made a call.

Zoe went straight into the study room once she had returned home from the hotel.

Not only did she need to find the doctor who had treated Shea, but she also had to work on finding a cure for Shea.

Suddenly, she heard knocking on the door.

“Come in,” she said.

At home, a bodyguard and nanny tended to her needs, and apart from them, there was no one else to bother her. The bodyguard stepped into the room and walked directly toward Zoe.

Chapter 258

Dr. Sanford, the boss asked me to pass this to you.” The bodyguard handed a check to Zoe.

Zoe accepted the cheque and glanced at the number written on it, before snorting.

“How generous of him! We slept together for one night and he is giving me five million.” She set the cheque on the table with a bitter smile. “Apart from this cheque, did he tell you anything else?”

The bodyguard shook his head.

Zoe’s heart ached as she thought to herself, “Who exactly does Elliot think I am?!

A prostitute? He just pays me off after sleeping with me! I suppose the only difference is that I’ m getting paid way more than a prostitute would!”

Zoe gritted her teeth and threw a medical book on the ground. “Does he know what it means to respect someone?”

“Dr. Sanford, he already gives you enough respect. Otherwise, you wouldn’t even get a penny out of this,” the bodyguard said expressionlessly. “That’s just because I am still useful to him!” she shouted, red-eyed.

“If it wasn’t for that, he would have chased you out long ago,” said the bodyguard.

He was simply informing her of the truth of the matter. “Miss Tate never asked for money from the boss, and she is exceptionally obedient.”

“So you are saying that I’m asking for too much?!”

“You might as well spend more time fawning over Madam Rosalie,” said the bodyguard before leaving the room.

Zoe felt like she just had an epiphany. She realized that she had made Elliot dislike her the moment she asked him to be her boyfriend.

The bodyguard was right, she should not push him too far, and she should approach the Back in the hospital, Avery felt much better once her fever came down. She woke up from her slumber and looked around the strange environment that was her ward before turning her attention warily to her bedside.

Elliot sat there wordlessly as he watched her.

“Why is he here? Why am I in a hospital?” she thought.

“I—” She opened her mouth to speak but her voice was hoarse, and her throat felt

as if someone had ripped it apart.

Elliot poured some warm water into a glass before he helped her up and pressed the glass to her lips.

As she drank the water, memories of last night flooded her mind.

“Do you want more?” he asked.

Avery shook her head and pulled her blanket higher. “Why are you here? Who sent me to the hospital?”

They were the only two people in the room. Elliot might have been the person who had taken her to the hospital, but she could not remember what had happened.

“Mike is outside.” Elliot’s heart twitched in pain at the wariness on her face.

“Avery, I came looking for you to ask you something.”

“Oh? What is it?” She observed him calmly with nothing but clarity and coldness in her eyes.

“Did you come looking for me last night?” He stared intently at her face, not allowing the most minute changes in her expression to escape his notice. “I remember you coming to me

“No.” She interrupted him decisively. “I had too much to drink last night and haven’t been feeling well since. How could I possibly go looking for you?”

“Really?” he swallowed as he muttered sorrowfully. “But I remember that you came to me saying that Shea was crying,”

“If you remember it so clearly, why bother asking me? This just proves that you have a bad memory,” said Avery, calmly denying his delusion.

Elliot rose from the chair. All the confusion and sorrow drained from his face.

“If that’s the case, I’m sorry for the trouble!” he said in a voice even colder than hers.

Avery’s heart ached, but she did not dare to let it show on her face.

“Did something important happen last night for you to come all the way here to ask this question?” She looked at him curiously while trying to keep up her carefree charade.

She had thought that he would leave in frustration, but he did not; instead, he looked directly at her and said, “I slept with Zoe. Is that something important?”

Chapter 259

Avery's eyes darted away for a brief moment, but then, she started chuckling, "Is this the first time you two slept together? It has been a long time since you went public with your relationship. How innocent."

Elliot's expression darkened. "Speaking as if you have plenty of experience. Have you slept with any other men besides me?"

She beamed at him, "Of course!"

Hayden was a "man" too, after all.

The composure on Elliot's face faded.

"Avery Tate! I will be damned if I come looking for you again!" he said through gritted teeth before storming out of the room.

Avery watched as he disappeared, and the smile on her smile collapsed.

It was good that he would not come looking for her again. That way, they could both live their separate lives, but why did she not feel happy about it at all?

She held onto the blanket and took a deep breath. It still smelt like him.

The door swung open, and Mike strode in.

“Avery, did Elliot do anything to you? Damn that guy! I was supposed to send you to the hospital, but he beat me to it!” Mike walked toward the bed and sat down before reaching over to touch her forehead. Her skin was cool to the touch, which meant that the fever had broken.

“He was the one who sent me here?” Stunned, Avery’s lashes shivered.

“Yeah! He went looking for you at your house, and Hayden soaked him in water.

He was drenched from head to toe, so I took him inside to change. That was when we discovered that you had a fever,” explained Mike. “What did he say to you just now? He looked so angry when he left!”

Avery could not be bothered and simply said, “He didn’t say much. Why is my blanket here as well?”

“Elliot carried it over! He’s strong! I couldn’t even catch up to him while he was carrying you.”

Avery did not want to hear any more of Elliot and glanced at the IV bag on the side. “There’s still one bag left. I will sleep for a bit.”

“Sleep!” Mike helped tuck her in.

Three days later, the sales department of Tate Industries received an order for drones.

“Sterling Group wants to buy our drones!” The manager of the sales department checked the order over and over again and reported it immediately after making sure that there was no mistake.

Mike took the information about the order and went directly to Avery.

“Sterling Group’s purchasing department has ordered five thousand Storm series drones from us,” Mike exclaimed. “What do they plan to do with so many drones?”

Avery took the order form from his hand and had a look.

“Our Storm series drone’s selling price is set at nineteen thousand nine hundred and ninety nine per unit. Five thousand units will cost them ninety–nine million nine hundred and ninety –five thousand dollars!” Mike took a deep breath and said, “Why don’t we upcharge them? If we charge them twenty thousand dollars per unit, we will earn more than one billion dollars from this order alone.”

Avery thought that she heard him wrong. She had originally thought that they ought to give discounts to clients with such big purchases.

“You can’t be thinking about giving him a discount, can you? Avery, do you think that Elliot Foster would care about that money? Aren’t you underestimating his wealth?” Mike took the order form back and said, “It’s a big order; I need to check with Chad.”

Avery watched as Mike left, and her brain started to run at high speeds. Elliot must know that his company was about to make a purchase worth a billion dollars. Furthermore, it was a bulk order.

She glanced at the calendar on her desk. The Autumn Festival was approaching.

Could Elliot be planning to give a drone to each of his employees as a gift? Mike headed back to the office and called Chad using the intercom.

Chapter 260

Chad picked up the phone. “Hello.”

Chad glanced at the caller identification and responded in a cold tone, "You need anything?"

"Careful with your tone, or we might not be selling you the drones," Mike threatened.

Chad scowled and retorted, "Get over yourselves! Who wants your drones?"

Mike paused for a moment. "Your boss, of course! We received an order from your purchasing department, or is it a scam?"

Chad took a deep breath. "So you are saying that my boss instructed the purchasing department to put in an order for drones?"

"Yeah! Didn't you know? Haha, and here I thought your boss trusted and confided in you. Looks like you aren't worth that much," Mike said sarcastically, before hanging up.

Provoked, Chad immediately went to verify the matter with Elliot.

Elliot looked up from the computer screen and said, "We always distribute gifts to our employees every Autumn Festival, and for this year, it is going to be drones.

Do you have a problem with it?"

Chad was defeated, and he shook his head frantically. “No! I’m just a bit surprised.”

“It was decided last night,” Elliot continued casually, “Though I’m no longer in contact with Avery, the products her company produces aren’t bad.” He would never forget how he had been chased by the drone, and how he had gotten drenched when he had gone to her house a few days ago.

Technology advanced with the passing of time, so he thought of sharing the products with his employees as well. “Oh... Mike called me just now and I wasn’t all that polite... I’m not sure if that’s going to affect the order,” Chad said in frustration. “I should go call him back.”

Half an hour later, Chad and the manager of the purchasing department headed directly to Tate Industries for further discussion.

Avery and Mike welcomed them into the meeting room.

“You want the drones for the Autumn Festival? Five thousand is too large an order, and I’m afraid that we will not be able to fulfill it in such a short period of time,” Mike said. “Well, it’s not that nothing can be done if you absolutely have to have five thousand by

then_”

Chad could not stand Mike’s arrogance.

“Who exactly is the client here?! We are! So why are we taking this from him? It’s not like Tate Industries is the only place selling drones in this country!” he thought.

“How many can you produce by then?” Chad asked seriously. “We will take what you can produce, and purchase the rest from a different company.”

Mike raised an eyebrow. “Haha, is that what your boss says?”

The manager of the purchasing department leaned toward Chad and whispered,

“Mr. Rayner, please adjust your attitude. Our boss only wants the drone from Tate Industries.” Chad picked up the glass and took a sip of water.

“If you insist on getting five thousand units,” Mike continued, “then we shall move some stock from some of our overseas branches, but the price will no longer remain at nineteen thousand nine hundred and ninety–nine dollars per unit. We will need to raise the price.”

Chad could feel the blood rushing to his head at Mike’s words.

“Shut up for a moment! I need to call my boss!” Chad turned on his phone and called Elliot.

Avery picked up the glass and took a sip of water.

Mike was right. The factories under them did not have the scale to manufacture five thousand drones at such short notice. If they were to move stock from overseas, they would need to take into consideration the cost of taxes and transportation. More importantly, the drones would fetch a higher price overseas than they would locally.

Chad was having a hard time accepting those terms as he believed that customers were supposed to be gods.

Chad suppressed his anger and explained the situation to Elliot.

“Chad,” Elliot said coldly, “do you think I don’t have the money to buy her drones?”

ANAA

“Mr. Foster, that’s not what I mean... I just think that they are bullying us!”
Chad

said in a low voice.

Avery tapped her fingers on the table and signaled Chad to pass her the phone.

Chad readjusted his spectacles and said, "Mr. Foster, Miss Tate would like to speaK to you."

Chapter 261

Over on the other end of the line, Elliot fell into silence.

Chad handed the phone over to Avery awkwardly, and she set it on the table after putting it on speaker.

"Hello, Mr. Foster."

Mike tried to suppress his laughter at how formal Avery sounded, while Chad did not say a word.

On the other end, Elliot greeted her with a more formal tone, "Hello, Miss. Tate."

Avery was stunned.

Mike picked up his glass to take a sip of water; Chad did the same but realized his glass was already empty.

"I feel the need to explain to you that we are not trying to give you a hard time,"

Avery readjusted her emotions and explained the situation in a steady tone.
“We have already established our factories not too long ago, but we don't have sufficient equipment and manpower. According to the current situation, it is true that we won't be able to fulfill your order. However, we can assure you that we can have a number of drones shipped over from abroad, but our products are sold at a much higher price in the international market.”

Chad calmed down at Avery's explanation. Though she said the same thing as

Mike, Chad simply found it more irritating to listen to Mike.

“But because this is our first bulk order in this country, I can sell you the units that we move from overseas at the same selling price as the ones here,” Avery continued.

Mike was shocked. “Why are we giving Elliot a discount?”

Chad, on the other hand, felt relieved.

“This is how you show good faith!” he thought.

Meanwhile, Elliot's emotionless voice came through the phone once again.
“I

don't like discounted products.”

Everyone in the meeting room was stunned, knowing perfectly well that Elliot meant to say that he had the money and that giving him a discount was just as bad as looking down at him.

Mike immediately started clapping. "By the way, let me brief you on the payment process. Fifty percent of the total payment will be charged ahead as downpayment; the remaining balance is to be paid three days after the products have been handed over to you."

Chad could not accept it. "What you are asking as downpayment is too high an amount!"

"Yeah," the manager of the purchasing department agreed. "Thirty percent would have been considered extremely high, and you are asking for fifty!"

"Send over the bill. We will pay it in full right away," said Elliot.

Both Chad and the manager of the purchasing department were rendered speechless.

"If this is how Mr. Foster feels, there wasn't even the need to send us over! It's obvious that he 's just trying to send Avery money... Oh!" The two thought to themselves, “That’s it! Mr. Foster wants to send Avery money, worrying that her company might go bankrupt without any orders. How thoughtful!”

After the contract was signed, Avery proposed to treat them to dinner.

Chad was not in the mood and wanted to leave, but the manager of the purchasing department took Avery up on her offer.

“Why the long face, Mr. Rayner? You are definitely not going to regret buying our drones,” Mike comforted him. “You will know once you get them. The battery lifespan of our products ranks at the very top of the global market, and our AI system is also what sets our products apart from other brands—”

Chad raised his hand and interrupted Mike’s bragging. “Let’s just go eat!”

Meanwhile, in the Sterling Group, Ben had just heard that Elliot was about to spend a billion on Tate Industries’ products.

“Elliot, do you really want those drones, or are you just looking for an excuse to send Avery money?” Ben could not read Elliot. “Didn’t you two break all ties?”

When we were drinking the day before, you even said that you were never going to look for her ever again.”

“Why didn’t you question me when I distributed electronics like laptops and smartphones the years before?” Elliot asked.

Ben nodded. “I guess Avery’s drones really are that good then.”

“Do you think that the sales report of Alpha Technologies was forged or something?” Suddenly, the phone on the table started ringing. Elliot took one look at the caller identification and instantly picked up the phone. Taking the hint, Ben left with his coffee mug in hand.

Chapter 262

“Mr. Foster, we happened upon a piece of information suggesting that Miss Zoe is also looking for a doctor,” said the private investigator that Elliot had found overseas. Elliot had hired him to look for a doctor who could cure

Shea. “Miss Sanford is looking for a middle aged man around 1.7 meters tall.”

Elliot scowled. “Why is she looking for this doctor?”

“She’s probably trying to get him to cure Shea,” said the private investigator.

Hope emerged in Elliot's eyes as he said, "We are going to find that doctor before she does!"

"Okay. I've found something else. Before his passing, Professor Hough seemed to have taken a secret student. The information on this student is completely confidential, and it appears that he had worked in Professor Hough's lab."

"Can this student be the doctor Zoe is looking for?"

"Yes, that's what I am thinking as well."

At five in the evening, Elliot went to Angela Special Needs Academy to pick Shea up from school. He happened to run into Avery, who was on her way to pick Hayden up, in the parking lot. The four of them stopped and stared at one another in the parking lot.

Elliot immediately looked away and helped Shea into the car. Avery made her way to the driver's seat once she saw Hayden settling himself in the child seat.

The two cars started, turned, and arrived at the school gate at the same time.

Luckily, there was enough space at the entrance, so the two cars exited at the same time. One turned left, and the other turned right.

Just as the car was on the main street, Hayden said in a muffled voice, "Mom, I want to go to a different school."

Shea kept peeping in at him from outside the classroom door, and he had had enough. He had joined the academy to investigate the relationship between Elliot and Shea. Now that he had solved that mystery, he no longer wanted to go to school there.

"Which school do you want to go to? Are you willing to learn and live alongside other kids now?" Avery asked.

Hayden remained quiet.

Angela Special Needs Academy was not a bad place, but that could be because he was the only student in his class. He wanted to leave because he did not want to see Shea anymore.

"Let's wait until you finish this year, Hayden, okay?" Avery tried negotiating with him. "If you hate kindergarten, we can try elementary school next year. How does that sound?"

Hayden thought about it and nodded.

Meanwhile, in the other car, Shea grabbed onto the seat belt. Her head was bowed. "Big Brother, can we invite Elliot to my birthday party?"

"He won't come." Elliot's tone was gentle, but his words hurt.

"Why don't they like me? Is it because I'm stupid?" Tears started to well up in Shea's eyes.

"No," Elliot swallowed, before continuing in a hoarse voice, "they don't like you because they hate me."

"Why don't they like you? You are the best."

"Shea, I am good to you, but that doesn't mean that I am good to them," said

Elliot bitterly. "I will spend your birthday with you."

Half an hour later, the car pulled into the front yard of Elliot's mansion.

After dinner, Mrs. Cooper took Shea to the backyard to pick some fresh fruits.

Shea enjoyed nature. They had planted plenty of flowers and fruit trees in the backyard, and every day after dinner, Mrs. Cooper would take her there to play.

Elliot went into his study.

His father's memorial was coming up in a week's time, and he had been having nightmares the past few nights.

Every year this time rolled around, he would be plagued with nightmares. It had been like this for the past twenty years. He shut the door to the study and strode toward the bookshelf. There was a crimson box on the third row of the shelf. It housed his deepest secret. The reason he had kept it on his bookshelf was because the safest place tended to be the one in plain sight.

Chapter 263

The box had been in the same spot for the past twenty years, and there had been no problems before. Now, it was gone!

When he noticed that the box was gone, he immediately took all the books down from the third rack. As the shelf was attached to the wall, there was no possibility that the box could have fallen down a crack.

After a while, he moved all the books to the ground and searched through the books once again. The shelf was empty, yet he still could not find the box.

“Who is it?!” he thought. His vision grew red with rage. “Who came into my study and took what’s mine?!”

He vaguely remembered seeing the box about a month ago.

He immediately made a call to the surveillance room. “Pull all the footage from the recent month! Someone has been in my study!”

The bodyguard was terrified. “Yes! I will have the footage pulled immediately!”

“Gather all available personnel to comb through the footage!” Elliot barked as his heart thumped nervously.

“Yes!”

Mrs. Cooper’s heart sank when she took Shea back to the living room and saw the dark expression on Elliot’s face.

“Sir, what happened?”

“Someone took something from my study,” he said.

Mrs. Cooper gasped.

“Compile a list of people who have been here in the past month and give it to me as soon as possible!” he said. The command given, he took Shea’s hand in his and lead her to her room.

Shea was slightly startled.

Once they were back in her room, Elliot held her hands and said, "Shea, have you been inside my study room?"

She shook her head.

"It's okay, I'm just asking." Shea remained quiet for a while, before muttering,

"What did you lose, Big Brother? I can help you look for it."

A bitter smile appeared on Elliot's face. "I will find it, so don't you worry."

"I didn't take it..." Shea lowered her gaze sadly.

"I know you didn't." He led her to the bed and sat her down.

Due to the lack of mental development, Shea was sensitive and fragile, and she could not adjust herself like ordinary people could. He had to find a way to cure

her.

He decided to change the topic to a more casual one. "Tell me, Shea, what birthday gift do you want? I will buy it for you."

The tension left Shea's expression. She considered for a while, before saying, "I want... Hayden to play with me."

Elliot scowled, troubled by her request. However, he did not want to disappoint his sister. After all, it was not an impossible request.

Mrs. Cooper came to the room once she had compiled the list of names.

“Sir, I have placed the list in your study room,” she said. “I will tend to Shea now.”

Elliot stepped out of Shea’s room and strode to the study.

He was familiar with all the names on the list. However, the names: Zoe, Avery, Mike, Hayden, and Layla caught his attention. Before they had come, the box had always been on his shelf.

Elliot first crossed Avery’s name off the list, knowing that Avery would not possibly take what belonged to him. He did not know why he trusted her so much, but it felt as natural as trusting himself.

After that, he moved his pen to Mike’s name.

Two of his bodyguards had dragged Mike into the living room, and he had not been upstairs, so how could he possibly gain access to the study room and the box?

Chapter 264

Along with Mike's name, he crossed Hayden's name off as well.

Hayden had been to his house twice, but he had remained in the living room during both visits.

Layla, on the other hand, did go upstairs, where she had later been discovered by the others. However, the girl did not seem all that bright, or she would not have broken down crying at the time.

He did not cross Layla's name off the list, but he turned his attention to Zoe.

Could it be Zoe?

There were people around every time Zoe visited, and she would not have had the opportunity to take something from the study.

Left with no other options, all he could do was wait for the surveillance footage.

Elliot had spent the entire night in the surveillance room, combing through the footage. He did not rest for a moment.

The day he had taken Avery home, the surveillance cameras had been hacked, and there was a three-hour gap. At that time, he had only needed to know if the cameras were still working, but now, he needed to know what had gone wrong.

He returned to his bedroom and try as he might, but he could not fall asleep.

When he had discovered that the box was gone, he felt as though his heart had been crushed and ripped apart. If only he could face his dark past, he would have never had to divorce Avery.

At noon, the bodyguards had finally finished watching all the footage from the previous month.

“Mr. Foster, we checked the surveillance outside your study, but no one has been inside apart from you and Mrs. Cooper,” the bodyguard reported. “Every time Mrs.

Cooper came out, all she had were her cleaning tools and nothing else.”

Elliot shut his eyes in despair. He had never suspected Mrs. Cooper to begin with.

After all, she had served him for many years and had always remained dutiful and loyal. If Mrs. Cooper wished to betray him, she could have done so long ago.

“The surveillance cameras stopped working the day Miss Tate brought her two children over. Could it be possible that someone went into the study room during that time?” suggested the bodyguard.

Elliot’s eyes darkened. Once the bodyguard excused himself, he picked up the phone and called Avery.

When Avery saw him call, she answered, thinking that he was calling to discuss work,

“Avery, I lost something,” his voice was hoarse and hollow from the lack of sleep.

For a moment, she was taken off guard, “What did you lose?”

“It was still there a month ago. I spent the whole night going through last month’s surveillance footage but didn’t find anything. A while back when you came to my house, your son broke my surveillance cameras, and there there are three hours of missing footage.”

Avery realized what he meant and felt her heart sink. "Elliot Foster, I didn't take anything from you! I wouldn't!"

He had given her plenty of expensive gifts from back when they were together, but she had not taken any one of them away with her.

"I don't doubt you." His heart ached at her tone, and he asked, "Can you ask your kids to see if

"I haven't seen a red box at my house, and if they had taken something from you, they would have told me," she said confidently as she shut her laptop. "I will go home and have a look"

"Alright," he said in a gloomy tone.

Avery felt her heart soften slightly and asked, "Did you stay up the entire night?

Was it something important?"

"Very." He reached up to massage his temple and said in a tortured voice, "If you find that box at your house, please don't open it."

Hokav."

her throat. She wanted to comfort him but was not sure how. Perhaps the best comfort for Elliot at the moment would be to recover what he had lost.

She stepped out of her office and strode toward the elevator.

She had always known that he was hiding something, but she had not expected him to lose the box with said secret in it.

She wondered who had taken it, but she was certain it was not Hayden or Layla.

Though the children resented Elliot, they would not possibly steal. However,

Avery still decided that she would search the house thoroughly. What if the box was really in her house?

Chapter 265

Laura was at Starry Villa, and she was shocked to see Avery hurry in.

“Avery, have you had dinner?”

“Mom, have you seen a red box in our house?” Avery tossed her purse to the couch and walked toward the children’s room.

“A red box?” Laura followed her and mumbled, “I don’t think so. Why?”

“Elliot lost a box like that,” blurted Avery. “He checked the surveillance footage and didn't find anything out of the ordinary, but Hayden had hacked his surveillance cameras when he went to Elliot's a while back, and Elliot suspects that something had happened during that time."

Laura scowled. "He thinks Hayden took it?"

Avery looked at her and said, "Mom, I know that you don't think that Hayden would do such a thing, and neither do I; but how many things has Hayden done that have been out of line so far?"

Laura sighed heavily but did not argue. "A red box, right? Is there something important inside?" she asked as she began searching.

"He said it's important," responded Avery with a heavy heart.

"If it's that important, why not keep it somewhere secure?" Laura was confused.

"If Hayden can just walk right in and take something that important to him, it means that he didn't place it in a secure spot."

"There are bodyguards guarding his house day and night, and there are surveillance cameras everywhere," explained Avery.

Due to the tight security, no matter where Elliot had chosen to place his belongings, no ordinary person would dare take anything.

Laura did not say anything.

The two of them searched the children's room thoroughly but did not find the box, so Avery stepped out of the room and started looking around the mansion.

An hour later and they still had not found anything.

"Avery, if he suspects us, then ask him to come look for it himself."
Exhausted,

Laura sat down on the couch.

Avery took out her phone and went to the balcony to call Elliot.

"I didn't find that box you were talking about in my house," she said. "When the kids return from school, I will ask them about it."

"Okay."

"Elliot, what will happen if you don't find the box?" Avery could not help but feel concerned.

"Nothing," he said, not wanting her to overthink things.

"Oh... if nothing is going to happen, then go get some sleep and try looking for it again once you have rested." Avery felt slightly relieved and said, "Sometimes

things just slip past us when we get flustered. Maybe it will appear when you stop looking for it.”

“Yeah.”

Elliot had searched his entire mansion multiple times, and he had technically come to the conclusion that the box was not in the mansion.

He had no clue as to who had taken it. If Avery’s children had taken it, then it had to be in her house. If it was not there, it could only mean that her children did not take the box.

Who else could it be?

Why would someone take it and not use its contents against him? Even if the thief was not interested in money, were they not interested in harming Elliot?

If the contents of the box were to be published, Elliot would fall. However, nothing had been published.

If the thief did not intend on hurting Elliot, why did they steal the box to begin with?

Elliot simply could not figure it out.

He lay on the bed, trying to force himself to sleep, but he could not regain his former composure.

That evening when the two children had returned home from school, Avery had inspected their school bags. There was nothing out of the ordinary. The only thing in there were spare clothes and textbooks.

“Mom, what are you looking for?” Layla batted her doe like eyes, curiously.
“Layla,

Hayden, have you two taken a red box from Elliot’s house?” Avery bent down to look the two of them in the eyes. Layla instantly flushed as she panicked, and her heart throbbed nervously.

Chapter 266

“No,” Hayden responded calmly.

“Really?” Avery checked with her son repeatedly.

“No,” Hayden repeated without a trace of emotion on his face.

Avery could only call the quits. If they did not take it and she continued to ask them about it, the children might think that she did not trust them.

Hayden took Layla’s hand and led her back to their bedroom to store their school bags.

Once they were inside the room, Layla whispered, "Hayden, why are we lying?"

We shouldn't lie to Mom."

Layla had only managed to keep it a secret because Avery was not aware; but now that she was asking her about it, Layla did not dare lie.

"Elliot must be going nuts now that he realizes the box is gone," said Hayden coldly. "If we return it now, he will just blame us for taking it. We are not returning it. Let him worry."

"Oh... Okay!" agreed Layla. Between their dirtbag dad and her brother, she would definitely side with her brother.

He had originally kept the box under his bed, but they had moved it. They buried it under a tree in the yard two days ago. They had done it as Hayden had discovered the contents of the box, a piece of paper. Once he realized how important the box was, he knew that it could not be left carelessly under the bed, so, they moved it.

It was a good thing that they did, or the box would have been discovered.

"But what happens if Elliot worries so much that he dies?" Layla was still concerned. "He is still our dad!"

"Don't worry, bad people don't die that easily."

With that, Layla finally relaxed.

After dinner, Avery sent Elliot a message that read, (I asked the kids, and they said they didn't take the box.)

She had thought that he was resting, but he replied immediately and said, (Got

it.)

She sent a reply that asked, (You still haven't gone to sleep?).

When Elliot received the message, he did not reply, because he did not know how to. It had been thirty-six hours since he had last closed his eyes, and he could feel his mental defenses weakening

In the midst of despair, he thought to himself, "So what if someone goes public with the content of the box? I will lose money, and friends will leave me... as for a lover... I no longer have one. I have earned more than enough money for this lifetime, so I don't have anything to worry about even if I can't earn any more from now on. As for friends, I don't care if they go away. At least Shea won't leave me."

Prepared for the worst outcome, Elliot slowly began to relax and drifted off to sleep.

Avery kept waiting for his reply, but three days had gone by, and she had gotten nothing in return.

The next time she heard about him was when she was talking on the phone with

Tammy.

"Do you know that Elliot has been admitted to the hospital? Not sure what happened, but he refuses to eat! I've never imagined that someone as composed as he is would refuse to eat!" Tammy exclaimed.

Avery stood abruptly at the news.

It was no wonder she had been feeling uneasy these past three days. She had not thought the box to be that important to him.

"I shouldn't have believed him when he said that nothing was going to happen even if he doesn't find it. If that was true, he wouldn't have stayed up all night looking for it," she thought.

"How is he doing now?" Avery headed for the door anxiously but stopped at the last minute.

"He is getting an IV infusion in the hospital!" Tammy said. "Jun just came back from the hospital, saying that Zoe has been looking after him. Avery, do you want to go see him?"

Indeed, Avery wanted to visit, but with Zoe already there taking care of him, she decided against it. Even if she did go to the hospital, Zoe would not allow her into the room.

Chapter 267

"It's better you don't go. Shea is there as well, and with those two there guarding him, you are definitely going to feel provoked, " Tammy said. "Elliot's isn't all that mentally stable. I had thought that maybe his company had run into trouble, but Jun said nothing has happened. I was thinking that it has something to do with

you?"

Avery walked back to her office chair and sat down. "You've overestimated me,

Tammy. He didn't break down when I divorced him, so I don't think that I matter that much."

"Then why is he acting so oddly? It can't be because of Zoe, right?" Tammy muttered in confusion. "I heard that she has been visiting the old Foster mansion frequently lately. That woman is too good at scheming!"

The more she heard about Elliot and Zoe, the more composed Avery found herself becoming. Perhaps, she might be able to maintain her calm if they were to get married one day.

Elliot and her were two parallel lines running in the same direction but never crossing, and they would only move further and further apart in the future.

"Tammy, how are things between you and Jun?" Avery changed the subject.

"Same old, same old! He decides to keep trying until the end of the year, and if my parents aren't satisfied by then, he will go home and carry on the family business next year," Tammy sighed. "Not everyone has Elliot's mind for business.

Maybe both Jun and I are destined to take over our family businesses."

“You really are a spiritual high-born.”

“As if I can be in front of you,” Tammy chuckled and said, “Avery, I’m actually quite glad that you are not going to visit Elliot in the hospital.”

Avery pretended not to be concerned. “It’s not like he is terminally ill.”

“Will you go see him if he is?”

“If he is, then out of humanitarianism, I have to pay him a visit before he dies.”

Tammy laughed. “It’s going to be his birthday soon; will you attend the party if he invites you?

“No.”

“Oh, well, he doesn’t plan on celebrating anyway. He never does.”

“Then why are you asking me?”

“Just checking to see how determined you are!” Tammy acknowledged Avery’s resolve and

After hanging up, Avery hesitated for a while, before finally calling Mrs. Cooper.

Mrs. Cooper picked up almost instantly. “Avery?”

“Mrs. Cooper, it’s me.” She hesitated for a few seconds, before asking, “I heard that Elliot is in the hospital, what happened?”

Mrs. Cooper sighed. “It’s his stomach. Something happened, and he had not slept for two whole days. In the end, he was so exhausted that he slept for two days, and because of that, he hadn’t eaten for three days. His stomach acted out.”

“Oh, so it’s not that he refused to eat on purpose?”

“No. He wanted to eat when he woke up, but he vomited blood after eating.” Mrs.

Cooper thought back to the scene and felt terror flood her veins.

Avery was relieved. As long as Elliot had not refused to eat, it should be nothing serious.

“Don’t worry, he will get better in a few days,” said Avery to comfort her.

“Yeah. Have you visited him in the hospital?” Mrs. Cooper asked.

“No, I’m quite busy,” Avery explained.

Mrs. Cooper could tell that it was an excuse.

“Mrs. Cooper, don’t tell Elliot that I called you,” Avery said in a troubled voice. “We broke up, and we are supposed to lead our separate lives.”

“Alright, I won’t,” Mrs. Cooper said understandingly, before suddenly changing the subject, saying, "Avery, your son, Hayden, is he Master Elliot's son?"

Avery's heart sank at the question.

"Maybe I shouldn't have asked that?" Mrs. Cooper said apologetically. "I have met Hayden twice, and I feel like I'm looking at Master Elliot every time I see him.

They look similar, and they have similar personalities as well. Don't worry, I've only spoken to you about this, and I won't say anything in front of Master Elliot."

Avery did not remember how she ended the call. She was not sure if she should feel glad that Elliot had never suspected Hayden to be his. She did not want him to know about the children back then because he hated children to the point that he might hurt them. Now, there was another reason why she did not wish for him to know.

There were two women by his side, and no matter the circumstances and how they ended, it would not be appropriate for the children to reacquaint themselves with their father. If they were not going to reconnect with him, then there was no point for them to learn the truth.

During Autumn Festival, the five thousand drones that Sterling Group had ordered from Tate Industries hovered over the Sterling Group's building, changing into different formations and colors in the night sky under Mike's control.

Chapter 268

"Chad, aren't our drones great?" Mike asked proudly as he bit into an apple.

Chad glanced at the smug expression on his face and suddenly realized that Mike was not as bad as he thought he was. Chad had even started to think that he looked rather handsome.

"They are alright! Don't get too proud. Your drones are not perfect, and they could do with some improvements," Chad said pridefully.

"Even you guys in the Sterling Group can't claim to be the best, can you?" Mike retorted. "We have just started; it will get better from now on!"

"Good luck with that!"

"The moon tonight looks so round!" Mike sighed at the night sky.

Chad looked up and hummed in agreement.

“Let’s not fight from now on.” Mike turned abruptly to look at him. He looked serious, “What if we need to work together in the future?”

Chad readjusted his spectacles and said, “You really enjoy my boss’s money that you can’t get enough of it, huh.”

“Meh! We have met sillier clients overseas before.”

“The drones that my boss has purchased from you will bring far more than just the one billion you are getting. This is going to be tomorrow’s headlines, and everyone will know that Sterling Group purchased them in bulk. There will be many people trying to do the same.”

“I know, but I just think that it’s the least Elliot should do as an ex-husband, or does he expect

Avery to be grateful?”

Chad felt defeated and amused at the same time. “But that doesn’t mean you should take it for granted!”

“Elliot did this out of his own will.”

“... Why isn’t your boss here?”

“Neither is yours.”

“Um...”

Could it be that Avery and Elliot were both trying to avoid one another?

Time flew by and the season changed.

One day at nine in the morning, after dropping Shea off in her classroom at Angela Special Needs Academy, Elliot made his way to Hayden’s classroom.

When the teacher saw Elliot, she immediately left the classroom to give them some privacy.

Hayden glanced at Elliot and lowered his head onto the table in a bid to ignore

him.

“Hayden Tate, let’s make a deal!” Elliot stood by the table and said, “Today’s Shea’s birthday, and she wishes to spend it with you. If you agree to keep her company, I will fulfill one wish of yours.”

Hayden opened his eyes. Though he was reluctant to celebrate Shea’s birthday, Elliot had made him an attractive offer. Hayden thought of his mother and how Elliot might try to bother her.

After a brief moment of consideration, Hayden took out a piece of paper and a pen. He was going to get this down in writing as proof of their agreement.

Elliot was surprised that the boy was this careful, but he accepted the paper and pen regardless and wrote down the conditions, before signing his name at the bottom.

That evening, Avery came to pick Hayden up from school and was shocked to find Hayden in Shea's classroom.

She was shocked because Hayden hated Shea, and also because her classroom looked like it had been decorated in celebration of a birthday.

On the side table, there was a beautiful cake that almost looked like a piece of art.

"Is it Shea's birthday?" she wondered.

Avery pulled out her phone and checked the date.

She took a deep breath. If she was not mistaken, it was also Elliot's birthday.

Chapter 269

"They have their birthdays on the same day? A coincident?" thought Avery.

Avery took her son's hand and walked toward the door.

A towering figure appeared before her.

Elliot was dressed in a black trench coat that made him look cold and distant. She was not sure if it was her eyes playing tricks on her, or if he really did look thinner.

After two seconds of hesitation, Avery decided to wish him a happy birthday. Just as she was about to say something, she saw Shea throwing herself at Elliot, and with her arms around him, she said, "Big Brother, here's your cake."

Avery was standing right next to Elliot and heard every word Shea said.

"Big Brother?!" she thought, "Did Shea just call Elliot big brother?"

Avery scowled as she studied Shea.

Shea could sense Avery's glare, and she met Avery's eyes. Perhaps it was because of the stern expression on Avery's face, but Shea felt slightly nervous.

She wanted to invite Avery to share the cake, but she ended up choking on her words.

"You called him Big Brother?" Avery asked sharply. She had not intended to scare

Shea, but she could not help how sharp her words sounded.

Startled, Shea hid behind Elliot, and he grabbed onto her hand tightly.
“Don’t be afraid, Shea. Let’s go get some cake.”

The two walked past Avery and stepped into the classroom.

When Hayden saw the dazed state his mother was in, he tugged at her and said,

Avery looked away, readjusted herself, and left with her son.

When they were inside the car, Hayden noticed the frown on Avery’s face and said, “Shea calls me big brother as well.”

Avery turned to look at Hayden as realization dawned upon her.

How could she forget that Shea was mentally disabled? Just because she called Elliot ‘Big Brother’, did not mean that he really was her brother. She had addressed Hayden in the same manner because to her, Hayden was older than she was. Perhaps she referred to Elliot as such for the same reason.

“Elliot’s record does not mention that he has a sister,” Hayden continued.

Avery instantly snapped out of it.

“What am I fantasizing about?! It’s impossible between Elliot and I!” she thought.

As she drove, she asked, “I thought that you don’t like Shea. Why were you celebrating her birthday?”

Naturally, Hayden was not going to tell his mother that he had done so because he had struck a deal with Elliot, so he remained quiet.

“I know that you are a kind–hearted kid. Shea is a poor woman, so I’m not mad that you celebrated her birthday with her.”

Hayden did not want to respond to anything related to Shea.

“Elliot’s birthday is today as well.” Hayden did not remember Elliot’s birthday, and he had only realized it was today when he saw that there were two cakes in Shea’s classroom. One cake had ‘Elliot’ written on it and the other had ‘Shea’ on it.

“How do you know? Do you care about him that much?” Avery cast her son a sidelong glance.” Do you, by any chance, want to acknowledge him as your father?”

“I don’t need a father.”

CA

Avery felt slightly upset. "If only things aren't as complicated, I believe that you and Layla would be happier with a father."

"I don't need one!" Hayden insisted stubbornly.

Elliot's image had taken root in Hayden's mind, and Hayden would never forgive him for it.

Elliot had brought Shea back home when he saw Rosalie and the family of her eldest son. When Elliot saw them, displeasure filled his eyes.

Chapter 270

They had not informed him ahead of time before visiting.

Elliot did not want them over, as they were all strangers to Shea, and they would startle her.

Rosalie stood at the very front and as soon as she saw Shea, her eyes gleamed, and she could not help but approach Shea.

Elliot stood in front of Shea and said, "Mom, why did you come here without telling me first?"

“Today’s your– I bought a cake.” Rosalie lowered her gaze and mumbled, “I know

I shouldn’t come here unannounced, but I can’t help it...”

She could not resist her urge to see Shea.

Shea heard Rosalie’s voice and was both nervous and curious at the same time.

Rosalie could see her doe like eyes peeking at her from behind Elliot.

“Shea, you aren’t afraid of me, are you?” Rosalie looked at her with anticipation.

Shea immediately lowered her head again, her grip on Elliot’s clothes tightening in response.

Elliot reached his hand behind and held her hand.

“Mom, go home! We’ve already had cake at school,” he said coldly. “Take your cake with you.”

Rosalie sighed.

Though it was unfortunate, she still felt satisfied to see that her daughter was doing well.

The group soon exited the building and Elliot led Shea back into the house.

“Madame Rosalie has just got here, and she wouldn’t let me tell you,” Mrs.

Cooper said apologetically.

Elliot looked over at Zoe, who was standing by the side.

Zoe immediately explained, "I've been here since six in the evening, Elliot. If you've already had your cakes, then I will take the cake away."

Zoe had brought a cake that she had made herself.

Seeing how frightened she appeared to be, Elliot scowled.

Was he that scary?

"Dr. Sanford, is there any progress on Shea's treatment?" Elliot asked while staring at her face.

Zoe lifted her eyes to look at him and said, "The soonest we can proceed will be spring next

Scanned with CamScanner

year. She needs to recover after her first surgery, and technically speaking, the more time she has to recover, the better it will be for her."

Elliot nodded. "I look forward to good news."

"Yeah, I'll do my best."

With that, she took the cake and left; but since she came out, she had been absorbed in her thoughts.

The way Rosalie had looked at Shea was not normal. It was Elliot's birthday and he was supposed to be the main focus, but Rosalie could not seem to take her eyes off Shea.

With all sorts of thoughts in her head, she messaged Cole.

(Didn't your grandma know Shea already? She looked so excited just now.)

Cole replied, (Dr. Sanford, I can't talk to you about this, or my dad is going to skin me alive.)

Zoe felt even more curious by his response, (I will skin you as well if you won't tell me. Do you prefer being skinned metaphorically by your dad or physically by

me?)

"... What a vicious woman!" Cole thought to himself.

When he did not reply immediately, Zoe sent another message. (Let me guess, Shea is related to the Foster family, isn't she? Is she Elliot's ex-wife? Maybe it's because of her disability that the Foster Family decided to keep everything about her a secret?]

Cole read her theory with resignation and replied, (Dr. Sanford, I don't know what's really going on with Shea either, but I don't think it's like that.)

(Then what is it like?)

(She is definitely not my uncle's girlfriend. How could I not know if they had been married before?)

Zoe was overjoyed. As long as she knew that Shea was not Elliot's girlfriend, who she truly was did not matter.

At three in the morning, in the master bedroom of the Starry River Villa, Avery's phone started ringing.

She reached up to rub her eyes, before answering the call. Someone on the other side of the line said something, and she sat up from the bed abruptly.

Chapter 271

She sat on the bed with unconcealable joy on her face.

Five years ago, her stepmother and Wanda's younger brother, James, stole three hundred million from Tate Industries. After spending most of that fortune, greed had taken over him, and he had planned on making another fortune from Tate Industries. Only this time, he would not be met with three hundred million dollars, just the cold hard hand of the law.

A moment ago, officer Boyd, the police officer who was responsible for the case, had contacted Avery and informed her that James had already boarded the flight back to the country

There was a team of officers at the airport, ready to ambush him. As soon as James landed, he would be arrested.

This was something that Avery had spent years waiting for, and even after hanging up, she could not seem to calm herself down. She wanted to share the good news with her friends, but it was three in the morning, and she could not bring herself to wake them.

She got out of bed and stepped out of the bedroom. She went to the kitchen and opened the fridge to find a few cans of beer that her mother used for cooking. She took out the beer and went to sit down in the living room.

At four in the morning, Elliot was rudely woken from his sleep by the sound of a ringing phone. He scowled and picked up the phone.

When he saw Avery's name, he thought that he had seen it wrong. He massaged the bridge of his nose and focused on the screen once again, but he was right. It was a call from Avery.

He sat up and picked up the phone without further hesitation, thinking that something bad had happened for her to call him at this hour.

The two of them had long become strangers who barely even spoke to one another when they met, so she could not possibly call him unless something had happened to her.

"Hello... Elliot? Happy Birthday!"

When he heard Avery's drunken voice, his heart eased slightly, before tensing

again.

"She is calling because she's drunk! She is okay!" he thought to himself, "But why is she drunk at this time? Is she not at home? She couldn't be this drunk if she was home."

"Avery Tate, you are becoming more and more ridiculous!" he scowled with disappointment in his voice.

“... I called to wish you Happy Birthday, why are you yelling at me?” She squeezed and smashed the beer can in her hand. If only she had her hands on Elliot instead of the can, she would have strangled him to death.

“My birthday’s past,” Elliot reminded her, before asking, “Why are you drinking?”

What happened? Where are you? Give me the address!”

He swung his legs off the bed and got out. Striding toward the closet, he took out a set of clothes.

“Haha! I’m at home! Why do you think I’m this happy?” she giggled, abandoning her composure. Her happiness shone through her voice.

He sat down by the bed at the sound of her wondrous laughter.

He could tell that she really was happy, but he simply did not know why.

“It’s been so long since I heard you laugh, Avery,” he said in a husky and seductive voice.

The smile froze on her face, and for a moment, it felt as though the two of them were still in love.

A sharp pain shot up her head and Avery tossed all the beer cans into the dustbin, before getting up from the couch to walk back to her bedroom.

“Elliot Foster... I called you... to, to wish you Happy Birthday...”

“You already did.”

“Oh... Then I hope that you get a son soon.”

Elliot could not work up a fit of anger at her thoughtless comment and simply said,

“No, thank you.”

“No son? Then I wish you good fortune!” She stumbled her way back to the bedroom and threw herself back onto the bed. She breathed heavily as she felt heavy.

An idea appeared in Elliot’s mind when he heard her heavy breathing. It was said that the truth came when one was drunk, and he happened to have a question for

her.

“Avery, back then when you were pregnant with our child, did you really get rid of it?” he asked in a hoarse voice.

Hayden resembled him, and he had similar flaws in his personality as Shea did.

Elliot could not stop thinking about Hayden. If their child had survived, he would have been the same age as Hayden,

Chapter 272

Avery heard his question. She slightly sobered her up.

Did he think that she would spill the truth simply because she had a bit too much to drink?

He had underestimated her.

She had drunk a little too much, but it was only beer and not wine. Beer would not completely make her lose her mind.

She decided to ignore him and go to sleep.

Elliot listened to her breathing and stared at the screen of his phone, reluctant to hang up. She would have never called unless she was drunk.

Avery jolted awake at eight in the morning. It was a nightmare that had woken her. A nightmare about the time when her father had just passed away.

With his death and the company declaring bankruptcy, Avery and her mother had wandered the streets like homeless strays. She had been thirsty and dying for water, but they had not a penny to their name, so they could not buy water.

Avery was drenched in sweat when she woke up. She sighed a breath of relief at the familiar sight of her bedroom and whispered to herself, "It's in the past, Avery... don't be afraid."

Just then, a man's husky voice came from her phone, "Are you awake?"

Avery gaped and stared at her phone, thinking, "What's going on? Is my phone possessed? Why is Elliot's voice coming from it?"

"Calm down, ghosts don't appear during the daytime." She took a deep breath to prepare herself, before picking up the phone.

Elliot had heard her mumbling to herself. He looked forward to her reaction.

When Avery unlocked the phone and saw the screen, her face stiffened. The screen showed that she had been on call with Elliot for five hours.

She instantly felt like tossing her phone away.

"I called Elliot? Why?" she thought as she stared at her phone dazedly. She flushed. She wanted to ask about what had happened, but she could not bring herself to ask. "Avery, are you awake?" He took the initiative and broke the moment of silence.

“... Yeah.” She gasped and massaged her temples. “I’m sorry... I didn’t say anything weird last night, did I?”

“Of course,” he said, “you did.”

Avery’s head started to hurt even more as she tried her best to remember what had happened the night before.

“You wished me happy birthday,” he said calmly, “and then you wished that I would get a son soon.”

“Huh?”

Avery finally remembered. She had been drinking because James was on his way back to the country and was about to get arrested.

It was already eight in the morning, and according to the time, James had probably landed.

“Elliot, I have something I need to take care of, so bye!” she blurted out and hung up.

She got out of bed and called Officer Boyd.

Her call was immediately answered.

“Officer Boyd, have you caught James?” She could hear her heart beating as though it was about to jump out of her chest.

“Yes, he has already been brought to the station and is currently being questioned,” Officer Boyd said. “I was afraid that I might wake you so I didn’t call.”

“Thank you! Thank you!” Avery instantly relaxed, and even her head started to hurt less.

“You’re welcome. I will keep you posted.”

“Alright! Thank you!”

At ten in the morning, Avery received a phone call from her stepmother from overseas. They had not spoken for over four years, but she had never once forgotten her stepmother’s vicious face and hateful voice.

“Avery Tate! You think you are so smart, how dare you set up such a trap!” snarled Wanda. “If something happens to my brother, I won’t let you off easy!”

Chapter 273

It simply filled Avery’s heart with joy to hear Wanda’s frustrated screams.

“And how are you going to do that?” she teased sarcastically. “You are either behind your brother’s crime, or you condoned it at the very least. After all, you spent quite a lot of the money your brother stole from us! How dare you call me?”

“You got my daughter Cassandra killed! I haven’t even made you pay for that!”

“Oh... Who else died in your family? Why don’t you just blame it all on me as well?” mocked Avery. “Do you think that I’m still the girl that you can bully?

Wanda, you’ve lost your last chance when you failed to kill me five years ago!”

Avery’s voice was cold and vicious. She sounded completely different from how she did five years ago.

Wanda furiously hung up. She did not intend on letting it slide and booked a ticket back to Aryadelle immediately.

The headlines for the afternoon news read: (Tate Industries to obtain an extra three hundred million dollar boost? Mr. Worsley, the previous finance director, had been arrested this morning at the airport after five years on the run!)

When Mike saw the news, he stormed into Avery's office.

"How can you not tell me about something this huge?" he said in excitement. "Our company is getting three hundred million!"

Avery picked up the glass of water to take a sip. "You should believe everything you see on the news. Do you think he would come back if he hadn't spent all the money he stole?"

"Avery, you lost three hundred million, and you are here drinking tea?"

"My dad lost three hundred million, not me." She corrected him. "People always need to pay for the mistakes they made, and that was the price my dad paid for marrying Wanda."

"Let's go celebrate tonight?" Mike proposed.

"Sure!" Avery's lips curled into a smile. "You organize it."

"Okay!" Mike picked up a strand of her hair and asked shyly, "Can I invite Chad?"

LE

The smile froze on Avery's face. "You two..."

Could the two of them be in a relationship?

“We made peace and are now on good terms!” Mike confessed. “I will only invite Chad, not your ex, okay?”

your ex, okay?”

“What do you mean you are on good terms?” Avery could not help but imagine what Mike could mean. “Did you two.”

“Avery, do you prefer that Chad and I fight every time we see each other?” he interrupted her and said, “Get your mind out of the gutter, okay?”

“Oh, invite him then!” Avery studied Mike’s flushed face and instinctively felt that things were not as innocent as Mike claimed. Regardless, she did not intend to stop the two from developing a relationship.

Once Mike went out, Avery called Wesley and invited him to go out with them.

Wesley agreed and asked, “Are you free this afternoon? Can you make a trip to the hospital?”

“Yeah, sure,” she said.

After lunch, Avery drove to Elizabeth Hospital, and Wesley went to pick her up at the entrance, before taking her to the ward.

“Avery, I have good news. Eric is getting better” Wesley said. “As expected of Professor Hough’s best student!”

Avery beamed at him. “Is he awake?”

Eric Santos was the first patient she had treated since her return.

“Yeah! He regained consciousness,” Wesley said. “All the famous doctors in this country had pretty much announced that Eric was pretty much dead back then.

Who knew that you would save him?”

“He has just regained consciousness. It’s far from a full recovery,” Avery said modestly.

“I believe in you. You will definitely help him back on his feet!”

Avery wanted to help Eric back on his feet as well. Before he had become a vegetable, he had been one of the country’s most famous male idols. Even after fading out of the entertainment | industry for two years due to a certain accident, he was still within the listed top ten most popular idols. After performing the first surgery on him, Avery had gone and watched all his shows.

Chapter 274

Eric was born for the stage Whenever he was on stage, he could move the hearts of many without doing anything.

That evening, Avery drove Wesley to the gathering venue Mike had told her about.

The two got out of the car when they arrived at the hotel.

“Wesley, everyone here tonight is either a friend of mine or a friend of Mike’s, so don’t hold back,” said Avery with a smile. “We are mainly celebrating the fact that James got arrested. It’s something that’s been on my mind for some time now.”

“I know. I heard you mention it before.” Wesley smiled while looking at her. “I can see that you are in an exceptionally good mood today.”

The two went to the event hall that Mike told her to go to. As soon as they entered the hall, the smile faded from Avery’s face.

“What the heck? Why are there so many strangers? Did we walk into the wrong place? But – I can see Mike’s golden hair from here,” she thought.

When Mike spotted Avery, he walked up to her. “Avery, here you are! Welcome, Wesley!”

Avery dragged Mike outside and asked him what happened.

“Well... When I invited Chad, he said that they are having a company gathering tonight in a big event hall. He said that we can just come join them... That way we can save the money for gathering, right?” Mike’s eyes shone in a calculative manner.

Avery’s eyes filled with anger as she thought, “I’m in such a good mood, and he thinks that I want to skimp on food?!”

“Relax, Elliot usually doesn’t show up to gatherings for the Sterling Group,” Mike explained.” Their company has a gathering every fortnight, so he couldn’t possibly show up every time. According to Chad, Elliot only shows his face during special occasions... and tonight’s not an occasion, so he won’t be here! I swear it!”

Mike placed his hand on his chest and swore.

Just then, they heard the distinct sound of leather shoes hitting the floor.
Avery

looked in the direction of the sound and saw Elliot walking toward them. He was dressed in black.

Avery instantly smacked Mike's hand.

Mike took a deep breath awkward breath and whispered, "What do we do?
The

people I invited are already inside... I can't just ask them to get out."

Elliot walked toward them. His dark, brooding eyes focused on Avery's face as he said," Congratulations."

Avery scowled.

"... On getting three hundred million," he added.

Avery lifted an eyebrow. "Oh... Don't you usually stay out of company gatherings?"

"I come when I want to. Nothing is fixed," he said casually, before teasing
her,

"Are you drinking tonight?"

"I drink when I want to. Nothing is fixed," she retorted stubbornly.

Elliot pursed his lips and gave her a look, before looking away and stepping into the event hall.

Mike dragged Avery along and followed Elliot closely.

“We are already here. If we leave now, he is going to think that we are afraid of him!” Mike tried to brainwash her by saying, “Not only are we going to eat more, but we are also going to order a few bottles of good wine! He’s paying, anyway.”

Avery glared at him. “Don’t you ever feel embarrassed?”

Mike gave her a charming smile. “He is not my ex–husband, so the only one who would feel embarrassed would be you.”

Avery silently decided to never organize a gathering again.

Suddenly, she realized that Wesley was nowhere to be found and looked around.

“Where is Wesley?”

Chapter 275

“Elliot pulled him away.” Mike pointed her in the direction the men had gone.

Avery turned to see Elliot and Wesley at a table by themselves with the bodyguards standing next to them. There was a bottle on the table, and it appeared that they intended on drinking.

Avery scowled.

Wesley did not drink very often and his alcohol tolerance was not at all great.

“Two amateurs! Let’s see who goes down first,” Mike teased.

Avery suddenly remembered that Elliot could not drink as well.

“Avery, it’s a contest between the two men. Just let them drink!” said Mike, tapping her on her shoulder.

She looked up and shoved his handsome face away. “This is all your fault!”

“I will never get fooled by Chad again! Next time I will ask him to join us instead!”

Mike swore.

“There won’t be a next time!” Avery walked toward Tammy.

Tammy raised her middle finger at Mike.

It had been a while since Avery had been in contact with Elliot or seen him, and because of Mike, they had met tonight. Seeing him only added to her headache and reluctance to cut all ties with him.

“Avery, congratulations on getting that money.” Tammy took a glass of juice and passed it to Avery. “Doesn’t matter if you can actually get it back or not, at least you have fulfilled your dad ‘s wishes.”

Avery nodded. “Yeah, I intend on going to the cemetery to visit my dad

tomorrow.”

“Sure! You should take the two kids with you... If your dad was still alive, he would have been overjoyed.”

Avery considered it for a moment and nodded.

Just then, her phone rang. She glanced at the caller identification and went to the side to pick up the call.

After the call, she went back to Tammy and said, “I need to go out for a bit. I’ll be back soon.”

It was a call from Wanda, who had just returned to the country. She panicked after learning from her lawyer that James might face legal sanctions, so she called

Avery hoping to meet her and talk things over.

The two met at a café near the hotel.

Wanda scanned Avery from head to toe. Avery still looked the same, but her demeanor had changed drastically. Her eyes were cold and distant. She felt unapproachable.

“Avery, I did not make my brother steal that money,” Wanda had taken the initiative and broke the silence. “How could I possibly want the Tate Family to fall after all those years I’ve spent with your father?”

“My father is dead. What’s the point of playing the victim?” Avery exposed her hypocrisy right away. “I don’t have much time to waste here with you, get to the point.”

“Let’s settle this in private!” Wanda scowled, “I will find a way to return the money he stole from you! Had he not done what he did, both Cassandra and I would have a share of that three hundred million dollars. Now you can have it all, are you satisfied?!”

Wanda sounded as though she had granted Avery a generous gift.

Avery smirked. “Wanda, is your brother only worth three hundred million to you? I suppose some of your companies overseas must be doing quite well. There isn’t a chance that we can settle the matter in private, unless, you can give me fifty billion, at the very least.”

“Fifty billion!” Wanda gasped and thought to herself, “You might as well just kill

me!”

With a vicious expression, she clenched her fists. “Avery Tate! You are being too greedy!”

“Looks like this negotiation is a failure. We’ll just go with the law!”
drawled Avery

and got up from her chair.

A fire was ignited within Wanda when she saw that Avery was leaving. She stood up as well and growled, “Wait! Fifty billion isn’t a small amount!

Let me think about

it!”

Chapter 276

“Since you are my stepmother, I will give you a day,” Avery said coldly and stepped out of the café.

Back at the event hall, both Elliot and Wesley were looking rather drunk after only

having a few glasses to drink

“Mr. Brook, I heard that Professor Hough had a secret student,” asked Elliot casually as he poured Wesley another glass.

Wesley looked at him and flushed. “Where did you hear that, Mr. Foster?”

Elliot lifted his glass and touched Wesley’s. “You only need to tell me yes or no,

Mr. Brook.”

Wesley took a sip and responded in a troubled tone. “I’m sorry, but I cannot disclose any personal information regarding Professor Hough.”

“Professor Hough has passed away. Besides, it’s not like it’s something to be ashamed of.”

“What if that person doesn’t wish to be found?”

Elliot beamed and said, “So, Professor Hough did have a secret student.”

The person Wesley was referring to had to be the mysterious student.

Wesley picked up his glass and took another sip.

“Mr, Brook, you are that secret student of Professor Hough, aren’t you?”
Elliot

finally revealed his theory.

Wesley immediately spat out the wine in his mouth, and Elliot passed him the tissue box.

“Thank you.” Wesley wiped his mouth with the tissue, before explaining with a blush on his face, “Mr. Foster, I was just Professor Hough’s assistant. I studied medicine as well, but I am nowhere near worthy of being his student. That’s the whole reason why I was his assistant to begin with.”

“Really?” Elliot looked into his eyes as he tried to determine whether Wesley was telling the truth.

“Of course! Oh, right, haven’t you already found Zoe?” Wesley changed the subject and said, “She is brilliant.”

“That, she is, but I want more options,” Elliot said in a low voice, “I heard that Professor Hough’s secret student is a middle aged man, and I’ve sent people to find him. It’s been two months since then, and I haven’t even found a clue.”

That was the reason why Elliot had decided to talk to Wesley.

Wesley was not sure if he wanted to cry or laugh. “So I’m a middle aged man to

you, Mr. Foster?”

“I’m sorry, but I am at my wit’s end.”

Wesley felt slightly impulsive after drinking and said, “Your information is wrong.

Even if Professor Hough had a secret student, it wouldn’t be a middle aged man.”

“Oh? So it’s a woman?”

Wesley pursed his lips but did not respond.

“Mr. Brook, can you just give me some information?” Elliot continued, “Name your price, I am willing to pay any amount for it.”

Feeling overwhelmed, Wesley was left with no options but to lay his head on the table in an effort to appear drunk.

When Avery walked into the hall and saw Wesley on the table, she was furious.

“That b*st*rd Elliot! How dare he get my friend drunk?”

She strode toward Elliot, and he turned abruptly to look at her when he sensed her approach.

“What is the meaning of this, Elliot Foster?!” She glared at him.

Flushed, his eagle eyes appeared innocent for a moment. He picked up the bottle on the table and showed it to her. The two of them had only drunk half the bottle, and he suspected that Wesley was only pretending to be drunk.

“Wesley can’t drink!” Avery set the bottle back onto the table with a frown and went to help Wesley up

Elliot scowled when he saw her reaching for Wesley, and he pulled her back.

Unprepared, she fell into his arms,

“Avery, I-“He swallowed heavily as he studied her familiar face intently and muttered in a hoarse voice, “I think I’m drunk.”

Chapter 277

She could feel his breath brushing against her cheeks, and it smelt like alcohol. She believed that he was drunk, otherwise, he would not have wrapped his arms around her in front of all his employees.

“You shouldn’t drink so much if you can’t handle it.” Avery tried to get up from his lap, but he tightened his arms around her waist and refused to let go.

“Avery, let’s drink.” He picked up the bottle and poured alcohol into the glasses.

“Were you drunk last night because James was arrested?” |

His arms loosened slightly, and she immediately got up from his lap. She turned to look in Wesley’s direction, but he was nowhere to be found.

“Elliot! Where is Wesley?” She stared at Elliot’s flushed face and felt that he was getting more and more sly. His subordinates must have taken Wesley away when Elliot was holding her.

“Given how drunk he got, of course, they escorted him to a place so he might rest,” Elliot drawled and handed her a glass. “Don’t worry, I won’t do anything bad to Mr. Brook.”

Just then, Avery's phone rang. She unlocked the screen and saw one new message from Wesley that said, (Avery, I'm not drunk. He kept asking about Professor Hough's secret student, so I had to pretend to be drunk. He might find out about you, so be careful.]

Avery felt relieved when she saw the message but tensed almost immediately again. She looked at Elliot with mixed feelings and accepted the glass, before taking a gulp.

"What were you doing out there just now?" he asked, taking a sip from his glass.

Her breathing grew heavy when she realized that Elliot had been watching her while he had been drinking with Wesley. She felt her emotions roiling within her.

"Elliot, have you forgotten what you said?" She sat down on the chair next to him and reminded him, "You said you will be damned if you come looking for me

again."

Elliot had not forgotten. He lifted an eyebrow and retorted with a husky voice, "I came here for the gathering, not for you.”

“Ha, then why bother with what I was doing outside? Careful not to get yourself damned!” she mocked.

“Avery, you don’t believe that I’m drunk, do you?” He narrowed his eyes with interest and drawled, “If living feels miserable, I might as well be damned.”

Under the warm light, his eyes looked gentle and sensual.

Avery emptied her glass and said to Elliot’s bodyguards, “Your boss is drunk, take him back to

rest.”

With that, she walked away from him.

Tammy dragged Avery to the washroom. “Look at your face! It’s all red! I don’t even know what to say!”

Avery put her hands on her own heated cheeks and said, “I’m just a bit drunk.”

“Oh. Was Elliot drunk? The way he was holding onto you was like how a hungry wolf would hang onto a lamb!” gushed Tammy. “I’ve never seen Elliot that wild before... I’m shocked!”

Avery was not sure whether to laugh or cry over how Tammy had exaggerated the story. “Do you not see him as human?” she sighed.

“I’ve never seen him as a human. All this time I’ve known him, he has always been cold and untouchable... Sometimes, I think he is actually a robot.”

“If he was a robot, I would have switched him off so that he can’t piss me off anymore.”

Tammy was convinced.

The two returned to the event hall from the washroom and sat down for dinner.

Who was looking for you just now? I wanted to ask, but you left so quickly,”

Tammy said.

“Guess.” Avery purposely tried to be mysterious.

Tammy shook her head. “I can’t guess. I tried when you were out... but everyone you know is here, so who else could be looking for you?”

“My stepmother.” Avery picked up a piece of meat and chewed slowly. “I might just get more than three hundred million.”

Avery emptied her glass and said to Elliot’s bodyguards, “Your boss is drunk, take him back to

rest.”

With that, she walked away from him.

Tammy dragged Avery to the washroom. “Look at your face! It’s all red! I don’t

Chapter 278

If Wanda was willing to consider fifty billion as a price to pay, it meant that she had the money.

The next day in the director’s office of Sterling Group, the golden rays of the sun shone through the window and into the neat office.

Elliot opened the list of students that had been taught by Professor Hough.

According to what Wesley said the night before, Professor Hough's secret student was not middle aged, nor a man, which narrowed his search by quite a lot.

Suddenly, his eyes focused on Avery's name.

Avery was one of Professor Hough's students as well, but because she had chosen a career in medicine, he had simply glanced through the report on her time as a student.

Her portfolio was simple, she had done nothing more than learn and author academic papers. He did an online search on one of the papers she had written, reading it, however, felt like reading an alien language, so he gave up.

Perhaps Avery was not as simple as he had originally thought her to be.

Professor Hough would not have accepted her as a student if she was ordinary.

According to Wesley, had been deemed unworthy as a student and therefore, ended up as his assistant instead.

Why did Avery not continue her career path in medicine after graduation if she had the abilities and talent for it? Was it truly for money? If it was, why did she bother wasting two years studying under Professor Hough?

Elliot frowned and picked up a pen to write down her name, before branching out to writing down words such as 'Professor Hough' and 'Alpha Technologies'. In the end, he wrote Mike's name next to Alpha Technologies.

The profit of Avery's company was a result of Mike's joining. Mike had once told

Chad that he was an exceptional hacker and indeed, there was no information about Mike on the internet.

Why would such a skilled hacker willingly work for Avery?

Elliot wrote a question mark after Mike's name.

Meanwhile, in the cemetery, Avery had taken her mother and two children to visit her father's grave.

"Dad, Mom and I are here." She set down a bouquet of lilies and said, "My kids are here to see you too."

Jack's photo was on the grave.

“Dad, I’ve rebuilt Tate Industries. James has been arrested as well, so rest in peace!”

Following a breeze, her phone started ringing in her bag. Avery took out the phone and noticed that it was from Wanda. Without hesitation, she picked up the call.

“Avery, I’ve thought it through. I can’t pay you fifty billion at one go, but I can draw up a contract that states I will pay you the full amount within a year!” Wanda’s voice was weak from staying up the entire night.

She did not want to spend the fifty billion on saving her brother, but her parents had threatened to kill her, so she was left with no other option than to accept the deal.

“Oh,” Avery responded emotionlessly. “What’s there to talk about if you can’t even pay fifty billion?”

Wanda paused for a moment, before screaming frantically, “What do you mean?!”

Didn’t you say that if I give you fifty billion, you will agree to settle this in private?!”

“What’s wrong with you? Can’t you understand words? I said that I would consider negotiations if you gave fifty billion dollars, but after considering it for a bit, I’ve decided to go through the legal system and let James hang,” Avery said coldly as she stared at her father’ s grave.

Chapter 279

She had never truly considered settling the matter in private. She had simply said that to give Wanda hope so that she could take it away a day later. Avery wanted her to taste what it was like to suffer.

“Very well! Avery, very well!” Wanda was so angry that her lips trembled. “I didn’t want to pay fifty billion, to begin with! It’s not like my money comes easy!”

“Well, let’s hope that your brother won’t haunt you when he dies,” Avery said sarcastically. “I wonder how you two split the twenty billion you stole from us.”

Wanda could feel her blood raging in her.

“Avery Tate... Just you wait... I won’t let you off easy... My brother and my daughter... I will take revenge for them!”

“Oh, you want to send someone to assassinate me? Aryadelle’s surveillance network and the police force’s investigation skills have long surpassed the levels of what they were five years ago. I would recommend thinking it through. Think of whether you can handle the consequences of harming another human being,” said Avery. “After all, murder and contracting an assassin are both punishable by death in Aryadelle!”

The blood drained from Wanda’s face, and she hung up.

Laura looked at Avery. “Is Wanda still as arrogant as she was?”

“She has opened up a cosmetic company overseas which earned her a fortune.”

Laura lowered her gaze wordlessly.

“Mom, she opened that company with the money her brother stole.” Avery knew what her mother was thinking and said, “It doesn’t matter how good she is at running a business, nothing is going to cover up the fact that she was the one who got Dad killed and left Tate Industries in a state of bankruptcy! She will get what's coming for her!"

Laura nodded. "It was karma that her daughter died at such a young age. Avery, all I ever wanted is for you to be well. I don't care about the money."

That night, Chad called Mike to invite him out for a drink.

Mike was at home at the time and Avery immediately turned to look at him when he answered Chad's call.

Mike had too much to drink the night before and had decided to have dinner at home, but he could not seem to turn Chad down.

"Didn't you drink last night? Why are you drinking again?" Mike said while glancing at Avery guiltily

"What, you can't?" Chad challenged him.

Since he had made peace with Mike, Elliot had ordered Chad to try digging out some information from Mike. He wanted to know what had prompted Mike to start a company with Avery.

Could there be something else to the story?

Mike was young and would never admit that he could not drink.

“Send me the address. I’m going there right now!” Mike hung up and walked toward Avery.

Avery gave him a sidelong glance and said, “Was it Chad?”

Mike flushed and scratched his head awkwardly. “How do you know?”

“Who else can get you out other than Chad? Don’t you remember how drunk you got last night, and what you said to me this morning? You said that you won’t be drinking this week,” she said.

“I meant I won’t drink wine this week. Beer is like water to me,” Mike said proudly and stepped out onto the porch.

Avery followed closely. “Haven’t you thought of why Chad is asking you out?”

“Huh?” Mike paused while changing his shoes.

Avery told him about how Elliot tried to pry for information from Wesley the night before and reminded Mike, “If Chad asks you the same thing, you don’t need me to tell you what to say, do you? If you spill the beans, this is the end of our friendship!”

Mike clenched his fists in realization and snarled, "That Chad! He's always calling me with an agenda! Damn it! I am going to get him so drunk tonight to teach him a lesson!"

"... Don't do that! He has work the next day!"

"How's that any of my business? Relax, I won't tell him about you," Mike promised.

Slightly uneasy, Avery asked, "If you are in a relationship with Chad, will you tell

him?"

"I won't say a thing that you don't want me to even if he was my wife! You saved my life and to me, you are always my top priority!" Relieved, Avery sent him off.

Chapter 280

The next day, Chad bore through the pain of being hungover and arrived at the office.

Elliot glanced at him and said, "How did you end up in this state?"

"Mike deliberately made me drink last night! Before I could ask him any questions,

I was drunk. Although I didn't get to ask him much, I realized that he has a scar on his head.”

“Is it an obvious scar?”

“Yes, he must have had a craniotomy before.” Mike had carried Chad to the hotel, and on their way there, he had noticed a secret scar hidden under Mike’s blond hair.

That morning when he woke up, as expected, he shared the same bed with Mike.

However, this time, he was not angry. He did not even kick or hit Mike!

On the contrary, while Mike was sleeping soundly, he pried his blond hair apart and took a picture of the scar. It had clearly been caused by surgical sutures.

scar. He must have had a craniotomy!”

“Craniotomy is not a minor surgery.” Elliot looked at the photo and said in a low voice, “Ask him the next time what happened. Don’t drink with him the next time, just ask him directly. Go back and rest!”

“Okay.” Although Chad’s head hurt badly, he was still lucid. “Mr. Foster, are you investigating Mike because you're suspicious of Miss Tate?"

Elliot's eyes fluttered a little. "Don't you think she's acting strange?" "Yes! I do find her strange! She clearly loves you, but why did she divorce you?" Chad asked in confusion. "I know that she is jealous of Shea, but can't she be more tolerant of atypical people? I'm a little disappointed in her!"

Elliot was speechless

They were not talking about the same thing.

"Go back and rest. In the future, if you're hungover, don't come to work." Elliot turned around in his leather chair.

When Avery had divorced him, she had not known that Shea was disabled. He never once blamed Avery. If they really had to find fault with someone, it had to be

him.

Elliot received a phone call from Zoe at five in the afternoon

"Elliot, my dad is back in the country. Are you busy right now? He wants to have dinner with you tonight."

Elliot looked at the time for a moment and replied, "Okay."

“Right, by the way, I told you that my parents are divorced. My dad will be bringing his new girlfriend as well. I hope you don’t mind?” Zoe hesitated for a while before coming clean.

Elliot replied, “No, I don’t mind.”

He did not have his eyes on Zoe, and neither was he interested in her father’s new girlfriend.

An hour later, Elliot met Zoe’s father and his new girlfriend. Instantly, his mind went blank. He forgot what he should say or do.

His sharp gaze landed on the new girlfriend.

“Mr. Foster, do you recognize me?” Wanda smiled and said, “Although we used to be related, we have never truly met! I never thought that we would meet this way.”

Elliot’s expression instantly darkened. The atmosphere was getting awkward and colder as time went by. At that moment, Elliot’s phone rang. He picked the call up and strode out of the restaurant.

Chapter 281

It was a call from Chad.

“Mike said that there used to be a malignant tumor in his brain. When it got serious, he would pass out and lose consciousness. It was Professor Hough that removed his tumor,” said Chad.

Elliot said, “He still did not mention why he was working together with Avery?”

“He did. He said he likes drones. Avery possessed a system that Jack Tate invented. After he perfected Jack’s system, he was very satisfied with it, so he joined up with Avery and started a company together.”

The answer was flawless.

After the call, Elliot headed back to the restaurant. Although he resented Wanda,

he was asking a favor from Zoe, so he had to show some respect to the woman.

After he entered the restaurant, Zoe immediately walked over to him and said, “Elliot, I’m sorry. This is the first time I’m meeting Wanda. I did not know that she was Avery’s stepmother. I rarely talk to my father, so he didn’t tell me about this beforehand either.”

After listening to her explanation, Elliot strode over to the table and sat down.

“Hello, Richard,” said Elliot to Zoe’s father. As for Wanda, he treated her as if she were nothing more than a passing breeze.

“Hello, Elliot.” Richard smiled awkwardly. “I’m sorry, I’ve been abroad for a long time, and I have never discussed the past with Wanda, so I didn’t know that you

two have history.”

“It’s fine. Avery and I are divorced,” Elliot said calmly.

Wanda could see that Elliot had a problem with her. She thought for a while before saying, “Elliot, I am very sorry about what happened in the past. I’ve also called Avery and apologized to her already. I offered her seven hundred million, but she didn’t want to accept it.”

Elliot’s eyes swept over Wanda.

Zoe exclaimed in surprise, “You have seven hundred million dollars?!”

The amount was enormous!

She never thought that Wanda would have so much money.

“I don’t have that much money, but if I mortgage my company, it would be enough to gather this amount. I did it to show my sincerity,” lamented Wanda. “I hoped to reconcile with Avery, but it’s not going well.”

Elliot received a phone call from Zoe at five in the afternoon

“Elliot, my dad is back in the country. Are you busy right now? He wants to have dinner with you tonight.”

Elliot looked at the time for a moment and replied, “Okay.”

“Right, by the way, I told you that my parents are divorced. My dad will be bringing his new girlfriend as well. I hope you don’t mind?” Zoe hesitated for a while before coming clean.

Elliot replied, “No, I don’t mind.”

He did not have his eyes on Zoe, and neither was he interested in her father’s new girlfriend.

An hour later, Elliot met Zoe’s father and his new girlfriend. Instantly, his mind went blank. He forgot what he should say or do.

His sharp gaze landed on the new girlfriend.

“Mr. Foster, do you recognize me?” Wanda smiled and said, “Although we used to be related, we have never truly met! I never thought that we would meet this way.”

Elliot’s expression instantly darkened. The atmosphere was getting awkward and colder as time went by. At that moment, Elliot’s phone rang. He picked the call up and strode out of the restaurant.

It was a call from Chad.

“Mike said that there used to be a malignant tumor in his brain. When it got serious, he would pass out and lose consciousness. It was Professor Hough that removed his tumor,” said Chad.

Elliot said, “He still did not mention why he was working together with Avery?”

“He did. He said he likes drones. Avery possessed a system that Jack Tate invented. After he perfected Jack’s system, he was very satisfied with it, so he joined up with Avery and started a company together.”

The answer was flawless.

After the call, Elliot headed back to the restaurant. Although he resented Wanda,

he was asking a favor from Zoe, so he had to show some respect to the woman.

After he entered the restaurant, Zoe immediately walked over to him and said,

“Elliot, I’m sorry. This is the first time I’m meeting Wanda. I did not know that she was Avery’s stepmother. I rarely talk to my father, so he didn’t tell me about this beforehand either.”

After listening to her explanation, Elliot strode over to the table and sat down.

“Hello, Richard,” said Elliot to Zoe’s father. As for Wanda, he treated her as if she were nothing more than a passing breeze.

“Hello, Elliot.” Richard smiled awkwardly. “I’m sorry, I’ve been abroad for a long time, and I have never discussed the past with Wanda, so I didn’t know that you

two have history.”

Wanda could see that Elliot had a problem with her. She thought for a while before saying, “Elliot, I am very sorry about what happened in the past. I’ve also called Avery and apologized to her already. I offered her seven hundred million,

but she didn't want to accept it."

Elliot's eyes swept over Wanda.

Zoe exclaimed in surprise, "You have seven hundred million dollars?!"

The amount was enormous!

She never thought that Wanda would have so much money.

"I don't have that much money, but if I mortgage my company, it would be enough to gather this amount. I did it to show my sincerity," lamented Wanda. "I hoped to reconcile with Avery, but it's not going well."

Zoe saw how dark Elliot's expression was, so she said, "Wanda, let's not talk about this."

"Okay, I'll stop," Wanda knowingly stopped talking.

Returning from the meal, Elliot was even more determined that he should not follow Zoe's advice.

If Avery knew that Wanda was Zoe's father's current girlfriend and possibly even Zoe's future stepmother, Avery would stop contacting him.

Shea suddenly walked over and hugged him. Elliot felt his sister's warmth and how much she relied on him. His chest felt tight. Although she showed more intelligence than before, she still could not take care of herself.

It was almost New Year's. After that, she would begin the next stage of her treatment. He was looking forward to that.

However, tonight's meeting with Wanda disgusted him. As long as he and Zoe were so-called lovers, then they might still have a second meal, third meal, and so forth with Wanda.

"Shea, do you like Dr. Sanford?" Elliot held Shea's hand and sat down on the sofa.

Shea pursed her lips. Her bright eyes looked at Elliot. She did not like Zoe, but she knew that Zoe was her brother's girlfriend.

"What about you?" Shea had learned how to answer a question with one of her own.

Elliot shook his head and explained, "I need her to treat you. Shea, she could cure you.”

Upon hearing how he did not like Zoe, Shea got bolder. “Avery can treat me too!”

Elliot furrowed his brows. He realized that things were not as simple as they seem!

“Shea, has Avery treated you before?”

She pursed her lips and nodded.

Elliot placed his hands on her shoulders. He studied her with his dark eyes, “When has she treated you? Was it when you were lost?”.

When Shea was around, she always had a nanny to look after her. Elliot could keep track of Shea all day. Thus, it was easy for him to figure out that shea had met Avery only when she went missing!

Chapter 282

Shea knew she could no longer hide it, yet she was afraid as her brother looked so serious and stern. So, she lowered her head and said nothing.

At the Starry River Villa, Mike was in the hall boasting about how great his alcohol tolerance was, and how easily he had gotten Chad drunk!

He also paraded how easy it was to lie and fool Chad.

“Avery, I’m great, right?” Mike was looking for praise. “Chad definitely reported it to his boss! Don’t worry. Elliot will not suspect you.”

Avery was peeling some apples. She passed them to him. “You finally have some brains.”

“Hey! That was uncalled for! I always have brains, please!” Mike angrily accepted the apple and took a hard bite. “I just don’t like to think. Once I do, even Sherlock Holmes is no match for me.”

At that moment, Layla brought an album over.

“Mommy, who is this man? He’s so handsome! I like him very much!”

Layla had come out of Avery’s room. Avery looked at the album in Layla’s hands.

She immediately placed her knife down.

“Layla, why are you going through my things again?” Avery took the album and shut it.

Eric’s photos were in the album. Avery was a fan of his.

“Mommy, if you didn’t want me to see it, you should have locked it up!”
Layla

looked aggrieved. “Why won’t you let me see it? I like that handsome man too!”

Hayden glanced at the album and said, “Infatuated fool.”

“Mommy likes him too! If you’re calling me an infatuated fool, that means you’re calling Mommy a fool too!” Layla retorted logically.

Hayden could not win, so he turned around and returned to his room.

Layla lay in Avery’s arms and said sweetly, “Mommy, if you’re going to find a boyfriend in the future, use this handsome man as a benchmark. If you can bring such a handsome man home, Grandma and I won’t object to it.”

Laura could not help but laugh when he heard what Layla said, Avery’s head hurt.

She was just about to lecture her daughter when someone rang the doorbell.

It was nine at night. Other than Tammy, no one would usually come over to visit.

However,

Tammy never comes at night.

Mike was already at the door. He looked through the peephole.

“Damn! Avery! Your ex-husband is here!” Mike did not dare open the door. He quickly returned to the living area. “He has even brought someone over.”

Who?

Avery passed Layla to Laura. Laura immediately took Layla to the room.

“Shea is here too,” whispered Mike.

Avery furrowed her brows. Why did Elliot bring Shea over here so late at night?

She walked over to the door and opened it. Before she could say anything, Elliot asked Shea, “Is It here?”

Shea walked into the room. When she saw Avery’s cold expression, Shea pursed her lips not daring to make a sound.

Elliot held on to Shea’s hand and walked past Avery, entering the living area.

“Elliot—“Avery took a deep breath, turned around, and went after him.

“Shut up!” Elliot barked. He interrupted her and said, “Avery, when Shea went missing, was she here with you?”

Avery was speechless. He had still found out about it in the end.

Elliot saw the reaction on Avery’s face and got his confirmation.

An ice–cold feeling rose from the bottom of his heart.

“How did she end up here? Why didn’t you tell me?” Elliot approached Avery and looked at her coldly. He enunciated each word, “Were you happy looking at me going crazy looking for her!”

Chapter 283

Back then, Elliot had spent one hundred and fifty–five million dollars looking for Shea. The entire county knew of his search for her. He had not believed that Avery had anything to do with the matter.

Avery’s face flushed from Elliot’s questions! The tone of his voice made it clear that he thought that Avery had abducted Shea and had taken Shea to her house.

At that point in time, Avery had not even had the time to think. She had a high fever! If she had returned Shea to him while Shea still suffered from a fever, he would think that she had not even cared for her while Shea had been with her.

“Yes!” Avery yelled, agitated. “I was extremely happy to see you go crazy!”

Suddenly, everything went black! The lights in the house went out!

“Ah!” Shea was so frightened she immediately found someone to hug.

Mike jumped. “Why are you hugging me? Let go!”

“I’m scared! Scared!” Shea continued exclaiming in alarm. Mike gave in and exhaled. It was just a hug! He did not lose anything by it! Why should he argue with a mentally challenged woman?

Furthermore, Elliot would soon take her away.

Just when Mike thought that Elliot would reclaim Shea, he said, “It’s your son that took Shea out of school, right? You were the one who told him to do it!”

Mike was perplexed. What the hell was going on with Elliot? Shea was yelling in fright, yet he did not care. Instead, he was pursuing his argument with Avery.

“Yes! I told my son to do so!” Avery’s voice was louder than his. Her emotions overpowered his. “I deliberately got my son to take Shea home. I wanted to see what type of woman you desired; I wanted to see how powerful she was! Who would have thought that she’s an idiot!”

Elliot could insult her all he wanted, but she would not stay calm if he had dragged Hayden into the argument.

His string of questions made Avery lose it.

He wanted her to become that evil woman, so she was going to show him how evil she was!

After what she said, the entire world went silent. Suddenly, the lights came back

on!

Avery saw Elliot's dark expression. His eyes were red, and his fists were clenched tightly. It felt as if he was about to hit her the very next second!

Avery's heart was beating wildly. She quickly came to her senses. How could she call Shea an idiot? Even if it was out of spite, she should not say that in front of

Shea!

Avery looked around in search of Shea, trying to locate where she was.

Laura and the two children were in the children's room, staring at Shea. Shea looked at the ground. They had all heard what Avery had said. At that moment, despite not liking her, all they could feel for her was sympathy.

"Shea, what my mommy said just now is not true," Layla said in her childish voice.

"My mommy didn't ask my brother to take you home. My mommy is lying. So, she's also lying when she says you're an idiot."

Shea's eyes brightened at Layla's words. Previously, Layla had always ignored her. At that moment, Layla was the one who had made the first move. Shea felt a little delighted.

"I am an idiot!" Shea blinked her sparkling eyes and said honestly, "Avery is not lying."

Everyone in the room fell silent.

In the living area. Elliot's body stiffened. His eyes were red, and they looked watery. He looked at Avery, heartbroken, "Avery, you can hurt me, but you can't say that about Shea!"

His every word was laced with hatred and disappointment.

Avery was just about to apologize, but she swallowed her words. "Take Shea and leave!" she spat coldly before striding into her bedroom.

Chapter 284

Avery slammed the door and locked it from within.

Mike saw that the argument had ended. He immediately took Shea out of the children's room.

"Hey! Foster!" Mike had initially wanted to stand up for Avery.

Elliot glared at him warningly, "Shut up!"

Mike held his tongue. He saw Elliot walking over to Shea and taking her away.

It was drizzling when they exited the villa. Elliot took off his jacket and draped it over Shea's head.

When they entered the car, Shea was hugging his jacket. She looked at the villa.

Elliot put on the safety belt for her and said hoarsely, "Shea, stop looking."

"Big Brother, I'm sorry..." Shea said. Tears streamed down her face.

"Shea, you did nothing wrong. You don't have to apologize to anyone."
Elliot

raised his hands and wiped the tears away from the corner of her eyes.

Shea cried, "Big Brother, it was me. I was afraid of the surgery, so I ran away. I was the one who begged Hayden to take me away..."

She had not dared to tell him the truth earlier on, however, at that moment, she had finally found the courage to tell the truth.

Elliot's mind was suddenly filled with Avery's cold gaze. Why did she not explain herself? Could it be that she felt pleasure by infuriating him?

“Big Brother, don’t blame Avery. She treats me well. I was feeling terrible when I was sick. She was the one who cared for me.” Shea choked. She remembered the scene from that night.” She gave me an injection. Avery is amazing...”

Elliot took a tissue to wipe her tears away. He swallowed. “You got Hayden to take you back to his place, then you got sick. Avery treated you. What happened then?

Was she the one who sent you to the hospital?”

Shea looked at Elliot with tears in her eyes. “I don’t remember anymore. I only remember that Avery treated me very well. She was not like tonight. She is not a bad person.”

“She called you an idiot, aren’t you angry?” Elliot’s eyes were pricked with tears.

The thought of it still broke his heart.

He knew that Avery was not a bad person, but what she said hurt him deeply. In the years they were children, Shea’s condition was not as bad as it currently was. Her current condition was a result of the abuse she had suffered at the hands of their father.

He would never let anyone else bully Shea!

Shea's eyes were red. She shook her head. "You got Dr. Sanford to treat me. Isn't that because I'm an idiot?"

Elliot hugged Shea tightly. He choked, "Shea, no! You're not an idiot. I'm asking

Dr. Sanford to treat you so that you can experience more of the beauty of this world—".

"Because I'm an idiot, I'm not smart enough. Big Brother, I'm an idiot. Avery is not wrong. I'm not angry. You don't have to get angry too, please?" pleaded Shea.

When Elliot heard his sister's soft and gentle pleas, he caved in. He gripped the steering wheel with one hand. He looked out the window. Tears fell silently from his eyes.

"There's nothing wrong with being an idiot." Shea hugged his jacket and took a deep breath. She said to herself, "As long as Big Brother is with me all the time, I can always be an idiot.”

Elliot’s lips moved a little, but he said nothing. He must cure his sister. She will not stay an idiot forever!

In the villa, Avery was lying on her bed in pain. She felt as if there were no difference between living and dying. She should not have been this agitated. She could have properly explained it to him, but she did not do it!

She had failed to do so because he had not confronted her with the right intentions. From the moment he had entered her house, he had never looked her in the eye, nor did he have the patience to listen to her explanations.

He had come over this night only to find fault with her! This was her house, why did she have to be wronged here!

Avery picked up her pillow and covered her face. She was filled with regret! She should not have called Shea an idiot. How was that any different than Elliot immediately assuming that she kidnapped Shea? How could she insult Shea because of Elliot’s hurtful words? However, it was too late. She heard the sound of the car roaring to life outside her window.

Chapter 285

Avery came out of her bedroom. Everyone looked at her at the same time. No one said anything. The atmosphere was extremely awkward.

“Did I cross a line just now?” Avery walked to the sofa and sat down. “I shouldn’t have said that about Shea.”

“No! It was that jerk Elliot who yelled at your first. The moment you said anything he asked you to shut up. I feel like you should have really given it to him! If I were you, I would have yelled him to death! Not only would I have called Shea an idiot, but I would have said that their entire family was a family of idiots!” said Mike, hoping to comfort her.

Avery was slightly stunned at Mike’s comments.

Laura also chimed in comfortingly, “Avery, you were angry. If he had any sense in him, he would know that you did not do it on purpose.”|

“I don’t care what he thinks of me. I’m afraid that Shea would be sad.” Avery lowered her gaze and sighed.

She did not care what Elliot thought. She was afraid that her words spoken out of spite would hurt Shea.

“Shea is not angry. She said that she is an idiot anyway,” Mike comforted her.

“And that is why I’m feeling guilty.” Avery was antsy. She got up from the sofa and returned to her room once again.

Layla and Hayden saw how their mother blamed herself, and they felt terrible too.

Tonight, Hayden finally understood how truly different shea was from them.

Although Shea looked like an adult woman, she did not have the intelligence of an ordinary person. If a young child were to be called an idiot, they would cry and resist the insult. Thus, it seemed pointless for him to be so hostile toward Shea.

Returning to their room, Layla took out her watercolor pens and started drawing.

Hayden went over to have a look.

“Hayden, can you give this to Shea tomorrow?” Layla drew a flower on a piece of white paper.

Hayden was reluctant, but he did not refuse Layla. “I just feel sad for Shea!”

Layla's eyes were red. She pouted. "Who would want to be an idiot? Only an idiot would not mind being an idiot."

Hayden accepted her painting and placed it in his bag.

"Let's not bully Shea too much in the future, okay?" Layla took Hayden's hand and said to him, "We can hate our dirtbag dad, we don't have to hate Shea."

During recess the next day, Shea went to Hayden's classroom as usual. Hayden turned around

Shea was delighted to be given the painting. It was as if last night's incident had no effect on her.

"I like it!" Shea hugged Hayden. Hayden was speechless. He had decided that he would not be so hostile toward her, but he still could not take her being so emotional!

Hayden pushed her away with all his might and quickly returned to the classroom.

He closed the door.

Soon, Shea's nanny came over with a basket of fresh fruits and snacks. The nanny handed the basket to Hayden's teacher.

"Shea got me to give this to Hayden," the nanny said. She glanced at Hayden.

Coincidentally, Hayden looked up too.

In that split second, the nanny seemed to have seen Elliot instead of Hayden.

The nanny returned to Shea's room. Shea was still admiring the painting.

"Shea." The nanny sat down next to her. "Do you think that Hayden looks like your brother?"

Shea nodded. "I like Hayden."

"What I mean is that Hayden might be your brother's son." There was no one in the room, which was why the nanny spoke freely. "If Hayden is truly your brother's son, that means you're his aunt." "Aunt?" Shea furrowed her brows a little.

Chapter 286

"Yes! Shea, you're an aunt!" The nanny chuckled, then sighed. "But I don't think your brother knows about it. I can't be sure that Hayden is your brother's son too."

"He doesn't like Big Brother." Shea looked disappointed.

The nanny said, "That's because your brother has a girlfriend right now. I should really stop talking about this. Their affairs are too complicated."

Shea automatically filtered out the complicated matters and continued admiring the painting that Hayden had given her.

That weekend, Tammy and Avery went out clothes shopping. "If everything goes right, I'm going to Jun's house to celebrate New Year's." Tammy sounded a little nervous. "I heard my father and his father discussing our marriage."

Avery smiled and said, "Isn't that a good thing? You guys have been together for a long time. It 's time you got married."

"But we're both still young! We have not had enough fun yet!" Tammy pulled Avery into a

Avery said, "What's the difference between you two right now and getting married? When comes with marriage. But you and Jun are planning to spend your lives with each other, right?"

"Yes, we do plan to spend our lives together, but who knows how we would think in the future? What if we get sick of each other?" Tammy walked to the section that held the latest season's collection and picked up a casual jacket.

"Avery,

what do you think of this jacket?"

"It's too old fashioned," Avery answered without thinking.

Avery replied, "Oh, I was wondering since when did you have such strange tastes."

"Avery, what's with you today? How could I buy Jun this type of clothing?"
Tammy

took a jab at Avery, "Are you in love?"

Avery said, "Have mercy! I want to live a few more years."

"Haha! You're right. It's less troublesome being single." Tammy had a look at the size of the jacket before asking the staff, "Is there a triple XL for this jacket?"

"There is only double XL for this model. What do you think of this one? This comes in triple XL." The staff showed Tammy another version of the jacket.

Avery did not have a father or any uncles, so there was nothing she wanted to buy.

Avery did not have a father or any uncles, so there was nothing she wanted to buy

She sat down on the sofa, casually flipping through a fashion magazine.

Suddenly, a pair of black boots came into view. She looked up and saw Zoe's face. It was sudden and unexpected.

"Avery, what a coincidence!" Zoe was accompanying her father shopping that day.

She had heard Tammy say Avery's name a moment ago which was why she walked over.

"What a coincidence." Avery sat on the sofa without moving.

Richard walked over and looked at Avery. He asked his daughter, "Is she your friend?"

Zoe replied, "She is Elliot's ex-wife, Avery Tate."

"Oh..." Richard knew about Avery. However, this was his first time seeing her in person. She was different from her photos. She was much more attractive in person.

"I'm done trying on clothes," said Richard to Zoe. He did not acknowledge Avery.

Wanda loathed Avery to death, cursing her in front of him every single day

“Oh, if you like them, just get them all!” said Zoe. She took a card out from her

bag. “After all, Elliot is paying for them.”

Zoe was insinuating that Elliot had given her that card. The staff accepted the card and got her to sign the receipt.

“This is my boyfriend’s card. Should I sign my signature or his?” Zoe’s voice was deliberately loud. It was loud enough for Avery to hear.

“You can sign yours,” the staff member said with envy. “Your boyfriend sure spoils you. There is no spending limit on this card!” Zoe smiled happily, “Yes! He treats me the best. I love him very much too.”

Chapter 287

Avery continued to flip through the magazine. She did not react. Her magazine was suddenly taken away.

“Won’t you feel uncomfortable staying here?” Tammy pulled her up from the sofa

“How unlucky! Meeting annoying people while out shopping.”

Tammy intentionally said it out loud so Zoe could hear.

Avery said, “The shop is here, and anyone can enter.”

“Which is why I said we’re unlucky! I’m not shopping here anymore! Let’s leave.”

Tammy tugged Avery’s hand. She wanted to pull her away.

Avery said, “Why are you such a coward?”

Tammy was stunned by this statement. Yes! Why was she being a coward? She was not afraid of Zoe, why did she have to leave?

Tammy randomly took a few pieces of clothing and headed to the cashier, pulling Avery along.

“What’s so great about swiping another person’s card that you have to boast about it? It’s like they’re not afraid to let people know that they rely on others.”

Tammy mocked Zoe with a smile and said, “True power is the ability to spend one’s own money!”

Although Tammy did not directly mention Zoe’s name, Zoe smiled and turned around when she heard what Tammy had said.

“My, isn’t it Miss Sanford?” Tammy pretended to be stunned and exaggerated her reaction,” Miss Sanford, you’re here shopping? Why is your boyfriend not with you? I heard that you and your boyfriend have gotten closer recently. Could all of that have been a ruse? If not why, why did he only give you his card?

Everyone

has a card, Miss Sanford.”

Zoe’s expressions darkened to the shade of her black card. She knew that Tammy was the only daughter of the Lynchs, and they owned departmental stores all around the country. She was wealthy.

Zoe thought about Avery being the boss of the Tate Industries. She was wealthy too.

Although Elliot had given her a card to use as she pleases, without Elliot, her wealth could not match that of Avery’s or Tammy’s.

The staff started packing the clothes Tammy had placed on the counter.

“Miss, didn’t you ask for triple XL? These sizes are not right,” said the staff member gently.

Tammy smiled calmly and said, “Pack these and everything else I looked at. It doesn’t matter

if they are all the wrong sizes, I can always use them as rags.”

Zoe's face turned blue. Richard realized that Tammy was not a woman to be offended, so he pulled his daughter away.

Coming out of the shop, Zoe shrugged Richard's hand away. "Dad! Why did you pull me away? I'm not afraid of them! It's so embarrassing this way!"

Richard said, "We've already paid. Why are we still staying there? What good could come out of you fighting them? If Elliot finds out about this, do you think he will like you? Men do not like feisty vixens."

Zoe took a deep breath and suppressed her indignations.

In the shop, Avery placed the clothes whose sizes were not right back on the rack.

"Tammy, you were too reckless."

Tammy harrumphed, "You need to be firm when you go up against b*tches like her. Did you hear how loud she was when she showed off her card? It was as if she was using a megaphone. She was clearly talking loudly for you to hear. You might be able to take it, but I can't!"

Tammy had seen too many b*tches like Zoe whose tactics were not great, so it was a piece of cake for Tammy to deal with people like them.

Coming out of the shop, they found a restaurant to have a meal.

“Elliot has been treating Zoe extremely well.” Tammy glanced at Avery, “Zoe’s

father has been back in the country for some time already. He wanted to invest in some businesses in the country. Elliot used his connections to introduce her to a few people.”

She did not care about his relationship with Zoe.

“I just think that you don’t really love him anymore, so I want to see your reaction

when I

“Even if I don’t love him, that doesn’t mean I want to hear about him.” Avery picked up the glass of water and took a sip. “I want to see if you would be happy if I mentioned your ex in front of you.”

Chapter 288

“I’ll still be happy! My ex and I are still good friends!”

Avery was speechless.

“Avery, who knows. Maybe they would get married,” Tammy continued, likes Zoe a lot. Also, Elliot seemed to have come to his senses. Jun and I are speculating that if Shea's second operation is a success by New Year's, he will definitely marry Zoe."
“Rosalie

Avery said calmly, "I wish them all the best."

"You have to look ahead too!" Tammy was worried for Avery. "You're still young.

Your mom can help you take care of your two kids. Also, they are already in school, so you don't have to worry about them too much. You can start enjoying life." "I will enjoy it," Avery said with a smile. "Can you stop looking at me with pity? It's not illegal to be single, right?"

"Don't overthink it. I think you just have too much time on your hands. Why don't you plan your wedding?!"

"I have two children, how am I going to be your bridesmaid?"

"Whoever said that a divorcee who has children can't be a bridesmaid? I will make whoever I want my bridesmaid," Tammy said. "This is perfect. Your children can be my page boy and flower girl."

Avery did not know whether to laugh or cry.

Her phone rang. She immediately picked up her phone and saw that it was from Officer Boyd. She immediately answered the call.

“Miss Tate, James Worsley decide to appeal. I just got the latest arrangement from the supreme court. His case will only be heard in court next year, so have a good New Year’s.”

“Okay, thank you!”

“Don’t worry. His appeal is just him trying to delay the outcome. The outcome will not change.

“Hmm, I have faith in our justice system.”

That evening, Avery returned home with an assortment of bags.

The moment she entered, her two children immediately came over and took her shopping bags from her

“Mommy, what did you buy? The next time you go shopping with Aunt Tarnmy can you take me along?” Layla was already on winter break.

won't! I'll wear a beanie and a mask!" Layla took out the new clothes and shoes from the shopping bag. Gradually, delight replaced her dissatisfaction.

Laura came over and said to Avery, "Your Uncle Ron is asking us to go back for New Year's. If you don't want to go, I'll go alone."

"Let me ask Mike if he is going back to Bridgedale."

"I've asked him. He said he is staying. He doesn't celebrate the New Year's in Bridgedale," Laura said.

"Oh, then why don't you go see Uncle Ron on your own? If you want to take the kids along too,

Laura shook her head. "I'm not taking the kids with me. They know that you have money now, which was why they contacted me. While I was abroad, not once did they contact me. They didn't even inform me when your grandmother passed away."

"Why not just stay here?" Avery felt sad when she saw her mother's disappointment.

"I have to go. I need to visit your grandmother's grave."

Avery hugged her mother. “Mom, you have to take good care of yourself. If not, I won't have any close family with me anymore.”

“What nonsense! Even if I pass on, you still have your children!”

“It's different. I can be cheeky with you. I can't do that with my kids?” Avery took a deep breath.

After dinner, the two children were playing in the living area with Mike.

Avery was on her phone when she came across a news article. (Elliot Foster, President of Sterling Group, Buys His Girlfriend an Extravagant Wedding Ring!)

The photo was a secret snapshot. Avery recognized the figure in the photo. It was indeed Elliot. Next to him was Zoe, smiling brightly with a ring in her hand!

Chapter 289

Avery looked at the photo. Without knowing it, she fell into a daze. How could she not feel anything when it came to him?

Her heart hurt a little would she give him her blessing? No.

“Avery, what are you daydreaming about? Your children are bullying me! Come and help me!” Mike walked over to the sofa and pulled Avery up, placing himself behind her.

Avery immediately snapped back to reality. She looked normal.

“Hayden, about changing schools after the New Year’s. Have you thought about it?”

This question instantly subdued the atmosphere in the living room.

“Mommy, are you letting Hayden go to the same preschool as me?” Layla asked excitedly.

“Hayden is not going to preschool; he is going to elementary school,” Avery said.

Hayden nodded.

Although his relationship with Shea was not as bad as it was before, Shea was one of Elliot’s people, and he did not like Elliot one bit. So, only by leaving Angela Special Needs Academy and Shea would he stay out of trouble.

“Woo, woo! I’m as big as Hayden. Why does he get to go to elementary school while I’m still stuck in preschool? I want to go to elementary school too!” Layla grumbled while tugging on Avery's hand.

Laura came over and picked Layla up. "Layla, even if you want to go to elementary school, you have to wait for Hayden to get used to it before going.

Okay?"

"Oh. Okay then!"

Avery smiled and said, "Layla, there's an entrance exam for the elementary school. Let's see whether Hayden can pass it or not."

Layla was in a daze. "Uh, that sounds hard. I think I'll stick to preschool!"

It started snowing heavily at eleven that night.

When Avery opened the window of her bathroom, she caught a glimpse of the view.

Coming out of her bathroom, she opened the curtains of her room. Looking at the snow coming down, she felt calm.

She thought about her past to a time before she had broken up with Elliot. She remembered the things they had gone through. The passing of the seasons was a cycle of life and death.

For a person who was alive, what mattered the most was life and death.
The

others were unimportant

Avery took a deep breath. If it snowed through the night, she could build a snowman with her children tomorrow. They would be delighted.

with this sense of peace in her, Avery got in bed, switched off the lights, and went to sleep.

Elliot exited the study of his mansion and returned to his bedroom.

Elliot just came out from his study and returned to his bedroom. Just when he was about to close his curtains, he noticed the snow outside his window.

He blinked for a while. His hands hesitated for a bit too.

He suddenly thought back to the winter five years ago. Avery had knitted a sweater for him. It was a thick sweater. He never liked sweaters.

However, when he had received the sweater, he had immediately put it on.
He still remembered how his heart had thrummed with joy when he wore the sweater she had made.

He walked over to his closet and opened it. In it, that ordinary-looking sweater

was still hanging there. It stood out against all the other branded shirts and suits.

After their breakup, he had never worn it again.

He did not know why, but he took the sweater out and put it over his head. The sweater was warm, but his heart was cold.

That day, Zoe had asked him. She wanted to go shopping with him. He accompanied her. When they passed by a jewelry shop, she was attracted by the pieces of jewelry there. She picked a very cheap ring. Elliot said nothing but paid the bill. It was as if he had given her the ring.

He was still not in love with her, but she was quiet. She never disturbed him. If he had to find a woman to settle down with, he could bear living with a woman like her. In the coming spring, if she could cure Shea, he was going to marry her.

Chapter 290

A package was delivered to Starry River Villa the next morning. Laura accepted the package and placed it on the table.

The kids saw the thick pile of snow outside, so they eagerly put on their coats and ran out.

the temperature to drop by a fair amount.

Avery came out of her room in her pajamas. It was so cold in the living area that she returned to her room to grab her coat.

“Avery, there’s a package for you on the table!” Laura’s head popped out from the kitchen.

“Oh, I didn’t buy anything!” Avery walked to the table and picked up the package.

She was stumped. “What is it?”

“The thing in the package seemed very soft, like a sweater or some sort,” Laura said.

Avery took a pair of scissors and opened the package. Sure enough, it was a sweater.

The moment she saw the sweater, she instantly recognized it as the one she had given Elliot. His return of the sweater signified the end of their relationship. He was cutting all ties to her.

Avery wanted to throw the sweater into the bin, but she thought back to the amount of effort she had placed into making the sweater, and she could not bear to throw it away.

When punishing others, one should be careful to not punish oneself.

Avery picked up the sweater, and Elliot's scent instantly flooded her. She furrowed her brows,

When Laura saw Avery carrying the sweater, she immediately understood what had happened.

"Avery, you should give it away."

"No, I put a lot of effort into making it. I'm going to wear it." She could not bear to throw it away or donate it. The sweater was as good as new. Elliot must have worn it only a couple of times.

Laura sighed. "Avery, why don't you go and see the kids. They are building a snowman."

"Hmm." Avery placed the sweater into the washing machine before heading outside.

The moment she appeared Layla immediately tugged on her hand.

“Mommy, help Hayden with the snowman! I’ll go look for Grandma to get some carrots for the snowman’s nose!” Layla said excitedly and ran into the villa.

Avery looked at Hayden’s small red hands. “Are you cold?”

Scanned with CamScanner

Avery looked at Hayden’s small red hands. “Are you cold?”

“No ” Hayden grabbed Avery’s hands. His hands were hot.

“What do you want for your New Year’s gift?” Avery smiled and asked.

“A computer,” Hayden answered without thinking.

Avery furrowed her brows, slightly troubled. “I will return your computer to you, but you can’ t use it to do bad things.”

“Hmm!” he hummed.

In the afternoon, Mike found Avery and said to her, “I asked Chad to come here and hang out with me for the New Year’s. I’m sure you’re alright with that, right?”

enough for them?

“Let me buy you an apartment! There are so many offers on the market. Let’s go.

We'll go look at houses right now!" Avery pulled Mike along, intending to take him out.

"I want to stay with you! What if I fall sick? If I'm with you, at least you can take care of me when I fall sick. If I were to stay alone, no one would know if I died."

After falling ill, Mike no longer liked staying alone.

"Have you confirmed your relationship with Chad?" Avery's mind was a mess.

Mike had an incredulous look. "What are you thinking? Chad and I are just purely friends!"

"But you two have done it with each other."

"Stop bringing up the past! He says that he is a good cook, so I got him to cook a meal for me, " Mike explained. "You just tell him that you don't know how to cook and we'll let him do it."

Avery reluctantly agreed.

Soon, it was New Year's Eve.

Laura made a feast. Avery placed three tripods and cameras around the dining table. She wanted to record the first festive meal they had after returning to the county.

After setting the cameras up, her phone on the dining table rang.

“Mommy! Your phone!” Layla picked up Avery’s phone and rushed to Avery’s side excitedly, passing it to her.

Chapter 291

Avery took her phone from Layla She saw that it was from Wesley.

She immediately answered

“Avery, happy new year!” Wesley’s delighted voice carne through Avery chuckled. “Wesley, happy new year’s eve! I’ll save the new year greeting for tomorrow.”

“Hahaha! Have you all had your dinner? I initially wanted to call you later, but the hospital just passed on a piece of good news to me, so I can’t wait to tell you about it,” Wesley paused for a while before saying, “Eric can sit up! He is slowly gaining consciousness!”

Avery said, “That’s amazing!”

“Avery, he and his family wanted to thank you. They said that they want to visit you after the New Year’s,” Wesley said.

“There’s no need to trouble them. I’ll go see him after the New Year’s. Right now, all he needs to focus on is his rehab. The others are unimportant.”

“How is it unimportant? They want to pay for his medical expenses. They asked me what would be an appropriate amount. I told him to discuss the matter with

you.”

Avery was silent for a while. “I was just helping Professor Hough complete his unfinished work. If they want to pay for his medical expenses, tell them to pay it to Professor Hough’s family at the rate they had previously agreed upon.”

Wesley said, “I knew you wouldn’t want it.”

“Professor Hough left too suddenly.” Avery’s voice suddenly turned glum. “I find it hard to accept it even now. He had saved so many people, yet in the end, he left us so early.”

“Perhaps God saw how tired Professor Hough was, so He let him rest early.

Avery, let's think

you."

"I should be the one visiting you," Avery said. "I'll take my kids along too."

"Okay! I'm free after the second day of New Year's. You can come any time."

"Okay!"

After hanging up, Avery carried Layla back to the dining table and sat down.

Laura passed her a bowl of ravioli.

"Mom, your ravioli sure is huge today." Avery looked at the ravioli in her bowl, smiled, and said, "Did you give me the ravioli with the coin?"

Laura merely smiled.

Laura merely smiled

Avery carefully put the ravioli in her mouth and gently bit down. She bit into something hard. Taking out the coin, she said with a grin, "I knew that you love me the most! I will be very lucky in the coming year!"

Mike sneered and placed a ravioli in his mouth too. Then, he took out a coin from his mouth.

"Laura placed coins in all the ravioli. I saw her do it."

Avery said, "Mom, it won't come true that way."

"Why not? I hope that every one of you has good luck!" Laura retorted.

"Then, if there was only one ravioli with the coin, who would you give it to?"
Avery

was deliberately making things difficult for her mother.

Laura looked at how childish Avery was being. She gave in. "Of course, it would be you! Once you're lucky, you can take good care of Layla, Hayden, and Mike."

Avery was pleased with the answer. After the pleasant meal, Avery got her mother to rest.

Mike stayed in the kitchen and helped Avery with the dishes.

Soon, it was the third day of New Year's.

Laura returned to her old home early in the morning. Not long after Laura left,

Avery took her two children and left.

Chad would be having Mike over that day, so she chose that day for her visit with Wesley.

"Avery, let's go skiing!" Wesley suggested. "They made a snow palace over there.

It's gorgeous. I'll take a photo of you three."

“Okay!” Avery agreed when she saw how excited her children were.

At the same moment, in the back of the black Rolls–Royce, Shea was looking out at the snow in excitement.

Elliot had booked the snow palace for the day so that Shea could play. Shea liked to play, but she was afraid of crowded places. So every time Elliot took her out, he would reserve the place beforehand. Zoe was with them today. This time, it was Elliot who had asked her out.

Elliot rarely looked at Zoe, but even so, he realized that she was much weaker than before. He did not know whether she had found him exhausting or whether Shea’s treatment had taken a lot out of her.

Soon, Shea would undergo her second surgery. He hoped that Zoe would be able to stay in good shape.

Chapter 292

There was a large crowd at the ski area.

“Where is the snow palace?” Avery asked Wesley. There were too many people there. She was afraid for her children's safety, so she wanted to head to the snow palace to have a look

"Behind the ski area," Wesley pointed her in the direction of the palace.

One of the tourists overheard their conversation and said kindly, "Are you heading to the snow palace? It's not open to the public today. I heard that someone has booked it for the day..

"The huge snow palace has been booked?" Wesley was a little surprised.

"Yes! Death to the rich! Why did they have to book it during the New Year's! How terrible! The ski area is filled with people today because the snow palace has been booked," the tourist said angrily

Wesley said to Avery awkwardly, "Why don't we head over and have a look. I can try talking to the person who booked the area."

The trip would have been in vain if they did not at least try. The journey had taken close to two hours, but the children had been in good spirits throughout the journey. If they could not enter the palace, they would be extremely disappointed.

Avery nodded. She smiled and tried to smoothen the situation, "It's fine if we can't go. We can see it from the outside! The surrounding scenery is gorgeous too! We can just take photos around us."

Wesley nodded. "Avery, I'm sorry! I should have checked online before coming."

"It has nothing to do with you. We can still come here again next time."

"Hmm."

At the snow palace, Shea was happily wandering around the dreamy castle made of ice and snow.

Elliot held the camera, capturing her smiles. Zoe stood by the side, watching this warm and sweet scene.

"Elliot, let me take a photo of the two of you!" Zoe offered. Elliot passed the camera to her and walked toward Shea.

Wesley, Avery, and the kids stood outside the gates of the snow palace. Just when Wesley was about to talk to the bodyguards guarding the snow palace, Avery pulled him back.

“Wesley, we can’t go in!” Avery’s expressions suddenly turned cold. She had recognized Elliot’s bodyguard.

The person that booked the snow palace was Elliot. He was never into funfairs, so did he book it for Zoe or Shea?

Pulling Wesley along, Avery turned around. Right at that moment, while the bodyguards were distracted by Avery and Wesley, Layla, pulling Hayden, dashed past the gates.

“Mommy! We’re inside!” Layla said excitedly.

Avery was speechless. The bodyguards were baffled too.

Just when the bodyguards were about to catch the two children, Avery immediately ran after them.

“Don’t hurt my kids! I’ll take them out right now!”

The two bodyguards saw Avery and Wesley entering. They were even more baffled.

One of the bodyguards came to his senses. “It’s fine. That’s Miss Tate. Mr. Foster won’t blame us.”

“But they are divorced!”

“They are divorced but that doesn’t mean they are enemies. Also, Miss Shea seems to be close to that boy.”

“Oh, I heard that the boy is Mr. Foster’s son. Say, why do you think he won’t acknowledge his son?”

“Who did you hear it from?”

“... I came to that conclusion myself. Don’t you think that boy looks like Mr. Foster?”

“Mind your own business.”

Layla and Hayden ran deeper into the snow palace.

“Mommy, let me and Hayden play here for a while! If they can’t catch us, we can play here for a while... ouch!” Layla was running so quickly that she had accidentally bumped into a large figure!

Chapter 293

Elliot lowered his gaze and saw Layla’s face scrunched up in pain.

His heart skipped a beat!

Layla could not have come alone! Did that mean... Avery was here as well? He looked behind Layla and only saw Hayden quickly running over and pulling Layla into his arms. He looked at her clutching her face. He immediately took her hand away and checked if she was injured.

“Hayden, I’m fine. I bumped into someone, and my nose hurts a little.”
Layla’s

eyes were red. She looked pitiful.

Hayden held her hand tightly and looked up to face Elliot’s cold face. An inexplicable hostility sprang up between father and son.

At that moment, Shea saw Hayden and Layla. She was delighted and surprised!

“Hayden! Layla!” Shea quickly walked toward them. Hayden noticed and immediately pulled Layla to him. He turned and left.

Layla kept looking back, reluctant to leave the beautiful ice kingdom. When her gaze finally fell on Elliot, she stuck her tongue out at him.

Elliot ignored Layla’s provocation. He immediately pulled Shea back, not letting her go after them.

Avery and Wesley arrived not too far from the scene. When they saw Hayden and Layla, Avery sighed in relief. At the same time, she said sternly, "Layla, how could you be so reckless!"

Layla reached out and rubbed her eyes. She said, aggrieved, "Mommy, it's pretty in here. I wanted to come and play!"

"Not today! I'll take you here another time!" Avery picked her daughter up. From the corner of her eye, she saw Elliot and his two women. She had never thought that he would bring them here together. How harmonious!

Sure enough, if one waited long enough, one would get what they wanted. Zoe was amazing.

When Elliot noticed Avery, his gaze quickly landed on Wesley, who was next to her. Although Wesley looked ordinary, he seemed like a nice guy. They did not look like a good match, but if he was Avery's choice, Elliot could only respect that.

"Shea, let's go somewhere else to play, okay?" Elliot said to Shea.

Shea nodded distractedly. She did not understand why Hayden had ignored her.

Previously, in school, she was rather close to him.

Elliot held Shea's hand. When he walked past Avery, he stopped and said, "We're leaving. You guys go play!"

If it were not for her children wanting to play, Avery would not have accepted his charity.

After they had left, Layla pulled Hayden along and started running around.

Wesley saw how cold Avery's expression was. He tried to comfort her, "Avery, don't let him affect your mood. He is quite generous. I guess they must have arrived not too long ago."

"Yes! If we did not enter, they would not have left," Avery laughed self-deprecatingly. "He is great, giving it up for us."

"The reason you are so angry at him, could it possibly be because you still care for him?" Wesley's tone was relaxed, teasing.

Avery realized she had lost her composure. She instantly blushed.

"Wesley, don't play jokes like this on me in the future. He is extremely happy. He has the people he loves around him now. My appearance only ruined his mood."

“Hahaha! Don’t look down! Let’s go find the kids, in case they run too far away!”

“You go ahead and look for them. I’ll go let the staff know they can open up the snow palace,” Avery said and strode out to the entrance.

She was not in the habit of reserving the entire area to herself.

She stopped by the entrance of the ticketing booth and explained the situation to the staff.” But Mr. Foster has reserved it for the day,” said a member of the staff.

“Donate the extra money you get from the tickets to charity.” The staff member replied, “Let me consult my manager.”

Chapter 294

Avery nodded.

just as she was about to re enter the snow palace, she saw Zoe, who was not far away, go limp. She was about to fall.

Elliot reacted quickly and picked her in his arms!

When Avery saw this scene, her eyes fluttered. The air seemed to have frozen.

Time seemed to have stopped.

“Dr. Sanford, are you alright?” Elliot lifted Zoe. His eyes were filled with worry.

Zoe saw how worried he looked. She smiled gently and said, “Elliot, I’m sorry! I was so excited about going out with you today that I couldn’t sleep last night. I felt a little dizzy just now. I’m fine.”

Elliot sighed in relief. Nothing could happen to Zoe! He still needed her to treat

Shea!

“Let’s go home!” Elliot carried Zoe and headed to the parking lot.

After the staff member consulted his manager, he said to Avery, “Miss, my boss has agreed to your solution, but we need you to give us your contact details. This is in case Mr. Foster asks us about the matter at a later time, then we have an explanation for him.”

Avery came to her senses. The staff member passed her a notebook and pen.

“Miss, please write down your name and your contact number.”

Avery had not heard what he had previously said, but she stiffly wrote down her contact details.

Laura was at the Jensens. She had brought some expensive gifts with her and gave them to her younger relatives.

Everyone was extremely friendly and passionate toward her. Even her sister-in-law, who used to be hostile toward her, not only served her tea but also fruits and desserts.

“Laura, why didn’t you bring Avery along with you?”

Laura accepted the cup of tea. “She went to visit a friend.”

“Oh, get her to come when she is free! We all miss her very much!”

“Hmm! I will tell her that, but she doesn’t listen to me much anymore. After all, she has her own opinions. Also, she’s quite busy with her company,” Laura said politely.

“Yes! Who would have thought that she could revitalize Tate Industries! How impressive!” Laura’s sister-in-law said. She looked at her own son. “Laura, our Brent has just finished graduate school last year. He has been looking for jobs, but it was always either the play was Laura’s sister-in-law said. She looked at her own son. “Laura, our Brent has just finished graduate school last year. He has been looking for jobs, but it was always either the pay was too low or the job was not suited to him. Do you think you could talk to Avery and see if she could get Brent a job in the finance department of Tate Industries?"

Laura refused without thinking, "Avery is still fighting a legal battle with the previous finance director. I can't interfere with the finance department."

Laura's sister-in-law's expression immediately changed. "You are her mother.

How could she not listen to you? You just don't want to help us, right?"

Laura placed her teacup down. "Say all you want. I won't do something that will make things difficult for Avery." Laura stood up.

"Laura, don't be angry! I'll take you to visit mom's grave!" Laura's brother saw what happened and immediately took Laura out.

At five in the afternoon, Laura had just finished dinner and left the Jensens. She walked to the side of the road to hail a taxi.

In a moment, a taxi pulled up in front of her. Once she got in the car, the taxi drove onto the highway.

A driver in a black Sentana downed a bottle of wine. He was tailing her.
Downing

his wine, he floored the car, chasing after the taxi.

At five thirty in the afternoon, an accident caused by a driver driving under influence happened on Creek's Road!

Once the traffic police arrived at the scene, they picked up the phone of the deceased and dialed her family.

When Avery saw that it was her mother calling, she smiled and picked up the call.

"Mom, we'll be returning soon!"

"Hello, this is the Captain of the Second Squad talking. A serious accident happened on Creek's Road, causing the death of a woman. I am contacting
you with her phone. Are you a member of her family? If you are, please come here

quickly!"

Chapter 295

Screech!

Avery immediately slammed on the emergency brakes, stopping her car by the road.

An accident? Death?

An explosion went off in her brain, then tears quickly fell!

“Mommy, why did you suddenly stop the car?” Layla exclaimed.

Hayden got nervous too. “Mommy, why are you crying?”

“Mommy, what happened to you? Don’t cry!” Layla said and started to choke up.

She started to cry too.

Avery heard her children’s voices and suddenly drew a sharp breath.

She wiped the tears off her face with both hands and said hoarsely, “I’ll send you two home. Wait for me there. I have something I need to handle.”

The car was once again on the road.

Layla and Hayden were still quite worried.

“Mommy, what happened? Why are you so sad?”

Avery took a deep breath and lied, “Something... happened to Mommy’s friend.

When you go home, behave. I might be back late. If Uncle Mike is not home, I’ll call him to come to take care of you two.”

“Oh, Mommy! Don’t cry! Your friend will get better!” Layla said caringly.

“Mommy, don’t cry,” Hayden comforted awkwardly.

Avery responded hoarsely.

The car arrived at Starry River Villa. Mike and Chad were having dinner at home.

Avery opened the door, let the children in, and left without entering.

When Mike came out of the dining hall, she had left with her car.

“Layla! Where is your mother going? Why did she not even come in?” Mike asked in confusion.

“Mommy said that something has happened to one of her friends. She was crying terribly,” Layla said heartbrokenly. She speculated, “Could it be Aunt Tammy? I really liked Aunt Tammy

Mike ruffled her head. He turned around and picked up his phone from the table and dialed Avery No one picked up

After hanging up, he called once again. Still, no one picked up.

Avery did not have many friends besides Tammy.

Could something really have happened to Tammy? Mike found Tammy’s number and called

her.

Soon, the call was answered. Tammy's confused voice came through, "Did you have the wrong number? Or is there a party?"

Clearly, Tammy was fine. If something were to happen to her, she would not have been thinking of parties.

"I'm sorry, I misdialed." Mike hung up. His expression was grim. He dialed Avery once more.

This time, she finally picked up.

"Avery Tate! What the hell are you doing? Why are you not picking up my calls! If you still had not answered, I would have gone looking for you!" Mike said with his hand on his waist. He took his phone and went out to get some cold air.

"Who's in trouble? I called Tammy and she seems fine."

Avery took a deep breath and sobbed. "My mom. Mike. Please help me look after the kids for a while."

"What happened to Laura!" Mike's chest felt tight.

The call was dropped.

Mike held his phone and furrowed his brows. Chad came out from the living room.

He asked, "What's going on? What happened?"

"Something happened to Avery's mom. I think it's serious. She's crying hard! I bloody want to look for her, but she's asking me to look after the kids at home!"

Mike swore in a low voice.

Chad's expression turned grim. "I'll go check out what happened to her mother.

You take care of the kids at home!" When Avery rushed to the scene of the accident, it was already dark

Chapter 296

Under the street lights, Avery saw her mother's bloody face. She raised her trembling fingers and placed them under her mother's nose.

A breeze blew by. Avery wailed, "Mom, I know you're not dead! You promised to be with me for the rest of my life! I'm going to send you to the hospital now! Don't be afraid! I'll be with you! I'll always be with you!"

When Chad found out about Laura's accident, he hesitated for a while before calling Elliot.

He would not have disturbed Elliot except he wanted to know that Avery at least had someone by her side.

"Mr. Foster, Avery's mother, met an accident this evening. She died on the spot.

Avery still can't accept this news. She sent her mother to the hospital. Mike is taking care of the kids at home. She'll be alone dealing with her mother's funeral.

I feel it would be hard on her. Do you want to—"

"Which hospital?" Elliot swallowed. His voice sounded stern yet nervous. "Which hospital is she at right now?!"

His terrifying expression and voice frightened Shea so much that she cowered in fear.

Zoe had never seen Elliot that way before. It was as if all the care and heartbreak he had kept in his heart had surfaced. Zoe did not know who was on the other end of the line, but she knew that his heartbroken and worried for Avery.

They had barely spent half an hour at the snow palace because Avery and her children had wanted to play. He had left the place in a heartbeat for them.

In his heart, Avery was more important to him than Shea was. If Shea was not mentally challenged, he would place Avery before shea.

After Elliot finished his call, he walked out. Zoe panicked and chased after him.

“Elliot, what happened? What’s going on?”

He heard her voice, but he ignored her. He did not even stop. Zoe only heard the sound of her heart breaking into pieces.

Recently, Elliot had been good to her. She had thought that he had come to accept her, and they would soon get married and be happily in love.

However, all it took was one phone call for their relationship to return to square

one.

At the hospital, Avery had sent her mother to the emergency room. She cleaned her mother’s wounds, dressing them, and stopping the bleeding. She had sown the opened wound stitch by stitch.

Under the lights, her mother’s skin turned paler by the moment. Her body temperature was dropping

Her hopes were all gone! “Mom... I’m sorry! Mom! I should have followed you to Uncle Ron’s! I should not have left you alone! I’m sorry! It’s all my fault! It’s all my fault!” Avery lay on the operation table, hugging her mother’s cold body, sobbing in tears.

Elliot rushed to the hospital. He looked cold and unapproachable Chad saw him and immediately went up to him.

“Mr. Foster, the perpetrator was driving under the influence of alcohol. He did not die but suffered serious injuries. At that moment, we can’t be sure if it was purely an accident or murder.” Chad reported what he had found to Elliot.

“Where’s Avery?”

“She’s in the operation theater.” Chad paused for a while before saying, “She wanted to save her mother, but her mother has passed away. I’m worried that she can’t take the blow, and this might cause her psychological trauma.”

Elliot’s eyes reddened. He clenched his fists tightly. It was as if a huge hand was choking his neck. He hoped badly that he could bear her pain for her.

In a moment, he was outside the operation theater. He could vaguely hear her sobs. He was heartbroken. It was as if someone had stabbed him with a knife. He held onto the handles of the door to the operation theater.

Just when he was about to push the door open and enter, his phone rang!

“Elliot, where are you right now!?” On the other end of the line, Rosalie’s anxious voice came through. “Zoe passed out! She is pregnant with your child! Your child is almost five months old!”

Avery’s suppressed sobs were mixed with his mother’s agitated voice.

Elliot’s face turned miserably pale! Zoe was pregnant? Pregnant with his child?!

Chapter 297

Elliot has only slept with Zoe once, yet she got pregnant from that time?

He released the handles to the door of the operation theater.

Chad noticed the changes in his expression. His heart was beating wildly. What happened? Why was he not entering to see Avery?

“Chad, stay here,” Elliot said bitterly, “I have to go back.”

Chad nodded. He dared not ask any questions. After Elliot left, Chad pushed the door to the operation theater open and took a glance inside.

Avery had taken her jacket off and placed it over Laura. She sat listlessly next to Laura. Avery grabbed Laura's hand tightly, crying, and muttering something.

Chad's eyes reddened upon seeing this. He closed the door. He took his phone out, found Wesley's contact, and called him.

Once he notified Wesley, he left the hospital and drove back to Starry River Villa.

He could do nothing for Avery at the hospital, so he thought he might swap places with Mike. He would take care of her two kids while Mike went to take care of

Avery.

When Chad returned to the villa, the two children were already asleep.

Chad

updated Mike

about the situation before Mike rushed out with reddened eyes.

Instantly, the villa was silent. Chad entered the children's room. The two of them were quietly asleep in bed. They had a long day out, so they slept soundly.

A warm night light was placed next to the bed. Chad wanted to have a good look at the children 's faces, so he turned the lights brighter. Instantly, it was bright as

day.

Layla looked very much like Avery. She was pretty and adorable. Even in sleep, she looked extremely lovely

As for Hayden, without his cap, he was not that icy and aloof. When he was sound asleep, he looked more like how a kid his age should.

Chad dimmed the lights and turned to see a long children's study desk. On it was stationery, books, and a laptop.

The laptop should be Hayden's.

From what Chad had seen of him, Hayden was not a problematic child. He was a genius. He should not be sent to a school for children with special needs, but to a special school for gifted children.

It was a pity that Avery only thought of him as an ordinary boy.

When Mike arrived at the hospital, Laura had already been sent to the morgue.

Wesley was sitting next to Avery on one of the long benches that lined the hospital corridors. Nurses and other family members rushed by them from time to time, bringing in the freezing wind with them.

“Avery!” Mike was extremely heartbroken to see Avery that way. She looked so empty.

Upon hearing Mike’s voice, Avery lifted her head.

“Why are you here? What about the kids?” She sounded hoarse. Her eyes were extremely red and puffy too.

Avery stood up from the bench.

Mike strode over to her and hugged her. “Avery, don’t be afraid! You still have me!

I will always be with you—”

Avery’s head hurt. She shoved Mike away and yelled, “I’m asking you where are the kids? Didn’t I ask you to watch over them?”

“The kids are asleep, don’t worry. Chad is looking after them. He is the one who suggested that I be here with you. I want to be with you, so I came.” Mike grabbed Avery’s hands. He was shocked by how cold her hands felt.

Chapter 298

Mike immediately took off his jacket and draped it over her.

“Go back!” Avery’s eyes were filled with tears, but her voice was aloof and stern.

“How could you let an outsider take care of the kids!”

Her mother had passed away. She had decided that she could not let anything happen to her children. If anything were to happen to her children, she would not be able to live.

Mike looked at how sad and angry she was. His mind was a mess.

“I’ll go back now! Stop crying!” Mike reached out and wiped the tears from her face. “I won’t bring him home in the future! Don’t cry anymore!” Mike said frantically before leaving quickly.

While all this was going on, Elliot was at another hospital. He pushed the door to the ward open. Zoe was on the bed, and when she saw him, she immediately squeezed two streams of tears out of her eyes.

Rosalie strode to the door and pulled him in.

“Elliot, how could you two be so careless? The child is already so huge, yet none of you knew about it.” Although Rosalie’s tone was reproachful, her face was filled with smiles. "The doctor has just checked up on Zoe. Mother and son are safe."

Mother and son? Zoe was pregnant with a son? How ridiculous!

"Elliot, I'm sorry! I didn't know I was pregnant. I have hypomenorrhea, my menstruation is usually never on time. When I'm stressed, my period usually comes after every six months. So, unlike other women, I can't tell whether I'm pregnant or not based on how late my period is. I never thought I would be pregnant," Zoe explained while looking at Elliot's cold face.

"Abort it!" His voice was cold and ruthless.

Those two words almost killed Zoe. At the same time, Rosalie almost passed out.

"No! You can't abort the child!" Rosalie, with the help of the nanny, quickly collected her thoughts and said strongly, "Zoe has hypomenorrhea. It's hard for her to get pregnant! Also, she is quite old. The child in her is quite big too. If you abort the child at this stage, it might kill her! Do you want to continue Shea's treatment? Elliot, consider that!"

Elliot's face turned blue upon hearing his mother's words. He needed Zoe to treat

Shea, so nothing can happen to Zoe.

He took a step back. He was so heartbroken it was suffocating. His pride, dignity, and courage had been stepped on by others. Every step he took had been a mistake!

Other than bearing it, was there any other choice?

Other than bearing it, was there any other choice?

He strode out of the ward. Zoe's tears fell silently.

"Zoe, don't cry! I'm here. He won't dare to touch you!" Rosalie passed Zoe a tissue to wipe her face. "You must have the child. Only by having the child, can I guarantee that he will marry you! As long as I'm alive, your standing in the Fosters will never change!"

Zoe croaked, "He must hate me to death. He doesn't like children. Even if I gave birth to one, he would not like it -"

"Zoe, no! As long as you give birth to a healthy child, he will like it. Who wouldn't like their own children?" In an effort to comfort Zoe, she told her the truth about Elliot. "Elliot is kinder than anyone else. He only doesn't want a child because he is afraid that the child would be unhealthy, and it might suffer from pain and discrimination in the future."

"Why? Wouldn't there be checkups? If the child is not healthy, I will not carry it to term," said Zoe. She stopped crying.

Rosalie hesitated. She did explain the deeper reason behind her statement.

"Zoe, just remember what I said. As long as the child in you has no problems, he will not treat you and your child badly."

Zoe nodded. "I got it."

The next day, the news of Zoe's pregnancy was released, and it spread throughout the city of Avonsville.

Avery was at the funeral parlor when she heard the news.

"That woman sure is smart! Getting pregnant with Elliot's child. Even if she doesn't marry into the Fosters in the future, she could ensure her standing with the child!"

"Yes! How infuriating! Elliot is not only rich, but he is also good-looking! To be able to be selected by him to bear his child, isn't that just a modern-day Cinderelli!"

Avery carried her mother's urn as she walked, step by step, out of the funeral parlor.

Chapter 299

Mike and the children were at Starry River Villa having breakfast when he told them about Laura's death.

"I know that you are very sad, and I'm very sad too. But, your Grandma is gone. I hope that you can be strong for Mommy because she is extremely sad right now.

If you are sad too, your Mommy will be even more in pain."

Mike took each child in one arm and hugged them and kissed them on the head.

Layla did not take the news well. She was sobbing, and her lips were quivering.

She said weakly, "I want Grandma... I want to look for Grandma..."

Hayden's eyes were wet too, but he was much stronger. Not only did he not cry, but he even hugged Layla. "Layla, don't cry. I'll be with you."

"I don't want to be apart from Grandma. Without Grandma, what would happen to us?" Layla felt as if the sky had been ripped apart. Laura had been the one to send her to school, made delicious food for her, and who had taken her out to play.

"Layla, don't be afraid. Without Grandma, we can still live well. When your Mommy comes back, we will not cry in front of her, okay?" Mike said. "I take you out to play, and we'll have good food in the future."

"I want my Grandma... Where do dead people go when they die? I want to go get her..." Layla rubbed her eyes. Her tears drenched her hands.

Mike saw how sad Layla was. He decided to tell her the truth. It was much better to rip the band -aid off in one go.

"Once a person dies, that's it. Your Grandma will not come back. She has vanished from our lives and this earth."

Layla hugged Hayden and sobbed louder when she heard what Mike said. Mike clutched his forehead with both hands. After a while, he called Wesley.

"Mike, how are the kids?" Wesley had barely asked the question when he heard Layla's sobs.

Mike replied, "Not good. You know how close they were to Laura. How's Avery?"

Wesley looked at Avery and said, "We are at the graveyard right now. Laura has been buried. But Avery did not sleep the entire night. I'm afraid she can't take it."

The moment Wesley said that he saw Avery go limp and fall to the ground.

"Avery!" Wesley exclaimed. He could not hang up the phone in time. He immediately rushed over and picked her up.

An hour later, Mike and the children rushed into the hospital.

"Don't worry. Avery is fine. She has passed out from grief," Wesley said. "She did not sleep the entire night, let her rest for now."

Mike said, "Wesley, you should get some rest. I can take care of things here."

Wesley shook his head. "I'm not tired."

The two children stood by the bed and looked at Avery. Grandma has left. Would their Mommy be fine? If their Mommy left, what would happen to them?

Elliot was sitting in the captain's office of the police station. He was listening to the captain break down the accident.

“At this time, the accident appears to have been caused by a drunk driver. The driver’s family is poor. I don’t think he is able to pay any form of compensation to

Miss Tate.”

Compensation? Avery did not care about money at all.

“The perp is a gambler. Did you ignore this fact?” said Elliot coldly. “He is currently one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in debt. His wife and kids have left him, and creditors have abducted his parents. They were only recently released.”

The captain was stunned. He said, “Elliot, the incident took place last night and already you have gathered this much information.”

Elliot replied, “The deceased is my mother-in-law. I cannot let her die in vain.”

The captain nodded. “Are you trying to say that this might be murder?”

“Isn’t it obvious,” said Elliot. “Someone paid the driver to murder her.”

The captain furrowed his brows. “Luckily, the perpetrator is not dead. Once he has recovered, we will question him.” “I’m only afraid that someone might do him in.”

Chapter 300

“I’ll send more men over. They will be on twenty-four hour guard duty,” said the captain before changing the topic, “I hear your girlfriend is pregnant.

Congratulations!”

“I don’t like kids.” Elliot’s face darkened a little. His tone turned cold too, “if there are any updates on the case, inform me at once.”

The captain nodded. “Okay. How is Miss Tate? She was not too well yesterday. I wonder how she is today.”

Elliot’s gaze darkened. His lips thinned into a tight line. He got up from the sofa and left. He could not answer that question.

He had been outside the operation theater the previous night, but his mother had called him, and he did not go in.

Zoe’s pregnancy had become an obstacle in his mind. He could barely face it, let alone face Avery.

Avery slept the afternoon away in the ward. She slowly opened her eyes. Before grief could enter her mind, she heard Hayden say, “Mommy, I’ll go to whichever school you want me to go to.”

Then, she heard Layla’s soft but hoarse voice, “Mommy, I will behave too. Can you wake up soon? Please?”

Layla had been crying nonstop, so her eyes were red. Her voice was hoarse too.

Avery’s eyelids fluttered. She could not bear to hear that voice. She immediately sat up and grabbed her children’s hands.

“I’m fine. I was only tired, so I slept.” Then, Avery got down from the bed. “Let’s go home!”

She had only just stood up when Mike came forward and hugged her.

“Avery, you still have your two children and me. I will never betray you. As long as you need me, I will never leave you.”

Mike rarely has such serious moments.

Avery placed her chin on his shoulder. She took in a breath and said, “Let’s go home! I miss home.”

Shea was sitting in the living room of Elliot's mansion. He had not returned for three days, and she refused to return to her room. Mrs. Cooper was sitting next to her, keeping her company.

"Does he not want me anymore?" Shea's voice suddenly broke through the silence in the living area.

"That's impossible." Mrs. Cooper held Shea's hand. "Master Elliot has gone to Starry River Villa."

According to the bodyguards, Elliot would go to the Starry River Villa every night, staying outside her door till dawn arrived, then, he would leave.

"He went to look for Avery?" Shea's voice rose in pitch. "I want him to be with

Avery."

Mrs. Cooper sighed. "He can't be with Avery."

"Why not?" Shea's eyes sparkled brightly, yet they looked so lost.

Mrs. Cooper was extremely sad as she thought of how Avery had lost her mother, and how Elliot has been standing guard outside her door every night, wanting to see her, and yet, unable to.

“It’s because of your condition. Dr. Sanford is treating you, and she used that to force Master Elliot to be with her. She told him that if he did not stay with her, she would not treat you. Master Elliot needs to be with Dr. Sanford,” said Mrs. Cooper, her voice breaking slightly.” Shea, do you understand me?”

Shea shook her head in a daze. “Please repeat it.”

Mrs. Cooper took a deep breath and repeated it once again. This time, Shea roughly understood

“I don’t want to get better anymore,” said Shea, her eyes sparkling. She clenched her hands into fists. She kept muttering, “I’m not getting better...”

Chapter 301

At seven thirty in the morning, the black Rolls-Roice slowly pulled into the courtyard.

Mrs. Cooper had not slept the entire night. When she saw Elliot returning, she immediately walked to the door. She had told Shea the truth the previous night, and Shea had become rather agitated. She blamed herself for that.

Words spoken could not be taken back

Elliot entered with a gust of chilly wind.

“Master Elliot, I have done a terrible thing. Please punish me.” Mrs. Cooper followed Elliot.

Elliot froze. He looked at Mrs. Cooper with red eyes.

“I told Shea last night about how Dr. Sanford threatened you, and she is now refusing treatment.” Mrs. Cooper lowered her head. “It’s my fault! I shouldn’t have told her that!”

“Why did you tell her then?” Elliot raised his eyebrows. He looked gloomy.

“She said that she hoped you and Avery could be together, so I couldn’t resist telling her the truth,” Mrs. Cooper said hoarsely, “Fire me! I’m too old and clumsy.

I’m no longer fit to serve

you.”

Elliot’s gaze shifted away from Mrs. Cooper. He sounded exhausted. “Go and rest. Don’t tell her about complicated matters in the future.”

Mrs. Cooper nodded, but she dared not say anything else.

After lunch, Elliot took Shea out for a walk. It was still cold outside. When the wind blew, it pierced through skin.

“Shea, are you cold?” Elliot held her hand tight.

Shea shook her head. “Big Brother, I’m not getting better anymore.”

“No,” Elliot said without giving it a moment’s thought. “Avery and I got a divorce because we don’t like each other anymore. Even if Dr. Sanford and I are no longer together, I won’t go back to Avery. You don’t have to worry about us.”

Shea tried hard to process Elliot’s words.

“I hope that you can feel more joy and love in the future,” Elliot said gently.

Shea was silent for a while. Then, she suddenly said, “You’re not happy, Avery is not happy either. Only I’m happy every day. If I don’t get better, I’ll be happy every day. So, I don’t want to get better,” Shea said with determination.

Elliot looked at her and said bitterly, “You don’t know how you could be after you get better.

How do you know you won’t be happy after you get better? And even if you don’t get treated, I won’t break up with Zoe because she is pregnant with my child.”

“Am I going to be an aunt?” Shea asked naturally. Elliot’s heart tightened. He looked at Shea with a complicated gaze. “Shea, who told you about this?”

Shea pulled her hand out of Elliot’s and turned around. Whenever she was unwilling to answer a question, she would avoid it this way.

Elliot walked over to her and grabbed her shoulders. He lowered his gaze and looked at her.” Tell me.”

“Mrs. Scarlet said that your children have to call me aunt.” Shea looked up and said, “Big Brother, am I Hayden’s aunt?”

Mrs. Scarlet was Shea’s nanny at school.

Elliot suddenly stiffened upon hearing Shea’s question.

“What do you think?” When he said that, he thought about the answer Avery had previously given him. Avery had said that she had adopted Hayden.

“I hope that he is your child, that way, Hayden has to call me aunt.” Shea sounded a little emotional. “If you have a child with Dr. Sanford, they won’t like you anymore.”

“I don’t need them to like me. I only need you to be healthy.” Elliot’s gaze turned cold. His heart was even colder.

It was the eighth day after New Year's, and it was the first day back at work could not go to the office. He had to care for the children at home.
Mike

Avery had not set foot out of Laura's room. She had been in there for four days.

She had been rewatching the video they had taken on New Year's.

She would never have dreamed that that would be the last video that she would have of her mother.

Mike and the children were having breakfast. He planned to take them out to play

that day. If they passed by his office, he would bring them into the office to have a look Suddenly, the door to Laura's room opened.

Chapter 302

Avery came out of Laura's room.

When Mike saw her, he thought he saw a ghost. She had not seen daylight for the past few days. She looked pale and weary. On top of that, she had barely eaten

anything. She looked emaciated.

When the children saw her, they were stunned too. Avery turned and entered her room. Mike immediately chased after her. "Avery, don't tell me you're going to work?" Mike guessed.

Avery took out a set of clothes from her closet and headed to the bathroom. "You stay at home with the kids. I'll head to the office and have a look." "Oh, so I'll stay at home and look after the kids in the future?" Mike asked.

Avery shook her head. "I'll hire bodyguards."

"Shouldn't it be nannies?"

"No need." Avery planned to care for all her children's needs herself. The bodyguards only needed to send the children to school and pick them up from school, ensuring their safety. That was enough.

"By the way, I heard that Laura's accident was not an ordinary accident but murder," Mike said. "Go to the police station and ask about it later." Avery's eyes darkened. Her voice sounded tight. "Who told you that?" "Chad," Mike said. "He said that Elliot sent his men to investigate the perpetrator. They found out quite a lot." The peace that Avery felt was crushed.

If it was murder, she did not need to pause for a second to think of a suspect

Other than Wanda, who else could it be?

Avery had just left when Tammy's car pulled in. Mike passed the children to Tammy. "Tammy, please help look after the kids. Something is off about Avery today. I must go look for her!" Mike said, then he took the car keys and bolted.

When Mike arrived at the police station, Avery had just come out from it.

"Avery!" Mike got down from the car and ran toward her. It was as if Avery has lost her soul. She did not hear Mike.

She got in the car, started the engine, and quickly left.

Mike saw her car passing him by. He placed his hands on his hips and sighed.

Avery's vision was getting blurry as she drove. Sure enough! It was not an accident! It was murder! She initially thought it was Wanda, but the police told her that currently, the evidence showed that it was James who had hired the killer James had transferred the money from his account into the perpetrator's account.

James himself had also confessed to murder.

How comical! How ridiculous! He was in prison. How could he have hired a murderer? Moreover, he was about to be executed!

One could not be hung a second time for killing another person. It was a perfect plan. Tears fell from Avery's eyes. All this was Wanda's doing! As all the evidence pointed to James, Wanda would not be in any trouble.

An hour later, Avery and Wanda met in a cafe. "Avery, I never would have thought your mother's death would take such a toll on you. Look at how haggard you look," Wanda looked at Avery's face and said insincerely, "I hope you get better soon. After all, many terrible things are waiting for you in the future." Wanda picked up the cup of coffee and elegantly took a sip. "By the way, I forgot to tell you," Wanda continued to say with a smile, "My current boyfriend is Zoe's father.

Zoe is now pregnant with Elliot's child. Soon, they will get married. In the future,

Elliot and I will be considered family too."

Chapter 303

Avery's grip on her coffee cup tighter. She was not interested in Wanda talking about Elliot.

“Your brother is in prison. How could he have hired a killer?”

She looked at Wanda and said, “You did it, right?”

Wanda maintained her smile. “Avery, you should not resort to slander! In Aryadelle, murder is a crime punishable by death! Even hiring a killer is too!

This

was what you told me previously. How could I have done such a thing?”

It was as if she was saying, “I’m not an idiot! Even if I did it, I will never admit it.”

The coffee sloshed inside the cup as Avery tightened her grip around the cup.

“Do you know why I asked to meet you?” Avery released the coffee cup.

Wanda glanced at Avery coldly. “Avery, your mother is dead. It’s useless to pester me about it. I said I didn’t do it, which means I didn’t do it. Even if you kill me, I didn’t—”

Avery got up from the chair. She swallowed her bitterness. “Of course, as long as you won’t admit it, it wasn’t you who did it.”

Then, Avery quickly walked over to Wanda. When Wanda realized what she was about to do, she quickly exclaimed, “Help!”

When Mike reached the cafe, he saw Avery grabbing Wanda by her hair and smashing her head against the wall. There was fresh red blood on the wall!

Blood flowed from Wanda's pretty face!

"Shit!" Mike swore and quickly ran over. "Avery! Let go! You're going to kill her!"

Mike tried to stop the fight. He pushed the staff who were trying to stop the fight away. Their efforts had been in vain anyway. He hugged Avery, trying to pull her away, yet she kept holding onto Wanda's hair, not letting her go!

"She killed my mother! I am going to get my revenge!" Avery yelled hysterically.

"Let me go! I'm going to kill her!"

"Are you nuts?! You still have two kids! Are you planning to make them orphans!" Mike yelled loudly, "Avery, wake up! Don't ruin your life for some evil person! Your mother will not rest in peace if she sees you like this!"

A member of the staff rushed over with a pair of scissors. She used it to chop off Wanda's hair. It was the only way to tear them apart.

Avery looked at the hair in her hands. She disgustedly threw it at Wanda's face!

"Wanda, I will never let you go!" Avery could not calm down. She was still looking at Wanda viciously. "You either hire a murderer to kill me, or I'll make sure you die!"

Mike had never seen such a vicious Avery. She might look weak, but she was extremely strong.

Two members of the staff sent Wanda to the hospital. Only then, did Mike dare release Avery.

Mike took his wallet out and said to the cafe owner. "I'm sorry. Please calculate the loss. I'll pay you double!"

The owner accepted the card and reminded him, "If that lady makes a police report, this lady will be arrested."

Mike immediately said to the owner, "I'll pay your triple. When the police come to investigate, just say that I was the one who beat her up."

Avery pulled Mike to the side. "I'll bear the consequences of my actions! Didn't I ask you to look after the kids? Why are you here?"

"Tammy came over. I got her to look after the kids." Mike went over to Avery and sighed.” Thank goodness I sensed that something was off with you and followed you. If I didn’t, the next time I see would be in prison.”

Mike was in the police station at two in the afternoon.

“Officer, I was the one that beat the woman up. Arrest me! It has nothing to do with Avery!” Mike said loudly, confessing to the crimes.

Avery was touched by his loyalty, but the situation did not call for it.

“Mike, I’m going to count to three. If you don’t leave, I won’t talk to you anymore,” Avery said coldly, sitting in the chair.

Chapter 304

Mike was speechless.

“One. Two...” Avery started counting.

Mike’s face flushed. “Avery! Fine, live with your own mess! I’ll leave you alone!”

Then, he turned and left the police station.

Coming out of the police station, Mike called Chad.

“Chad! Is your boss around? I’m looking for him!” Mike was standing outside the police station, with the icy wind blowing against him. He was feeling extremely aggrieved.

Despite how he was feeling, he could not leave Avery alone. Avery was in a special situation at that moment. When one was extremely agitated, they could do anything.

She could kill someone today, but what if she killed herself the next day?

“We just started work today. It’s a little busy. Why are you looking for him?”

Chad was talking fast. After asking his question, he came to a realization.

“You’re looking for my boss. Did something happen to Avery?”

“She’s in a mess. She almost killed Wanda today. She’s at the police station right now. I think she is going to be detained. Isn’t your boss powerful? Get him to bail her out! If he does not post her bail, I’ll tell everyone that this was all his doing!”

Chad swore, “Are you nuts! How are you going to do that? If you were to talk to my boss this way, you’ll be deported from Aryadelle!”

The officer took a piece of paper and a pen and passed them to Avery.

“Miss Avery. I know you’re upset right now, but it’s wrong to beat someone up.”

The officer looked at her coldly. He said patiently, "List your transgressions and pay Wanda's medical fees, and you will be released."

Avery looked at the piece of paper and sneered, "Why do I have to list it down? I wanted to hit her."

The police officer was speechless.

"You want me to pay for her medical bills? Sure! Once she dies, I'll do it," Avery

continued.

The police officer was once again at a loss for words.

Avery pushed the pen and paper away with her slender fingers. "Just go ahead with your procedures!"

The police officer furrowed his brows. "Miss Tate, I know you have your own opinions, but the evidence we have right now has nothing to do with Wanda. But if we suspect her even a little, we will arrest her and question her."

Avery lowered her gaze and pursed her pale lips, saying nothing.

She was angry, but not at the police officer. She did not want to trouble everyone, but she was extremely upset.

If she did nothing and allowed Wanda to go just like that, she could not bear to see herself.

Half an hour later, a black Rolls–Royce parked right in front of the entrance of the police station.

Mike saw Elliot alighting the car, so he quickly approached him.

However, Elliot was quicker. He immediately passed Mike by without even noticing him!

Mike cursed silently, “Sure! Treat me like air!”

When Elliot entered the police station, he immediately saw Avery’s slight person.

“Elliot! You’re finally here!” The captain waved to Elliot. “Please persuade Miss Tate! As long as she writes a list of her wrongdoings, we’ll let her go immediately.”

When Avery heard his name, she looked up and looked at him, stunned!

Why was he here? Elliot picked up the piece of paper on the table, tore it in half, and threw it into the bin.

Chapter 305

“I’ll settle this myself,” Elliot said to the captain.

Then he grabbed Avery’s slender wrist and said, “I’m taking her with me.”

The captain simply nodded.

Once they were out of the station, Avery shook off Elliot’s slightly cold hand.

Elliot raised his brows as he stared at Avery’s defensive posture.

“Your mother wouldn’t come back to life even if you did kill Wanda, Avery. There are many ways to take revenge, yet you chose the most foolish one.”

“Who are you to judge me?”

Avery looked at Elliot’s familiar yet unrecognizable face and sneered.

“Are you judging me as the mighty President Elliot Foster, or because Wanda Tate is your future mother-in-law?!”

Every word she spoke was sharp and fractious.

An unreadable emotion flashed through Elliot’s eyes as he said, “Calm down,

Avery.”

“I can’t calm down!” Avery lashed out, her voice breaking. “My mom’s lifeless face appears in front of me every time I close my eyes! What did she do wrong?! She never did anything wrong! How could someone kill her?!”

She broke down into wailing sobs.

All of Elliot's reason vanished the moment he saw her frail body crumple and an expression of agony twist her face.

He pulled her into his embrace and wrapped his arms tightly around her.

Avery snapped when she smelled Elliot's unique musky scent.

Even if the scent of his cologne was unchanged, he was no longer the same

Elliot Foster!

"Let me go!" she cried as she pushed against his muscular chest.

"I won't!" Elliot held Avery in his arms. His voice was hoarse when he said,

"Calling Wanda my future mother-in-law is utter bullsh*t! I've only ever had one mother-in-law, and she was your mother."

Avery could not escape his hold and so decided to stop struggling altogether.

She numbly contemplated his seemingly profound statement. Looking up at him with tear filled eyes, she coldly asked, "Now that Zoe's pregnant with your child, will you order your bodyguard to force her to get an abortion?"

Avery's question made Elliot abruptly release his grip on her.

"Didn't you hate children, Elliot? Then why can you accept Zoe's child?"
Avery

demanded as she stood before him. "Did she force you to? Did you give in once again to save your dear Shea? Aren't you always acting so high and mighty in front of me? You didn't even bat an eyelid when you made me get an abortion...

Do you find me easier to pick on?"

Elliot's heart throbbed with pain, but his eyes were fixed calmly on Avery.

Her emotions were much stabler than they were before, but the words coming out of her mouth were growing harsher.

"Don't mention my mother to me ever again. She never acknowledged you
as her son," Avery said as she stared at Elliot's face. "Even though she's dead, it

just feels misfortunate to have you talk about her."

She watched as a dreadful expression appeared on Elliot's face.

Not only did her heart not break for him, she actually found it gratifying.

Perhaps it was because she had finally given up on him.

Elliot could have a child with Zoe or recognize Laura's killer as his mother-in-law... As long as he did not appear in front of her, he could do whatever he wanted.

"Let's go home, Avery!" Mike said as he drove the car out onto the road. He glanced at Avery and added, "You must be exhausted."

"I'm not," Avery answered in a clear, calm voice. "I don't feel like going home."

"Okay. Where do you want to go, then?"

As though she did not hear Mike's voice, Avery looked out the window and uttered softly, "If I hadn't insisted on coming back here, this wouldn't have happened to Mom..."

Mike's heart ached with concern as he saw Avery's haggard face grow overcome by guilt.

Could she have some kind of stress-induced mental disorder?

Mike turned the car around at the next turning, then drove toward Elizabeth Hospital.

After hearing about Avery's condition, Wesley felt worried but certain.

"She's a strong woman. I know she can get through this."

He prescribed some sleeping pills for Avery and handed them to Mike.

"What she needs now is rest. Let's see if she improves after some time."

A week later, Avery's mental state appeared stable. The children returned to school.

Chapter 306

After breakfast, Avery took the children to school.

Hayden was the one who had suggested going to the same preschool as Layla.

That way, Avery would not have to drive around picking them up and sending them off.

It felt like everything had remained the same after Laura's death, but it also felt like everything had changed.

"Winter's come and gone, Avery," Mike said as he drove the car onto the main road. "Let's move on from all this unhappiness! Every day from now on will be filled with good luck."

Avery stared at him blankly.

"Can't you speak like a normal person?"

Mike cleared his throat and said, "I know you'll still be down for a while, but we should keep our eyes facing forward. There are many more beautiful things and people that await you in the future.”

“Keep your eyes on the road.”

“Okay,” Mike responded, then turned on some music.

After taking a moment to ponder his words, Avery suddenly said, “Thank you,

Mike.”

“Hmm?” Mike said as he turned the music off.

“Thanks for helping me with the kids through all of this.”

“Why are you mentioning this all of a sudden? Your kids are my kids. Your mom’s gone, but, even if you were to leave, I would still raise the kids myself!”

Mike said earnestly.

Avery shot him a meaningful look.

Mike coughed, then said, “You get what I mean.”

“I do.”

Over at the Foster Mansion, Rosalie had rushed over first thing in the morning in high spirits.

She was showing off a 4D ultrasound scan to the servants.

“Do you think this child looks like Elliot? He looks just like Elliot when he was a baby! Hahaha!

The servants nodded in agreement, and Rosalie burst into an even more effusive guffaw.

Elliot heard the racket from upstairs and took the stairs in long strides.

“Elliot! Take a look at your son!” Rosalie said as she ran toward Elliot with the ultrasound scan. “Zoe took this at the hospital yesterday. Look at how much he looks like you! The doctor said the child is perfectly healthy. There’s nothing to worry about!”

Elliot’s brows furrowed as he gazed at the wrinkly fetus in the image.

He did not see any resemblance to him at all.

If it were not for Shea, he never would have agreed to let Zoe keep this baby.

“What kind of reaction is that, Elliot? Zoe’s painstakingly carrying your child.

Even if you don’ t care about her, how could you be so cold toward your own flesh and blood?” Rosalie said.

Then, she changed the subject and said, “I moved Zoe over to the old mansion last night. To me, she's already my daughter-in-law!"

Elliot was not in the mood to argue with his mother, so he maintained his composure.

"You don't need to inform me of anything regarding that child. So long as you're happy."

"What does that mean? This is your son!"

"Did any of you seek my approval before deciding to keep that child?" Elliot asked with a cold expression. "I have no intention of hurting anyone's feelings, but that does not mean you can brazenly disregard my own."

The ultrasound scan fell to the ground.

An hour later, Rosalie was taken away by the driver.

The mansion fell into pin-drop silence.

Elliot glanced at the time and noticed it was almost noon.

His phone suddenly began to ring.

It was the family doctor.

"Elliot! Have you heard about Eric Santos?! He got into an accident on a film set two years ago, which left him bedridden and unconscious. He's somehow miraculously recovered now!"

Elliot's chest tightened. There was a tremor in his voice as he asked, "Who cured him?! Do you know who his doctor is?!"

Chapter 307

Zoe had gone into full "child-bearing mode" after she got pregnant.

She had even pushed Shea's treatment aside.

So it could not have been Zoe who cured Eric Santos!

"I'm not clear on the details," said the family doctor regretfully. "However, the probability of him waking up from his illness was extremely low. I think he found a neurologist on par with Professor James Hough."

After the call, Elliot immediately sent someone to contact the Santos family.

Eric Santos had left the entertainment industry two years ago, so all his known contact information and addresses were useless.

Even as evening approached, Elliot's people could still find nothing of use.

Zoe heard about Elliot's search at dinner, which made her feel nervous.

"My health has improved a lot lately, Elliot," she said. "I think we can schedule Shea's second surgery soon."

Elliot glanced at her and asked, "Are you certain?"

Zoe nodded, then said, "I'm feeling very confident about the next procedure. I'll take Shea to the hospital for a checkup tomorrow and see how her wound has recovered."

"Okay," Elliot responded.

"I'm sorry, Elliot," Zoe said as her eyes reddened. "My father broke things off with Wanda Tate. He's planning on returning to Bridgedale in the next few days.

I'm sorry for all the trouble we've caused you."

Elliot picked up his wine glass and took a sip. "Also... about our child... I know you don't like children, so I don't expect you to like our baby. My body can't withstand an abortion, so I'll most likely have to give birth to this child. If you don't want him, I can raise him myself."

Zoe had raised a sensitive subject.

Ever since Elliot found out about her pregnancy, he had made no effort to contact her.

She felt like she had been banished.

If he did not find a use for her, she would probably end up like Avery.

“Once the baby is born, I won’t tell him who his father is. You don’t need to worry about his care,” Zoe said soundly. “I’ve had some time to think about it, and I’ve decided that I shouldn’t force you to love him if you don’t love me.”

“Dr. Sanford, if I asked you to get an abortion...”

Zoe felt a chill shoot through her heart, but she maintained her composure and said, “If you insist, abortion isn’t impossible... I don’t know how long it will take for my body to recover after that. Now that the baby’s taken form, aborting it would be about the same as giving birth.

Elliot began to weigh the pros and cons of an abortion after hearing her words.

“I’m worried that my recovery will delay Shea’s treatment,” Zoe said, then took a sip of her soup. “Elliot, I know you’ve been searching for other doctors that can treat Shea this entire time... I’m sorry for using this against you.”

“That’s your asset.”

“You must hate me.”

“Nothing else matters as long as you can cure Shea,” Elliot said.

“It’s been a while since we’ve talked like this,” Zoe said. “I won’t force you to do anything, Elliot. Could you please not hate me so much?”

As she said this, she reached out to hold his hand.

Elliot moved her hand away and said, “I’ll say it again, Zoe. Nothing else matters as long as you can cure Shea.”

“I’ll do my best to help her,” Zoe said. “It’s your mother’s birthday this weekend.

Your brother ‘s planning a party, and your mother’s looking forward to some excitement. I hope you can be there.”

“Noted,” Elliot responded casually.

His mind continued to be filled with thoughts about Eric Santos’s doctor.

Why was this person so elusive?

At the courthouse, the judge slammed his gavel down, sentencing James Worsley to death!

Avery stood up from her seat.

Not far off, Wanda glared resentfully through her veil at Avery.

Avery met her hateful gaze, then prepared herself to walk toward her.

“Don’t be rash, Avery! This is a courthouse,” Mike said and quickly held her back when he noticed her peculiar behavior.

“Fine,” Avery said, restraining herself.

She turned around and strode out of the courthouse.

Chapter 308

When Wanda walked out of the courthouse, Avery blocked her path.

“You’re next,” Avery said.

Avery wore light makeup, ensuring that her smooth complexion looked good.

Beneath her calm veneer, however, lay a burning hatred that had never dampened.

“Bring it! Both my daughter and my brother are gone. You better watch out, Avery Tate!”

Wanda had suffered a concussion from the beating Avery had given her at the cafe, so she was filled with raging fury.

She would never have backed down if Elliot Foster had not stood up for Avery!

Avery got into the car with a bland expression and fastened her seat belt.

Mike opened a bottle of water and handed it to her, then said, “Elliot Foster’s looking into Eric Santos's doctor. I'm guessing he's planning on getting rid of Zoe Sanford. What a cruel man! She's pregnant with his child!"

Avery took the bottle of water from him and took a sip.

The cool liquid made its way down her throat and into her body, bringing with it a welcomed sense of vigor.

"Let him be!"

A look of nonchalance flashed across her eyes.

She wanted to see what Elliot could manage to dig up!

Eric Santos and his family had promised her absolute secrecy.

The place where they were living now was also fairly secluded.

It was possible that Elliot had yet to find out where the family lived.

It was Rosalie's birthday that weekend, and she was in an especially good mood because of Zoe's pregnancy.

All of the Foster family's closest friends had been invited to the celebration.

Zoe had sent Elliot a text first thing in the morning to remind him of the party, but he had still barely made it to the banquet hall on time.

Once the host was done with the opening speech, he invited Rosalie to the stage.

Rosalie held Zoe's hand in one of hers and clenched her other hand tightly around Elliot's.

Once the trio was up on stage, the host handed the microphone over to Rosalie.

"Today is my birthday. In light of that, I would like to take this opportunity to announce some fantastic news!"

Rosalie reached out her wrinkled hand, caressed Zoe's belly, then announced enthusiastically, "My grandson is five months old! He will be coming into the world soon!"

At first, the LED screen on the stage was broadcasting photos of Rosalie's younger days.

Suddenly, it turned a blinding green!

The crowd was in an uproar!

"Apologies!" said the host as he tried to save the show. "Our technicians will fix this right away! Please don't worry, everyone!"

The commotion died down, but Elliot could still hear the sound of his raging heartbeat!

The light from the screen had draped every member of the audience in a shroud of green.

As Elliot gazed at the green screen behind him, an ominous feeling rose within

him.

For some reason, his first thought was not that the LED screen had malfunctioned. Instead, he thought of Hayden Tate's aloof little face.

Just as Elliot was wondering if Hayden was behind the night's fiasco, the green screen suddenly turned into the image of a vast meadow!

All kinds of green hats were floating above the meadow!

Elliot was at a loss for words.

"Look at all those green hats!" cried an innocent child in the audience.

"Who did this? Who's being cheated on?"

The crowd broke into a frenzy of discussion.

Zoe's expression was filled with inordinate dread.

She thought that nobody knew about the night she spent fooling around with Cole.

She did not expect to get a slap in the face! Who was the one behind all of this?!

Chapter 309

Rosalie's face was drenched in a green glow.

If Elliot had not been holding her up, she probably would have passed out from the shock.

The staff disconnected the LED screen's power, and the disturbing green light vanished.

"What the h*ll is going on?!" Henry yelled. "Why did that mess show up on screen? How exactly do all of you do your jobs around here?!"

The manager rushed over to apologize.

"I'm so sorry, Mr. Foster. I asked the staff and was told that our computers had caught a virus. We have no idea how those images appeared on the LED screen."

Henry glanced at his mother.

Rosalie had caught her breath.

"Hurry up and get a new computer. Don't let anything like this happen again!"

Henry ordered the manager.

The awkward atmosphere on stage did not dissipate with the manager's departure.

Other than being a vibrant color, there was a deeper meaning to the color green.

For example, it symbolizes betrayal in a relationship.

Zoe felt the eyes of everyone in the room fall on her.

She explained through flushed cheeks, "I've never done anything to betray Elliot, Rosalie. The bodyguard can be my witness."

"Are you saying that I'm the one who betrayed you?" Elliot asked.

Zoe shook her head, then said, "I don't suspect you of anything, Elliot. I'm sure the stage technicians just messed up... Perhaps it wasn't implying anything.

Let's not overthink it."

Elliot's thin lips parted slightly as he murmured, "Is that so? Let's hope nobody's trying to insinuate anything, then."

“Zoe spends all of her days at home. How could she do anything to betray you?”

Rosalie said.

She decided to calm things down for the sake of the child Zoe was carrying.

“I have a birthday wish, Elliot.”

Elliot’s temples began to ache.

The woman standing before him proclaimed herself to be the one who loved him most, but she was always forcing him to do things he hated in the name of that love.

“I’m a woman, too. I’ve also carried a child for nine months, so I know how tough it is. I hope you can treat the mother of your child better, even if it’s just a little bit... Can you promise me that, Elliot?”

Rosalie was forcing Elliot to make a stand in public.

If he were to refuse in front of all their friends and family, he would forever be seen as a heartless man!

“Since you love your unborn grandchild so much, you should wish for a longer life!” Elliot said, before storming off the stage.

The entire banquet hall froze in stunned silence as if someone had hit the pause button on time.

Suddenly, Cole stood up, raised his glass, and passionately said, “It’s my grandmother’s birthday today. I’d like to make a toast to Grandma’s long and prosperous life! Let’s drink the night away tonight!”

The atmosphere returned to normal after Cole’s toast.

Elliot walked outside and lit a cigarette.

Who was behind the green hats and meadow that had appeared on the screen?

Was it Hayden?

However, considering how much Hayden despised Elliot, he probably would not tell him if Zoe was cheating on him even if he knew.

After all, getting cheated on was not as horrific as being made a fool of for the rest of one's life.

Besides, had Avery not confiscated Hayden's laptop?

Who else could it be, if not Hayden?

Although he did not have a clue, tonight's episode had made him wary.

Once Zoe gave birth to the child, he would insist on a paternity test right away.

With that thought, he felt he would not mind being cheated on if that turned out to be the case!

It would be a relief if the child Zoe was carrying was not his. However, that steamy night five months ago still felt so real to him!

Chapter 310

Elliot had thought that the woman he spent that night with was Avery!

He would never have touched Zoe if he had known it was her

On the other side of the city, Avery was having dinner with a few good friends at Golden Beach Street.

If it were not for the care and support of her friends, she would not have been able to get back on her feet so quickly after her mother's death.

Although the thought of her mother's passing continued to pain her, Avery was not so impulsive as to go down with Wanda.

Mike poured Wesley a glass of wine, but Wesley declined, saying, "I drove here."

a

Avery then poured Wesley a glass of juice and said, "Wesley isn't a good drinker. I'll drink with you tonight, Mike!"

"Are you underestimating me, Avery? My tolerance is pretty good!" said Tammy.

"I know it is, but Jun already told me to keep an eye on you and make sure you don't get too drunk."

Tammy grunted nonchalantly, then began to drink with Mike.

"Pace yourselves, you two. I called you out tonight for some good seafood, not for you to get drunk..." Avery cautioned.

"What's so great about seafood? What's a party without booze?" Mike said.

Tammy chimed in, "Exactly! If we're going to have a party without booze, then we might as well just sit at home and munch on some peanuts!"

Avery decided to ignore them.

After a few drinks, the two began to drunkenly banter. Once Avery was done peeling shrimps and crabs for her children, she began to eat.

Noticing that Mike and Tammy were immersed in their drunkenness, Wesley turned to Avery and said, "Eric really wants to thank you personally, Avery."

"He should focus on rehab for now. We can meet once he's able to stand on his own two feet."

She lowered her gaze, pondering something, and then said, "I wouldn't have to be so cautious if he was just an average person. But he's still a popular celebrity. If anyone was to discover where he is, there'd be a real ruckus made;

and, if that were to happen, not only would it get in the way of his rehabilitation, his personal life would be affected, too."

Wesley nodded and said, "You're right. He's young, so he's a bit more impulsive."

He passed some crab meat to Avery.

"Eat it yourself!" Avery said, her cheeks turning pink.

“I don’t eat crab,” Wesley replied. “You were tending to the children this entire time and haven’t had a bite to eat. You should eat more. I’m worried you’ll get blown away by the wind one day.”

Layla lifted her head, then said seriously to Wesley, “Hayden and I will hold on to Mommy’s legs! We won’t let the wind blow her away!”

“No matter how strong the wind is, I won’t have to worry as long as I have the both of you around!” Wesley chuckled. He turned to Hayden and asked, “Are you getting used to things at your new school?”

Hayden nodded.

Hayden might not have been sociable, but he never bothered the other children, so his teachers favored him.

“Why did you bring your laptop with you?” Wesley asked as he noticed the laptop sticking out of Hayden’s unzipped bag.

Hayden quickly zipped his bag shut. Avery glanced at her son, alarm bells beginning to ring in her head.

She did not immediately interrogate Hayden.

Instead, she pulled out her phone to check if Elliot had contacted her.

It was a good thing he had not!

Avery was relieved.

“I heard Zoe’s planning on carrying out another surgery on Shea,” Wesley said, his expression conveying his mixed feelings. “I don’t know if Zoe is being too generous, or if Elliot’s being a fool. Zoe’s skills might not end up killing Shea, but I doubt the results would be ideal.”

Avery’s hand clenched tightly around her fork.

“Are you sure you don’t want to tell Elliot that you were the one who operated on Shea the first time?” Wesley asked softly.

Chapter 311

“Have you ever loved somebody, Wesley?” Avery asked quietly. “If you have, then you probably won’t have such a tough time understanding how I’m feeling.”

Wesley shook his head.

“You become possessive when you love someone. I want everything he owns, and I want to be the only one he sees. Most importantly, I want the relationship to have no reservations,” Avery said. Then she smiled and continued, “You’ve seen it yourself. He has Shea, and he’s willing to sell himself out for her treatment.”

“Before I knew about Shea’s mental disability, I saw her as a thorn in my side.

After I discovered she wasn’t normal, the hostility I felt against her slowly began to fade away. Of course, I can carry out Shea’s second surgery, but I won’t do that.”

Wesley stared blankly at Avery.

“How do you think Elliot would react if he found out I could treat Shea?” Avery asked. She poured herself a glass of wine and continued, “How has he been treating Zoe? He’s so grateful to her that he’s willing to grant her every request... Wesley, I don’t want him thanking me for the sake of another woman.”

Avery let out a bitter laugh, then said, “I don’t care for that at all!”

Wesley took the bottle of wine away from Avery, then said, “I get it, Avery. If he can't give you a perfect love, then you'd rather take nothing from him at all."

"That's not all. Not only is he unable to reciprocate my love, but he is also incapable of being a father to my children!"

Avery had only had one glass of wine, but her face had turned scarlet, and the tone of her voice was filled with hurt and loathing.

"He didn't want our children! Why is he allowing Zoe to keep her baby? Why isn't he forcing her to get an abortion? Huh?!"

Wesley poured Avery a glass of juice, then said, "Don't get upset, Avery."

"Don't be mad, Mommy!" Layla pulled on Avery's arm. "Hayden and I don't need Dirtbag Dad! All we need is Mommy."

Avery caressed her daughter's head, then said with smiling eyes, "I'm not mad.

I'm just thinking out loud to wake myself up."

When Wesley asked if she wanted to tell Elliot the truth, Shea's innocent eyes instantly popped into Avery's mind.

She had felt her heart soften.

She had said everything out loud for Wesley to hear, but it was also for herself.

The worst thing that could happen from Zoe operating on Shea was that there would be no progress.

This was acceptable.

However, if Elliot ever found out that the person who operated on Shea was Avery, he would definitely end up being entangled with her again!

As if having Shea around was not bad enough, now there would be a pregnant

Zoe to give Avery an even bigger headache!

How could she possibly tell Elliot the truth?

It was Monday at Starry River Kindergarten.

The school was located near the Starry River Villa.

Avery would send her children to school every morning.

If she could not make it back in time in the evenings, Hayden would take Layla home first.

The children were paying attention to the teacher's lesson when a figure suddenly appeared at the classroom door.

Layla immediately recognized the person!

"Hayden! Shea's here!" Layla cried out, then walked over to the classroom door with Hayden.

A wave of gloom washed over Shea's face when she saw them.

"I have to go into surgery tomorrow. I'm scared," she muttered softly in a voice filled with anxiety.

"Is Dr. Sanford going to operate on you?" Layle asked.

Shea nodded.

"Don't let her touch your brain, Shea. You're not that smart to begin with. What if she makes you even dumber?!" Layla said. "You should hide like you did last time. Don't let anyone find you! That way, they can't force you to get surgery!"

Hayden glanced at his sister intently and said, "Stop meddling!"

Chapter 312

"Didn't we agree to stop being upset with Shea?" Layla asked dejectedly.

Hayden took his sister's hand and walked back into the classroom.

Shea's surgery was going to happen no matter what.

Coming to see them in her nervousness and fear would not change a thing.

She should have gone to see Elliot Foster and seek his comfort.

Elliot received a call from Mrs. Scarlet at three in the afternoon.

“Shea’s missing again!” cried Mrs. Scarlet. “The bodyguard and I have been looking for her for over an hour. We’ve searched through the entire Starry River neighborhood and we still can’t find her!”

“Why did you go to Starry River?!” Elliot exclaimed as he picked up his keys and walked toward the front door.

“Shea’s been begging to see Hayden since she got to school this morning...

She threw a tantrum when I told her she couldn’t. She refused to eat or drink anything. She never used to be like this. I had no other choice but to take her to see Hayden,” Mrs. Scarlet said as she sobbed pitifully.

Ever since she had regained her self-perception after the surgery, Shea had become a pain to look after!

“So you took her to see Hayden Tate?” Merely hearing the name felt like a stab to Elliot’s heart. “Did he hide her away again?” “He didn’t! When I took Shea to see Hayden and Layla at school, they went back into the classroom after only exchanging a few words," Mrs. Scarlet said truthfully. "Shea insisted on going to the neighborhood after we left the school, so I took her there... She just disappeared in the blink of an eye!"

Mrs. Scarlet was out of breath from all her sobbing.

Elliot frowned, then said, "Don't cry. I'm on my way! She should still be in the neighborhood."

Mrs. Scarlet sniffled and said, "Shea's a good girl. She's only hiding because she's afraid of getting surgery."

"I know," Elliot said.

It took him a long time to coax Shea into going to bed last night.

He did not want her to suffer, but the surgery had to be done for the sake of her health.

He did not want her to be called an idiot ever again.

That evening, when Avery drove her car into the neighborhood, she noticed a group of police officers at the gates.

There was a long line of police tape around the area, and a mob of nosy onlookers had gathered.

Avery furrowed her brows tightly.

Had something bad happened?

She quickly parked the car, then hurried towards the house.

Please let the children be safe!

Avery opened the front door and saw her children playing in the living room.

The atmosphere inside the house was in stark contrast with the tense air outside.

“Well done, my babies! I’m glad you listened to me and didn’t join the crowd outside,” Avery said, as she gave the children a peck on the cheek each.

hiding. They’re looking for her.”

Avery’s mind was blown.

“Shea’s hiding in our neighborhood?!”

“Probably! I told her to hide, but I didn’t tell her to hide in our neighborhood...”

Layla grumbled, pulling a long face. “What are we going to do if Dirtbag Dad shows up looking for her? I don’t want to see him.”

Avery’s face flushed.

“Did you hide her in the house again?!”

Hayden and Layla shook their heads.

“We didn’t. She went to hide. We don’t know where she is.”

Avery let out a heavy sigh and quickly composed herself.

“It’s fine as long as she’s not in our house. I’m going to make dinner now. Don’t go outside. If someone rings the doorbell—” Before Avery could finish her sentence, the doorbell rang.

Chapter 313

Layla and Hayden rushed to the front door and clearly saw the face of the man standing outside through the screen on the door security system.

“Mommy! Dirtbag Dad is here!” Layla cried in a panicked yet excited voice as she ran towards her mother.

Avery put down her apron, then picked up her daughter.

“Don’t be scared, sweetie. Follow your brother to your room for now,” she said as she glanced at Hayden.

Hayden reluctantly walked over, then stayed in the bedroom with Layla.

Avery exited the children's room, then strode past the living to the front door and opened it up.

Elliot was standing right outside the door.

The glow from the sunset shone from behind him, enhancing his chiseled features.

"Shea's missing. Her nanny said she lost her in your neighborhood," Elliot said, explaining his intentions. "I've looked through all the houses around here and still can't find her."

"Are you saying you want to search my house?" Avery asked as she gazed at him coldly.

Elliot met her icy eyes, then said calmly, "I'm here to find someone, not to raid your home."

"What happens if you don't find her here?" Avery asked as she opened the front door fully.

"What do you want?" Elliot said as he took a forceful step towards her.

The tense aura came at her like a scorching heatwave!

Avery took an abrupt step back, then quickly said, "If she's isn't here, then you have to swear to never step foot in my house ever again!"

Elliot frowned slightly, as if in deep thought.

When his lips parted a moment later, it was not to answer her question.

"Shea! Come out! Big Brother is here to take you home!" Elliot called out towards the empty living room behind Avery.

If Shea were here, she would certainly come out once she heard his voice.

"Shea! Can you hear me? Big Brother is here to pick you up!" he called out once more when there was no response.

Avery heard the intimate way Elliot referred to himself as "Big Brother".

It was as if he really was Shea's brother!

Even if he was, he could not be her biological brother.

After all, there was no information about Shea in the Foster family records.

Besides, would a normal man treat someone who was not his biological sister better than he treated his wife?

"Stop shouting, Elliot. Shea isn't here. Go ahead and search the rooms if you don't believe me, "Avery said, then began to open up every room door in the house.

Elliot followed closely behind her.

Shea was not in the first or second rooms.

When they arrived at the third room, his eyes landed on the two children inside!

Hayden was holding Layla in his arms and glaring at him with eyes filled with resentment.

"Why do your children hate me so much, Avery?" Elliot asked Avery, confused.

"Do you really not badmouth me in front of them?"

"They hate you because you have an aura about you that children dislike.

You're not worth the effort of discussing in front of my children," Avery responded.

Elliot was angered by her eloquent reply, but he held back when he thought of how he had forced her to get an abortion before.

"You were losing your mind when Shea went missing last time! Why do you have the time to pick a fight with me this time?" Avery said mockingly. "Did you think some good samaritan will take her to the hospital again?"

Elliot accepted her ridicule, then explained patiently, "Her intellect was lower the last time she went missing. She's much better now."

"I see... What if she gets even better?" Avery asked nonchalantly. "Will you care about her more or less?"

"There's no need to be spiteful, Avery," Elliot said as he suppressed the emotions in his dark eyes. "She's nothing but an idiot to you!"

It was as if Avery had struck a nerve in Elliot.

The expression on his face turned ominous and terrifying.

He did not continue his search, but walked away with clenched fists.

Once he was gone, Avery let out a heavy sigh and composed her emotions. He could not find Shea, but why did he bring up the past?

Chapter 314

Was Elliot going to hold the things Avery said in a fit of rage against her for the rest of their lives?

After dinner, Avery dialed Mike's number, then put her phone on speaker and began to clean the kitchen.

“I’ll be home late today, Avery!” Mike said in a stern and serious voice. “I’m not going to the bar tonight. It’s for work... It’s about the company! I’ll tell you about it tomorrow.”

“Okay. It’s nothing too serious, is it?” Avery said. “I’m not used to this sudden discipline in you.”

Mike chuckled and said, “I was just worried you think I’m out messing around.

You don’t need to keep dinner for me.”

“Okay.”

After Avery hung up the phone, she glanced around the empty house and could not help but think of her mother.

She refused to hire a nanny because she wanted to do all of the things Laura used to do.

She wanted to guess what her mother was thinking about when she did those things.

The more she thought about it, the more guilty she felt.

Laura always took care of her after Avery got pregnant.

After the children were born, Laura gave her all to help raise them.

She never lived a day of her life for herself.

Avery never thought that there was anything wrong with that kind of life.

It was not until Laura was gone that she realized she had put all of her energy in her work and the children.

“Mommy! Hayden’s picking on me!” Layla cried suddenly as she ran out of the room.

Avery quickly wiped the tears off her face and recovered her normal expression.

“How did he pick on you?”

“He said I wasn’t doing my homework right, then said he’d rip my books apart if I didn’t do it properly!” Layla whimpered.

Avery took her daughter’s hand, then walked her to the bedroom and checked

Layla’s homework.

It was no wonder Hayden was frowning in rage.

Layla’s homework was a mess.

“I’ll teach you, Layla. Let’s erase this line first,” Avery said patiently as she sat down at the desk next to Layla.

By the time she was done helping the children with their homework and getting them ready for bed, it was already ten at night.

Avery dragged her tired body back to her room.

Her mind was blank.

She felt like she had done a lot, but nothing at all at the same time.

Laura was the one who took over these errands for her before.

She owed a lot to her mother, and would have to wait until their next lifetimes to pay her back.

Avery walked into the closet, opened up her wardrobe and was about to pick out a pair of pajamas.

The moment she opened the wardrobe door, the body curled up inside almost fell right out!

Avery reached out and caught Shea on reflex before she fell to the ground!

What was Shea doing here?!

How long had she been hiding here?!

Avery had no time to think.

She laid Shea on the ground and checked on her condition.

Moments later, she called Wesley for help.

When Layla and Hayden woke up the next morning, they noticed that their mother was not at home and that she did not prepare breakfast for them.

Their preschool provided breakfast, but Hayden was not used to the food.

Which was why Avery would always make breakfast for them.

“Where did Mommy go, Hayden?” Layla asked with a confused expression on her face. “If Mommy isn’t home, does that mean we don’t have to go to school?”

Hayden took on the role of a big brother and said, “If Mommy’s not here, I’ll take you to school.”

“Can you tell me where Mommy went?” Layla asked with concern. “Mommy wouldn’t have thought we were dragging her behind and decided to run off by herself, right?”

Hayden tapped on a button on his smart watch.

Moments later, the sound of Avery’s ringtone echoed from the master bedroom.

“She didn’t bring her phone. She must have left in a hurry,” Hayden concluded, then walked to Avery’s room and checked to see who the last person she called

was.

Chapter 315

At the Foster mansion, Elliot did not get a wink of sleep all night.

Logically, Shea’s mental state was better than it was before.

She could even memorize Elliot’s phone number.

There was no reason for her to spend all night hiding outside by herself. The night before, Elliot stationed some of his people at the Starry River neighborhood.

He had not received any news since, which means that there was still no trace of Shea.

The weather was warmer than it was during the new year, but she could still catch a cold if she was roaming around on the streets.

Where could Shea be hiding?

Did a good samaritan take her in?

Elliot blamed himself.

Shea had tried to run away before her first surgery.

Since her intellect had improved, Elliot thought that she would have higher endurance, too.

He had explained to her again and again the reason behind the surgery, so he had thought that she understood him to some extent.

Who would have thought that she would still be so against it?

If he had known this would be the outcome, then perhaps he would not have been so insistent about the surgery.

However, he did not want her to be mentally disabled for her entire life!

What if he dies before her?

Who was going to care for her once he's gone?

Elliot could not bear the thought of Shea being picked on.

The mere thought of it was unacceptable to him.

To Elliot, there were two types of people in this world.

The first was the average person, and the second was him and Shea.

Elliot drove over to the Starry River neighborhood and searched every corner once again.

Later, he visited the neighborhood's surveillance center and checked the entry and exit records of every car.

At two in the afternoon, Elliot's bloodshot eyes saw a familiar Rower leaving the underground garage in the surveillance footage.

He moved the mouse and paused the video.

"Isn't that Avery's car?" he mumbled to himself, then glanced at the time on the footage and added, "Where was she going at 10.30 p.m.?"

The people next to him did not know how to respond.

Was he not searching for Shea?

Why did he bring up Avery Tate?

Elliot pulled out his phone and dialed Avery's number.

When Avery's phone rang at the Starry River Villa, the two children immediately turned their heads around.

Since Avery was not at home, they did not go to school.

Hayden wanted to take Layla to school.

After all, he had an obligation as a big brother to be a good role model to his sister.

However, Layla had used the fact that Hayden also did not feel like going to school that day to change his mind.

In the end, Hayden went to the school that morning to inform his teachers that Layla was sick and that he had to stay home to take care of her.

The teachers suspected nothing and allowed them to take the day off.

Now, the fact that Avery's phone was ringing overwhelmed the children.

"Isn't that Dirtbag Dad's name?"

There were not many words that Layla could read, but she remembered very clearly what the name "Elliot Foster" looked like.

"Why is he calling Mommy?" Hayden mumbled, then proceeded to reject the call.

"Don't you want to know why he called Mommy? I do! Let's answer if he calls again!" Layla said grumpily.

"Don't be silly. He won't speak if he doesn't hear Mommy's voice!" Hayden said, then blocked Elliot's number to prevent him from calling again and disturbing the peace.

Over at the surveillance center, Elliot's eyes were filled with bewilderment as he stared at his rejected call.

Even if they were divorced, did Avery have to go as far as not answering his calls?

His phone rang just as he was about to dial Avery's number again.

It was Zoe, but the voice on the other end of the line belonged to a stranger.

"Hello, Mr. Foster. Doctor Sanford asked me to give you a call and inform you of the current situation," said the woman. "Doctor Sanford is in the operating room right now with Shea. Don't worry. The surgery should be done in about an hour."

Chapter 316

Elliot jolted from his seat.

Shea was at the hospital?!

Who sent her there?

Why was he not informed before the surgery?

"Who sent Shea to the hospital? Which hospital is she at?!"

Elliot's hand clenched tightly around his phone and he stormed out of the surveillance center.

“I’m sorry, I’m not too clear on the details myself. We are at Elizabeth Hospital,” the woman said, then hung up the phone.

Elizabeth Hospital!

It was Elizabeth Hospital again!

Zoe had planned to carry out Shea’s surgery at Central Hospital.

This meant that Zoe was informed that Shea was at Elizabeth Hospital and headed over there.

Who was the one who sent Shea to Elizabeth Hospital?

Was it Avery?

However, Shea was not at her house when Elliot went over the night before.

Shea had a stubborn streak, but she was always well behaved in front of Elliot.

It was impossible that she would not react if she heard Elliot’s voice.

Elliot’s mind was a mess!

He decided to brush everything aside for now.

What was important was that Shea was safe.

Two hours later, Elliot finally saw Shea at Elizabeth Hospital after her surgery.

Her head was wrapped in a thick layer of bandages and her eyes were shut, as if asleep.

“How is she?” Elliot asked anxiously.

Zoe smiled and said, “She’s doing well. I spoke to her throughout the entire operation. She was very clear headed.”

Elliot felt relieved after seeing the smile on Zoe’s face, but there was still something fishy about the entire ordeal!

“Why didn’t you inform me before, Zoe?”

“I’m sorry! I was too busy at the time because we had to move a bunch of things over from Central Hospital. I didn’t think of calling you until I was already in the operating room!” Zoe said with an innocent expression on her face.

Elliot did not continue to pester her after seeing the blood stains on her surgical gown and gloves.

“Thank you, Zoe,” he said hoarsely.

“Don’t mention it! You’re my boyfriend. This is my duty,” Zoe said, then left to change.

Elliot walked to the hospital room's door, and felt a peace of mind when he saw the bodyguard and Mrs. Scarlet inside the room.

He stepped aside and dialed Wesley's number.

He had to find out the truth from Wesley!

Why was Shea sent to Elizabeth Hospital every time she was in trouble?

There was definitely something strange going on.

Wesley's voice was calm and collected as he said, "How can I help you, Mr.

Foster?"

"Mr Brooke, is your father the director at Elizabeth Hospital?"

"May I know why you're suddenly asking me about this?"

"Could I see the surveillance footage from today, please? I want to know who sent Shea here," Elliot said as he held back his emotions.

"You can go straight to the surveillance room for that. I'm technically just a simple doctor at Elizabeth Hospital," Wesley responded.

"Noted," Elliot said, then hung up the phone and made his way over to the surveillance room.

Out of the many surveillance screens, there were a few that were black.

"What's going on with the black screens?" Elliot asked with a frown.

“Those ones malfunctioned last night. We’re still waiting for the repairmen to come and fix it! “answered one of the staff.

“Which cameras broke down?”

“The front entrance, the entrance to the wards and the south parking lot...”
said

the staff member.

The timing and locations of the broken down cameras were too coincidental! Did they truly malfunction, or was something trying to hide something from him?

Avery’s face suddenly popped into Elliot’s head.

Where did she go when she left the underground garage at 10.30 p.m. the night before?

Elliot pulled out his phone and dialed Avery’s number.

“Sorry, the number you have dialed is unavailable. Please try again later.”
The

bot’s monotonous voice made the coldness in Elliot’s eyes turn even more chilling.

Chapter 317

Elliot dialed Avery's number once again, but was still met with the bot's message.

He could not believe his ears!

How dare Avery hang up on him?

Or was her phone turned off?

Elliot searched for Mike's number in his contacts and called him.

They lived under the same roof and worked in the same company, so they were practically together 24/7

Mike was confused when he received Elliot's call.

Why was he calling him?

Were they that close?

Mike glanced at Avery who was lying on the large bed, and it suddenly dawned on him.

He answered the call, but before he could say a word, Elliot's vicious voice came right at him.

"I'm looking for Avery!"

Mike was dumbfounded.

What was he being so aggressive about?!

"Avery's asleep! What do you want with her?"

Mike watched Avery's sleeping face and did not raise his voice at Elliot.

She had arrived three hours ago, but laid down and fell asleep without a word.

Mike was thinking of leaving, but decided to stay and wait for her when he noticed she did not bring a thing with her.

"Wake her up! I have something to talk to her about!"

Elliot's tone was overbearingly domineering.

Shea went missing in the Starry River neighborhood last night, and Avery drove out in the middle of the night. Then, Shea ended up being sent to Elizabeth Hospital.

By some strange coincidence, several surveillance cameras in key locations at the hospital broke down the night before.

Elliot hated being dragged around in circles!

Was he being taken for a fool?

He was certain that Avery had something to do with this!

Mike could tell from Elliot's tone that things were not as simple as they seemed.

He leaned down, then gently patted Avery's back and said, "Wake up, Avery!

Your ex husband's looking for you!"

Ex husband!

The title made Elliot frown!

He absolutely hated it!

Even so, Mike was always addressing him that way.

Avery did not move a muscle and did not react at all.

She must have stayed up all night to be this exhausted!

“Avery! Elliot Foster’s looking for you! Elliot Foster! If you don’t wake up now, that b*st*rd going to come here and get you!” Mike threatened into Avery’s ear in a raised voice.

Avery was successfully awakened.

She rubbed her tired eyes and glanced blankly at her surroundings.

“You said Elliot... Where is he?”

“Here!” Mike said as he handed the phone over to Avery. “He’s looking for a fight. Prepare yourself.”

Avery narrowed her eyes, then took the phone from Mike.

At the same time, she gestured at the bottle of water on the nightstand and said,

“Give me some water. I’m thirsty.”

When Elliot heard Avery's hoarse voice, he was even more certain!

She was definitely with Shea all night and did not get any sleep!

Otherwise, how could she still be in bed by now?

Mike opened up the bottle of water and handed it to Avery. Avery took a big gulp of water, then placed the phone by her ears and lazily said, "Hello?"

Chapter 318

"Are you finally up?" Elliot asked mockingly.

Avery laid back on the bed, then massaged her aching temples and said,

"Weren't you the one who called and woke me up? Why did you call?" "I saw you drive out of the neighborhood last night at 10.30 p.m., Avery. Where did you go that late at night?" Elliot asked.

Avery gave Mike, who was sitting at the end of the bed, a little kick and shot him a look.

Then, she answered Elliot's question.

"Mike had too much to drink last night. The bar called to ask me to go settle his check for him, so I drove out to where he was... He was in a drunken craze. I was worried he's wake the kids if we went home, so we got a room at a nearby hotel... What's up? Are you interested in going bar hopping? Should I get him to invite you next time?"

Elliot's brows furrowed.

Why was Avery's answer different from what he had imagined?

"Is there anything else?" Avery asked as she let out a yawn. "Mike kept me up all night last night... I'm exhausted. I'm hanging up if that's all!"

Just as she was about to end the call, she asked as if something just occurred to her, "By the way, did you manage to find Shea?"

That final sentence made Elliot give up hope.

Avery was not the one who sent Shea to the hospital.

She had gone to the bar when she left the neighborhood last night!

She even went to a hotel with Mike and slept until now!

"I found her," Elliot said, then hung up the phone.

Avery gave up her act the moment she saw that the call had ended.

She handed the phone back to Mike.

"Why did you lie?" Mike exclaimed in bewilderment. "Also, did Shea go missing

again?!"

Avery pulled up the covers and shut her eyes, then said nonchalantly with a stagnant face,” That’s right! Why do you think she’s so good at picking a place to hide? Why did she have to hide in my wardrobe of all places? If she was in yours or Mom’s closet, she would be dead by now.”

When Avery found Shea last night, her face was pale and her breathing was shallow.

She would have died if she was discovered later.

Shea’s mental state might be disabled, but it was a good thing luck was on her side.

She was at Avery’s house the both times she went missing.

“Holy sh*t! You didn’t operate on her again, did you?” Mike guessed after he processed the situation. “Are you letting Zoe Sanford take credit for everything

again?”

Avery’s eyes shot open upon hearing his words.

“What do you mean by credit? It’s more like a hot potato. If she wasn’t close to death when I found her last night, I would have handed her over to Elliot right away. If I didn't treat her, Elliot would definitely think I did something bad to her."

"Just admit it! You couldn't bring yourself to let Zoe operate on Shea," Mike said, instantly seeing right through her. "You've felt bad this entire time about calling Shea an idiot before. This was a chance for you to redeem yourself, so you went ahead and carried out the surgery on her!"

Avery said nothing.

Mike's comprehensive skills were surprisingly impressive!

"You don't want to get entangled with Elliot Foster again, so all you can do is do good deeds in the dark!"

Avery frowned and said, "Can you shut up and let me sleep? I'm exhausted!"

"Fine, I'll let you sleep! You better get all the sleep you can get just in case you lose sleep over some other bad news when you wake up!" Mike goaded.

Avery did not fall for his trap.

"Get out, then! Is watching someone sleep some weird fetish of yours?"

“Hey! You didn’t bring your phone or your wallet. When we have to pay for the room later...”

“Can’t you just go and pay at reception right now? I wonder how the kids are doing. Go home and check”

“Got it! I called Hayden earlier. He said they didn’t go to school today because neither of them felt like it.”

Avery’s expression instantly turned stern.

She took a breath, then waved her hand at Mike and said, “Go home and watch them, then! They should be hungry by now.”

“Oh, please. They know how to order takeout. How’s the search for a bodyguard going?”

Avery was suddenly no longer tired.

She pulled the covers off, then tied her disheveled hair up into a ponytail.

“I haven’t decided on anything yet. I’m worried whoever I find won’t be reliable, but I’m also worried about the children’s safety. They’re always running around.”

Mike raised his brows, then said, "Should I ask Chad for a recommendation?"

Avery looked at him in shock and said, "Do you think my children have lived long enough and can't wait for them to die? Why don't you just go ahead and get Elliot to come be their bodyguard?"

Chapter 319

When Mike realized he said something wrong, his hand shot up to cover his mouth.

"You've been infiltrated!" Avery sighed.

"No way! He hasn't been asking about us recently," Mike said as his pale blue eyes rolled. "I'm sure! He's not as good a drinker as I am. I get him drunk every time we drink together. He isn't capable of getting anything out of me."

Avery did not doubt the veracity of his words.

She was just worried that he was hiding something from her or that he might one day be infiltrated.

"If you fall for Chad's pillow talk..."

A pained expression appeared on Mike's face.

Then, he changed the subject and said, "Are you planning on continuing to help

Shea unconditionally? It's a huge loss to not ask Elliot Foster for medical fees!"

Avery shook her head and said, "There won't be a next time. It's not that I won't help her. It's just that her condition is too severe and there are limits to my abilities. There's no way of knowing how her condition will be after this surgery, but she won't be worse off than she was before."

"Doesn't that mean Shea would have to suffer if Elliot doesn't know about the situation and continues to get her treatment?" Mike said regretfully. "Elliot might be a dirtbag, but Shea... She might be mentally disabled, but she's still adorable and sweet!"

Avery did not retaliate.

She was beginning to feel tired.

She wanted to go home and catch up on some sleep.

At the hospital, Elliot stood by Shea's bed and watched her pale, haggard face.

He hoped that her condition would have improved when she woke up.

It would be even better if she could remember what happened before the surgery last night.

He really wanted to know what happened during that time.

Zoe opened the door and entered the room.

Elliot glanced at her and said, "You should go home and rest. I'll let you know when she wakes

up."

Zoe's pregnancy was clearly showing.

Elliot felt conflicted about the child she was carrying, but he was grateful to her for Shea's treatment.

His people had yet to be able to contact Eric Santos.

It was as if he had vanished off the face of the earth.

For now, he still had to depend on Zoe for Shea's treatment.

"I think you're the one who needs to rest. You stayed up all night when Shea went missing, didn't you?" Zoe said as she walked to Elliot's side and patted his shoulder. "Go home and rest, Elliot. I'll watch over things here."

Elliot lowered his gaze and took her in.

On top of being gentle and kind, Zoe had superb medical skills. He could not find fault in her.

He could not help but ask himself why he could not be nicer to her.

“I’ll leave after Shea wakes up,” Elliot said.

He was tired, but he would not be able to sleep even if he went home now.

“Go home and rest, Zoe.”

At his insistence, Zoe could only do as she was told.

Shea woke up about an hour after Zoe left.

Her eyes were stone-cold as she glanced around her unfamiliar surroundings.

Elliot did not blink.

He had never seen that look in Shea’s eyes before!

In layman’s terms, her mental disability made her a moron and an idiot. She laughed when she was happy and cried when she was not. Other than that, she had no other complex emotions or expressions.

However, she was different now!

This was the result of the surgery!

Elliot did not expect the effects to be this obvious.

“How do you feel, Shea?” he asked as he held her cold hand and gazed eagerly at her.

Shea studied his face for a few seconds, then fluttered her eyelashes and asked hoarsely, “Where’s Avery? Wasn’t she talking to me? Where is she?”

Elliot felt as if his heart had stopped.

He took in a shaky breath and asked, “When did she talk to you?!”

Avery had been at a hotel with Mike since the night before!

“Just now!” Shea said lightly. Elliot was dumbfounded.

Chapter 320

The world began to spin around Elliot and he almost passed out.

Did Avery lie to him, or was Shea imagining things after the surgery?

Elliot pulled out his phone, called Zoe and told her to hurry back to the hospital.

Zoe had a bad feeling when she heard the anxiety in Elliot’s voice.

“Slow down, Elliot. Is there something wrong with Shea? She just woke up. She needs some time to slowly recover.”

The apprehension in Elliot’s heart calmed down.

However, Shea did not have this strange reaction after her last surgery.

He hung up the phone, then returned to Shea's bedside.

"You just got out of surgery, Shea. Don't think too much. You'll get a headache," he said as he gazed tenderly at Shea and smiled. "I can feel that you're getting better."

"My head hurts a little," Shea said as she took a breath.

"Doctor Sanford's on her way over. We'll see if she can prescribe some painkillers."

"I don't want to see Doctor Sanford," Shea said wearily as she lowered her gaze.

Elliot's Adam's apple rolled in his throat.

"Doctor Sanford was the one who operated on you, Shea. You know your manners. You should thank her when she arrives later."

"No..." Shea said stubbornly as she lifted her eyes to meet Elliot's. "It was Avery... She was by my side. I heard her talking to me... She asked me to talk to her and answer her questions... She was gentle, unlike usual..."

"That was just an illusion, Shea. Avery's been with another man since last night.

There's no way she was with you."

Elliot was beginning to feel anxious, but he did not show it.

He was worried that Shea would feel even more nervous if she saw him that way.

Shea was stunned when she heard his words.

An illusion?

Was it really just an illusion?

She clearly remembered Avery's voice and the questions she asked her.

Avery told her that she had to stay awake, and that she could sleep later.

That was why they kept talking.

How could such a fresh, real memory be an illusion?

Zoe arrived half an hour later.

She checked Shea's temperature and blood pressure, then said to Elliot,

"Everything's fine. Did she say something just now?"

Elliot glanced at Shea, then walked onto the balcony with Zoe.

"She said that you weren't the one who operated on her. She said Avery was with her the entire time and talking to her," Elliot explained softly in confusion. "If she remembered wrongly, then why didn't she say Mrs. Scarlet was the one who was talking to her? She's very close with her."

Elliot's words sent shockwaves through Zoe's entire body.

Was Avery Tate the one who operated on Shea?!

How was that possible?

How could Avery be that capable

She was young, and there were no public records of her clinical experience.

How was it possible for her to carry out such a complicated and intricate operation on Shea?

Zoe felt like she was about to lose her mind.

Before the energy escaped from her body, she composed herself and said,

"Shea's mistaken. I was the one who was talking to her. I've mentioned before that we need to speak to the patient during a craniotomy. It's so that the surgeon is able to confirm the progress of the surgery and keep an eye on the patient's condition."

After giving her excuse, Zoe closely studied Elliot's reaction.

The expression on his face turned from being suspicious to that of acceptance.

"Let's observe her for a few days," he said.

If Zoe was not the one who did the surgery, then was it Avery?

However, Avery told him that she was not with Shea.

The only thing he could do for now was to accept Zoe's answer.

"Don't worry. It's normal for her to say some odd things and have some mood swings right now," Zoe said as she tried to comfort him. "Her condition's looking good. You should go home and rest!"

Elliot returned to the hospital room and did not leave until after he repeatedly instructed Mrs. Scarlet to watch over Shea.

Once he was gone, Zoe immediately went to Shea and began brainwashing her.

"Shea, I was the one who operated on you. How could you say it was Avery Tate? It hurts me that you'd say that to your brother!"

Chapter 321

Zoe's performance was convincing, but Shea was not swayed.

She could tell the difference between deception and sincerity by looking at a person's eyes.

Shea could tell that Zoe was fawning over her brother, but she did not think that she truly cared about her.

“Big Brother asked me to thank you,” Shea said angrily. “I won’t.”

Zoe glanced at Mrs. Scarlet then said, “Would you mind stepping out for a moment? I’d like to speak to Shea alone.”

She was troubled, but now that Zoe was the Foster family’s savior, she did not dare offend Mrs. Scarlet.

Once Mrs. Scarlet was out of the room, Zoe said, “I don’t know why you’re always so hostile towards me, Shea. Did someone say something bad about me to you? Ever since I returned to the country, I’ve been painstakingly researching information and coming up with your treatment plan. Why can’t I get a simple word of thanks from you?”

Shea went straight to the point and said, “I don’t think you’re the one who did the surgery.”

Otherwise, why did Avery’s face and voice appear in her mind before each surgery?

She would not suspect a thing if Zoe was the one she saw before the surgery.

There were not that many twists and turns in her mind. She believed what she saw and heard.

“You don’t think so? Heh. You’re a patient right now. Your thoughts aren’t accurate,” Zoe said as she continued to try to brainwash Shea.

She used to be mentally disabled, after all.

Even if her condition had improved, she was still a patient who was fresh out of the operating room!

Zoe could manipulate her thoughts.

Even if what Shea said was the truth, it could still be considered wrong.

People would only trust the doctor, and not the patient.

This was the reason Zoe had the guts to lie to Elliot.

Since the real person behind Shea’s surgery did not reveal their true identity, it probably meant that there was no need for them to benefit from Elliot.

Whoever it was had asked the hospital to contact Zoe after both surgeries.

This meant that the person was silently allowing her to take credit for the deeds!

How could she refuse something that just dropped into her lap like this?

“You’re a bad person!” Shea snapped.

Her resentment for Zoe rose as she saw the conceited look on her face.

Shea's intellect might not compare to the average person, but she still had the ability to sense good and evil.

A genuinely kind person would not speak in such an overbearing way.

"You're probably only saying that because you haven't met a truly bad person. I know you're the woman that Elliot cares about the most. I've never thought of hurting you. I can stay by Elliot's side with you, but why can't you accept me?"

Zoe's last sentence came across as a rhetorical question, but it was actually a cry of injustice.

"Get out!"

Shea's voice suddenly rose as her emotions intensified.

Mrs. Scarlet burst into the room when she heard Shea's voice.

"What's wrong, Shea?"

"Don't worry, Mrs. Scarlet," Zoe said soundly. "Her intense emotions are a sign that her self perception has improved. It proves that the surgery went well."

Mrs. Scarlet was taken aback, then quickly nodded and said, "Thank you so much, Doctor Sanford!"

“You’re welcome. Her condition right now isn’t good for her recovery. I’ll prescribe some mild sedatives for her. Make sure to give them to her when she eats.”

“Yes, ma’am!”

When Avery returned to the Starry River Villa, there were different levels of anxiety on the children’s face.

They wondered if their mother would be upset that they skipped school that day.

“Mommy! Your phone!” Layla said as she held out Avery’s phone to her as if she was presenting a prize.

Her eyes glistened as she said, “Someone called you earlier, Mommy! Guess who it was!”

“I blocked his number,” Hayden said.

Avery opened up the blocked contacts on her phone and saw Elliot’s name sitting alone on the list.

She frowned as she hesitated whether to keep him on the list or not.

Mike sauntered over and teased, “What’s there to think about? He’s got another woman now. I would have cut off all contact with him long ago if I were you!”

Avery looked up at him and said, “Who was the one who cried every day for an entire year after breaking up with his boyfriend... Who was it again?”

Mike immediately raised his hands in surrender and changed the subject.

“Go get some sleep, Avery! I’ll take the kids out so they won’t disturb you.”

Once Mike left with the children, Avery took a deep breath and decided to let Elliot stay in her blocked contacts!

After today, his relationship with Zoe would certainly progress by leaps and bounds.

They might even end up getting married soon!

There was no reason left for Avery to contact Elliot again.

She held her phone in her hand and walked towards the master bedroom.

Meanwhile, at the Foster mansion...

Chapter 322

Elliot had a nightmare.

He dreamt that Avery blocked his number on her phone.

Not only could he never see her again, he could not even call her.

They were both completely cut off from each other forever!

Elliot's heart throbbed with pain, as if he had lost his most precious possession.

He opened his eyes as his body was dripping in cold sweat.

There was a mist over his deep set eyes that were filled with unimaginable pain.

He found his phone and dialed Avery's number.

It was seven in the evening.

She had slept all day, so she was probably at home and awake right now!

"Sorry, the number you have dialed is unavailable. Please try later." The cold, monotonous voice of a bot rang in Elliot's ear.

His fingers clenched down tightly around his phone.

It seemed like his nightmare had turned into reality!

Avery actually blocked his number!

There was no other reason why he repeatedly failed to reach her number.

To verify his speculations, Elliot pulled off the covers and leaped out of the bed.

He used the house's landline and dialed Aveyr's number.

His heart throbbed with every button he pressed.

Although he had not confirmed his suspicions, he had a very bad feeling about the entire thing.

Once he dialed the number...

It went through!

The call actually went through!

His fingers wrapped so tightly around the phone's receiver that they turned white!

His eyes were filled with the redness of rage!

With his old temper, either the phone or Avery would be torn to pieces!

However, this time he was holding back and waiting for Avery to answer the call.

When Avery's phone rang, she had one hand wrapped around her blanket.

She reached for her phone with her other hand and answered the call.

"Hello?" she said in a voice that was sluggish and hoarse.

"Avery Tate!" Elliot's furious voice hit Avery's ear with intense force.

"Unblock my number right now!"

Avery instantly woke up.

It was embarrassing how quickly she was discovered.

She composed herself, then said, "What's the point, Elliot? From now on, the both of us..."

“Unblock my number!” Elliot interrupted before Avery could finish her sentence.

Her eardrum hurt from the loudness of his voice.

“Can you not speak so...”

“Unblock me right now!”

“I won’t!” Avery snapped as her blood began to boil with rage. “Don’t order me around with that domineering attitude! You can’t order me around!”

Her clear, powerful voice instantly silenced the man on the other line.

In the silence, Avery noticed that her breathing had quickened, her heart was beating so fast that it felt like it was about to jump out of her chest, and her body temperature had risen.

She did not want things to be this unpleasant between them.

How... Did it end up like this?

“Are you really going to draw the line here?” Elliot said moments later.

The misery and hurt in his voice was undisguised.

No matter how hard things were, he had never lost his composure in front of people.

However, when it came to Avery, all of his principles vanished in an instant.

Avery’s eyes teared up as she said through the lump in her throat, “Zoe’s pregnant with your child. You should have a good life with her!”

Chapter 323

Mike and the children had their ears glued to the door of the master bedroom and were eavesdropping

Avery’s loud roar earlier lured them over.

Moments later, the door opened without warning.

Mike almost fell into Avery’s embrace.

Avery stared at them in bewilderment and said, “What are you guys doing?”

“Who were you fighting with, Mommy?” Layla asked as she lifted her head with innocent eyes filled with curiosity. “Was it Dirtbag Dad?”

“Your mother turns a little feral in front of him and her enemies,” Mike teased.

“Oh, so Dirtbag Dad’s Mommy’s enemy.”

Layla’s comprehensive skills were on point.

Avery felt a throbbing pain in her temples.

She walked out of her room and moved downstairs.

“There’s dinner for you in the kitchen, Avery!” Mike called out to her slender back.

With one hand on the banister, Avery turned her head and asked in confusion,

“What’s there to talk about? Why can’t you just say it now?”

“Have you forgotten what I told you in the afternoon?” Mike said in frustration.

“Go and eat. I’ll come to you later.”

Avery tried her best to recall their earlier conversation, but she did not have a clue.

Things have been chaotic in the past couple of days.

On top of that, her sleeping patterns were messed up. Her spirit was drained and her memory was deteriorating

Avery had a couple of bites of food to eat then made her way back upstairs.

When Mike saw her come up, he asked in shock, “Are you done with dinner already?”

Avery leaned against the door frame of the children’s bedroom, then asked,

“What did you want to talk about? Stop being so mysterious.”

Hayden shoved Mike towards the door and said, "I'll take care of Layla."

Mike agreed, then grabbed onto Avery's arm and pulled her downstairs.

"I was worried about disturbing your rest," Mike said bitterly. "It's about work. It's nothing serious. It's just that there were some issues with our product."

Avery raised her brows and asked, "What kind of issues?"

"Our business partners tricked us. Didn't we order high-end lenses from Nycra?

They ended up giving us one of their mid-range products."

"That's unacceptable! How did this get past quality assurance?"

"Things were hectic towards the end of the year. Our manager didn't know much about these things either, so something like this happened," Mike said as he opened a video on his phone and showed it to Avery.

There were over two millions views on the video.

Master Up was the most popular influencer in the field of drones.

The title on the video was especially shocking.

"The Most Awesome Review in History!: Let's see how Alpha Technologies' subsidiary, Tate Industries, is cheating our citizens!"

The video described the products in detail, including both its pros and cons.

Master Up even went through the trouble of buying a drone that was produced by Alpha

Technologies and compared it with Tate Industries' Storm Series drone..

The conclusion was that, despite owning both companies, Avery Tate's products abroad were of better quality and more cost-effective!

Chapter 324

The Storm Series, which was manufactured in Aryadelle, had the same battery life as the product that was made abroad.

However, its lousy lens made it impossible to take professional photos!

Even so, it was selling at the price point of a professional drone!

Tens of thousands of comments were rolling in under the video.

(This is just rude! Did Avery Tate forget that she's from Aryadelle?! How could she trick her fellow citizens? Disgusting!)

[Down with Tate Industries!)

(Should we tag Sterling Group here? After all, their president Elliot Foster is Tate Industries' top customer!)

Avery sat down on the couch, picked up a glass of water and took a sip.

“I’ve contacted Nycra. They said that they’re willing to reimburse everything as per the contract,” Mike said. “Also, they said they can’t sell us their high-end lenses.”

“Why not?” Avery asked in confusion as she put her glass down. “Is it the price?”

Mike shook his head and said, “We pose a threat to the other drone companies in the country. They’re worried that we’ll monopolize the market, so they joined forces to kick us out.”

I

Avery could not help but laugh.

“Do they think we can’t survive if Nycra doesn’t sell us their high-end lenses?

What a joke!”

“The other domestic camera companies won’t work with us either.”

Avery nodded and said, “Let’s look for a company abroad.”

“The cost would be too high, Avery,” Mike said. “Besides, there aren’t that many famous camera companies in the world. Most of them have exclusive contracts and already signed special agreements.”

“I know,” Avery said blandly. “It’s just like how Alpha Technologies has an exclusive contract with Bohmer Holdings. Although we own Tate Industries, too,

Bohmer Holdings can’t sell lenses to us as long as we go by that name and not Alpha Technologies.”

Avery hung her head and began to think of a plan.

At that moment, Mike spoke up.

“Nycra gave me Golden Technologies’ president’s business card. I talked to him earlier. He said Nycra will work with us if we share information on our core technology for the Super Brain system.”

Avery scoffed and said, “Golden Technologies? Isn’t their vice president my father’s former vice president, Shaun Locklyn? He almost killed me over the Super Brain program.”

“Haha! You’re old enemies, then!”

“That’s right! You can tell the president of Golden Technologies to dream on!”

“I knew you wouldn’t accept, which was why I declined last night.”

An idea suddenly popped into Avery’s mind.

“Recall the Storm Series and give a refund to every customer.”

Mike raised his brows in disbelief, then said, “Are you sure? The lens on the Storm Series may not be high-end, but it’s not considered that bad. As long as it’s used in a professional setting, the average consumer would find it just fine.”

Avery corrected his way of thinking and said, “We have to brave the consequences of our mistakes. The loss of money is nothing compared to the loss of reputation.”

“Roger that!” Mike said with a grin. “Our biggest customer is Elliot Foster.

Should I go talk to him, or will you?”

Avery’s cheeks turned crimson red.

She had just drawn the line between herself and Elliot and even blocked his number.

In the end... Such a serious issue just had to occur with their sales!

How embarrassing!

“Of course you’re going!” Avery said as her eyes glistened and her cheeks flushed. “Didn’t you hear my argument with him earlier?”

“Okay. I’ll go see him tomorrow,” Mike said, then pulled Avery over to the kitchen. “You should eat! The problems will be solved. If worse comes to worst, we could invest in Bohmer Holdings and let them open a brand new company here in Aryadelle!”

Avery chuckled and said, “My thoughts exactly.”

“They underestimated you! They thought you’d be scared to tears! Ha!”
Mike

sweet-talked.” If Elliot Foster doesn’t scare you, who could?!”

The mention of Elliot’s name made the smile on Avery’s face disappear. “I had a pretty big fight with him earlier, Mike. Be careful tomorrow.”

Chapter 325

The next day, Elliot showed up at the intensive care unit first thing in the morning.

After drinking the soup that Mrs. Scarlet made her the night before, Shea’s mind turned cloudy.

She felt drained and fell asleep.

When she woke up after a night of sleep, her eyes were lifeless.

That was until Elliot appeared.

“How are you feeling today, Shea? Does your head hurt?”

His gentle, familiar voice made the emotion return to Shea’s face.

“Why isn’t Avery coming to see me, Big Brother?” she asked dejectedly.

Elliot’s brows furrowed slightly, and the tenderness in his eyes disappeared.

“She won’t come to see you. Don’t think about her or her children anymore, Shea.”

She was even more upset now.

“None of you believe me... Avery spoke to me. She asked me a lot of questions...”

Elliot’s heart ached at the sight of his sister’s sickly complexion.

“It’s not that I don’t believe you. Perhaps she really did speak to you, but it was only in your dreams.”

“Really?” Shea glanced at Elliot, as if in a trance.

Was it all truly just a dream?

“I always dream of our childhood, but I come back to reality when I wake up. No matter how real the sights and sounds feel, it’s all still just a dream. None of it is real,” Elliot explained patiently.

Shea lowered her gaze, as if she was processing and trying to accept his words.

Elliot left the hospital at 10 a.m. and made his way to Sterling Group.

Mrs. Scarlet was taking care of Shea, so he was not worried.

Shea was a little downcasted today, but it was still a more suitable mood to be in during recovery compared to the intense emotions from the day before.

Mrs. Scarlet mentioned that Zoe had prescribed some sedatives to Shea.

Perhaps this was the work of the medication?

Speaking of Zoe...

When Avery told him to live a good life with Zoe last night, he was so furious that he did not get a wink of sleep.

However, his mind changed slightly after he had time to calm down.

When Elliot arrived at Sterling Group, he entered his office with Chad following closely behind

him.

"Tate Industries is in trouble, sir. Have you seen the news?" Chad asked.

"Not interested," Elliot responded coldly.

Chad had found out about Elliot's fight with Avery from Mike, so he was not surprised by his boss's reaction.

“Here's the thing, Tate Industries released a public statement this morning announcing their decision to recall all of the Storm Series drones,” Chad said cautiously as he observed Elliot's expression. “Mike called me this morning and wanted me to ask you if you'd like to return all the products we bought before.”

Elliot turned on his computer, then raised his brows and said nonchalantly, “Do you know why Mike was the one who contacted you?”

Of course Chad knew the reason, but he did not dare show it.

“Avery blocked my number,” Elliot said with a bitter chuckle. “She can't contact me, so she asked Mike to do it.”

Chad was speechless.

He did not expect this at all!

Fighting aside, was there a need for something as childish as blocking someone's number?!

“What would you like to do?” Chad saw Elliot's broken heart through his cold laugh and tried to guess what he was thinking. “Shall we return everything and let them suffer the loss?"

Elliot's face froze.

"She won't suffer from a monetary loss. I won't return anything. Let her feel bad about it."

Chad was dumbfounded.

It was getting harder for him to figure out the way his boss's mind worked.

Did he want Avery to suffer, or did he feel bad about making Avery refund the money?

Chad called Mike when he walked out of the office.

"How did it go? What did Elliot Foster say?" Mike asked.

Chad adjusted his glasses, then said, "Make Avery unblock my boss's number right away! He's furious about this."

Mike held his head in his hand and said, "He won't return the goods if she unblocks him?"

"That's right," Chad said with certainty.

Mike opened the door to Avery's office.

There was nobody inside. Avery had left for the office first thing in the morning to deal with this fiasco.

Chapter 326

Mike did not know where Avery was, but her phone was on her desk.

He picked up the phone and quickly opened up the list of blocked phone numbers.

Huh?!

Elliot's name was not in the list at all!

Mike quickly put the phone back on the desk and pretended like nothing happened.

At that moment, the doors to the office opened and Avery walked in.

"Has Sterling Group responded?" she asked as she walked over, picked up the glass on the desk and took a sip of water.

"They won't return the goods," Mike reported. "You're not going to insist on them returning the products, are you?"

Avery put down the glass of water, then lifted her gaze to Mike and said, "You really do understand me. However, even if I insist, they won't return the goods.

There's no point in getting entangled with them."

Mike gave Avery a thumbs up.

"Wire over seven and a half million dollars to them!" Avery added.

Mike was at a loss for words.

"Forget it," Avery said as she quickly changed her mind, then calmly said, "He'll throw a tantrum if I give him a refund. We'll just end up fighting again."

"Exactly!" Mike agreed.

"Head on out! I want to be alone."

"Okay... Don't look up news about the company on the internet and don't read the comments, "Mike said before leaving the room.

Since Tate Industries got in trouble, the other drone companies in the country got together to start a smear campaign against Avery and the company through the use of internet trolls and paid news articles.

Now, slanderous posts about Avery Tate and Tate industries were everywhere online.

Once Mike was out of the room, Avery opened up her laptop.

“Deport Avery Tate” and many other similar topics were trending on social media.

Someone who was not aware of the situation would think that Avery had committed a heinous and despicable sin.

Only less than seven thousand Storm Series drones were sold, five thousand of which were sold to Elliot.

That meant that only about two thousand drones reached the hands of the average consumer.

Was it necessary for this to be made such a big deal?

(Do you know why Avery Tate is so rich? She has a married sugar daddy abroad! She made all her money from being a homewrecker! It's not hard to imagine her character!]

[You can tell from her looks that she's not a decent woman! How could she do something this disgusting? Does she think we're all stupid?!]

[I'm never buying anything from Tate Industries again!]

[Me, too!]

Avery's eyes turned cold as she read the fabricated rumors.

Her opponents would win if she was affected.

She closed the website, composed her emotions, then opened up her email inbox and began to work.

That night, the Foster family gathered at the old Foster mansion.

Even so, the atmosphere was eerily cold.

This was due to Elliot's stone-cold expression.

"Didn't Shea's surgery go well, Elliot? Why the long face?" Rosalie asked.
"We

really owe it to Zoe this time. If it weren't for her..."

"How do you want me to thank her?" Elliot interjected.

Rosalie saw the savage fury on her son's face and held back the words she wanted to say.

In the end, she said cautiously, "I know you're not willing to get married.
You

don't have to make it official. Just get engaged. At least you'd be giving Zoe some kind of acknowledgement."

"Fine."

One simple word left everyone in awe.

Nobody was more excited than Zoe.

Elliot actually agreed to get engaged to her!

My god! She was about to become Mrs. Foster!

Chapter 327

Elliot took his leave after dinner.

He wanted to drop by the hospital to see Shea.

The other Foster family members also left soon after.

Once Rosalie retired to her room, Cole opened up the door to Zoe's room.

Zoe had been staying at the old mansion since her pregnancy became public.

"You're amazing, Doctor Sanford!" Cole exclaimed after he entered the room and shut the door behind him. "You actually managed to handle someone as difficult as my uncle! Should I start calling you Aunt Zoe soon?"

The smile Zoe wore was elegant and calm as she said, "Of course. Once we're engaged, I would be his fiance. What's the difference between a fiance and a wife?"

"Congratulations! It's just..." Cole said as a look of concern appeared on his face. "Is there a way to make sure my uncle doesn't suspect the baby you're carrying? After all, we have to depend on the kid to get my uncle's inheritance!"

Zoe's face changed as she said, "There's no way I'm letting this child live!"

A wave of gloom washed over Cole's face.

"The moment this child is born, your uncle will definitely insist on a paternity test," Zoe said coldly. "If the results show that the baby isn't his, he'll surely break up with me! You'd be done for, too!"

Cole's lips trembled as he said, "That's why I'm asking if there's a way to change the results on the paternity test."

"There isn't! Unless he lets me carry out the test! He won't let me do that! He's always been wary of me and searching for other doctors that can help Shea...

He'll kick me to the curb once he manages to find someone else," Zoe said as her emotions ran wild.

Cole patted her on the shoulder and said, "He hasn't found anyone else, right?"

You really are amazing, Doctor Sanford! Both surgeries were successes. It's no wonder my uncle would change his mind and agree to get engaged to you.

I

would marry you if it were me.”

Zoe was startled back to reality.

She shoved Cole’s hand away, then glared at him with a look of disgust and snapped, “Get out if there’s nothing else! Don’t come into my room ever again!”

“Okay... You said you didn’t want to keep the baby, so how do you plan on getting rid of it?” Cole asked as he gazed at Zoe’s protruding belly with complicated emotions.

“You’ll find out when it happens!”

Zoe was setting up her chess pieces.

The next day, the news of the upcoming engagement between Elliot Foster and Zoe Sanford spread through the entire Avonsville.

Even the date was confirmed. The engagement party was to be held in two weeks.

The news became an instant viral hit online.

Mike was having breakfast while scrolling through the news.

“Do you think Elliot’s using the news of his engagement to help draw negative attention away from us?" he mocked. "Not as many people are badmouthing us

today."

Avery was peeling a hard-boiled egg.

The expression on her face was unfazed as she said, "Do you think a problem that our company can solve using money is worth the attention of the president of Sterling Group? He can go public about his relationship whenever he wants.

Don't mind other people's business."

"Fine. We're losing quite a lot this time!" Mike said as he put his phone down, then took a sip of milk. "We have to use up all the money we made from Elliot for the refunds."

Avery took a bite of the egg, chewed slowly, then said, "Money isn't as important as our reputation."

Mike gazed deeply at her, then said, "You don't seem affected by the news of engagement at all. Are you really fine with this? He's the man that you used to be deeply in love with!”

Elliot's

“It’s all in the past. Why bring it up again?” Avery finished her breakfast, then got up and said, “I’m going to Bridgedale today to talk to Bohmer Holdings about our next collaboration.”

“Hey! When did you book the tickets? You didn’t tell me anything... Are you fleeing the country because you can’t handle the news of Elliot’s engagement?”

Mike teased.

Avery showed the email with her flight ticket on it to him and said, “I booked the flight last night. Do you think I found out last night that they’re announcing their engagement today?”

“Okay! How long will you be gone?” Mike said as he walked her to the front door.

“I’m not sure. I’ll come back as soon as I can. Nobody’s watching the kids, after all. I’m worried.”

the kids.”

Mike felt that the current atmosphere in the country was too hostile for Avery.

On the one end was social media trolls insisting that she leave Aryadelle, and on the other end

was the news of her ex husband's engagement.

The mere thought of it was suffocating.

That night, Ben invited Elliot out for drinks. Elliot refused with a frown and said,

"I'm going to see Shea after this."

Chapter 328

"Can't the bodyguard and nanny watch her? It's been so long since we've had a drink!" Ben said, then whispered in Elliot's ear, "Avery went abroad today."

Elliot's eyes turned dark.

He suddenly had the urge to drink.

Ben booked a spot at a rooftop restaurant.

The two men stood by the railings with a bottle of wine in hand each and looked out into the starry night sky as they drank in silence.

The spring breeze was cool and stuck to every inch of their skin.

When they were done with their first bottles, Ben turned to Elliot and asked, "Did you agree to the engagement with Zoe as thanks for Shea's treatment?"

"My mother wanted me to marry her. Avery also told me to live a good life with her. Shea's treatment is just a minor reason."

Elliot lifted his head slightly, revealing his long, sensual neck.

His Adam's apple rolled in his throat, then he said hoarsely, "Avery wanted nothing but to draw a line between us, so I'm simply granting her wish."

Avery should be happy now that he was engaged to Zoe!

"What's with that expression? It's just an engagement, not marriage. Even if you get married, you can always get a divorce!" Ben said as he patted Elliot's shoulder when he saw the pained expression on his face. "Come on. Let's have another drink."

A week later, Shea suddenly appeared at the door to Hayden and Layla's classroom at Starry River Kindergarten.

This time, there was no smile on her face.

She always had a silly grin on her face every time they met before.

Hayden and Layla walked out of the classroom.

“I’m here to see you one last time, Hayden and Layla...” Shea said as tears glistened in her eyes.

“Why is it the last time? Dirt... I mean, is Elliot Foster stopping you from seeing us again?” Layla said, catching herself before she slipped her tongue.

Shea shook her head as tears streamed down her face.

Hayden and Layla looked helplessly at her as sadness surged inside them.

Shea took out the bag she brought with her.

“I wanted to give you my most precious treasure because you are my best friends.”

She wiped the tears off her face, then pulled out a jewelry box and several photo albums from the bag.

These were her most valuable and favorite things.

Elliot had bought them all for her.

Tears escaped Layla’s eyes, then she burst into sobs, “Don’t die, Shea! You won’t die! Put these things away! Hayden and I don’t want them!”

Mrs. Scarlet wiped her own tears next to them.

Shea was falling into unconsciousness every night ever since the surgery.

Logically, she was supposed to be energetic the next day after a night of sleep.

However, things were the exact opposite.

Shea threw a tantrum that day and insisted on going to see Hayden and Layla.

Mrs. Scarlet snuck her out behind Elliot's back.

"My Mommy's coming home today, Shea! Let's go see her! She can save you!"

Layla said as she grabbed onto Shea's hand and pulled her away without a care.

Hayden thought that was too impulsive.

Avery might be upset, but he did not stop them.

His heart ached when he heard that Shea was dying. The last time he felt pain like that was back when his grandmother passed away.

Chapter 329

In the master bedroom at the Starry River Villa, Avery had gone to sleep from jet lag since she returned at six in the morning.

Layla rushed to the bed, held her mother's hand in hers, then cried out in a baby-like voice," Mommy! Wake up! I have something to tell you! Hurry and wake up!”

Avery vaguely heard the sound of her daughter’s voice, then struggled to open

her eyes

“Shea said she’s dying, Mommy! Please save her!” Layla pleaded when she saw her mother’s eyes open.

Avery instantly jolted awake.

She sat up in bed and saw Shea standing next to Layla.

She took a breath and wanted to refuse, but the words that ended up coming out of her mouth were, “Why do you think you’re dying, Shea?”

Mrs. Scarlet interjected before Shea could respond, “She’s been exhausted ever since the surgery. She’s always tired even after sleeping all night. She’s just sluggish all day...”

“Has she gotten a checkup at the hospital?” Avery asked.

Mrs. Scarlet shook her head and said, “Doctor Sanford said that this was a normal post surgical reaction and that she just needed more rest.”

“You and Shea don’t think this is normal, do you?”

Mrs. Scarlet hesitated, then said, “I don’t have an opinion, so I just listen to the doctors. However, it doesn't feel good seeing Shea like this."

"Take her to the hospital, then!" Avery sighed. "If you can bring her here, why can't you send her to the hospital for a checkup?"

"I wouldn't dare take her to the hospital myself," Mrs. Scarlet responded dejectedly. "I'm worried that would upset Doctor Sanford."

"She'll be even more upset that you brought her to me."

"Shea wanted to come here. Please take her to the hospital for a checkup, Miss Tate! Mr. Foster won't be angry if it was you."

Avery was speechless.

The truth was that Mrs. Scarlet did not want to offend Elliot and Zoe herself, so she wanted to use Avery as a scapegoat.

"I'm begging you, Miss Tate," Mrs. Scarlet pleaded as she bowed her head.

At that moment, Layla chimed in, "Take Shea to the hospital, Mommy! She wasn't like this before. What if she really dies?"

"Layla, you..."

"Mommy! Layla isn't a bad person! She's already so pitiful. Please help her!"

Layla cried through reddened eyes.

Avery surrendered and gave in.

She sent the children back to school, then drove Shea and Mrs. Scarlet to the hospital.

“Did you bring any ID, Shea?”

Shea shook her head.

“Do you remember any ID numbers?” Avery asked again.

“Shea doesn’t have any ID, Miss Tate,” Mrs. Scarlet answered.

Avery was at a loss for words.

How could that be?

That was unimaginable!

Every citizen in Aryadelle had some form of identification. Even the children in the orphanages had them.

Why did shea not have any ID?

Avery did not pester further.

Mrs. Scarlet would not tell her anything even if she asked.

Moments later, Shea said in the backseat, “I think you’re the one who did my surgery, Avery.”

Avery saw the shock on Mrs. Scarlet’s face in the rearview mirror.

“It wasn’t me,” Avery denied right away. “I’m just taking you to the hospital for one checkup, Shea. Go to Elliot if anything ever happens again. Got it?”

Mrs. Scarlet picked up the dismay in Avery’s voice, then quickly said, “I’m sorry for the trouble, Miss Tate. I won’t let her bother you again.”

“Thank you for understanding,” Avery said. “I understand,” Mrs. Scarlet said with an embarrassed face.

Chapter 330

Elliot and Zoe were getting engaged in a week.

As Elliot’s ex wife, Avery certainly did not have to get entangled in any of his affairs.

Mrs. Scarlet took Shea home at 3p.m. after her checkup.

Avery drove the car to the office.

In the week that she was abroad, Tate Industries had basically issued refunds to every customer who returned their products.

Thanks to the scandal about the quality of their products, all of the orders that were made around the new year were canceled.

The company was not only suffering a loss from the refunds to its customers, it was also facing the dangers of having no new orders.

This was a fatal blow to any business.

A company with no stable funding might not last for long and would declare bankruptcy.

Everyone at Tate Industries was living in constant fear of losing their jobs.

When Avery arrived at the office, a few of the department heads immediately approached her.

“What do we do now, Miss Tate?”

“We have no new orders and the workshop downstairs is closed. Emotions are running high among the employees!”

“It’s all my fault,” said the head of the quality inspection department. “I was careless and did not detect the problem. The company wouldn’t be suffering such a huge loss if it weren’t for

me.”

Avery glanced at them, then said soundly, “Ask everyone to go home and get some rest if they have nothing urgent to do. Their salaries will be issued as normal. It's true that the quality inspection team made a severe mistake, but that's alright. Just don't make the same mistake again. If there is a next time, then please resign!"

"What's our next move, then? We're the laughing stock of the entire industry!"

said the vic president.

Avery took a sip of water.

There was a knock on her door, followed by her secretary saying, "Miss Tate,

Mr. Locklyn from Golden Technologies is here to see you."

Avery had chased Shaun away before and warned him not to return.

Unexpectedly, he had the guts to show up again.

He must be here to laugh in her face.

"Let him in," Avery said, then turned to the department heads and said, "For now, go and try to settle everyone down. Let's talk again in a meeting later."

"Yes, ma'am!"

The department heads then left the room.

Shaun strode into Avery's office with a delighted grin on his face.

Avery walked over to the couch from behind her desk, then offered Shaun a seat.

“You’ve hit a wall, Avery Tate!” Shaun said as he casually sat down and glanced around her office. “It’s a shame! It hasn’t even been six months since you rebuilt the company, but it will probably go bankrupt again soon!”

“Thanks for your concern, Uncle Shaun. However, just as you will never get my father’s Super Brain system in your hands, I’m afraid your predictions will also never come true!”

The grin on Shaun’s face vanished upon hearing Avery’s words.

“Don’t force me to take more extreme measures, Avery Tate! Even if you get through this rough patch, we will still join forces to defeat you in the future! Don’t expect things to go smoothly for you in Aryadelle!” Shaun threatened.

“Let’s just wait and see! We’ll see who between us ends up defeated,” Avery said nonchalantly.

“Do you even know who you’re up against? It’s more than eighty percent of domestic capital! Are you sure you want to be this stubborn?" Shaun hissed softly. "If your father was still alive, he wouldn't act this foolishly!"

Avery raised her brows and retaliated, "Do you know why you'll always be a vice president? It's because you're definitely not as smart as I am."

Shaun shattered his glass in a rage!

Then, he stormed out of the room.

At the same time, Elliot received a call from Mrs. Scarlet.

"Mr. Foster, please hurry home!" Mrs. Scarlet sobbed as her voice trembled. "I took Shea for a checkup today. The test results show that she's overdosed on sleeping pills!"

Elliot's brows furrowed tightly as he snapped, "Who gave her sleeping pills?!"

Mrs. Scarlet held the white bottle of pills that Zoe had given her. "I'll tell you when you get back," she said nervously.

Chapter 331

Elliot hung up the phone with an ominous look on his face, then stormed out of his office.

Not just anybody could get their hands on sleeping pills.

Where did these ones come from? The moment the black Rolls-Roice pulled up into the front yard, Mrs. Cooper took Shea back to her room.

When Elliot walked into the living room, Mrs. Scarlet handed him the test results.

“You took Shea to the hospital for a checkup?” Elliot asked as he glanced at Mrs. Scarlet.

Mrs. Scarlet averted his gaze and did not dare meet his eyes.

Avery had instructed her not to mention that it was Avery if Elliot did not pester

her.

“It was Miss Tate,” Mrs. Scarlet said as she gave in to the pressure of Elliot’s glare. “Shea insisted on going to see Miss Tate’s children today...”

“Avery’s back?” Elliot said, interrupting her.

“She got back this morning,” said Mrs. Scarlet. “She didn’t want anything to do with this, but I begged her to check on Shea because she’s been saying she’s dying since this morning. I was so worried.”

“Why didn’t you tell Zoe?”

Elliot's reason had begun to falter.

He lost his composure the moment Avery's name was mentioned.

"I've talked to Doctor Sanford about Shea's condition, but she said it was a normal post surgical reaction every time," Mrs. Scarlet said dejectedly. "I couldn't just sit back and watch Shea be so depressed."

"I see."

Elliot stopped blaming her.

He picked up the test results and carefully examined them.

"What's this about

"I suspect it's gone something to do with the sedatives that Doctor Sanford prescribed, but I can't be sure," Mrs. Scarlet said warily as she handed the white pill bottle to Elliot.

Elliot took the bottle, opened it up and took a look inside.

It was a bunch of whit

Zoe rushed over an hour later.

The atmosphere in the living room was cold and suffocating, and abnormally quiet.

The moment she saw the white pill bottle on the coffee table, she instantly understood what had happened.

She put on an innocent expression, then said to Elliot's cold face, "This is the sedative I prescribed to Shea a few days ago. I instructed Mrs. Scarlet to give her a pill during each meal for a total of three days. Shea's emotions were too intense before, which wasn't good for her recovery. I only prescribed the medication after thorough consideration."

Mrs. Scarlet's expression changed drastically after hearing Zoe's words.

"Doctor Sanford, you didn't tell me to only give her the pills for three days! That's why I've been giving them to Shea every day with her meals..."

Zoe's brows furrowed as she said, "I remember very clearly that I told you to only give the pills to her for three days. If her emotions were still unstable after three days, then extend it to a week. However, you can't continue giving her the pills after a week no matter what. Did it slip your mind?"

Mrs. Scarlet did not expect to become a patsy!

"Doctor Sanford... I remember you told me this was a sedative... I wouldn't give this to Shea every day if I had known that they were sleeping pills. I know you can't take too many sleeping pills..."

"Sedatives are also known as sleeping pills," Zoe said in a voice so calm that it was almost void of emotion. "I know you're nervous, Mrs. Scarlet. It's been about ten days, after all. Her body will excrete the drugs slowly as long as she doesn't take them again. This won't have too much of an affect on her body."

Things were not as bad as they could have been because they caught it just in time, but Mrs. Scarlet still felt wronged.

She remembered very clearly that Zoe did not mention that the pills were sleeping pills and for Shea to only take them for a maximum of one week.

If she had not taken Shea to go see Avery that day and gone to the hospital for the checkup, she would have fed the entire bottle of pills to Shea.

"Mrs. Scarlet's getting old, Elliot. She's bound to make some mistakes. I hope you don't blame her," Zoe said as she took on the role of a hero and asked for forgiveness on behalf of Mrs. Scarlet.

Elliot glanced at Zoe's face, then retorted, "Why did you give her a whole bottle if it's only meant to be taken for three days?"

Zoe was taken aback, but quickly reacted and said, "Perhaps I was tired at the time and also trusted Mrs. Scarlet too much. That's why I took the bottle and just gave it to her instead of splitting them up."

"Inform me about all of Shea's prescriptions from now on, even if they're vitamins and supplements," Elliot ordered. "There better not be a second time!"

Once he gave his warning, he strode over to Shea's room.

Chapter 332

Shea was tidying her desk with Mrs. Cooper's help.

Elliot's Adam's apple rolled in his throat as guilt overcame him.

Every time Shea told him she felt dizzy the past few days, he had told her to get more rest.

He did not expect sleeping pills to be the cause of her discomfort.

If Avery had not taken her to the hospital for the checkup, who knows how long she would have continued taking the pills.

Elliot felt grateful towards Avery, but he did not know how to express his thanks.

The next day, Mrs. Cooper showed up at Avery's house first thing in the morning.

Avery was surprised, and quickly invited Mrs. Cooper into her home.

"I'm sorry for showing up without notice, Avery," Mrs. Cooper said as she handed two food to you."

"Thank you! Why did you come by this early?" Avery said as she poured a glass of water for her guest.

"To be honest, Master Elliot was the one who asked me to come by and thank you," Mrs. Cooper said warily. "It was a good thing you took Shea to the hospital yesterday. Otherwise, we wouldn't know what could have happened."

The smile on Avery's face vanished.

"You have no idea how scary things were, Avery," Mrs. Cooper said as fear lingered inside of her. "Zoe said she had instructed Mrs. Scarlet to only give Shea the pills for three days, but Mrs. Scarlet said Zoe never mentioned any of that to her. Mrs. Scarlet was in tears when she confided in me last night...

I'd

much rather trust her. After all, she's been taking care of Shea for over twenty years. She would never hurt her."

Avery picked up on a key point and asked, "Mrs. Scarlet's taken care of Shea

for twenty years? Does that mean Shea's been with the Fosters for twenty years?"

"I think so! All Mrs. Scarlet ever told me was that Shea was a poor little thing.

She never revealed anything else to me."

Avery recalled how Elliot had kept his lips tightly sealed whenever she used
to ask him about Shea.

"I didn't expect Zoe to be such a scheming woman." Mrs. Cooper suddenly let out a sigh, then said, "Master Elliot's about to be engaged to her. I'm afraid she's not a good person."

"He's not worried, so you shouldn't be either," Avery comforted her.

"I'm sorry, Avery. I shouldn't talk to you about these things. I'm sure you'll find a much better man in the future,” Mrs. Cooper said. Then, she rose from her seat and said, “Give me a call if you finish the pickles and want more. I’ll send more over.”

“Okay. Thank you,” Avery said, then sent Mrs. Cooper on her way.

She wanted to pretend as if she was too busy to care about the news of Elliot’s engagement.

However, she spent the entire time tossing and turning in bed the night before.

In the end, she went on social media and searched for some key words.

She accidentally came across Zoe’s social media page.

Zoe had uploaded several new posts in the past few days. She showed off photos of high-end wedding gowns, expensive diamond rings, and... photos of her pregnant belly.

Every single photo was accompanied by captions of pure bliss.

Apart from Zoe’s social media page, Avery also came across a bunch of related images.

For example, there were photos of Zoe and Elliot that people took when they bumped into them while shopping.

Avery opened up the photos and saw Zoe clinging onto Elliot's arm. They looked as close as a couple on a shopping spree.

Some of their friends also posted photos of the invitations they received for their engagement party.

Avery clicked on the invitation.

Elliot's and Zoe's names were right next to each other, and they had signed the invitations off personally.

A strange feeling of disappointment washed over Avery! This was because she never received an invitation to their engagement party.

Chapter 333

Five days later, Elliot showed up at the Sterling Group offices at ten in the morning as usual.

"Your engagement is tomorrow, sir. Don't you want to take the day off?" asked Chad as he greeted Elliot.

"I don't," Elliot said, then walked through his office doors.

Chad followed closely behind him.

“Sir, I heard from Mike that they’ve successfully talked Bohmer Holdings into starting a new company here in Aryadelle to supply high-end lenses to them.”

“If I’m not mistaken, doesn’t Bohmer Holdings work with Alpha Technologies?”

“That’s right. This shows just how good the relationship is between Miss Tate and the owner of Bohmer Holdings. Otherwise, they wouldn’t come all the way to Aryadelle to set up a new company just for her,” Chad deduced. “I looked into the head of Bohmer Holdings and found something interesting.

“What is it?” Elliot asked as his curiosity got the better of him.

“The current head of Bohmer Holdings is the son of Professor James Hough’s cousin,” Chad reported the findings of his recent investigations. “Alpha Technologies’ success was not a coincidence, but the result of several people’s hard work.”

Elliot’s brows furrowed.

of all his students, why did Professor Hough’s cousin’s son know Avery?

Did the professor introduce them, or was it purely coincidental?

“The problems that Tate Industries will have to face moving forward have nothing to do with their product quality, but with their sales and reputation,”

Chad continued. “I advised Mike to engage a professional marketing agency, but he said Avery refused. She has always insisted on focusing on product quality...”

Elliot lifted his gaze to look at Chad, then asked, “Why are you reporting Tate Industries’ situation to me? Who exactly do you work for?”

Chad was taken aback.

Who was the one who was listening so intently just moments ago?

Elliot withdrew his gaze, then turned on his computer and said, “Avery and I are officially over. You don’t need to purposely report to me about her or her personal life.”

“Yes, sir.”

Chad walked out of Elliot’s office and bumped into Ben.

“The boss said that things were officially over between him and Avery,” Chad said. “We both know he’s in denial.”

Ben burst into laughter, then said, “When did you become so brave? How dare you mock your superior? Mike's a bad influence on you!"

"I know you won't snitch on me to him. He's about to get engaged tomorrow, but he's in a terrible mood. I feel like I'm watching a tragedy unfold."

"It's his own choice," Ben said. "We should just sit back and watch the show."

"I feel like you're taking pleasure in his misfortune, Ben."

"That's nonsense. I'm thinking of forging his signature and sending an invitation to Avery," Ben said as he contemplated fanning the flames of the situation.

"He might not end up getting engaged to Zoe if that happens," Chad reckoned.

"Isn't the reason why he's so against sending an invitation to Avery because he's worried he'd regret his decision if he sees her?"

Ben coughed slightly, then patted Chad on the shoulder.

"What's wrong, Ben? Don't you think I'm right? I think..."

"Chad Rayner! Get in my office right now!" Elliot snapped coldly with a menacing expression on his face.

Chad felt like he died on the spot.

Around lunchtime, Avery received a call from the preschool.

“Miss Tate, Layla isn’t feeling too well, so we sent her home to get some rest.

Please go home and take a look if you have the time,” informed the teacher.

Avery instantly lost her appetite.

She put down her knife and fork, then picked up her bag and rushed home.

Everything was fine when she dropped the children off at school that morning.

Why was Layla suddenly feeling sick?

Avery called Hayden the moment she got into the car.

Hayden had a smartwatch that could make phone calls.

Her call was answered moments later.

“Hayden, your teacher called to tell me Layla isn’t feeling well. What’s going on?”

While Avery was speaking, she heard a whistling noise coming through the phone.

This meant that the children were not at home.

Chapter 334

“Layla’s dizzy, Mommy. She’ll be fine after she gets some rest,”

Hayden said. “You don’t need to worry.”

“I see... That’s good. Take care of your sister.”

“I will.”

After she hung up the phone, Avery did not return to the office.

She continued to drive towards the house.

She had basically concluded that the children were not at home.

If she had told Hayden that she was on the way home, the children would immediately make their way back to the house.

Now that she was quietly returning home, she would call Hayden again if they were not there!

Avery thought that the children were using sickness as an excuse to do something secretive.

Layla was more innocent and did not have complex thoughts. Her flaw was that she was too obedient towards Hayden.

Considering Hayden’s history of “bad behavior”, Avery could not help but have an ominous feeling inside her heart.

She pulled up in front of the Starry River Villa, then rushed towards the front door.

She keyed in the security code on the door then pushed it opened.

Soon after, Hayden heard the noise and walked out.

As mother and son met eyes, a peculiar spark flickered in the air.

Avery felt slightly ashamed.

How could she suspect her children of doing bad things outside?!

They were at home, after all!

It seemed like Layla really was not feeling well.

“Hayden, I was worried about you two so I came home to check on you.
How’s

your sister?” Avery asked gently then walked towards the children’s room.

“She’s asleep,” Hayden explained. “Don’t worry, Mommy.”

Avery responded, then watched her daughter who was fast asleep on the bed

and touched her forehead.

Her temperature was normal.

“Go back to work, Mommy!” Hayden said tenderly as he looked up at his mother.

“I’ll stay home with you guys.”

Avery recalled how she had been too busy with work recently and ended up

neglecting the children.

“Uncle Mike said that things weren’t settled at the company yet,” Hayden said, going straight to the point. “Go to work, Mommy!”

Avery’s cheeks flushed in embarrassment.

“Don’t worry. I’ll settle things soon.”

“Okay!” Hayden said as he walked Avery to the door.

Once Avery was gone, Hayden quickly shut the front door.

On the other hand, Layla leaped out of bed.

“That was close, Hayden!” Layla said as she let out a sigh. “It’s a good thing Uncle Mike called to let us know. Mommy would be really mad if she came home and didn’t see us here!”

Hayden’s face was void of emotion.”

He picked up his backpack, put on his cap, then said, “Stay home. I’m going alone.”

“No way! I’m coming with you! I’ll be scared if I stay home alone!”

Layla quickly picked up her own bag and ran after her brother.

The siblings walked out of the neighborhood and hailed a cab.

Once they were in the car, they asked the driver to take them to a high-end hotel.

It was the hotel where Elliot Foster's engagement party would be held the next day.

"Hayden, you said you wanted to give Dirtbag Dad a huge surprise... What kind of surprise is it? How big is it?" Layla asked as her bright eyes glistened with sparks of curiosity.

"I can't tell you."

Layla pouted and asked, "Why not?" "It's not suitable for children."

Chapter 335

"You're a kid, too!" Layla exclaimed as her curiosity escalated.

"My eyes were dirty after I saw it. Do you want to dirty your eyes, too?"

Layla shook her head.

She was curious, but she decided not to see whatever it was after hearing Hayden's words.

"Mommy wants to hire a bodyguard for us," Layla said as she changed the subject. "We can't go around freely once we have a bodyguard."

"When that happens, you'll be in charge of distracting the bodyguard while I move alone.”

Layla hesitated, then said, “If Dirtbag Dag really marries that Sanford lady, then we shouldn’t go look for him again! We should just act as if we don’t have a dad!”

Hayden glanced at his innocent sister, then said assuredly, “He won’t marry her.”

“Why not?”

“She’s not a good woman.”

“Daddy isn’t a good man, either! Wouldn’t they be perfect together?”

Hayden did not have a response for Layla’s words.

He suddenly felt like his sister was the smartest person in the world.

He should let Elliot Foster play the fool until he got older, then release the footage of Zoe Sanford and Cole Foster’s steamy night at the hotel.

That would be a much stronger attack!

However, Hayden did not want to wait that long.

He was going to settle the score now!

He would have many other ways to make Elliot suffer again in the future!

During the upper management meeting at Tate Industries, Avery announced the plans that she had spent the past few days mulling over.

Everyone in attendance was in disbelief.

They all looked at each other with wide eyes and open jaws.

Mike was Avery's biggest fan, so he took the lead and started a round of applause.

He would cry "bravo" even if she burned all of their money!

With frozen expressions on their faces, the other department heads joined in on the applause on reflex.

Since Avery was the boss, she could do whatever she wanted... As long as she was happy.

"Do you think it's a bad plan?" Avery asked modestly when she saw the expressions on everyone's faces.

The room burst into a frenzy of opinions.

"Miss Tate. We know you're rich, but this is too much of a loss! That's at least six million dollars! We haven't even picked up any new orders this year, but we keep staying in the red..."

"That's right! Replacing the lenses on two thousand drones with high-end lenses would already cost a ton of money. Giving them out for free would be a great loss!”

“I think it’s a pretty good plan,” Mike said. “Besides, we’re not giving it out for free! They would have to buy it for a dime.”

“Can a dime really be considered money?”

“Why not? If two thousand people spent a dime to buy their modified drones back, we would make two hundred dollars.”

The room fell silent.

Avery picked up her cup of coffee and took a sip.

“I know what you’re all thinking, but what we need to do now isn’t turn our losses into profit, but to improve our reputation. We can discuss profits only after our reputation improves. With the way things are now, nobody would order our drones no matter how good they are.”

“Since you’re willing to invest that much money to redeem our name, then let’s give it a try!” said the vice president.”

“If we agree to go with the plan, I’ll go announce it now,” said the head of ventures.

Avery nodded in agreement.

Very quickly, Tate Industries released a public statement on their website.

“All customers who previously purchased a Storm Series drone can redeem a brand new drone with a high-end lens for the price of one dime!”

This meant that one could buy a three thousand dollar high-end drone for only a dime! The news shook the entire internet to its core!

Chapter 336

No matter how cruel the customers were before, who could resist the temptation of basically getting a brand new high-end drone for free?

The entrance to Tate Industries was soon crowded with returning customers.

Avery did not leave the office until 9 p.m. that night.

She got in her car and rushed home.

The children should be asleep by now.

Once everything was settled, she wanted to stay home and spend more time with the kids.

Avery's phone suddenly rang.

She glanced at the screen, then turned on her bluetooth earphones and answered the call.

"Avery! Have you seen what they're saying on social media? I'm so mad!"

Tammy said angrily on the other end of the line. "You were kind enough to practically give out free drones to your previous customers, but a bunch of trolls are still insulting you online!"

Avery expected this to happen.

Shaun had told her that, as long as she did not share their core technology, he would make sure that she would not be able to run her business smoothly in Aryadelle.

This was because she would be offending over eighty percent of domestic capital.

No matter what she did, they would come at her and smear her name!

What Avery needed to do now was pull through this.

She had faith that her product could truly impress her customers.

"I didn't read it. You shouldn't either," Avery said soundly.

“How can I pretend as if I didn’t see it if I already did? I’m fighting back at those trolls on your behalf!” Tammy said unhappily. “I’ve already asked all of my friends to support your product! You’ve got this!”

“Thank you! I just don’t know what to do from now on.”

“I’ll help you if you’re in trouble!” Tammy said, then changed the subject and added, “I’m not going to Elliot Foster’s engagement party tomorrow.”

Avery could not help but laugh.

“There is a need! I absolutely despise that sleaze bag! Also, that conniving b*tch Zoe Sanford!

Wouldn’t I just be disgusted if I went to their engagement party?”

Tammy’s tone was especially intense, so Avery did not advise her further.

Over at the Foster mansion, Elliot emerged from the shower but did not feel sleepy at all.

He opened a bottle of wine, then sat at the bar and read the news on Tate Industries while sipping his wine.

Their latest business plan might seem foolish at first glance, but it was actually a very smart

move.

The best way to move away from negative press was not to run away, but to come up with the most sincere solution.

However, the internet was still scornful of this method.

Some people said that Avery Tate pulled the entire thing as part of a marketing scheme!

Some were even saying that her true ambition was to monopolize the domestic market. If she shuts down her competitors, she would be able to forgo product quality and raise prices! She could easily make back all of the money she was losing now!

The most ridiculous thing was the rumor that all of Avery's money came from foreign investors! Buying products from Tate Industries was equivalent to giving money to foreigners!

In just a few hours, the trending topic of boycotting Tate Industries exceeded a hundred million readers!

If things continued down this path, Avery might not be able to get out of this hole.

Elliot tightened his hand around the glass of wine.

Avery was getting picked on by the domestic market, but all he could do was sit aside and watch.

She would not accept any of his help.

At that moment, he did not realize just how terrifying the look on his face was!

At seven the next morning, a breaking news report appeared on social media, causing the page servers to come to a complete standstill!

Elliot was awakened by the sound of his ringtone.

He answered the call with furrowed brows.

Whatever was said on the other end of the line made him throw back the covers and jump out of bed!

Chapter 337

Just moments ago, Eric Santos, who Elliot had been searching for far and wide, finally appeared on social media!

As a once formidable king of pop icons, his accident on stage three years ago was the biggest tragedy of his life!

Since then, he disappeared from the limelight.

Everyone assumed that he was dead.

Even so, his diehard fans spent every day leaving comments on and liking his social media posts in hopes of a miracle.

In the end, a miracle finally happened!

Eric Santos uploaded a new post on his social media page at 6.55 a.m. that morning.

[Dear friends. It's been three years. How have you all been? I've been well, but I've felt a little lonely. I bought a Storm Series drone last year. I flew it to faraway places every day, and it brought back different exciting footage with it every one.

It made me feel like I was immersed in a city glowing with fireworks. I'm very grateful for its company. To me, my drone was not a cold machine, but an old friend. Now, my dear friend is going through a dark time because of some imperfections. I could not stay silent. I hope everyone will give it a chance to grow, just like the way you stayed by my side when I was growing up in the industry.]

The post was uploaded alongside a video with a series of thrilling footage taken using a Storm Series drone.

The video ended with a scene of Eric Santos tenderly brushing the dust off of the drone.

Nobody expected the popular idol to appear once again to the public in this way after a three year hiatus!

All of his fans were losing their minds!

It was enough to bring the social media page's servers down.

The servers recovered half an hour later.

The number of comments on Eric Santos' post rose at an alarming rate.

(Aaaahhhh! I'm crying! I knew Eric was alive! He promised that he would always be with us! Wooooo!)

(Santosians! Eric's back! He's finally back!]

(Wooo! I ordered ten Storm Series drones from Tate Industries' website on a whim! It's all for Eric!)

Elliot stared at Eric Santos' post and suspected he was hacked.

The post seemed like a giant advertisement for Tate Industries.

Mike was a world class hacker.

It would be a piece of cake for him to hack into someone's social media account.

Their Storm Series drones were suffering major backlash at the moment and needed emergency crisis management to deal with the bad press!

This post from Eric Santos was the lifeline they were desperate for!

However, the hacking theory did not explain the way his hand appeared at the end of the video.

Elliot searched for photos of Eric Santos' hands and compared them with the hand in the video.

In the end, he confirmed that the hand in the video definitely belonged to Eric Santos.

Why did someone who was in hiding for the past three years suddenly appear back into the limelight for a product?

Did Tate Industries pay him a huge sum of money?

Elliot had gone given his all to search for Eric Santos.

How did Avery get in touch with him?

Could there be some private relationship between the two of them?

Elliot needed to get in contact with Eric Santos and find out who his doctor was.

Shea's condition improved slightly after the last surgery, but she was still far from being fully recovered.

Perhaps Eric Santos' doctor could help Shea recover even more quickly!

The only problem was that the background of the video he posted was nothing but woods.

It was impossible to pinpoint his location.

The only thing he could do now was ask Avery!

The doorbell at the Starry River Villa rang at nine in the morning.

Mike walked to the door with his disheveled blond hair. He took one look at the surveillance camera at the front door, then opened the door.

Chapter 338

“Mike! Why aren’t you and Miss Tate answering your phones?” said the vice president anxiously as he gave Mike a once over. “Something huge happened! Hurry up and wake Miss Tate up!”

With an embarrassed face, Mike scratched his head and walked into the house.

The vice president followed Mike and said, “Did you two engage a celebrity to advertise for us overnight? Some pop idol called Eric Santos spoke up for our products! He’s a major celebrity!”

The embarrassment vanished from Mike’s face as bewilderment took over.

“Why don’t I understand a thing you’re saying?”

“My god! There’s a huge celebrity called Eric Santos who showed his support for the Storm Series on social media. Since his post went up, our customer service lines have been blowing up. What’s even more crazy is that new orders are coming in at an alarming rate... I’ve never seen this kind of chaos before!”

said the vice president with flushed cheeks.

He could not reach Avery or Mike on their phones, so he showed up at the villa.

Mike felt that things were not that simple after hearing the vice president's words.

He rushed over to the master bedroom, knocked on the door, then entered to find the room completely empty.

"Avery isn't home," Mike muttered. "You can't reach her phone?"

The vice president shook his head and said, "I even tried calling before I rang the doorbell! Her phone's off."

Mike quickly went to his room and changed his clothes.

"I looked into Eric Santos. He had disappeared for three years before he spoke up for our company! After his post went up, all of the trolls that slandered our company instantly vanished! The fighting power of his fans is incredible!"

"I know Eric Santos. Avery is a fan of his," Mike said as he became more clear headed. "I don't know why he's helping us. We have to ask Avery about it."

"Didn't she say where she was going?" asked the vice president frantically. "My phone's been blowing up all morning. Other than switching it on to call you, I've had it on airplane mode the entire time.”

Mike raised his brows and asked, “Is it that serious?”

The vice president's forehead was dripping with sweat as he said, “It is!

Everyone thinks we're working with Eric Santos and asking me how we made him come back to life!

They even asked me how much we paid him! My own daughter's been pestering me for his autograph!”

Mike was speechless.

It was the day of Elliot Foster and Zoe Sanford's engagement party.

The guests were already gathered at the hotel venue.

Zoe was dressed in a custom, high-end gown with her hair and makeup ready, and she had been anticipating Elliot's arrival since the morning.

As eight in the morning turned into nine in the morning, she was beginning to lose patience.

“Let's head over to the hotel first!” Rosalie said as she tried to comfort Zoe.
“I tried to call him earlier but his phone was turned off. I'm sure he'll call us back right away when he sees our missed calls.”

Zoe maintained a polite smile on her face, but her heart was filled with misery.

They had agreed for Elliot to pick her up from the old mansion and drive to the hotel together.

It was the day of their engagement.

No matter what happened, he should not have his phone turned off!

The bottom line was that Elliot did not care for Zoe at all.

On the way to the hotel, Zoe scrolled through her phone in frustration and happened upon Eric Santos' latest social media post.

Her brows furrowed.

Why was Eric Santos helping Avery Tate?

If he did not stand up for her, Tate Industries was sure to go under soon!

Something suddenly clicked inside of Zoe's head.

Did Avery have anything to do with Elliot's absence?

At that thought, Zoe dialed Avery's number with trembling fingers.

“Sorry, the number you have dialed is unavailable.”

Zoe burst into tears!

Elliot's phone was turned off!

Avery's phone was switched off, too! Were they together right now?!

Chapter 339

The doors to the black Rolls-Roice were locked shut.

Avery sat in the car filled with regret.

She must not have been fully awake when she entered the car that morning.

By the time she hopped it, the doors were already locked.

What was the meaning of this?

Was this an abduction?

"What do you want, Elliot?" Avery asked as she glared at Elliot with furrowed brows.

Was it not the day of his engagement?

Where did he find time to come and see her?

"Do you know Eric Santos, Avery?" Elliot asked as he lifted his gaze to look at Avery with eyes that sparkled. "Don't lie to me!"

After Avery answered his call that morning, her phone had run out of battery and shut down.

She had no way of knowing what was happening online.

Alarm bells went off in Avery's head at the sudden mention of Eric.

"I don't. Why?"

She stared at Elliot's familiar yet distant face and forced herself to stay composed.

"Why would he help you if you didn't know him?" Elliot snapped as he spoke faster. "I saw his photo on your phone before. You've never fawned over celebrities, but you liked him for some reason. Yet, you say you don't know each other. Do you think I'm an idiot?!"

Avery was angered by his tone and retorted loudly, "What does my relationship with him have anything to do with you?!"

Her words instantly made Elliot calm down.

Was this her confession?

It would be amazing news if Avery actually knew Eric Santos.

"Help me contact him," Elliot said in a hoarse voice with a hint of a plea. "I'll owe you one."

Avery could not hold back a scoff.

“I don’t know Eric Santos! Go find him yourself if you want!”

“Avery!”

“I won’t know him no matter how much you yell at me! Aren’t you getting engaged to Zoe Sanford today? You can look for Eric Santos whenever you want, so why did you choose the day of your engagement to do it? Your fiancé would be crushed if you’re late!” Avery said.

Her words dragged a bitter laugh out of Elliot.

His Adam’s apple rolled in his throat, then he said, “If you help me contact Eric Santos, then I’ll get engaged to Zoe!”

“What does your engagement have anything to do with me?!” Avery mocked.

“Are you actually using that to negotiate with me? Do you think I still love you?!”

Her words pierced through Elliot’s heart.

He had a strong feeling that Avery definitely knew Eric Santos!

Otherwise, he would not come out of hiding just to stand up for Tate Industries!

However, Avery was not willing to help him.

If she was in trouble and went to him for help, he would give it his all without hesitation.

They may be divorced, but they still once had a relationship.

Why was she acting this heartless?

She was a cruel woman!

Elliot fought through his aching heart and dialed Zoe's number on his phone.

The disappointment in Zoe's heart saw a glimmer of hope when she saw Elliot's name light up on her phone screen.

"Where are you, Elliot? I'm at the hotel with Aunt Rosalie and the others. We couldn't reach you this morning. All the guests were already here, so we didn't wait for you."

"I can't go through with the engagement, Zoe," Elliot said in a calm, restrained voice. "I'm with Avery right now. I realized that I still love her."

Avery sat frozen in the passenger seat in utter shock!

Was he insane?

He must have lost his mind!

Otherwise, how could he be doing this right now? How could he say those things?

He was making a fool out of everybody!

Zoe instantly burst into tears upon hearing Elliot's words.

She did not expect this to be the result of her waiting an entire morning!

Avery Tate was a homewrecker!

She actually seduced Elliot away on the day of his engagement with her!

How was she supposed to explain everything to the guests now?

How would everyone look at her?

They would surely be laughing behind her back!

"What's wrong, Zoe?" Rosalie asked frantically when she saw Zoe crying uncontrollably. At that moment, Henry walked over after answering a phone call.

Chapter 340

"Elliot said to cancel the engagement. He's not coming," Henry said, then quickly held on to his mother.

Rosalie was dumbfounded.

"What's wrong? Did something happen?" Henry shook his head and said, "I don't know. He hung up the phone right away. Maybe something happened! I'll get the driver to send you home for now. I'll explain everything to the guests and send them home after lunch.”

The entire thing was an embarrassing mess!

However, nobody dared speak up about it.

All of the guests’ eyes fell on Zoe’s crying face.

She had never been through anything as humiliating as this in her entire life! She did not want to stay there for another moment. She picked up her gown and ran out of the banquet hall in tears.

She was not going to let Avery get away with this!

Over at the Starry River Kindergarten, Hayden was watching the engagement party venue when Zoe suddenly ran out!

This made his little brows furrow.

If Elliot Foster was not at the banquet hall by now, did it mean that he was not going?

Otherwise, why would Zoe Sanford leave?

Was the engagement called off?

Hayden’s chest tightened, and he steadied his breath.

He despised Elliot, but he could not change the fact that he was his biological father.

He said that he did not want a dirtbag for a father.

However, if his father was not a dirtbag, then how would he be able to refuse to acknowledge his biological father?

At noon, the luncheon proceeded as scheduled in the banquet hall.

The guests quickly finished their food, then hurried out of the venue.

Hayden did not have a chance to play the video he had prepared.

“Layla,” he said suddenly.

“What’s wrong, Hayden?”

“Dirtbag Dad isn’t getting engaged.”

“Huh? Why not?” Layla asked in confusion as she walked over to her brother.

“The dirtbag didn’t show up,” Hayden said bluntly.

“Is he trying to humiliate all womankind?” Layla asked sternly.

Hayden had no idea what had happened, so he did not have an answer to his sister’s question.

In the black Rolls-Roice, Elliot took Avery’s phone and charged it in his car.

Avery’s emotions had slowly simmered down.

He would not let her out of the car if she did not calm down his anger.

Elliot was adamant on finding proof that Avery knew Eric Santos.

She could only allow him to search for it.

Once Avery's phone was charged, Elliot opened up her call history.

He glanced through it, then asked, "Why are there so many initials in your contacts?"

"They're my classmates from abroad."

Her answer made him frown.

If Avery was not lying, then Eric Santos' name would not appear in her phone.

"I'm asking you for the last time, Avery. Do you know Eric Santos?" Elliot asked as he held onto her phone and stared at her with his hawk-like eyes.

"You can ask me a thousand times and I still wouldn't know him," Avery answered without batting an eyelid. "At least not anytime before today."

Elliot returned Avery's phone to her.

Avery took her phone back, then teased, "Aren't you going to woo your Doctor Sanford? What if she decides not to treat your precious Shea anymore?"

"Does my misery amuse you?" Elliot asked with a furious expression on his face.

He unlocked the car doors, but Avery stayed unmoving from her seat.

Elliot's brows furrowed. He did not know what she was thinking.

"I'm not going anywhere unless you send me home," Avery said.

She was starving from being cooped up in the car with him all morning and had no energy to get out.

Elliot stepped on the gas pedal and drove the car towards Starry River Villa.

Before Avery got out of the car, she grabbed onto the door handle and hissed through gritted teeth, "You're despicable, Elliot Foster!"

"Despicable?" Elliot snapped as the vein in his forehead pulsed. "Who's a gentleman in your eyes, then? Mike? Or your dear Wesley?"

"Anybody would still be better than you!" Avery said coldly, then pushed the door open and began to get up from her seat.

Elliot reached out and yanked her back into the car.

Before Avery could struggle, Elliot's lips landed forcefully on hers, trapping her into a domineering kiss!

Chapter 341

The kiss felt like it lasted an eternity.

Elliot did not release Avery from his clutches until he heard the sound of someone tapping on the car window.

Mike was staring confusedly into the car.

Avery was so shocked that the color drained from her face.

She was about to open the door and get out when Elliot grabbed onto her and said hoarsely, "The windows are tinted. He can't see us."

Avery was relieved!

The kiss had driven her into a frenzy of emotions.

Her cheeks were unusually flushed while her hair was a disheveled mess. Elliot had taken off her jacket and thrown it to the ground!

Avery picked up her jacket.

Elliot handed her a bottle of water.

"I don't want it!" she snapped as she glared coldly at him.

The thought of what he just did to her made her so mad her head was throbbing.

She would rather die of thirst than drink the water he was offering.

Elliot ignored the hateful gaze Avery shot at him.

All of the anger and resentment he felt melted away with their kiss.

Was all the unhappiness he felt this entire time simply a symptom of him missing the taste of her lips?

“Didn’t you enjoy that, Avery?”

Elliot took a sip of water, then used his fingers to elegantly wipe away the droplets on his lips.

“You haven’t had a man in a while. You must be lonely, right? If you have the need for it, I could always help you out for free.”

“Get out of my sight, Elliot Foster!”

Avery felt like she was stabbed in the heart. She immediately jumped out of the car.

She slammed the door shut, then gave the car a violent kick!

“Holy sh*t! Avery!” Mike exclaimed. “What were you doing in Elliot Foster’s car?!”

You weren’t fighting in there, were you? What’s the point of kicking his car? You should land a kick right on him!”

“Don’t you think I wanted to kick the sh*t out of him? It was just too cramped in there for that!”

“I see... I almost called the cops when you disappeared all morning! What were you doing with him? Wasn’t he supposed to get engaged today?” Mike pestered as he followed closely behind Avery.

Avery walked ahead, walked through the front door and hurried into the bathroom.

Her face was boiling up!

She had to wash her face! She had to take a shower! Otherwise, his scent would be lingering on her body!

“Can you stop asking questions? Can’t you see how annoyed I am right now?

Give me some peace, won’t you?”

Avery washed her face in the first floor bathroom, then hurried upstairs.

“Let’s not talk about that b*st*rd, then! Let’s talk about Eric Santos! Why did she speak up for our company? Do you know him? If you don’t, then why did you buy all of those portraits of him before?” Mike badgered on.

Tate Industries was a complete mess.

However, everyone was quite happy despite the chaos.

Mike was ecstatic, too.

The huge problem that bothered him just the day before disappeared overnight like a godly miracle!

Avery picked up her phone to check on the situation and asked, "How exactly did Eric Santos help us?"

"He posted a video online basically advertising the Storm Series. After that, his fans not only scared off the trolls who were bad-mouthing us, they also caused our new orders to go through the roof... Isn't that interesting?" Mike said as he could not hide the joy he was feeling

Avery's mood was complicated.

Eric's actions might have helped her out, but he was also exposing himself.

She did not want him to make that kind of sacrifice.

However, at this point, all she could do was accept his kind gesture.

"Avery, what exactly were you doing in that b*st*rd, Elliot Foster's car earlier?"

Mike

suddenly asked with a stern look on his face. "Why are your lips all red and swollen?! You look like you just got fillers!"

Avery was speechless. She wanted nothing more but to slap a piece of duct tape on Mike's lips to make him shut up!

Over at the old Foster mansion, Rosalie had spent the entire time comforting Zoe after they returned from the hotel.

Zoe's heart was broken, but she refused to turn into a laughingstock, and maintained a composed demeanor.

Chapter 342

Forget about the engagement.

Zoe was already prepared for the day Elliot would break up with her and make her leave the Foster house.

Even if he could not give her his love, he would still give her a hefty reward.

It would not be a total loss for her as long as she got that money.

When the black Rolls-Roice pulled up in front of the entrance, Rosalie exclaimed to Zoe," Elliot's back! I'll make him give you an explanation right away!"

Zoe stayed seated on the couch and did not get up.

Her heart was completely shattered!

How could Elliot tell her that he was still in love with Avery Tate on the day of their engagement?

Not only did he not love Zoe, he also did not respect her at all.

All of this was still based on the premise that she was Shea's doctor and had operated on her twice.

Without any of that, Elliot might not even give her another look.

Elliot got out of the car and walked into the living room.

"Mother," he greeted when he saw Rosalie.

"Are you okay, Elliot?" Rosalie asked as he held her son's arm and looked him up and down.

"I'm fine," Elliot responded as he walked into the house with his mother.

Then, his gaze landed on Zoe's cold face.

"I'll let you talk alone!" Rosalie said. "Remember, Elliot, we Zoe no matter what.

You need to give her an explanation."

Elliot nodded.

Soon after, he was left alone in the living room with Zoe.

“I’m sorry, Zoe,” he said as he stood by the coffee table and informed her of his decision. “I can’t force myself to be with you.”

“I see,” Zoe responded blandly.

“I’ll pay you for treating Shea’s illness. If you don’t accept...”

Elliot was resolute.

He did not have to finish his sentence for Zoe to understand his meaning.

“I accept. I’ll take however much you give me,” Zoe said with a smile. “It’s all my fault. I was in over my head and barking up the wrong tree. I’m not good enough for you. I’ll just take the money and go.”

“Don’t put yourself down, Zoe. You will meet someone who will treasure you.

Unfortunately, I can’t be that man.”

“I know,” Zoe said, then gulped and stood up. “I’ll move out right away.”

“Since

you’re carrying my child, you should stay here for now. We’ll decide on what to do after the baby is born.”

Zoe glanced down at her baby bump, then smiled sarcastically and said, “Thank

you.”

Then, she turned and hurried to her room.

Rosalie walked back into the living room with a face filled with disappointment.

“How could you be so cruel to Zoe, Elliot? What happened to make you suddenly change your mind?”

Elliot helped his mother to the couch, then said, “I’ll find a better doctor to help Shea. You don’t have to worry about anything else.”

“Have you found someone even better than Zoe?”

Elliot nodded and said, “I will.”

“Okay... Thank you for taking care of Shea all these years, Elliot! Since you have no feelings for Zoe, I won’t force you. However, the doctors said that the child she’s carrying is very healthy. We should keep it,” Rosalie said.

A wave of gloom washed over Elliot’s face.

If it were not out of consideration for Zoe’s weak body being unsuitable to get an abortion, he would never had agreed to keep the baby.

Other than that crucial point, he also did not love Zoe, and would not be able to bring himself to love their child.

This child's birth would be a guaranteed tragedy.

Elliot's phone rang suddenly and snapped him back to reality.

He picked up his phone and answered the call.

"We've found information on Eric Santos, sir!" said the person on the other end of the line.

A spark flickered in Elliot's eyes. He shot to his feet and hurried out the door.

Chapter 343

At the Starry River Villa, Avery's phone rang the moment she walked out of the shower.

She immediately picked it up and answered the call.

"Hey, Wesley," she said.

"Why was your phone switched off all morning, Avery?"

Wesley had tried to call her several times before finally getting an answer.

"My phone was dead. I just charged it," Avery explained regretfully. "Did you call me to talk about Eric Santos?”

“Yes, I did. Eric’s worried you’d be mad.”

“I’m not mad,” Avery said. “I just feel like this is too troublesome for him. I’ll call him later.”

“Okay,” Wesley said as he felt relieved. “I almost went over to your house when I couldn’t reach you all morning. Mike told me you weren’t home when I called him to ask... Where did you go?”

Avery was taken aback and rendered speechless by the question.

She came up with an excuse moments later and said, “I went out for a jog.”

“I see... I guess it’s important to get regular exercise. Are you able to settle the problems with your company this time? You have to take care of your mental health no matter what happens. Nothing is more important than your health,”

Wesley said comfortingly.

“I will! Thanks, Wesley! I’ll buy you lunch soon.”

“Haha! You’re always buying me lunch. It’ll be my treat when you have time to meet.”

“Okay!”

After the phone call, Avery grabbed a change of clothes from the closet.

When she walked downstairs after changing, Tammy was charging towards her before she could react.

“Avery Tate! You have no idea how exciting things were today!” Tammy exclaimed as she kicked herself with remorse. “If I knew that Elliot was going to ditch the engagement party, then I definitely would have gone to the hotel with Jun! I heard that Zoe Sanford was crying like a baby before she stormed out of the banquet hall!”

The image popped into Avery’s mind, but she could not bring herself to laugh out loud.

Zoe must despise her right now!

“I got you lunch, Avery,” Mike said as he pointed at the food on the dining table.

“Drop by the office when you have time. I’m heading out.”

Avery nodded in response.

Once Mike was out the door, Tammy began to lousy describe everything that happened at the engagement party.

“How much of a dirtbag could Elliot be? Zoe Sanford isn’t as pretty or adorable as you are. More importantly, she’s not a good person!” Tammy yammered on as she pulled out the photos of the venue that Jun had sent to her and showed them to

Avery.

“Let me eat in peace, Tammy,” Avery said as she pulled out the food from the paper bag on the table. “I’m starving.”

“Didn’t you have breakfast today?” Tammy put down her phone, then changed the subject.” What’s your relationship with Eric Santos? You and I are both human and beautiful women, but why can’t I get to know a hot guy like Eric Santos?”

Avery almost spat out the food in her mouth.

“If you’ve got so much time on your hands, then do me a favor!”

“What favor? I’ll definitely help with whatever I can!” Tammy said dutifully.

Avery wanted to settle this matter as soon as possible. "I've got a few candidates right now, but I don't know which one to pick. Help me pick someone."

"Sure! Send me their contact information and I'll meet with them."

"A security company recommended them. You can just head on over to their office."

Avery sent a phone number to Tammy, then said, "I'm stopping by the office after I eat. Call me once you've made a decision."

"Okay."

After lunch, Avery drove towards Tate Industries.

While stopping at a red light, she tapped into the private section of her phone and dialed Eric Santos' number.

Her call was answered very quickly.

"Doctor Tate," Eric said. "Thanks for your help, Eric," Avery said gratefully.

"However, what you did could expose your location."

"I flew my drone pretty far out for the shots. I don't think that would reveal my address, right?

“As long as they find the woods in your video and narrow it down to the furthest distance the drone can go, they would be able to get a general area. Elliot

Foster’s been looking for you this whole time.”

Chapter 344

“It’ll be fine. I won’t mention you even if he manages to find me.

Don’t worry!” Eric said. “Okay. Make sure to work on your rehabilitation therapy.

I’ll be waiting for your comeback.” “I’ll give it my all!”

That evening, Eric received an unexpected guest at his villa in the mountains.

He did not anticipate Elliot Foster to find him so soon.

Elliot arrived with a woman next to him.

“Hello, Eric. I’m sorry for barging in on you,” Elliot said politely. “I’ve looked for you for a long time. I’m afraid it would’ve taken even longer if it weren’t for the video you posted online this morning.”

There were no excess emotions on Eric’s face.

He responded to Elliot in an equally courteous manner and said, “How can I help

you, Mr. Foster?”

Elliot glanced at Shea, then said, "There's a cat over there, Shea. Why don't you go and take a look?"

Shea walked away to see the cat with the bodyguard.

Elliot withdrew his gaze from Shea and landed his eyes back on Eric.

"She's my sister. She's had a mental disability since she was born."

Eric was taken aback.

"My sister is adorable and kind," Elliot said in a hoarse voice as tears formed in his eyes. "You would understand what I mean if you know about what she's been through."

He handed over a few photos to Eric.

Eric took the photos and saw the photo of a little girl lying on a bed.

She was skin and bones and covered in bruises. It was a ghastly sight!

Eric could not bring himself to look further and put the photos down.

"Do you know how she got hurt?" Elliot said as he put the photos away. "My father beat her. Due to her illness, my father was always ashamed of her and abused her. It's hard to imagine that she's been through such dark times after seeing the way she smiled at you earlier, right?”

Eric was affected by Elliot’s words.

“Mr. Foster, are you thinking of asking my doctor to help your sister?”

“That’s right. I’m willing to give up anything as long as it can help my sister’s condition.”.

“My family contacted Professor James Hough after my accident,” Eric explained honestly.” The professor would probably have been the one to operate on me if he did not pass away.”

Elliot raised his eyebrows as he waited for Eric to continue.

“After the professor’s sudden passing, his assistant, Wesley, arranged another doctor for me.”

Eric paused for a moment. In the end, his emotions won over his reason.

“I’m sure you know Miss Avery Tate. She isn’t willing to reveal that she was the one who carried out my surgery.”

Elliot was at a loss for words.

Avery Tate!

How could it be her?

She was a medical student, but she did not have a career in medicine after she graduated.

How was it possible that she could operate on Eric Santos?!

“Miss Tate told me that she had followed Professor Hough’s treatment plan to help me, so she asked me to pay the medical fees to the professor’s family,” Eric added. “Miss Tate doesn’t wish to be bothered. I sympathize with your sister, Mr.

Foster, and I hope she recovers soon, but I also hope that you won’t bother Miss

Tate.”

“Do you know what relationship I have with the Miss Tate you’re speaking of?”

Elliot said sarcastically.

Eric shook his head.

“She’s my ex wife,” Elliot said as his heart ached.

Avery lied to him!

She said that she did not know Eric Santos. Was this what she meant by not knowing him?!

Chapter 345

Has Avery ever spoken the truth? Was she being cautious or was she treating him as the enemy?

If she was being cautious of him, why? What was she afraid of?

If she treated him as the enemy- That was even harder to understand! He had never done anything to hurt her, why was she so hostile toward him?

Elliot's brows were scrunched tightly the entire journey back. Once he reached home, Mrs. Cooper took Shea.

Elliot received a call and immediately drove away.

At the Twilight Bar, Ben saw Elliot coming over. He immediately pulled him over to the sofa.

"Elliot! You have been missing the entire day, where have you been?" Ben poured him some wine.

"I went to see Eric Santos." He accepted the glass of wine and took a sip. "None of you will guess who performed his surgery."

Everyone looked at Elliot, waiting for him to continue, but he did not want to continue.

"Have I been treating Avery badly?" He furrowed his brows and downed the alcohol. “She was the one who had asked for the divorce. No matter how I tried to make her stay, she insisted on leaving. After the divorce, she rebuilt her company;

I lived my life. When she’s in trouble, I try to help her as best I can, yet she wants a clean break. She wants to draw a line. She asked me to go with Zoe, and I listened to her... But in the end, she still hates me. Why?”

Elliot’s tone signified that he was rather drunk.

Zoe was his current woman, yet the woman he constantly thought of was Avery.

Even at that moment, he was drowning himself in his alcohol and sorrow because of Avery.

“Elliot, you have done your best with Avery! She’s only that arrogant because you treat her too well! I have long seen through her! The better you treat her, the more she disrespects you! Only by being ruthless will she show you some respect!”

“I too think that you treat Avery too well! You gave her fifteen million last year. Did she thank you? I’m sure she did not, right?”

“Dunking fifteen million into a pool at least gets you a splash! Elliot, Avery is not worth it!” Everyone joined the fray. They cursed and ran their mouths. At eleven that night, Elliot exited the bar reeking of alcohol. Once he got in the car, the driver drove away.

Elliot took his phone out. He found a number in his contacts. He had a question he wanted to ask the family doctor.

After the call connected, he asked in a hoarse voice, “Could an ordinary medical student operate on a patient as well as a qualified doctor? I’m not talking about a minor surgery. I’m talking about brain surgery. The most outrageous part about this is that the surgery was a success!”

Only silence came from the other end of the line.

Elliot’s breathing got heavier. He rubbed the middle of his brows and continued, “I’m talking about Professor Hough and his pupils. His pupil... is... Avery. I could not find any records of her in the medical field, but the thing is, she operated on Eric Santos! I find this whole thing strange! How did Wesley dare let Avery operate on Eric?"

On the other end of the line, Zoe's blood was boiling!

Elliot had dialed the wrong number! He was supposed to call the family doctor, but he called her instead! He said that Avery had operated on Eric!

No wonder Eric would help Tate Industries.

However, how did Avery have such abilities? Could she be Professor Hough's last pupil?

"Elliot, you got the wrong number." Zoe's voice was cold and tight as if she was being choked by someone.

Upon hearing Zoe's voice, Elliot suddenly sobered!

He looked at his phone. When he saw Zoe's name, he immediately hung up! He had made a huge mistake while he was drunk! Did that mean that Zoe heard all the things he had said a moment ago?

Chapter 346

Elliot started to carefully think back about what he had said, but his head hurt. He could not think in peace.

Forget about it!

No matter what he had said, it was alright if Zoe heard.

Zoe felt as if something huge had hit her head! It felt like her mind was being slowly pulled apart! Although she did not want to accept that Avery's skills were better than hers, she had no choice but to do so.

Avery was Professor Hough's last pupil! The anonymous doctor that operated on Shea twice was her too! She was the only one who did not want anything from Elliot. That would not be the case if it was anyone else!

Thus, everything that she had received from Elliot was thanks to Avery. If Avery were to reveal the truth to Elliot one day, she would everything that she now had.

Instantly, she went from the dominating to subservient. She had to quickly try and come up with a way to turn the tables around.

After breakfast the next morning, Zoe accompanied Rosalie on a walk in the garden.

“Aunt Rosalie, Elliot had told me the reason he canceled our engagement when he called me yesterday,” said Zoe.

Rosalie felt guilty, so she had an apologetic expression on her face.

“Do you know where he was yesterday morning?” Zoe smiled bitterly and exhaled. “He was with Avery.”

“Oh! What a terrible thing!” Rosalie furrowed her brows.

“Elliot told me that he still loves Avery, which was why he could not be engaged to me.” Zoe’s eyes were red. “I’ve been thinking all night long. I don’t blame Elliot. I was the one who forced him to be with me. I’m happy to bear his child, and I hope that he too will find happiness.”

Rosalie did not expect Zoe to be such a forgiving and generous person.

“Aunt Rosalie, can you help me get Avery? If I were to ask her myself, she will not come.” Zoe lowered her gaze. “I only want to talk to her. As long she treats Elliot well, I will leave.”

Rosalie could not refuse Zoe’s request.

An hour later, Avery appeared by the Fosters.

Avery initially had not wanted to come, but Rosalie made her come. Not only was Rosalie Elliot 's mother, but she was also senior to Avery. Avery could not refuse

her.

After parking her car right outside the mansion, she entered the courtyard.

With a single glance, she could vaguely tell that it was Zoe who was standing under the tree. When Zoe saw her, she immediately approached her.

"Avery, let's talk!" Zoe stood before her and said honestly, "I was the one that asked Aunt Rosalie to get you to come.

Avery turned, wanting to leave, but Zoe grabbed her arm. She prevented Avery from leaving.

"Avery! You stole my man, so you're embarrassed to see me now, aren't you?"

Zoe sneered. "I' m such a failure! Even if Elliot hugged me at night, the name he whispers is yours, but God was kind to me. He gave me Elliot's child. My child is extremely healthy, unlike yours- an idiot."

Avery clenched her hands tightly into fists. Her voice trembled, "Who are you calling an idiot?

“Your son! He goes to a special needs school, right? If he is not an idiot, what is he? Even if Elliot knows that he is his son, he will not let him inherit the family business. The person who will inherit Foster’s wealth will be my son!” Zoe rubbed her tummy and looked at Avery provocatively

Avery gritted her teeth, rage burning in her eyes.

The last straw of her sensibility told her to leave, quickly. However, Zoe had grabbed her hands, preventing her from leaving.

“Let go!” Avery forcefully shook Zoe off. “Ah!” Zoe suddenly fell backward, hitting the stone table behind her!

Chapter 347

Avery was so stunned to see what happened she was at a loss for words.

She had merely shaken Zoe off, how could she have caused her to fall?

Zoe was lying on the ground, clutching her tummy and wailing in pain. “My child...

my child...”

Zoe’s screams attracted the attention of the nanny and bodyguards as well as Rosalie.

“Zoe! How did you fall!” Rosalie said with a furious expression. “Did Avery push

you?”

How could Zoe have fallen if not for Avery? She could not have accidentally fallen. The ground was flat and even, therefore she could not have tripped.

Zoe cried terribly and gasped in pain. “Avery! You have already stolen Elliot’s heart! You won’t even let our child go? My child is innocent,”

Avery shuddered in the face of Zoe’s slander. She realized that that was a setup.

However, Avery could not understand why Zoe had risked her child in doing so.

Could she have done this because she knew that this is what would finally make

Elliot hate her? What if something were to truly happen to the child?

“Zoe. You use your own child to slander me. You are not worthy of motherhood!”

Avery was furious.

“It, it hurts! Avery! It was you! You pushed me! So many people saw it!” The bodyguard helped Zoe up. She sounded so miserable. “If anything were to happen to my child, I will not let you go! Even in death, I will haunt you!”

The bodyguard carried Zoe and quickly headed to the car.

Rosalie stiffened! The ball of fury in her heart was getting bigger by the moment!

She raised her hand and slapped Avery across the face, hard!

“Avery, is it because of Elliot’s lenience that you dare behave so boldly?
We are the Fosters! How dare you harm my grandchild?! If anything were to happen to the child, I’ll make sure that you are buried with him!” spat Rosalie, and she stormed off to assist the nanny.

After the cars left, there was dead silence.

Avery’s face was burning. Her feet were as heavy as lead. She did not push Zoe.

She did not even plan on doing anything to Zoe’s child.

At that moment, a figure came out of the mansion. Avery looked up to see that it was Cole.

He had heard the exchange, but he had not come during the altercation.
What

was he doing here now? Did he want to see if his child had been murdered?

He walked over to Avery and stood in front of her. He smiled coldly. “Avery, saddened to see how miserable you look.”
I’m

“Stop your pretensions!” Avery retorted. “Even if I did push Zoe, so what?”

She turned around and left.

“Avery, if I were you, I would stay away from Elliot!” Cole warned her, “But I think it’s too late now...”

Zoe’s child was definitely dead, and the blame would be lay at Avery’s feet.

He wondered how Elliot would react when he found out about that.

At the hospital, Zoe was sent to the emergency room. Rosalie was outside the emergency room, calling Elliot,

“Elliot, I saw it with my own eyes! Avery pushed Zoe!” exaggerated Rosalie.

“Avery is a vicious woman! She pushed Zoe into the stone table! When we were at the hospital, Zoe started bleeding. My grandchild—”. At that, Rosalie could no longer hold back, and she started crying.

Chapter 348

On the other end of the line, Elliot’s hand gripped his phone tighter.

Half an hour later, he arrived at the hospital.

“Mr. Foster, I’m sorry. Your child couldn’t be saved,” said the doctor. “Miss Sanford passed out from sadness.”

Rosalie was choking on her tears as she stood by the side. She could not speak.

Zoe’s father, Richard, was carrying a black bag. His face was blue. In the bag he held was the dead fetus. .

“Elliot, it was fine that you were unable to honor my daughter, however, how could you allow someone to harm my grandchild?! How terrible could you be!”

Richard

barked.

Elliot glanced at the black bag and said, “Give me the child.”

ho

His feelings for the dead child were complicated, however, sadness was not one of them.

However, the thought of Avery being responsible for the death of the child left him burning with rage. At the same time, a part of him was telling him to conduct a paternity test on the fetus.

“Hehe! Why do you want the child? Can you bring it back to life?” Richard held onto the tiny bag. “You don’t deserve to be a father! Falling in love with you was the stupidest mistake that my daughter has ever made in her life! You killed your child! Even if this child comes back as a ghost, it will haunt you!”

Richard was too agitated. His words grew agitated with every passing second.

The bodyguard could not bear to hear them. He wanted to pull them apart. The two men began shoving each other.

At that moment, a nurse yelled from the ward.

“Dr. Shaw! Patient on bed thirty-eight is bleeding out!” The nurse ran out of the ward, yelling for the doctor. She needed him to handle the situation.

Elliot glanced inside. Zoe was lying on the bed. Her face was chalky, and she looked dead.

Elliot’s heart could not help but constrict. He walked into the room. The doctor measured the amount of blood she had lost, and then checked on her blood pressure. "The patient is losing too much blood! We have to stop the bleeding!"

Avery was at Tate Industries, and she was distracted. She would glance at her phone from time to time, checking for messages or calls.

What happened to Zoe? She did not know.

After waiting the entire morning to see whether the child lived or not, she was getting antsy for an answer. There should have been news by now.

Could the child be fine? If not, why had Elliot not called her and interrogated her?

It would be the for the best if the child lived. She did not want any trouble.

"Avery, let's go for lunch!" Mike yelled, pushing her office door open.

Avery shook her head. "I'm not hungry, you go ahead!"

"Then, I'll bring food back for you. What do you feel like eating?" Mike asked concerned.

"Anything!"

"What's going on? You seem down." Mike walked over to her. He touched her forehead with his hand. "Are you having a fever? Who pissed you off?"

Avery looked at Mike and blurted out her worries. "This morning Rosalie called me over on behalf of Zoe. I have been set up.”

Then, the phone on her table rang.

She picked up her phone and saw that it was a call from Elliot. Her heart constricted tightly.

She answered the call. She heard Elliot say, “Avery, do I have to go looking for you or are you going to come to the hospital?”

He sounded calm, but the calm masked an undercurrent of terrifying emotions.

Avery did not want him to come, nor did she want to go to the hospital to look for him. She did not want to see him!

“I did not push Zoe. At that time, I wanted to leave, but she did not let me leave, so I shook her off her arm. I did not push her! She fell on her own!” Avery blushed.

She was defending herself.

“Are you telling me that aside from Zoe, my mother and everyone else at the house was wrong?” Elliot’s voice sounded ice-cold.

Avery sneered in her heart. She was lost in her emotions. “So, what if I pushed her? Are you going to avenge her?”

Chapter 349

Elliot was silent for a few seconds. He had never thought that she could be this arrogant.

“Avery, this is a life you’re talking about!” he growled. “How could you be so coldblooded?”

“Is your son gone?” Avery took a deep breath. She saluted Zoe. “Is Zoe secretly laughing right now? Trading her son to set me up, no wonder she is the woman who is still by your side!”

Avery’s words carried a double meaning. Not only did she mean that Zoe was vicious and ruthless, but also that he possessed the same nature as her.

Elliot’s expressions darkened. “She is bleeding out, and the doctors are trying to resuscitate her. If this is all part of her plan, then not only did she risk her child, but she also risked her own life. Do you think that you are so smart now?”

Avery’s lips moved, but no words came out.

“Avery, this time, I will not go soft on you anymore!” Elliot said each word slowly before hanging up.

Avery held onto her phone. Her face was pale, and she felt weak as if someone had sucked up all her energy.

Mike looked at her, worried. From what she had said a moment ago, it seemed that things were serious. "Avery, what on earth happened?"

Avery quickly collected her emotions. "It's fine. Go have lunch!"

"What do you mean it's fine! I heard it all. Zoe had a miscarriage. Did she blame it on you? That shameless woman! She deserves to get beaten up!" Mike clenched his fist. He could no longer hold back his fiery temper.

"I don't need you to beat her up. She is bleeding out, and they are trying to resuscitate her," said Avery calmly. "I'm now even starting to think that I might have pushed her by mistake. And it is because of me that she is bleeding out. But if she did do it, then the price she is paying is too high."

At her words, Mike furrowed his brows. "Is Elliot looking for trouble?"

"You don't have to worry about me. Even if he comes for me, he won't bury me with his son," said Avery calmly.

“His son was not even born. So, it can’t really be called human! I used to study law!” boasted Mike. “But he might come for revenge, and he would fight you because of this.”

“Hmm, go for lunch!”

“But I’m worried for you.”

“Does your concern stop him from getting his revenge?” Avery stood up from her desk and pushed Mike out the door. “Bring some food back for me, thank you.”

“Avery, if he comes looking for you, you must call me. I will protect you,” Mike advised.

“Hmm.”

After Mike left, Avery sat down once again.

She clenched her fists tightly. Her mind started replaying the scenes of that morning.

Zoe had gotten Rosalie to contact Avery to meet her at the old Foster mansion.

Once she had reached, every single word Zoe had said was provocative. It had easily infuriated her.

She had wanted to leave many times, but Zoe had refused to release her arm not allowing her to leave.

If Zoe had truly wanted to say something to her, she could have easily told it to her over the phone, and yet, she had taken the trouble to ensure that she was at the Foster mansion.

The more Avery thought, the more that she had felt that the entire situation had been a setup!

She too had given birth to children before. Technically, even if one were to suffer a fall, the end result would not have necessarily been a miscarriage, and even then, a miscarriage would not have resulted in a bleed out.

Zoe could not have predicted the hemorrhage that occurred, but the fact that she had gambled with the life of her child was proof that she did not have any feelings for it.

Zoe wanted to marry Elliot so badly, so how could she possibly not have feelings for the child?

Could the child be the problem? At that thought, Avery's back was dripping with cold sweat.

Chapter 350

It was five in the evening at Starry River Kindergarten.

This was the bodyguard's first day on the job. Once he picked up the children, he brought them home.

"Uncle Bodyguard, can Hayden and I play outside for a while?" Layla looked up at him. She was trying to see where the boundary lay.

The bodyguard replied clearly, "Sure! I'll take you out to play after dinner."

Layla replied, "Oh! What are we eating for dinner? Are we ordering in or are you making dinner for us? What time do you finish work?"

The bodyguard said, "I get off work when your mom or uncle Mike gets home. If you'd like, I can cook you a meal."

Layla muttered, "Then, do we have to go to the supermarket to get groceries? If you make meals for us, does my mom have to pay you double? But, if your cooking is bad, then does she not pay you double?"

The bodyguard laughed. "Your mom pays me enough for me to cook ten meals a day for you two!"

Then, the bodyguard brought the two children to the supermarket.

At seven in the evening, the bodyguard received a call from Mike. Mike asked about the kids before saying, "I might be home late tonight. The kids go to bed at nine. If Avery and I are not back by then, you can end work."

Mike could not locate Avery! He had gone to look for her so that they might go home together, but she was not in her office.

He had tried calling her, but she did not pick up. After a while, he tried calling her again, but she had turned her phone off!

Mike was so furious he wanted to swear! Elliot must have taken her away because Mike could not get to him either!

Mike was driving to Elliot's mansion. He had his bluetooth earpiece on. "How could they blame Zoe's miscarriage on Avery? Avery isn't that type of person!" he grumbled to Chad who was on the other side of the call.

Chad said, "Mr. Foster did not come to work today. I have heard about Zoe's incident too, but I was not there. I can't say much about it. My advice to you is to not get too angry about it. They are adults; they will surely solve the matter properly."

"How funny! Avery might be an adult, but I can't be so sure about your boss!"

Mike said sarcastically. "If he had any brains, he should not have suspected Avery! He called Avery in the afternoon and threatened her. I was next to Avery. I heard everything! If anything were to happen to Avery, I will not let him go easily!"

Chad was infuriated by Mike's threats. "How are you planning to deal with Mr.

Foster?"

"I'll expose him! I have tons of dirt on him!"

"You're nuts! If you dare to expose him, he will send you to prison!" Chad pushed his glasses higher up his nose. "Don't be reckless. Let me make some calls to see if anyone knows where he is."

Avery was at a hotel. She was staring at the man in front of her with confusion.

Elliot had called her out here because he wanted to solve the problem. So, she had come here.

She never thought that he would take her to a hotel after she had met him.

“Elliot, how are you planning to solve the problem?” Avery asked him sternly. She had asked him this after he had taken her phone from her.

“Let’s have some food first.” He picked up the menu in the room and started ordering.

Avery looked at the luxurious presidential suite. She had a vague feeling that things were becoming strange.

She strode over to the exit and opened the door. Outside, two bodyguards were looking at her with dark expressions.

She gasped, took a step back, and shut the door!

“Elliot, are you imprisoning me?” She walked over to him, snatched the menu away, and threw it on the floor! Elliot looked at her coldly. “You killed my child, you will give me one in return!”

Chapter 351

Give him one in return?

Avery thought she had misheard him. A child is not a product, how could she give him one in return?

Looking at the confusion on her face, he said calmly, "You will use your womb to give me another one. I don't care if the child is dead or alive, just so long as it's mine!"

Avery shuddered. She yelled hysterically, "Elliot! Have you gone nuts!"

When she had been pregnant with his children, he had gotten his bodyguards to drag her to an abortion clinic! Had he forgotten about it?!

Now, he was forcing her to bear him a child! What was he treating her as? A toy?

Forcing her to get pregnant whenever he wanted, forcing her to have an abortion whenever he did not want a child?

"Hehe!

"Yes! I am nuts!" His eyes reddened with hatred. "Avery, you're the one who drove me crazy! You and your lies! You kept driving me to the edge, and my patience has its limits!”

Avery was so intimidated by how terrifying he was behaving that she did not dare make a sound.

She retreated and finally fell to the sofa.

“Avery, I will no longer show you mercy! You have made a mistake, so you must accept the consequences! I don’t care if you conceive a stillborn!” he said coldly.

“From today onward, you will appear whenever I need you. You will do so until you are pregnant with my child!”

Elliot towered over Avery, looking down on her, backing her to a corner.

Avery gripped the sofa’s sheets tightly. Her chest heaving quickly. The thought of a child being born, and how coldly he would treat it made Avery’s heart lurch, so she fought back. “No! Go and find another woman!”

“This is not up to you! This time, even if you run to the ends of the world, I will find you and take you!” Elliot looked at her coldly and said frigidly, “If you want freedom, you either die or you give me a child! Don’t think you can use death as an escape unless you are taking your kids with you. If you die, your kids will pay the price!”

Avery was speechless.

His cool fingers unbuttoned her buttons one by one. He completely got rid of her dignity!

Mike parked the car outside the Foster mansion and explained his reason for coming to the guard on duty.

“I’m a Mike a good friend of Mr. Foster. He asked me here for a drink.” Mike thought it was best to get in first before playing things by ear.

Mike came over once, and the guard still remembered him. He was not a friend of his boss. He was Avery’s friend.

“Mr. Foster is not home. Come back when he’s here!” The guard stopped him.

“Oh, do you know when he is coming back?”

“I don’t know.”

“Oh, then, is Shea home? Shea and I are friends too.” Mike’s mind was spinning.

Then, he yelled at the mansion, “Shea! Come open the door! It’s Mike! Hayden and Layla asked me to come and look for you!”

Hearing Mike’s yells, Mrs. Cooper walked out.

“Mrs. Cooper! Is Shea home? Get her to open the door for me!” Mike craned his head and yelled at Mrs. Cooper, who was in the courtyard.

A moment later, Mrs. Cooper brought Shea out.

When Shea saw Mike, she immediately walked to the entrance and opened the door for him.

In this house, after Elliot, Shea was the most powerful. The bodyguard did not dare offend Shea.

“Shea! Avery has gone missing! I suspect that Elliot has taken her away!” Mike grabbed Shea’s hand and asked for her help. “If I can’t contact Avery, will you follow me home? I’ll exchange Avery for you. Please, come with me?”

Shea nodded, barely giving it any thought. Mike thought that he was a complete genius! This method was brilliant!

Chapter 352

Mike told his brilliant idea to Chad.

Chad said, "Mr. Foster will not be threatened. Shea's nanny and bodyguard will always follow her. Taking her to Avery's house is just a change of living accommodations."

Mike was baffled.

Chad continued, "Mr. Foster will not harm Avery. I can guarantee you that."

Mike said, "How are you going to guarantee that?"

"If you don't believe me, fine! I'm at the hospital seeing Zoe now. She has not come around yet."

Mike's anxiety lessened slightly. "What's going on with her now?"

"She has been unconscious since the blood transfusion."

"Oh, Avery said that she did not push Zoe. What do you think Zoe is thinking?"

Mike wondered. "Is the child in her not Elliot's?"

"Of course, you're siding with Avery. It's hard to say what the truth is," Chad said objectively.

Mike chuckled. "I think the child in her is not Elliot's. If the child was Elliot's, she would have fought with all her might. She would not have fallen with a single push. You should get Elliot to do a paternity test.”

“No can do. Zoe’s father took the child away at the hospital.”

“Hahaha!”

“Stop laughing. Zoe’s life is still hanging by the thread. No matter who the child belongs to, it doesn’t matter,” Chad said. “After all, the child is dead.”

“What do you mean it doesn’t matter? Avery is being wrongfully blamed!”
Mike

said angrily.

“Don’t be such a pessimist. Mr. Foster never wanted the child. Now that the child is gone, perhaps he might even thank Avery!” Chad said. “Avery is not home right now, aren’t you going to look after the kids?”

“We hired a bodyguard.”

“Oh, then you just wait at Mr. Foster’s place then! I’ve already contacted everyone. No one knows where he is either.”

Mike furrowed his brows in worry.

“By the way, I heard a piece of news today.” Before Chad hung up, he suddenly remembered something. “Wanda sold off her cosmetics company. The one abroad. She cashed it for four hundred and fifty million. It looks like she is preparing to return to the country.”

“Oh, that witch! Once she returns, I’ll make sure her life is hell!”

“Don’t underestimate her. Wanda is business savvy. If she has decided to return, she must have a plan. You have to remind Avery to be careful,” Chad said, then he switched topics. “I think you should still go back home! It’s pointless for you to wait at Mr. Foster’s place.”

“You only know how to protect your boss!” Mike said in annoyance and hung up.

Avery was at the hotel, and she thought that she was going to die.

What was worse than hunger was how rough Elliot was with her. He seemed to have an abundance of energy when it came to torturing her.

At two in the morning, there was a knock on the door. Elliot stopped what he was doing. Avery pulled the covers over her body.

Elliot put on a robe and walked to the door.

“Mr. Foster, Miss Sanford has come around. She’s asking to see you,” the bodyguard said.

Elliot turned around and looked at the messy bed. "All of you stay here. Don't let her escape."

"Yes, sir!"

Avery's eyes reddened. She was completely infuriated. He had already spent the night with her! Why not let her go?

"Elliot! What makes you think you can keep me here?!" She wrapped the sheets around herself, dragged her sore body out of bed, and shouted at Elliot.

Elliot walked over to her, picked her up, and placed her back on the bed.

His unique scent wafted across her. "I'll let you go after twenty-four hours. What if you take contraceptives? Then, all my efforts tonight will go to waste?"

Chapter 353

Avery grabbed Elliot by his robe and looked at him coldly with reddened eyes.

"Whether I decide to take contraceptives or not is my right! Don't push it! If you do, you'll get nothing!"

Her shrill voice pierced through the dark.

His sexy Adam's apple bobbed.

“Give me my phone!” Avery looked at his long neck. If he was not going to comply, she was going to bite him!

“Avery, you better heed my words.” Elliot’s eyes darkened. He said hoarsely, “If you dare to take any contraceptive pills, we’ll sleep be sleeping together forever!”

He then returned her phone. Once Avery was in possession of her phone, she immediately jumped off the bed. She picked her clothes up and quickly put them on.

Before he left, she bolted the door!

It was half-past two in the morning, and there were not many cars on the road.

The night breeze took her exhaustion away.

Avery turned on her phone. There were dozens of missed calls, and all of them were from Mike. She wanted to return his calls, but how was she going to explain things when she returned home?

The incident that had taken place last night was too absurd. When she had thought about it, she felt rather the entire thing was rather surreal.

Elliot was in Zoe's ward at three in the morning. When Zoe saw him, she began to cry.

Elliot took a piece of tissue and wiped her tears off her face.

"Zoe, stop crying."

"Our child... is gone. I'm... So... sad. It's all my fault. I... didn't protect him well..."

Zoe was sobbing hard. If she kept it up she might suffocate.

"You'll still have children in the future," Elliot comforted her. "You need to rest."

Zoe looked at him with teary eyes. "But I can never have any more children! Elliot, our child died so horribly! He was almost a fully formed baby!"

"I know."

"It's Avery,"

"Why did you want to meet Avery?" Elliot interrupted her. "You got my mother to call her over. Was it necessary to get her to come to the house?"

Zoe's tears fell harder. "I regret it, Elliot! I should not have been so reckless! You canceled our engagement the day before You said you loved her, and I lost it. I decided to take myself out of the picture, but I wanted to see her and settle things between us. I hoped that after you two got together, she would still accept our child. The child is innocent-“.

Elliot looked at Zoe's aggrieved face. He asked, “So she pushed you?”

Zoe took a deep breath. “Maybe seeing our child provoked her? She probably still loves you, so she could not bear seeing our child. I never thought that she could do such evil —”

Elliot's expressions darkened instantly. If what Zoe said was true, then Avery was indeed vile.

“Now, every time I close my eyes, I see our child covered in blood, crying terribly.

He keeps calling to me, asking me to help him-”

“Zoe! Stop talking!” Elliot interrupted her. “The child is dead. You're in pain now.

It's pointless.”

“Elliot, is our child going to just die for nothing?” Zoe sobbed and said softly.

“I'll look for Avery! You just get better!”

“Okay, I’m relieved to hear that!” Zoe took a deep breath. “I’m sorry for calling you over so late...”

Chapter 354

“It’s fine.” Elliot looked at her pale face. He felt a little pity for her. “Rest well. I’ll visit you tomorrow.”

“Okay.”

Coming out of the hospital, Elliot asked the bodyguard, “Where did the dead baby go?”

“Zoe’s father took the baby to the crematorium to be cremated.”

Elliot furrowed his brows. He had wanted a paternity test to be done, but that was impossible now.

The bodyguard continued, “Mr. Sanford was extremely agitated. I wanted to help him, but he thought I wanted to take the child away from him. He began to fight

me

I wanted to help him on the way. He thought that I wanted to take the child away from him. He fought me.”

Elliot’s eyes darkened. He got in the car.

The next morning, the family doctor received a call and rushed to Elliot’s mansion.

Elliot had not slept the entire night. His eyes were red. He looked a little terrifying.

“Mr. Foster, I heard that Miss Sanford had a miscarriage,” The doctor tried comforting him,” You and Miss Sanford are still young. There are still plenty of chances in the future.”

“I did not ask you here for this.” Elliot drank some coffee. “The person who operated on Eric Santos was Avery.”

The doctor was stunned. “You mean your ex-wife, Miss Tate?”

“Yes. What do you think about that?”

The doctor adjusted his glasses. “Although I knew that Miss Tate was a pupil of Professor Hough, I still find it hard to believe. After all, brain surgery is no small matter.”

“How can I find out what she is truly capable of?” Elliot asked.

The doctor shook his head. “If you did not see her perform the surgery and she does not say anything, I don't think you will truly know what she is capable of."

"Eric said that Professor Hough devised the treatment. If you were given the treatment plan, would you dare perform such a complicated surgery on any of your patients?"

The doctor was stumped by Elliot's questions. "Mr. Foster, why don't you ask

her?"

Elliot furrowed his brows. "If I could get an answer from her, why would I be talking to you?"

"Oh, if Professor Hough had given me the treatment plan, I would perform the operation, but I can't guarantee that it would be a success." The doctor had answered Elliot's question and then added, "Miss Tate succeeded. It proves that she has outstanding skills. I just don't know who is better: Miss Tate or Miss Sanford."

Elliot lowered his gaze. "Even if her skills are great, she would not cure Shea."

The doctor said, "In my opinion, Miss Sanford has sufficient skills, so if Miss Tate is unwilling to help you, you can continue seeking help from Miss Sanford."

Elliot nodded.

“The child. If it has been cremated, can a paternity test still be done?”
asked

Elliot.

The doctor shook his head. “Were you planning to conduct a paternity test
on

Miss Sanford’s child? Once the child has been cremated, you won’t be able to get any samples. Naturally, a paternity test will no longer be possible. Are there any other samples that you can get?”

“The incident happened too suddenly. By the time I got to the hospital, her father

had already taken the child.”

“Then, there is no other way. However, why do you suspect Miss Sanford?”

“I only did it with her once. I was drunk. Till now, I can’t be sure the woman I had slept with that night was truly her.”

The doctor was dumbfounded. “Theoretically speaking, the chances of getting pregnant after sex once is very low. Even if the woman was ovulating, it might not be successful. Did you not investigate it at that time?”

“I have asked Avery. She said that she had not slept with me.” The reason Elliot brought up the past was because he suspected Avery. “I realized that nothing she had ever told me was the truth.”

The doctor replied, “Miss Tate does not seem like that type of person.”

“She might not be to others, but to me, she’s a liar.”

“Why?”

“If I knew why I wouldn’t be so troubled.” Elliot could not sleep the entire night.

What Avery had said to him kept him awake.

Whether it was the truth, or whether it was a lie, he could not tell.

“Have you seen her son?” Elliot swallowed. “The boy looks a little like me. She said that she adopted him. If she hates me so much, why would she adopt a child that looks like me?”

Chapter 355

“Mr. Foster, I remember that you had your bodyguard send Miss Tate to the abortion clinic,” the family doctor said.

“Yeah, the bodyguard said that he had sent her into the operation room himself.”

Elliot had even gone to check with the bodyguard a while ago. “He said that the doctor had even told him what to take note of after the completion of the surgery.”

“Then the child is probably gone,” the family doctor said. “Perhaps the reason the adopted child looks like you could be her way of honoring her lost child.”

“Is that why Avery hates me so much?” Elliot thought.

Meanwhile, in the master bedroom of Starry River Villa, Mike and the two children stared intently at Avery, who was sleeping on the bed.

Mike had called her at one in the morning, but she had never picked up. He was surprised that she had gone home, but he did not know when she had gone home.

“Are there mosquitoes at home?” Layla asked sweetly.

Mike looked around the room. “No! Did mosquitoes bite you?”

“Mosquitoes bit Mom!” Her eyes were wide when she stared at Avery’s neck.

“Look, the mosquitoes left a big mark on Mom!”

Mike’s gaze followed the direction in which Layla was pointing.

“That’s... Based on my experience as an adult, I don’t think mosquitos did that.

That mark was left after a certain unspeakable act was committed,” thought Hayden.

“Alright, let her rest.” Mike picked up both-one in each arm- and carried them out of the room.”Let’s go get breakfast, and I’ll take you somewhere to play.”

“I want to stay home and wait for Mom to wake up,” Layla pouted. “It’s been so long since I played with Mom!”

Hayden nodded in agreement.

“Alright, then stay home after breakfast,” Mike yawned. “I might need to work overtime in the office today... But I will go after your mom wakes up.”

“Why didn’t Mom come home last night?” Hayden asked.

“That was thanks to Elliot!” Mike thought of the red marks on Avery’s neck, and he grew even more certain that she had gone missing because of Elliot. “Zoe had a miscarriage. Do you know what that word means?”

Hayden nodded, and Layla shook her head.

“Zoe was pregnant with Elliot’s child, right? That child passed away last night. Zoe insists that it was your mom who had pushed her, causing her to lose the baby,” explained Mike.

Hayden's eyes shone coldly as he thought to himself, "That horrible woman, Zoe!

How dare she frame my mom! I have to teach her a lesson!"

Layla frowned as she crushed the hamburger in her hands angrily. "My mom wouldn't do something like that!"

"Of course not! But Zoe insists that it was her, so that dirtbag Elliot went looking for trouble last night." Mike took a bite of the bread and continued, "I think I should get your mom a bodyguard."

"Just give our bodyguard to Mom," Hayden said.

"I'll just hire a new bodyguard," Mike said. "The both of you shouldn't worry about such things. I will handle it!"

"Do it now, Uncle Mike," Layla said hastily, "I don't want that dirtbag to bully Mom!"

"Go now!" Hayden agreed.

"Alright, alright!" Mike picked up his glass of milk and stood up from his chair. "I will go now! Stay home and don't run off anywhere!"

After Mike left, Layla went to Avery's room with her toys. She fully intended to remain there so that she would be the first thing her mother saw when she woke up.

Hayden returned to the children's room and booted up his laptop.

He had decided to teach Zoe a lesson.

An hour later, a black luxury car stopped outside the mansion and the doorbell rang. Both Hayden and Layla heard it and ran out.

Chapter 356

When the two arrived at the door, the surveillance camera showed a majestic woman in her sixties standing outside.

Hayden immediately recognized the woman and said, "That's dirtbag dad's mom!"

"Oh," Layla said, "so our grandma!"

"Don't call her grandma!" corrected Hayden. "She is probably here to confront

Mom!"

"Hmph! We can't let her bully Mom! Let's chase her away!"

Hayden hurried inside to look for his drone, and Layla followed him closely.

Rosalie stood outside the door with a frown. She was waiting for Avery to open it.

She had not slept the entire night. She simply could not find peace, so she had come here to confront Avery.

Suddenly, she heard the sound of an engine, and it seemed to be coming from above her. When she looked up, she saw a drone hovering above her.

Just as she was beginning to wonder why there was a drone above her, red liquid started pouring out of it. When the liquid splattered onto her exquisite leather jacket, she screamed and ran for her car.

Avery was woken up by the scream. She immediately got out of bed and walked toward the window to look outside. When she saw what happened, she darted out of the room.

Rosalie was hiding out in her car, and her eyes were red with anger.

The nanny helped her out of her jacket and took out a piece of wet tissue and proceeded to help get the red liquid off Rosalie's face.

"Madame, I think this is paint," the nanny said.

"How barbaric!" said Rosalie through gritted teeth, "I didn't believe that she would do something like that to Zoe, but now I do!”

Shortly after, the door to the mansion swung open and Avery, dressed in her pajamas, hurried out.

She walked toward the black car, and when Rosalie saw her, she immediately exited the car with the help of the nanny.

“Avery Tate!” Flustered, Rosalie shouted, “Look at what you’ve done!”

Both Hayden and Layla ran out at the sound of her shouting. Though Avery had ordered them to stay inside the house, they could not stand idly by while someone abused their mother.

“That had got nothing to do with Mom! My brother and I did it!” Layla shouted.

Rosalie had heard that Avery had two children, but she was still shocked when she finally saw them.

“You are not welcomed here! We can do whatever we want in our house! You wouldn’t have gotten paint all over yourself if you hadn’t come here!” Layla glared at Rosalie.

Rosalie gasped as she looked at Layla's face. Layla greatly resembled Avery. "I am looking for your mom! How can you be so rude?"

"I don't want you to find my mom!" Layla lifted her chin and said, "Go away! If you don't, I will get my brother to chase you away with his drone!"

Rosalie's expression darkened as she turned to look at Hayden who was standing beside Layla. When she saw Hayden's face, she instantly felt as though she was being strangled.

"That child looks so much like Elliot!" she thought.

Avery took the children's hands in hers and quickly dragged them into the house.

Once they were inside, Avery rushed out and said to Rosalie, "If you are here for what happened to Zoe, I can only tell you that I am not guilty; also, your son has already approached me, so this is a matter that you need not concern yourself with!"

"Avery, your son- Who's the father of your son?" Rosalie asked in a trembling voice.

“I adopted him from an orphanage,” Avery responded coldly as she glanced at the red paint on Rosalie. “My kids have been rude, and I apologize on their behalf.’

As though she had not heard a thing, Rosalie grabbed the nanny’s arm and strode back to the car. Once she was inside the car, she mumbled, “Did you see her son? He looks exactly like Elliot, when he was little.” “Do you suspect that he might be Elliot’s son?” The nanny asked.

Chapter 357

Rosalie’s expression darkened. “They can’t look that similar if they are not related. I have a feeling that that child is my grandson! Elliot was exactly like that when he was little. He always looked at others coldly as well, and those eyes, they look so similar to my own!”

“But Young Master Elliot doesn’t seem to be suspicious about the child’s background,” the nanny said.

“Elliot doesn’t know himself as well as I do. He has probably forgotten what he looked like as a child.”

“That’s true. So what do you plan to do?”

Rosalie's eyes shone as she said, "I need to find out if Elliot fathered the boy, and for that, I need to do a DNA test."

"Well... you need the boy's hair or blood for a DNA test though..."

"When there's a will, there's a way." Rosalie was confident. "I will tell Elliot once I have the results."

Zoe was in the hospital browsing through the news on her phone.

Having a miscarriage meant that she had to remain in the hospital under observation for a few days.

Elliot had come to visit her earlier that morning, but within ten minutes of him entering the room, he received a call and left.

Without the child in her belly, Rosalie too started paying Zoe less attention.

Zoe felt slightly upset, but she felt much better when she saw the one hundred and fifty-five million Elliot had transferred to her account.

Money might not buy her everything, but it made her happy.

She accepted the money from Elliot. Naturally, she would continue trying to find a cure for Shea. She knew that Elliot would continue treating her well if there was an improvement in Shea's condition.

For now, Elliot still needed her and it would take more than one hundred and fiftyfive million to satisfy her.

Suddenly, she received a message.

Zoe casually tapped on it. A video popped up.

Her eyes widened instantly at how familiar the people in the video looked.

Wait! Isn't that me? That man... It's Cole!" she thought and gasped.

It was the video of the time she had spent the night with Cole. The two of them had searched the entire room, but had not found any cameras at the time. This video revealed everything that had happened on the bed. Every minute detail was laid bare to the viewer.

Zoe's face flushed. She could barely hold onto the phone.

"Who is it? Who sent this?" she thought frantically.

She tapped on the message to check, but the sender column was blank.

"What's going on?!" she wondered.

Her heart sank, and she immediately typed her reply.

(Who are you? Are you trying to blackmail me into paying for this video? Haha!

Dream on! I've broken up with Elliot, so you can't threaten me with this!)

Before sending it, she breathed heavily and deleted what she had typed.

Though Elliot had broken up with her, he would surely despise her if the video was to come to light.

She still wanted to get more money from him.

After hesitating for a while, she typed, (I don't know who you are, but Elliot and I have broken up. He has never loved me, and I've completely given up on him.)]

She had stared at her thoughtfully composed message before she deleted it

again.

In the end, she had sent over a message that said, (How much do you want? Just name your price!)

Though they had broken up, Zoe was certain that her reputation would be ruined if the video got out. She had already become the laughing stock amongst everyone she knew after Elliot had canceled their engagement. If the video was released to the public, people would assume that Elliot had ditched her because she had cheated on him. Meanwhile, other things were going on at Starry River

Villa.

Chapter 358

Hayden began to wonder if he should scam Zoe out of all her money when he received her message.

Zoe had broken up with Elliot and had lost her child, so the video would not hurt

Elliot.

“How can you two do that?” Avery took a sip of water and went to the children’s room to lecture them. “No matter the grudge that she and I hold against each other, she is in her seventies. What would have happened had she gotten startled and fallen sick?”

Layla batted her eyelashes innocently. “You can cure her if she falls sick, Mommy.”

“I am not a miracle-worker! I can’t cure all the illnesses in the world!”

“But she didn’t fall sick! She was yelling at you!” Layla muttered, “Mom, we can’t just let others bully you!”

Avery’s heart softened at her daughter’s words.

“They weren’t bullying me. I’m not that easy to bully,” she said in an attempt to reassure her children.

“But you didn’t come home last night... Hayden and I waited so long...
Uncle

Mike said that the dirtbag took you away...” Layla pouted and said, “When we grow up, we will take revenge for

you!”

Avery was moved. She picked her daughter up and said softly, “I can protect myself. You and your brother only need to worry about growing up healthy and happy! I’ll take you out to play later, okay?”

“Yay! Mom, it’s been so long since you took us out to play!” Layla snuffled pathetically.

Meanwhile, Hayden had sent a reply to Zoe.

Zoe stared at the reply from the mysterious person and scowled.

“A thousand Beta Coins? What is a Beta Coin?” Confused, she did an online search.

Beta Coin was a type of international virtual currency.

She had to admit that this mysterious person was smart. Zoe could make a police report if the blackmailer were to demand money. However, she would not have done that as it would affect her reputation.

She went on to research what the currency was valued at, and she gasped.

The price of one Beta Coin was twenty thousand dollars, so a thousand Beta Coins would cost her twenty million.

Zoe's heart ached. Though Elliot had paid her one hundred and fifty-five million, that was her hard-earned money, and having to pay a person twenty million for a video felt akin to slicing her flesh off.

After struggling for a while, she bought a thousand Beta Coins and transferred them to the blackmailer's account.

Hayden immediately shut his laptop as soon as he received the money.

"Hayden, it's going to be you and your sister's birthday soon, let me take you two out to buy some new clothes, okay?" Avery got changed and took the children with her.

The bodyguard waited outside by the door.

“Mom, this uncle cooks really well.” When Layla spotted the bodyguard, she immediately turned to her mother and said, “He cooked for us last night, and we ate it all!”

Avery looked over at the bodyguard and said, “Good work!”

Once the car was outside, Avery turned on her phone and saw a photo that Tammy, who was getting her nails done, had sent her.

“Avery! I found a shop that does super pretty nails! Do you want to come over?

Bring the kids too! I have an important announcement to make!”

Avery looked at the message from her best friend with a smile, knowing in her heart what Tammy meant by ‘important announcement’.

“Let’s go find Aunt Tammy, shall we?” Avery suggested to the children.

“Sure! I like Aunt Tammy!” Layla agreed cheerfully.

Hayden, on the other hand, simply agreed in silence.

Half an hour later, Avery arrived at the nail salon that Tammy mentioned with Layla and Hayden.

Chapter 359

The nail salon was located inside a luxury brand boutique, Avery had only known that it was a brand that sold handbags and clothing, and it was amazing to see that the company had entered into the nail salon business.

“Avery! Jun and I are going to get married in May!” exclaimed Tammy. “And you are going to be my maid of honor! Your two kids will be my ring bearer!”

“My kids can be your ring bearer,” Avery said with resignation, “but forget about me being your maid of honor... You should find someone else!”

She was divorced with children. Therefore, technically she could not be someone’s maid of honor.

“I’ve already talked to my parents and Jun! They all say it’s okay.” Tammy dragged Avery and made her sit next to her. “Let’s get matching nails!”

“Matching nails are fine, but I really can’t be your maid of honor. Unlike me, I want you and Jun to be happy, Tammy,” said Avery as she lowered her gaze. “I am as happy as I can be right now, but I want you to be even happier.”

The smile on Tammy's face froze. Moved, she said, "It's up to you, Avery, but I believe that you will find someone better in the future, and you are going to be super-duper happy."

Avery nodded and looked at Tammy's nails. "Are you almost done? How long have you been here?"

"I've been here since morning. I've picked out quite a few designs so it will take a little longer than usual, but the end result is pretty decent." Tammy studied her nails in satisfaction.

"I will just go with plain ones. I came with my kids, and they might get bored if it takes too long." Avery glanced at Layla and Hayden.

"Mom, I want pretty nails too." Layla stared at the diverse patterns on display with unblinking

eyes.

"You are still too young. You need to wait until you grow up."

"Mom, we won't be bored." Hayden pulled Layla back and said, "You can get the same thing as Aunt Tammy.”

Tammy beamed at him and said, “Hayden, do you think that my nails are pretty too?”

Hayden nodded.

“Look at what a great child your son is! Just get the same as me. I’ll be done soon, so if they get bored, I can take them out to play.”

So that Avery might enjoy getting her nails done, Tammy took the two children out after she was done.

Tammy had been a playful person to begin with, and, with the two children by her side, she had completely lost control after exiting the salon. She took them to shop for clothes, and they went for desserts afterward. Finally, she took them to a theme park.

When Avery was done with her nails, she called Tammy to ask them where they were. When Tammy told her the address, she gasped and said, “Why did you go so far, Tammy? You are almost half a city away! I might as well just go home and sleep.”

If she went there, it would be dark before she even reached them.

Tammy burst out laughing. “Go back and sleep, then! Layla said Elliot kidnapped you last night, and you didn’t come home till late last night, is that true?”

Avery did not expect Layla to tell Tammy everything. “He didn’t kidnap me... I went there myself,” she said shyly.

“Oh... Did he come looking for you because Zoe had a miscarriage? That dirtbag!

Just block him and ignore him from now on!” Tammy said in frustration.

“Even if I blocked his number, he knows where I live. Running away won’t solve anything.”

“That’s true, but what’s the point of him looking for you? You can’t possibly have shoved Zoe, and even if you did, she had to be the one who started it. It’s not like you can give him back his child,” Tammy said.

Avery stepped out of the nail salon with her phone in hand and walked past an area displaying branded luxury bags. She looked up and spotted a familiar figure in the distance.

It was someone she could never forget. The only goal she had left unfulfilled was to watch that she devil die.

Perhaps she was staring too hard, but Wanda had noticed her almost immediately. After spotting Avery, her lips curled into a sarcastic sneer. Next to Wanda was a man who was helping her carry her bag, and that man was Zoe's father.

Chapter 360

They had broken up before, but the man had returned to Wanda after she had sold all her overseas properties for four hundred and fifty million.

"Sanford, I heard that Elliot gave your daughter one hundred and fifty-five million dollars, is that right?" Wanda raised her voice on purpose.

Zoe's father spotted Avery as well and responded proudly, "Yeah! He did, yesterday." ——

"Why don't you tell your daughter to invest with me? I can multiply her one hundred and fifty -five million in folds," Wanda said with a smile.

“Sure, I will discuss it with her when I get home! She admires you and is very supportive of us being together.”

Wanda looked at Avery, who was walking over, with a smug expression. “I’m back, Avery.” Avery stopped and stared coldly at her. “Good. I would have gone looking for you even if you hadn’t returned.”

“Oh... I came back for you as well. Your mother’s life isn’t compensation enough for the lives of my daughter and brother!” Wanda said and lifted an eyebrow. “You love Elliot, don’t you? I am going to deal with you using the money Elliot gave Zoe.” “Sure!” Avery said casually. “It’s going to be the death of you, or me.”

“I think so as well! I should have removed you when I found out what a nuisance you are!” she said viciously.

“I should have cut you out when I knew how toxic you are,” Avery retorted.

The two grew increasingly agitated, and out of fear that they would start a physical fight, Zoe’s father dragged Wanda away.

Avery went home and saw the red paint on the grass, so she dragged out the pipe to wash the lawn.

She could not help but think of her mother. When she was still around, her mother had planted plenty of vegetables in the yard and made it look extremely organized; now, the yard looked deserted and empty.

“I won’t let Wanda live! I have to avenge my mother!”

The next day, she woke up early to visit the flower market. After bringing home plenty of new plants to decorate the yard, she called Tammy and Wesley and invited them over for a barbeque.

“Can I bring my plus one?” Tammy asked with a smile.

“Sure! Take Jun with you!” Avery said.

“Haha, I am only bringing Jun over to drink with Mike, seeing as Wesley can’t drink,” Tammy explained.

“Don’t you think Mike would call Chad for that?”

Shocked, Tammy asked, “How far along are they in their relationship?”

“I suppose they are now emotionally in sync after that one-night stand!”

With that piece of information, Tammy hung up and hurried over to Starry River

Villa. She was never one to miss out on good gossip.

That evening, Wesley and Chad arrived and the barbeque started.

Tammy called Jun and told him to hurry over.

Half an hour later, a black luxury car stopped outside the mansion, and Jun stepped out of the car.

Tammy exclaimed, "Damn! Isn't that Elliot's car?!" Just then, Elliot's towering

Chapter 361

He stood under the warm street lights. He was wearing a light brown trench coat.

It was refreshing to see him in a new style, as he was usually seen dressed in darker colors.

The atmosphere in the yard shifted drastically with his appearance. Tammy gritted her teeth and clenched her fists. She looked like she was going to punch Elliot in the face.

It was clear that Jun had brought Elliot over.

Avery looked away hastily after spotting Elliot. Everything that happened the night before was still in her mind, but she knew that he would not do anything with so many people in her house.

Elliot had thought of himself as the one who owed Avery, but now Avery was the one who owed him. It was why he had dared show up at her house uninvited.

As the two men walked through the yard, Tammy reached out to pinch Jun on the arm.

Jun shrugged in resignation as if he was saying, 'Not my fault! I didn't bring him

here!'

Tammy shoved him toward Avery so that he might explain and apologize to her.

Jun strode toward Avery with a flattering smile and looked at her nails. "Avery, um... Nice nails! Are they the same ones as Tammy's?"

Next to them, Chad gave his seat to Elliot, who, at Jun's compliment, looked over at Avery's hands.

Under the yellow lights, her nails shone mysteriously like a cat's eyes.

After easing the awkwardness, Jun leaned toward Avery and whispered, "I really didn't bring him here. I just said that I was coming over, and he insists on tagging along-".

“I don’t blame you,” Avery said.

Relieved, Jun said, “I brought alcohol... They are at the back trunk; let me go get them.”

With that, he dragged Tammy along with him to get the bottles.

Mike felt irritated at the way Chad fawned over Elliot and blurted out while looking at Elliot,” Isn’t a certain someone acting too shameless? Who invited you?”

Elliot looked up calmly. “Have you mistaken yourself as the owner, despite you being the person who is living under someone else’s roof?”

Mike thought, “Under someone else’s roof?! This b*st*rd, Elliot, is saying that I’m staying under someone else’s roof! This might not be my home, but what does he know about my friendship with Avery? We are friends for life!”

Chad brought a chair over, positioned it next to Mike, and muttered, “Don’t be so petty. Avery hasn’t even said anything, so just shut up!”

“Avery! Chase this shameless b*st*rd out!” Mike commanded.

Instantly, everyone’s eyes were on Avery.

Under the pressure, she said, “You are not welcomed here.”

She did not wish to see him, and neither did her children. Ever since he had shown up, the children had stopped eating, and they sat with clenched fists.

After Avery had made her stance, everyone snapped their heads in Elliot's direction.

If he still wished to preserve his pride, he would have stood and left, but he did not.

"I don't need you to welcome me." He sat on the chair, unmoving. "You can't always get what you want in life, there's always going to be things that you don't want to do, but have to; and people whom you hate and have to face."

Everyone was rendered silent, thinking, "Is he lecturing us?" Mike was so annoyed that he was about to flip the barbeque rack.

Chapter 362

Chad took a skewer with cooked meat and shoved it into Mike's mouth to make sure that he stayed quiet, before walking up to Tammy and Jun, who came back with a few bottles of wine.

"These are great vintages! Did you steal it from your dad's wine cellar?"

“What do you mean, steal? How can you call it stealing if I’m taking something from my own house?” Jun opened the bottles with an opener.

Chad brought one of the bottles to Mike and poured a glass for Elliot as well.

Even Wesley, who could not quite drink, took a glass. “It’s a fun night, so I should drink a bit as well.”

“Are you in a good mood, Mr. Brook?” Tammy poured wine into his glass and looked over at Avery. “Avery, you want some?”

Avery shook her head. “I need to take care of the kids. You guys go ahead!”

“Alright! I will deal with this unwelcome guest of yours!” said Tammy, before sitting down next to Elliot. “Mr. Foster, why aren’t you staying with your fiancé at the hospital? You can’t possibly be thinking of dumping her now that she has had a miscarriage, can you? You can’t be that much of a scumbag, can you? Are you only in a relationship with her so that she can bear you children?”

Everyone fell into silence at Tammy’s confrontational questions.

Tammy truly was brave, and Mike suddenly felt that he was nothing but a child compared to Tammy.

Elliot's expression darkened.

"I suppose it makes sense. She has to be extremely fragile if she could lose the baby from such a small fall. If I were you, I would have dumped her as well!"

Tammy continued making sarcastic remarks. "I think Ms. Sanford weighs about fifty kilograms right? Avery here is just forty-something, so I wonder how Avery had managed to shove her to the ground despite the weight difference. Do you not have surveillance cameras at your house? Let's see the footage! If Avery truly is such a bad person, I will be the first to cut all ties with her."

Jun could feel the storm brewing, and he set his glass down and covered Tammy's mouth. Then, moved her away from Elliot.

Seeing how awkward the atmosphere was, Chad raised his glass and said, "Let's not talk about such unpleasant things! Let's drink! No one is going home sober!"

No one responded, and it felt even more awkward.

Just then, Wesley raised his glass to clink glasses with him.

“Who are you going to drink with? You don’t have the best alcohol tolerance,” teased Mike. “I can literally drink you under in half an hour.”

“Let’s time it then! You lose if you can’t bring me down in half an hour!”

“Alright! You are going to lose for sure!”

With that, the two began to drink.

Shortly after, Jun had appeased Tammy, and he went to apologize to Elliot while Tammy sat down next to Avery, helping her with the barbeque.

Twenty minutes later, Layla ran toward Elliot with a skewer of vegetables. She presented it to Elliot and said sweetly, “This is for you!”

Elliot glanced at the “vegetables” in her hand and thought to himself, “Does this kid think that I’m a blink or something? I just saw her pulling grass in the yard.

How dare she try to feed me grass!”

PA

“I don’t like vegetables, I only eat meat.” Elliot studied Layla’s face. She resemble Avery, and so he decided not to rat her out.

“Mommy says you shouldn’t be a picky eater! Hurry and eat it!” Layla insisted with a frown.

Naturally, Elliot was not going to accept it.

Just then, Hayden walked over and took Layla away. “That looks too much like grass. He is no fool,” said Hayden calmly.

Frustrated, she said, “So what should we do? I want him to have a stomach ache!

I want his stomach to hurt so much that he feels like dying!”

“Where can we find laxatives, Hayden? He says he likes meat, so let’s put some laxative on the meat and feed it to him!”

Elliot heard every single word they said and thought, “Avery is a pretty smart woman, how did she end up raising such foolish children?”

Chapter 363

Hayden turned around and glanced at Elliot. Coincidentally, Elliot happened to be looking at them.

The father and son stared daggers at one another.

Hayden glared at him and looked away. "Layla, he won't eat anything we give

him."

"Sigh... Hayden, why do you think he is here?" Layla hated Elliot from the bottom of her heart, but she could not stop herself from sneaking glances at him.

"I don't know. Are you done eating?"

Layla shook her head. "I'm waiting for Mom to bring the tomato sauce."

Just then, Avery stepped out of the house with a bottle of ketchup in her hand

Tammy went toward Avery and whispered, "Avery, you don't have laxatives in your house, do

you?"

Avery shook her head. "Why?"

Tammy told her everything that had happened earlier. "I came so close to laughing myself to death. You should have seen the look on Elliot's face, hahaha!

He wanted to explode but couldn't... Our Layla is so cute! After all, who would have the heart to be angry with her?"

Avery was speechless.

It was no wonder Layla had quickly polished off the sauce and asked her to get more. It was so she could get Avery out of the way.

Avery set the meat skewers before her two children and said, "I made these for you. Eat up, and go in once you are done."

"Oh. Mom, come back inside with us," Layla said.

"Sure," Avery said.

After a while, the children had eaten their fill and dragged Avery back into the house with them. Once they were inside, they remained on the first floor, playing, instead of heading up. The others could see them.

After half an hour, Avery took them up for a bath.

Meanwhile, the drinking contest between Mike and Chad ended with Mike's defeat. He had failed to bring Chad down in the span of half an hour.

He had not expected Chad's alcohol tolerance to improve to this extent.

After losing, everyone shouted for Mike to perform.

Elliot watched them with a lack of interest and set his glass down. He got up.

Tammy had been keeping an eye on him, and she nudged Jun when she saw Elliot rise from his seat.

Taking the hint, Jun hurried over and asked, "Elliot, are you heading back?"

Elliot pointed at the mansion. "I'm going to the bathroom."

"Oh... Alright then!" Jun chuckled awkwardly and went back to Tammy. "Tammy, stop staring at him. He is going to the bathroom; it's not like I can follow him,

right?"

Tammy snorted and complained, "It's all your fault! Why did you tell him that you are coming to Avery's? Isn't that like inviting the wolf into someone's house?"

"You know that I can't lie to him... Besides, I asked him for a favor today, and he treated me with kindness. How can I lie to him?" Jun explained. "You usually don't call me along when you guys hang out, why did you invite me today?"

"I won't invite you along next time!"

"Don't be like that! Elliot wouldn't follow every single time. I'm guessing he feels depressed and can't quite deal with it himself, so—"

“So he came to pick a fight with Avery, right?”

“He hasn’t done anything so far, did he?” Jun defended Elliot and said, “He’s only drunk, and he did have some meat when he got here—”

“Yeah, and now that he has drunk and eaten, he is going to go looking for trouble,” said Tammy. “He is not going to the bathroom. He is going to look for Avery!”

Meanwhile, Avery had bathed the children and tucked them in. She was now in her own room. She was exhausted, and at that moment, a figure appeared before

her.

Startled, she said, “You—”

Elliot strode toward her and shut the door, locking it from inside.

“Your house isn’t soundproof, so you can scream all you want if you want others here to watch. “He cornered and threatened her, looking at her face with bloodshot eyes.

Avery flushed. She had let her guard now. He could not be here only for dinner.

“Aren’t you tired, Elliot?!” she hissed.

Chapter 364

“Are you?” He grabbed her slim wrist and pulled her toward the bed.

“You have to be in a good mood to ask your friends over for a barbeque.
Are you

tired because I am here?”

His fingers began working on the buttons of her jacket.

She grabbed his hand and said, “Elliot! Don’t do this in my house!”

“Why not?” He did not give her a chance to answer and said sternly, “Why can’t

we do it in your house? Is it because you had other men in your bed before?”

Avery shoved his chest. “Because you are dirty!”

He froze at her words.

She thought that he was dirty because he had slept with Zoe.

She raced to the door, unlocked it, and told him to get out. He stared at the open door, walked toward it, and shut it.

“And you are not? You were pregnant with another man’s baby.” He locked
the door and grabbed her by the waist, before lifting her up.

She had a C-section, and there was a scar across her abdomen. The last time

they had been intimate he had frozen at the sight of the scar. He had tortured her for it. It was as though the scar was provoking him, mocking him. Avery had told him, that Layla was a test tube baby, and that she had gotten Layla by using the sperm she had gotten from a sperm bank.

Elliot blocked all the things that came out of Avery's mouth, and he pressed down on her. She pushed at him; her arms separating them.

"Go shower! You reek of alcohol!" She turned her head away with a frown.

He saw the contempt on her face, and he grabbed her arm and dragged her toward the bathroom. "Let's both take a shower."

"I don't want to shower with you!"

"Aren't you just going to run away while I'm in the bathroom?" He had suspected that she was going to make her escape while he was taking a shower.

"This is my house! Where am I going to run to this late at night?!" she retorted.

"Then we are showering together!" He dragged her into the bathroom and closed the bathroom door.

Meanwhile, Mike was drunk in the yard, and because he was drunk, he had just realized that

Elliot had been gone for a while.

“Didn’t that jerk Elliot go to the bathroom? Why hasn’t he come back?”

Mike’s words had alerted Tammy, who was also drinking. “How long has he been gone?!”

Jun checked the time. “About an hour... Did he fall into the toilet or something?”

Tammy set her glass down and hurried inside the mansion. The others did the same and followed her.

There was no one on the first floor.

“Didn’t he go to the bathroom? There’s no one in the bathroom on the first floor!”

Tammy said, “I told you that he wasn’t going to the bathroom, he went looking for trouble!”

“Tammy, quiet down. The kids might be asleep,” Jun reminded.

Tammy covered her mouth and walked toward the second room, while the others followed closely behind.

Tammy went to the children's room to check if they were asleep. When they opened the door, a thin sliver of light from the corridor fell on the bed. Hayden opened his jewel-like eyes. He moved the blanket aside and immediately sat up at the sight of the group of people.

"Hayden..." Layla rubbed her eyes and got up.

Everyone else gasped, thinking, "Great! Now we've woken up the kids!"

Tammy apologized to the children with a blush on her face. "I'm sorry, I didn't mean to wake you. We are looking for Elliot... I think he might be bullying your mom." Both Hayden and Layla ran toward their mother's room.

Chapter 365

"Mom!"

"Mom!"

The shouts of the two children echoed inside the mansion.

Inside the master bedroom, Avery heard her children shouting and tensed. She tried to escape from Elliot – who was on top of her. She could not break free.

"Elliot Foster! Let me go!" Tears began to well up in her eyes as she grew anxious.

He grabbed onto her wrists tightly. He had no intention of releasing her.
“I’m not done!” His voice was low and tinted with annoyance. “Do you really believe that they need something from you?”

“It doesn’t matter when or why they are looking for me, all that matters is they need me!” She struggled to fight him off. Her eyes grew red with tears as she struggled against him.

He simply tightened his grip. There was no way she could escape if he was determined to keep her there.

Tears rolled down her cheeks, and her eyes slowly filled with resentment.

Outside the door, Layla was about to burst into tears, and Tammy immediately lifted her up.

“Don’t cry, Layla! I just had a bit too much to drink and said the wrong thing.”

Tammy carried her toward the children’s room and said, “Elliot isn’t bullying your mom... How could he, when all of us are here?”

Mike tested the doorknob to the master bedroom and realized that it was locked.

He was frustrated, but he knew better than to barge in. So, he took Hayden into his arms and began walking back to the children's room as well.

"Don't be mad, Big H! I will guard your mom's door! When that b*st*rd Elliot comes out, I'm going to punch him in the face!" Mike said to Hayden who was scowling. "You and your sister should go to sleep. You two have school tomorrow!"

Hayden wordlessly suppressed his anger.

Shortly after that, Tammy and Mike came out of the room after tucking the children in.

"Tammy Lynch, you drank too much! No matter what happens between Elliot and Avery, how could you get the kids involved?! They are still very young, and you can't drag them into this!" barked Jun.

Tammy's face reddened. "Why are you yelling at me?! Get Elliot out of there since you are so good at handling all this! All you jerks only know how to defend Elliot!"

"I didn't defend that dirtbag!" Mike argued.

“Who are you calling dirtbag? My boss isn’t a dirtbag!” Chad retorted.

“Dirtbag, dirtbag, dirtbag! I said that he’s a dirtbag, what are you going to do about it?”

Chad glanced at the master bedroom and lowered his voice. “Come downstairs with me right

now!”

With that, the two of them headed down.

Jun raised his hand to look at his watch. “We should go home, too.”

Still frustrated, Tammy said, “Go home? Have you cleaned up the yard?”, “Oh, let’s go clean up, then!”

“You go do it! I’ll just monitor you!”

“Alright, I will clean up, and you can watch me.” Jun sighed and said, “Don’t be mad, babe. You can fight with Elliot all you want when I’m not around, but since I’m here, can’t you at least leave him be for my sake?”

“I don’t like him!” Tammy went downstairs, “I can’t help it!”

“Avery seems calm enough,” Jun teased. “I guess you are worrying over nothing.”

“Who’s worrying over nothing?” “It’s just an observation, alright? Stop worrying. If Elliot was truly torturing her, do you really think she wouldn’t call for help?”

The group went back downstairs and started to clean the yard.

Suddenly, Mike looked in the direction of the master bedroom on the second floor and said,” Crap! Why aren’t lights on? Did they go to sleep?”

“I guess my boss isn’t going home tonight. I will dismiss the bodyguards,” said

Chad.

“Who gave him permission to stay the night?”

Chad lifted an eyebrow. “Avery did!”

Inside the master bedroom on the second floor, Elliot released Avery once he was done. She did not want to look at him, so she turned off the lights.

Chapter 366

When she went to turn off the lights, he could see the tears rolling down her face. Though he was physically satisfied, he felt discontent.

He felt worse when she remained quiet.

The room was dark with only the faint light coming in from the street lights down below. He started at her back and furrowed his brows. Instinctively, he wanted to be closer to her, so he stretched out his arm and tried to pull her to him.

She shoved him away with all the power she could muster. The moment she felt the warmth of his body, she shouted, "Let me go!"

"No!" He tightened his arms around her and indulged himself in her scent. He rested his chin on her shoulder. "I'm not leaving tonight."

Avery felt as though she had been tied up, and she could not move an inch.

Elliot had not been gentle, but he was not as rough as the last time.

"When has he ever asked for my opinion before showing up or leaving? What I think doesn't matter to him, so he doesn't even need to say anything! He would just do what he wants anyway!" she thought.

The next day, Avery woke up at seven in the morning as she usually did on weekdays.

When she woke up, the man beside her stared at her through bleary sleep-filled eyes before he turned over and fell asleep once more.

She got dressed swiftly and stepped out of the room.

Her children had already woken up, and Hayden was combing his sister's hair.

Avery's heart ached as she thought back to the way her children had shouted the night before. After calming herself down, she entered their room and said, "My wonderful babies! You didn't even need me to wake you up today!"

She went over to hug them.

"Mom! Has that bad guy Elliot left yet? Did he bully you?" Layla grabbed Avery's arm with her little hands and scanned her from head to toe.

Avery shook her head. "He didn't bully me. I would definitely retaliate if he bullies me! Don't worry about me, okay?"

Layla sighed a breath of relief. "I knew that my mommy isn't easy to bully!"

"Yeah!" Once she had put her daughter at ease, Avery turned to look at Hayden.

"Hayden, let me take you guys out for breakfast today, okay?"

Hayden nodded.

"I'm fine, really." Avery patted him on the head, before heading to the closet to find him a hat. "You like hats, so put this on. Mommy will buy you plenty of cool hats."

Hayden remained expressionless. His jaw was tense. Avery could sense that he was angry that she had not come out of her room last night when they had been yelling for her.

She felt horribly guilty.

After getting her children to wash up, the three of them left the room and were about to head downstairs.

When they walked past the master bedroom, Hayden looked over at the door. He had a strong feeling that Elliot was still inside his mother's room.

At nine in the morning, the bodyguards of the Foster family came to deliver clothes to Starry River Villa.

Elliot changed, and his phone rang as he stepped out of the room. He answered the call while walking down the stairs.

On the other end of the line, he heard Chad's anxious voice.

"Mr. Foster! Our server has been hacked! That hacker left a message."

Elliot stopped and uttered calmly, "Go on."

“The hacker says he is your dad and told you to learn your place, or he will hack your system every day.”

Chapter 367

Elliot sneered and thought to himself, “Hayden Tate wants to be my dad? How hilarious. But, that kid has guts.”

Elliot guessed that him staying over had frustrated Hayden greatly. He must not have been able to get any sleep, and that was why he had attacked Elliot’s company.

Hayden had the right to be angry, but when Elliot pictured how Hayden had lost sleep over anger, he could not help but smirk.

“Mr. Foster, should we call the police?” Chad asked.

Elliot continued his way downstairs as he drawled, “What’s going on in the network security department?”

“They trying to get the system up and running as soon as they can.”

“How long until it’s fixed?”

“They should be able to fix it by noon today,” Chad said.

Elliot reached the first floor and said, “We are not calling the police.”

“Noted. Mr. Foster, do you suspect that this is Hayden’s doing?”

“No.”

Chad could barely hold back his laughter. “Well, he sure is a genius child!
The IT

department has strengthened the firewall since he last attacked our network, but he still got past it.”

“So what if he is a genius? He’s already on the wrong path. If Avery lets
him

continue doing whatever he wants, he will wind up in prison.”

The smile on Chad’s face disappeared at how merciless his boss was.

Avery would surely die of anger if she heard Elljot.

“But it seems like he is only doing this to spite you... I haven’t heard of him attacking anyone else,” mused Chad. “So he won’t end up in prison as long as

you don’t report him to the police.

Chad was certain that Elliot would not send Hayden to prison. No matter what

Hayden planned on doing, Elliot would not harm him as long as he had Avery

protecting him.

Elliot’s expression darkened at Chad’s words. “If that’s the case, I am only going to encounter more and more trouble from now on. That brat's ability would only get better as he grows." thought Elliot.

He felt as though there was an itch he couldn't scratch at the thought.

Meanwhile, Zoe was at the Foster mansion, she had been discharged from the hospital. She should have remained at the hospital for a few more days, but she did not want to remain at the hospital. Though Elliot had not announced their breakup, everyone knew it was impossible for her relationship with Elliot to continue, and she no longer had an excuse to stay in the old Foster mansion.

"Stay here for now, Zoe, and don't think too much. Elliot's opinion does not represent mine. I still like you," Rosalie said. "Just stay here and keep me company!"

"Thank you for supporting me, Rosalie. It's just that, Elliot might be upset if I continue to stay here," Zoe said.

"He's not that petty! Just rest up for now and recover." Rosalie took out a beautiful gift box and handed it to Zoe. "This is a gesture of goodwill from me. I hope that you won't resent Elliot and will continue to treat Shea to the best of your abilities."

Zoe accepted the gift box. It was no wonder that Rosalie was so polite with her.

She was still useful to the Foster Family.

"Don't worry, I will do my best." Zoe opened the box and found an exquisite jade bracelet inside. "What a beautiful bracelet. Thank you, Rosalie."

"My eldest daughter-in-law had her eyes on that bracelet, but I didn't want to give it to her," Rosalie said with a smile. "Which goes to say how much I care for you to give you this."

"Mm-hm! I don't hate Elliot, actually. I guess it's just not meant to be," Zoe said calmly.

Just then, a nanny walked over and whispered a few words into Rosalie's ear.

Rosalie's expression darkened, and she immediately got up and walked deeper into the house.

Chapter 368

Once she was inside, Rosalie picked up the phone and said, "Hello, do you know Elliot Foster? I 'm his mother.”

“Hello, Madame Rosalie. May I know why you've contacted me?” The person on the other end of the line said.

“You have a student named Hayden Tate at your kindergarten, right?”

“Yes.”

“The thing is; I need a few strands of his hair, and I was wondering if you can get me some. I will pay you, so just name your price,” said Rosalie.

Confused, the other person asked, “Why do you want his hair? It's not that I don't want to help, but you probably don't know much about that child. You see, he does not allow anyone to touch him. The only person who can touch him is his sister.”

Rosalie had not predicted that something this simple would turn out to be so difficult.

“Think of something! If you can't get your hands on his hair, blood will also do!”

she said. “I' ll be honest with you, that boy's mother was married to my son for a while... and I suspect that there's more to that boy than meets the eye. So, please do me this favor? If you get this done, I will reward you well.”

Just then, the nanny noticed a figure outside the door and immediately stepped outside.

“Ms. Sanford, do you need anything?” The nanny’s expression darkened as she stared at Zoe, but she refrained from being rude.

Zoe was eavesdropping and panicked. “Oh... I just thought of returning the gift from Rosalie, since it seems too expensive.”

“Please wait in the living room,” the nanny said.

Zoe immediately headed back to the living room.

Shortly after, Rosalie had finished the phone call. The nanny did not mention that Zoe was eavesdropping in order to avoid complications.

Zoe chatted with Rosalie for a while longer, before telling her that she had made plans to have lunch with her father and left.

She was troubled when she stepped outside the mansion.

According to what she had heard, Rosalie had started to suspect Avery’s children.

Though Elliot did not want children, Rosalie desperately wanted grandchildren. If she found out that both Hayden and Layla were Elliot's children, she would surely treat them like royalty and side with Avery.

Zoe did not wish to see that.

In the restaurant, Zoe sat down and glanced over at Wanda.

"Why the long face, Zoe? Didn't Elliot give you a lot of money? Don't be depressed, having money is the most important thing," Zoe's father said.

Zoe picked up the glass to take a sip of water. "It's not about that. By the way,

Wanda, did you manage to close the deal with those technology firms that you were planning to buy?"

Wanda smiled and said, "I'm almost there. This is the perfect time to get into the industry. With Tate Industries getting all the business at the moment, other firms are struggling, so it's up for negotiation. Do you want to invest? I assure you that you will earn more money."

Zoe's eyes gleamed, and she said, "How can you be sure?"

Wanda's eyes shone viciously as she said, "Because Avery is my arch enemy, and I have to win!

Persuaded by her words, Zoe said, "Alright, I'll invest with you."

Meanwhile, Avery was at Tate Industries addressing all the work that had come in in the morning. She got up after she saw the time.

She stepped out of the office and headed to the closest pharmacy.

When she entered a member of the staff said, "What are you looking for, Miss?"

After a moment of hesitation, Avery answered shyly, "Morning-after pills."

The staff immediately produced the pills and glanced at her.

Avery lowered her gaze, before pulling out her phone to pay. After paying, she walked out of the pharmacy with the medicine, when suddenly, she remembered Elliot's warning.

He said that he was going to keep her with him for life if she did not give him a child. He wanted her to bear him a child. It did not matter if the child survived or not. Her blood ran cold instantly, and she dropped the pill to the ground.

Chapter 369

Chad opened the door to Elliot's office in Sterling Group once the company network was restored.

“Mr. Foster, the Network Security Department asked me to take this to you,” he said while setting down a stack of documents before Elliot.

Elliot glanced at the document and asked, “What are these?”

“... I think these are the codes of the malware written by Hayden Tate.”
Chad

simply glanced through it. He did not dare continue reading.

Elliot opened the file and saw a sentence hidden within the code that said,
(Elliot

Foster is an idiot.)

His expression darkened. When he flipped to the second page, he saw another

sentence.

(Elliot Foster falls into the river while driving!]

On the third page was (Elliot Foster runs out of toilet paper in the bathroom),

while on the fourth page, there was another sentence (Elliot Foster chokes on bread.]

Elliot picked up the documents and tossed them into a paper shredder.
Despite

the dark expression on his face, he did not respond in any way. Hayden was a four-year-old child, after all, and Elliot did not intend on taking him too seriously.

Just then, someone knocked on the door and pushed the office door open..

Ben stood by the door and said, "Let's go eat, Elliot!"

Chad cast Ben a look, and Ben immediately stepped in to have a look. "What happened?"

Chad walked toward him and whispered, "Avery's son is too good at pissing people off."

"Oh... Well, I am mad, too!" huffed Ben. "Isn't that kid just four years old? How can he be this good? This makes me feel like everyone in the network security department is all trash!"

It was hard to respond to what Ben had said. After all, all the employees of the network security department were talented people.

"Maybe it's because Hayden has a good teacher."

"Oh, you mean Mike?"

Chad blushed slightly and left. He was escaping from any further discussion of the subject.

Ben and Elliot headed to a restaurant near the company. After ordering, Ben asked in a voice laced with jealousy, "Did you all go to Avery's for a barbeque?

Why didn't you call me?"

"Do you know why Hayden Tate decided to hack my company's network?" Elliot asked.

"Because he hates you!"

"I went uninvited."

Shocked, Ben asked, "Elliot, since when have you grown so thick-skinned?"

"I wanted to know why Avery was in a good mood." Elliot took a sip of his tea. To his understanding, people would only invite their friends for a barbeque when they were happy.

"So did you find out after going there last night?"

Elliot shook his head. "They didn't welcome me."

Ben suddenly felt sorry for him. “Just don’t go over there if you aren’t welcomed. I can treat you to whatever you want to eat.”

“Their displeasure does not affect my mood.” Elliot set his cup down calmly.

Seeing how composed Elliot was, Ben smiled and said, “You just can’t help but go looking for Avery, can you? You canceled your engagement because of her.”

“You are wrong,” Elliot corrected him. “The main reason I canceled my engagement is because I don’t love Zoe.”

“Though I don’t like Zoe, I have to say, she has suffered quite a lot this time. She lost you and her child... Do you really not feel anything for that child? That’s your child, after all, and it would have been born into the world in a few months’ time had it not been for the miscarriage,” Ben said regretfully.

Elliot remained expressionless, and his voice was cold and void of emotion. “If I have to have a child, I do not want it to come from another woman.”

Chapter 370

Elliot might as well just be blunt and say that he only wanted Avery to bear his children and that he did not care if his children with any other woman died, because he did not want them to begin with “So you want Avery to bear your child, then?” Ben teased.

“Yeah.”

Ben gasped and almost dropped his cup. “You really want her to bear your child?!”

“Zoe asked that I avenge our child’s death.”

“So you are trying to get Avery pregnant with your child as revenge?” Ben was amused. “Zoe is probably going to cry so much that she passes out if she learns that this is your way of taking revenge.”

“How I take my revenge is up to me.”

“Is Avery willing to do it?” Ben instinctively knew that there was more to the story.

Avery already had two children, and even if Hayden was adopted, Ben could tell that she saw Hayden as her own from the way she treated him. It was only natural that she was unwilling to give birth to any more children.

“She isn’t.” Elliot scowled. “She hates me now.”

“Of course, she is going to hate you if you are forcing her to have your baby!”

Ben was surprised by Elliot's radical actions. Although Elliot had never been a gentleman, Elliot was not a barbarian. Ben was certain that Avery did not mean for Zoe to lose his baby, so why would Elliot try and get Avery pregnant with his child as a form of revenge?

It only made sense if Elliot was trying to keep Avery to himself.

"She has a scar across her abdomen," Elliot said in a hoarse voice, "That scar is a reminder that she has had a child with another man. Even if he had not touched her, she had still gotten pregnant with another man's child. I can't stay calm whenever I think of it."

It formed a huge part of the reason why he wanted Avery to bear his child. The smaller part of why he wanted her to bear his child was dedicated to revenge. He wanted the child now even though he had never thought of raising a child before.

"Elliot, if you want her and only her to bear your child, it means that you still love her." Ben studied the miserable expression on Elliot's face and ordered a bottle of wine.

“Is this love?” Elliot mumbled dazedly, “But she doesn’t want me.” “I heard that a woman falls deeply in love with a man when she is pregnant with his child, so maybe you aren’t wrong in wanting her to bear your child,” Ben said.

Elliot’s eyes gleamed. It did not matter if it was right or wrong when he had already done it.

A week later, Tammy dragged Avery along with her to shop for wedding dresses.

“Avery, have you ever been in a wedding dress before?” Tammy was excited over trying on wedding dresses.

Avery shook her head. “I have put on gowns that resemble wedding dresses

before.”

“Wedding dresses are different from ordinary gowns. Why don’t you try one on today? You have such a perfect figure and fair skin, you are definitely going to look beautiful in a wedding dress!” Tammy said as she picked out a white wedding dress from the shop. “What do you think of this one, Avery? It looks quite similar to the one I had custom-made!”

Avery flushed at the sight of the wedding dress. She did not have a boyfriend, nor did she plan on getting married, so there was no point for her to try on a wedding dress.

“You go on ahead, Tammy! I don’t want to,” she refused while blushing.

“I will wear the one I ordered and you can wear this! We would have matching dresses!” said Tammy, ignoring Avery’s protests. She told the staff to take down the dress and dragged Avery into the dressing room.

“Tammy, are you going to select a man for me too so that we might get married together?” Avery said sarcastically.

“I would love that, but there’s no man worthy enough for you!”

Avery could not help but chuckle.

An hour later, Tammy had posted a compilation of nine photos on her social media account. The photos were of her in a wedding dress, and there were also some photos of Avery in her dress.

Within five minutes, someone had shared Avery’s photo with Elliot.

He zoomed in on her face and scowled. "Why is she wearing a wedding dress?"

Does she want to get married?" he thought.

Chapter 371

When he saw how cheerful she was in the photo, his heart ached at the realization that it had been so long since she had last smiled at him. It was almost five years ago.

In the wedding dress shop, Avery had taken the wedding dress off and picked out a light purple dress to wear to Tammy's wedding.

"I will be thirty in a few years, and I won't get to wear dresses like this by then," she said. "I should buy a few more like this one while I can still pretend to be young."

"Avery, with your face, people would believe you even if you say you are twenty.

It's not like you will grow old overnight when you are thirty, so relax and be young all you want!"

"That sweet tongue of yours! No wonder you have Jun wrapped around your fingers,” Avery said with a smile.

“He is the one who benefited from me choosing him, okay?” After trying on the dresses she had ordered, Tammy said with satisfaction, “All that’s left right now is to wait for the wedding! Oh, isn’t the kids’ birthday soon? How do you plan on spending it?”

“At home.”

“Huh?! There won’t be a party? Or are you throwing a small party at home?”

Tammy had already picked out gifts for her god-children and had been waiting for an invitation from Avery.

Avery shook her head. “I thought about it and decided not to celebrate their birthdays.”

She had decided against it out of fear of drawing Elliot’s attention. She had lied to Elliot about the children. She had told him that Hayden was adopted, and Layla was a test-tube baby. If Elliot ever found out that the children shared a birthday, he would surely suspect something.

“You are doing it because of Elliot, right? That guy really doesn’t know when to call the quits! “Tammy frowned. “But can you really keep this a secret for the rest of your life? Don’t worry, I definitely won’t tell Jun. I’m just worried that Elliot might get suspicious someday and start looking into it.”

Avery’s head hurt at the thought of anything related to Elliot. She wanted to stay away from him, but the more she tried, the messier their relationship had become.

It was almost as though fate was taunting her.

“I will keep it a secret for as long as I can! Both the kids hate him and do not want to acknowledge him as their father.”

“I wouldn’t like him either if I was Hayden or Layla. He is extremely arrogant and self centered, so he doesn’t even know how to respect others,” Tammy said as she held Avery’s arm and led her out of the shop. “Let’s go eat something good!

My treat!”

Avery frowned and asked, “Why isn’t Jun here with you today? Shouldn’t he be here with you today?”

“He is slowly taking over the family business. He started this year, so there is a lot to handle. If I want to go for a honeymoon in May, then I will need to give him time to sort things out now.” Tammy sighed and continued, “I’m not exaggerating when I say that I spend more time with you than with him lately.”

“Do you two plan on having kids? You need to start taking folic acid if you are preparing to get pregnant,” Avery reminded Tammy.

Tammy shook her head with a troubled expression. “You know that I’m really scared of pain. I don’t dare give birth, so we won’t try for now. Don’t tell anyone else... His parents and mine all want me to have kids!”

Avery was slightly surprised. “I thought you like kids!”

“I do! I love your kids, but liking kids and giving birth to kids are two different things.” Tammy struggled and said, “I am waiting for technology to catch up. One day, when men can be pregnant as well, I will be the first to make Jun give birth.”

Avery burst into laughter at her words.

“Get your bodyguard to take the kids here once they are done with school. We will have dinner together. It will be an early birthday celebration! Let us first go back to my place so that I can get the gifts,” Tammy said. “I won’t call Jun along tonight, alright?”

Avery nodded with a smile. “Thank you, God-mother.”

“Just doing what I should do! This is one of the many reasons why I hate Elliot.

Those kids are so adorable and because of a dirtbag like him, they don’t get to have a complete family like other kids.”

The smile faded from Avery’s face.

“No offense, Avery. I’m not saying that the kids are not happy under your care. I just think that they could have been even happier with both parents.” “None taken.

You are right.”

Avery had always felt guilty and had never stopped thinking about whether it was the right decision to stubbornly insist on giving birth to the children. If her children could choose, would they have chosen to be born?

At six in the evening, the bodyguard brought the two children to one of the most expensive restaurants in the city.

Chapter 372

Tammy and Avery were seated next to the window. They had a good view.

“Mom!” Layla ran toward Avery while holding her brother’s hand.

Avery lifted them up and sat them down on the couch. “Did you have fun in kindergarten today?”

Layla shook her head. “Mom, the teacher says we need to poke our fingers next week... I’m scared...”

Realizing what her daughter meant, Avery immediately comforted her and said, “Don’t be scared, baby. It will just be a pinch.”

Layla’s attention was instantly drawn toward the cake on the table.

“Mom, whose birthday is it today, Aunt Tammy?”

Tammy shook her head with a smile. “We are having an early celebration for you and your brother's birthday! Surprised?" She then took out two beautifully wrapped gifts and handed them to the children.

"I am!" Layla accepted the gift excitedly and said, "Thank you, Aunt Tammy! I love you so much!"

"I love you too!" Tammy patted Layla on the head.

Avery signaled Hayden to accept the gift, so he did with a blush on his face and said, "Thank you."

"You're welcome! Open them up! I'll get it changed if you don't like it!" Tammy told them how to open the box. "Just pull the ribbon, and it will pop open."

Soon, the children had unwrapped their gifts. Tammy had gotten Layla a beautiful delicate doll that was made in Layla's image.

"Wow, I like it so much! Isn't this me?" Layla lifted the model up and planted a kiss on it.

Hayden's gift was the same as Layla's. He looked at the handsome doll; he could not say he liked it, but he did not hate it.

The waiter came with the food, and once everything was out of the kitchen, Avery put on birthday hats for the children.

“Let’s just have a simple celebration this year. I will arrange a birthday party for you in the future when I have the chance,” Avery promised.

“Mom, as long as you are with us, we don’t care if there’s a party!” Layla said sweetly. “It’s a shame that Grandma isn’t around anymore. She said that she was going to make Hayden and I a chocolate cake before she passed away.”

The smile on Avery’s face froze.

Tammy immediately changed the subject. “Do you want some cake, Layla? Let’s cut it!”

“We need to make a wish first, Aunt Tammy.” Layla picked up the candles and said, “We need to put the candles on and sing a birthday song!”

The man’s dark, brooding eyes locked onto Avery’s familiar face, before moving to look at Hayden and Layla.

Elliot saw the birthday hats on their heads and thought to himself, "Today's their birthday?"

"Mr. Foster, this way," the person behind him said respectfully.

Elliot ignored him and walked directly toward Avery. Confused, the others could only follow him without knowing what was happening.

Chapter 373

When Elliot appeared by the table, Avery was about to take a bite of the cake and she almost snapped the plastic fork in half at the sight of him. What were the odds that she would run into him in the rare chance that she dined out?

Tammy frowned. "What a coincidence, Mr. Foster. Do you have a meeting here?"

She waved at the group behind Elliot sarcastically, and the others gave her smiles that were both polite and careful at the same time.

Elliot glanced at the cake on the table and looked at the two children. "It's your birthday?" His voice was low, powerful, and confused.

He remembered that Hayden's birthday was on the 13th of April, not today.

Avery's blood ran cold at that very instant. She had not wanted to celebrate their birthday because she feared that he would get suspicious. Yet, he had still caught them celebrating in secret.

Elliot studied the panicked and anxious expression on Avery's face thoughtfully.

"So Hayden's birthday isn't on the 13th of April, but today? And so is Layla's birthday? Do these two kids share the same birthday? Could it be-"

"Do you have a lot of free time on your hands? Why do you care whose birthday it is today? Besides, who says that we can only eat cake on someone's birthday?"

Tammy snatched the birthday hats from Layla's and Hayden's heads and put them on Avery and herself. "Today is the anniversary of my friendship with Avery, so we came out to celebrate. Do you have a problem with it?!"

Her panicked expression disappeared in an instant at Tammy's words.

Elliot lowered his gaze to look at Avery and said sarcastically, "Longing to get married, Avery?"

Startled by the question, she looked up to meet his eyes. Before she could say anything, Tammy seized the chance and said, "Can't you just mind your own business, Elliot Foster? Whether Avery wants to get married or not has nothing to do with you. Even if she does want to get married, she won't marry you! Just give up!" Tammy's words stung Elliot's heart and his eyes turned vicious. "Tammy Lynch, I wasn't talking to you. Mind your tongue!"

Unable to stay out of it, Avery intervened. "Tammy only said what I meant to say.

You don't have to yell in public, it's very unbecoming of you!"

She emphasized the word 'public' and Elliot instantly snapped out of his rage.

He clenched his fists with a cold expression and turned around to leave.

After he had left, Tammy sighed a breath of relief and said, "That was so scary!

It's the first time he's been that vicious toward me!"

"Don't stand up for me next time, or Jun is going to have a hard time. He will be caught between the two of you."

Tammy pouted and said, "Don't you think that he is acting odd? You two have divorced, so why does he keep bothering you? He even asked if you want to get married... Is he going to marry you if you say yes?"

Troubled, Avery simply said, "Let's not talk about him. Next time we go out, we'll just avoid the places where rich people frequent."

"Hey, it's not like we are doing something wrong! Why should we be the ones to avoid him? I'm not scared of him!"

Avery took a deep breath.

She was terrified of Elliot. Her two children were her weaknesses, and if she was left with no other option, she would give Elliot a child. She would never let him have Hayden and Layla.

"Mom, why did he ask if you want to get married?" Layla asked.

Tammy burst out laughing and explained, "Your mom tried on a wedding dress today, and she looked so alluring and beautiful! That dirtbag Elliot probably saw the photo and was attracted to your mom."

Avery blushed. "Tammy, don't post any photos of me on social media from now on."

"He's not my friend on social media, so it's probably Chad or Jun who sent it to him! I just realized how nosy these men can be. They are even worse than us women!"

Avery deshelled the shrimp for the children when the screen of her phone lit up.

Seeing Elliot's name on the screen, she took off the disposable gloves.

She unlocked the screen and saw the message from Elliot. It was the name of a hotel and a room number.

Chapter 374

The message was simple. It was telling her to compensate him.

Avery scowled and replied, [Not tonight.]

Elliot replied swiftly once the message was sent, and she could picture the rage on his face when she read his reply.

(I'm not negotiating with you, I'm commanding you.)

That was his reply. She stared at each of the words in his message with composure and replied.

(Have you forgotten that women get menstruation? Or are you going to do it despite the blood?

(Still want to?)

[‘Are you challenging me?’] Elliot replied.

Avery dared not answer his question. Naturally, she would not have the courage to actually challenge him. She feared that he might actually tell her to spend the night with him despite the blood.

On the second floor of the restaurant, Elliot set his phone down when Avery did not reply.

No one dared to whisper a word when he was texting. The conversation only picked up again when he set his phone down.

“Mr. Foster, that lady downstairs is the CEO of Tate Industries, am I right?”

“That’s her. There are photos of her on the internet. It came up right away when I searched for her.” The person next to him showed everyone the photo he had found online. “Do you all know Wanda Tate? She used to be Avery’s stepmother.

After Jack Tate’s death, the two of them had a falling out because of the inheritance they were to receive. Now, Wanda has returned to the country and started investing in the drone industry. It appears that she wants to beat Avery.”

“Who do you think would win?”

“It’s hard to say. They both produce drones, but they have different target consumers. Avery aims for high-end users, whereas Wanda, targets low-end users. If Wanda succeeds, of course, she would be the one who earns more.”

“My vote is with Wanda as well. She’s rather successful overseas, and it’s not hard to tell that she has the mind for business. Mr. Foster, what do you think?”

Everyone focused on Elliot.

He pressed a button on his phone and the screen lit up, but there was still no reply from Avery.

“Are you all investing your money with Wanda Tate?” Elliot’s eyes gleamed sharply as he drawled, “I’m not a stakeholder to either one of them, so I don’t care how they are doing.”

“Oh... I haven't started investing with Wanda yet, but I'm considering it. I was just wondering if you have any suggestions, Mr. Foster.”

The casual expression faded from Elliot's face as he said sternly, “The truly capable would never try to seek investments from those around them. Make up your own mind about what you want to do with your money.”

Elliot ended the dinner early, and when he came down to the first floor, he looked over to where Avery was seated, but there was no one there.

Was she in such a hurry to leave and avoid him?

Time flew by, and soon it was Monday. It was the day of Starry River

Kindergarten's physical examination.

A black Bonz was parked beneath the shade of the tree in the parking lot. Rosalie was waiting anxiously inside the car.

The blood examination was a ploy. It was staged so that she could get a blood sample from Hayden.

Rosalie was worried that he might not cooperate. If he did not, they could not forcefully take his blood, and things would get more complicated.

After an hour or so, a nurse was seen hurrying toward the parking lot.

Rosalie beamed and thought to herself, "Did it work?!"

Chapter 375

The nurse walked over to the car and handed a blood sample to Rosalie.

"It went smoothly?" Rosalie accepted the vial of blood in joy.

The nurse nodded. "His sister was afraid of the pain, so he did the blood test to set an example for his sister. The siblings are really close."

Rosalie was only interested in Hayden. Layla did not look like Elliot at all, and she had heard that Layla was the child Avery had had with another man.

Even if Hayden was Elliot's son, Rosalie did not intend on accepting Avery. How would people view Elliot if they were to accept Avery, a woman who had given birth to another man's child?

She placed the vial away carefully and shut the car door.

The car headed toward the medical center that performed the DNA test. Once they arrived, Rosalie handed the blood samples of Elliot and Hayden to the staff.

“How long until the results are out?”

“Usually three working days. We will inform you as soon as the results are out,” said a member of the staff.

Rosalie could barely contain her excitement but nodded regardless.

Meanwhile, in Tate Industries, it was time for the weekly meeting.

“President Tate, Wanda Tate is making quite some noise on her end!” said the vice-president. “She has acquired three companies in a single swoop. She also has started the restructuring process, but the scariest thing is that she has already gained fifteen hundred million dollars. The investors seem rather confident in her ability.”

“A friend of mine started working there, and according to him, Wanda Tate is wildly ambitious. She intends to become the leading drone manufacturer in the field. She plans on opening up the market by selling her drones at lower prices, and then she will move into luxury items once she established a client base.

Finally, she will push our company out of the industry,” said another manager.

Mike smirked in contempt. “Let her try, then! Let’s see if she really can bring us down!”

“President Tate, what do you think? Should we do something?” The vice-president looked at Avery and said, “I’m confident with our products, but we also need to plan ahead and take precautions.”

Avery nodded. “Let’s wait for their next move for now... If they really do lower their prices, then we know that they will throw more money into marketing. This might help her quickly secure her clientele, but how will she profit from it. One wrong move and it’s game over.”

Mike nodded. “One could say that if they were to take too large a step, they would rip their pants.”

Everyone burst out laughing.

Avery took a sip of coffee and asked, “Did she really manage to gather fifteen hundred million?

“That is what she said at the meeting. Even if that’s not entirely true, I think that she has to at least have one hundred million to say that.”

Avery nodded and asked, “Are our drones too expensive?”

“Not really. With reference to our drones’ quality, it is a reasonable price.

However, despite the growing population in Aryadelle, most people only earn a few thousand each month, so naturally, it would be considered expensive for them to buy a drone that costs them thousands.

Avery set her coffee down and looked at the others. “Let us stick to our plan. They can’t bring us down unless they manage to develop a better AI system than ours.

Let’s not fret for now and focus on our products.”

“We feel so assured that you say that!”

It was still shocking that Wanda managed to gather fifteen hundred million in such a short period of time.

After the meeting had ended, the vice-president walked over to Avery and whispered,” President Tate, I heard that Elliot Foster has also invested in Wanda’s company. I assume it's quite a lot of money, otherwise, Wanda wouldn't have managed to gather fifteen hundred million so quickly."

Avery desperately wanted to pretend that she did not care, but she could not help the frown on her face.

"If Elliot Foster is truly the one supporting Wanda, then it's certain that her company would succeed. The only question remaining is to what extent would it succeed." The vice-president was slightly pessimistic. "President Tate, weren't you in a relationship with Elliot Foster? How could he do that?"

Avery's eyes darted away briefly. "We no longer have any feelings for one another at this point. It's understandable that he invests in Wanda's business because he sees value in it."

"I just don't think it's necessary for him to do that when he is already that rich.

Each penny he gives Wanda is a knife thrown at you!"

Avery cringed, "He wouldn't have gotten to where he is today if he is someone who feels content with how much he already has. Besides, even if he doesn't invest in Wanda, someone else would. All we need to do is face it, so don't panic," she said, her voice monotonous.

Once she was out of the meeting room, Avery strode back to her office.

Chapter 376

There was a beautiful invitation letter on the office desk.

Avery opened the envelope and glanced at the contents of the letter.

It was an invitation to a summit.

Mike came. He saw her holding the invitation and said, "If you don't want to go".

"I'll go," she said, before opening her purse to take out her lipstick. She began fixing her makeup

Mike exclaimed, "You are provoked, aren't you? Is that your new lipstick? It is such a bright color! You usually look quite gentle, but with that, you look like a queen. Wanda would be no match for you even if she multiplied herself by ten."

Once Avery was done, she placed her powder and lipstick back in her purse and looked at Mike. "Are you coming with me?"

"Of course. I'll be your driver."

Elites of all fields had gathered for the summit. Upon Avery's arrival, she was immediately invited backstage by the organizer.

"Miss Tate, we need you to give a speech later. You'll need to speak for about twenty minutes. You might want to prepare your script."

Avery nodded but soon realized that Mike had disappeared.

She had not prepared a script for the speech and there was not enough time to start preparing. She would have to improvise.

She walked out of the area that formed the backstage and glanced at the hall.

There were people as far as the eyes could see. She took out her phone to call

Mike when suddenly, someone grabbed her arm and pulled her to the side.

Panicked, she looked over at the person who had grabbed her.

"Isn't this man Elliot's bodyguard? Is Elliot participating in this summit as well?"

she thought.

Just as she was about to say something, she spotted Mike and Chad arguing at a corner in the distance.

If Chad was there, Elliot had to be there as well.

“Let go of me!” She scowled and barked at the bodyguard, “I can walk just fine on my own!”

The bodyguard let go of her and said, “Don’t try anything.”

“Where is he?” Her heart sped up as she struggled to catch her breath.

The summit was about to begin in half an hour, and she suspected that Elliot sent for her on purpose.

The bodyguard did not respond and simply led the way. Once they reached one of the guest rooms, the bodyguard opened the door and signaled for her to get in.

She took a deep breath and went inside.

The door was slammed shut with a loud bang.

“What do you want?” Avery tightened her grip around her purse and glared at the man sitting on the couch.

Elliot’s eagle-like eyes locked onto Avery’s alluring face and he drawled, “Is your period over?”

“I’m busy right now.” She took a step back and placed her hand on the doorknob.

“If that’s what you want, wait until night!”

He got up from the couch and strode towards her, before pinching her chin with his long fingers, forcing her to look up. "I grew sick of doing it at night," he said in a hoarse voice. "I want to try doing it in the day."

Chapter 377

At the summit, Mike and Chad had been arguing for over twenty minutes, and they were both exhausted.

"You are being unreasonable!" said Chad readjusting his spectacles.

Mike snorted. "You lose your mind every time you mention your boss. You need to do some self-reflecting! Your boss isn't your dad, why do you claim to know him?"

"You are the one who needs self-reflection! Why do you care who my boss invests in? Even if he did place his money on Wanda Tate, it only means that she has that sort of value! It doesn't mean that he likes her as a person!" Chad argued.

"Don't call me out for drinks from now on! If you all teaming up with Wanda Tate, then it's best we don't meet again! I'm on Avery's side!" declared Mike, severing all ties with Chad.

Chad's face was flushed with frustration. "Sure! Who wants to be friends with you, anyway?"

After the argument, the two went on to look for their bosses.

Ten minutes had passed, and Mike could still not find Avery, so he went looking for Chad. "I can't find Avery! Where's your boss?"

Chad shrugged. "I can't find him. He didn't tell me where he was going. We came here for the summit, though."

"Avery came for the summit as well! She is expected to go on stage to give a speech later!" Mike panicked and took out his phone to call Avery, but her phone had been switched off, and he could not reach her.

"Do you think that Mr. Foster is only here as a member of the crowd?" Chad snorted. "They have to be together if they are both missing."

"Of course, I know that they are together! That b*st*rd Elliot must have kidnapped “Can’t you be more civilized with your words?” Chad glared at him. “Don’t panic.

Avery!"

Mr. Foster is very particular with time, so he should be back soon.”

Mike took a deep breath and decided to wait.

Half an hour had gone by, and it had been twenty minutes since the summit’s official start, but there was still no sign of Elliot or Avery.

If it were not for all the people around them, Mike would have grabbed Chad by the and demanded to know what he meant when he said that Elliot was particular with time.

Suddenly, they heard a round of applause, followed by Wanda being invited on stage.

Wanda walked up to the stage with an elegant and confident smile and bowed.

“I’m honored for being invited to this event today. It is my pleasure to share my story of success with the entrepreneurs before me. The concept of our company is to change lives with technology. We aim to change not only the lives of those in the upper and middle-income groups but those in the lower-income groups as well.”

Wanda passionately gave her speech on stage.

Mike strode toward the organizer. Knowing that Avery could not make it back in time, he had decided to represent her on stage.

He could not let Wanda steal their thunder.

Meanwhile, Avery was in the guest room of the hotel.

Avery had tried multiple times to get off the bed, but Elliot would not let her. He used his weight to pin her down, and there was only a thin silk blanket separating them.

“Why is he acting so childish? What’s the point of making me late for the summit?” she thought.

“Why bother participating in that kind of event? Aren’t you tired?” He buried his face in the crook of her neck. As he spoke, his warm breath brushed against her skin, and it tickled.

She pushed his head away. “I’m more tired when you press me into the bed like

this!”

He got off of her at the sound of her heavy breathing. He lay down next to her and stared at her blushing face in contentment, "Let's have dinner together."

"Our relationship is limited to sleeping together, and we are not as close as to be dining together," she said sarcastically, getting out of bed.

"You are already late, there's no point in hurrying over now," he said in a cold voice.

"I would rather go sunbathe than stay here with you." She started putting her clothes back on, one piece at a time.

Elliot's good mood was completely destroyed, and his expression darkened. He swung his legs and got out of bed. The two started getting dressed on opposite sides of the bed.

Once she was dressed, Avery picked up her purse and after a moment of hesitation, she asked, "Elliot, have you placed your money on Wanda?"

He buckled his belt and narrowed his eyes while looking at her. "I thought our relationship is limited to bed? We are off the bed now."

Chapter 378

She pursed her lips and strode toward the door.

“I don’t know if it means investing in Wanda,” he drawled when she was at the door, “but I gave Zoe three hundred million.”

“Three hundred million? He gave Zoe three hundred million?!” she thought.

“Wasn’t it one hundred and fifty-five million?” she blurted out.

He chuckled. “So you have been keeping an eye on what has happened between Zoe and I. I did give her one hundred and fifty-five million, but I gave her another one hundred and fifty-five million the day before yesterday. She had performed surgery on Shea twice, and I’m paying her seventy-five million for each operation she performed.”

Avery clenched her fists. Due to the surgeries, Zoe had gotten an insane amount of money from Elliot. She had given all three hundred million to Wanda.

“How ironic! This is the most ironic thing I’ve ever seen. Nothing is as ridiculous as this, because I was the one who did those surgeries! This means that I have just given Wanda three hundred million! Haha! I want her dead! How could I give her money?” she thought.

Elliot noticed her tensing, and she was shivering slightly.

He got dressed swiftly and strode toward her. When he was finally next to her, he noticed that she was as pale as a ghost, and all the light had disappeared from her eyes.

“Avery, what’s wrong?” He grabbed onto her wrist and asked.

She took a deep breath, before shaking off his hand.

“I am a joke, Elliot Foster!” She lifted her chin as she tried her best to hold back her tears. “I shouldn’t have been merciful! I will never show any mercy to you or anyone around you!”

Her vice-president was right. Every penny that Elliot had given Zoe was a knife directed at her because Zoe and Wanda were a team.

Avery’s heart ached at the thought that she had wronged herself and her mother.

“What are you talking about, Avery?!” He grabbed onto her wrist once again and scowled.” Are you angry that I have given money to Zoe? Or do you think that I’ve given too much?”

“So, it is because of that.” He chuckled and said, “If you can cure Shea, I would give you however much you want! But can you? Can you cure Shea?!”

He raised his voice.

“No! I won’t cure her!” Avery said coldly despite the heartache, “I would never help her even if I could!”

Stung by her words, he flung her arm away. He knew that Avery did not want him and had never been impressed by his wealth.

Avery stepped out of the depressing room. She did not go back to the venue.

After exiting the hotel, she caught a taxi and gave the driver her house address.

She could not handle anything properly with the emotional state she was in, so she needed to be alone.

In the evening, the children had returned from school and were surprised to see

Avery at home.

“Mom! Why are you home from work so early today?” Layla and Hayden walked toward her, and Layla showed Avery her finger.

“Mommy, they took our blood today and it hurts so much...” Layla tried to find the wound on her finger and failed miserably.

Avery blew at her finger and said, “Let Mommy blow it, and it won’t hurt anymore.”

“Mommy, Hayden had his blood taken as well. Blow his finger for him as well,”

Layla grabbed her brother’s hand and showed it to Avery.

Avery’s eyes gleamed with surprise, and she asked, “I thought you didn’t like people touching

you?”

Chapter 379

“Mommy, the nurse told Hayden to go first because I was scared of the pain. She wanted me to see that there was nothing to it,” explained Layla. “Hayden only had his blood taken for my sake. He loves me!”

Avery sighed at the explanation and said, “You are both so adorable and good.

Mommy loves you more and more as the days go by!”

“Mom, we love you too!” Layla’s doe-like eyes were filled with joy.

Their bodyguard stood on the side and scratched his head. "Miss Tate, should I cook?"

"Wouldn't that be too much trouble?"

The bodyguard shook his head. "It is no problem."

With that, he went into the kitchen.

"Mommy, that uncle cooks really well! He is making buffalo wings for us tonight."

Layla grabbed Avery's hand and mumbled, "Why didn't Uncle Mike come home with you?"

Avery's brows twitched, and she said, "He is busy with something, so we didn't come home together."

Elliot had turned off her phone, and Mike must have gotten extremely nervous when he could not find her.

She immediately took out her phone from her purse and turned it on. When she saw the missed calls from Mike, she immediately called him back.

Mike picked up right away. "Avery! Can't you just give me a heads-up next time Elliot takes you away?! Don't you know how worried I was?"

Embarrassed, Avery changed the subject. "Why were you fighting with Chad again?"

bu

"You saw us arguing?" Mike hissed. "I asked him if Elliot had put his money on Wanda, and he said he doesn't know. He then told me to mind my own business and said that his boss knows what he is doing, whether or not he decides to invest with Wanda- I can't stand that look on his face."

"What's there to argue about?" Avery glanced at the kitchen and asked, "Are you coming back for dinner?"

"I have plans for dinner." Mike swiftly changed the subject and said, "It's a shame that you didn't hear Wanda's speech today... I could not help but laugh at her speech. She said that she had started the company with the sole intention of saving the poor, instead of her true reason: making money. Does she think that she is Mother Teresa or something? She might as well be writing 'I want money' on her face!"

Avery felt calm while listening to Mike's frustrated ranting. She had done a lot of thinking since she returned home. She could not possibly stop Wanda from doing anything, so she had to focus on maintaining her own company. She had to ensure that she put up a fight. When the time was right, she would strike and end Wanda once and for all.

"Don't drink too much at night, and remember to call a taxi if you are too drunk.

My head hurts so I won't be able to pick you up," she said.

"Oh. Why is your head hurting? Is it because of Wanda or Elliot?" Mike asked in a worried voice.

"It's because of myself," she responded casually. "I will go back to the kids now."

"Oh..." Concerned, Mike said, "I will come home early tonight."

That night, a black Rolls-Roice drove into the yard of Elliot's house at eight. Once the car was parked, Elliot stepped out of the car.

Zoe came out from the living room and stood before him.

"Elliot, I came here tonight to check on Shea," she said with a calm smile on her face. "She is recovering well. I think you are able to tell that as well. Also, I am here to inform you that I will be moving out of the old Foster mansion in a few days."

"You can stay there," he said.

Zoe shook her head. "It's not appropriate. I will go apartment hunting soon."

"You don't want to stay in the place I arranged for you?"

"No. I've already taken so much money from you, so I can't possibly stay in your place? I will find a place that's nearby to facilitate Shea's recovery," Zoe paused for a brief moment, before continuing, "It's late, so I won't overstay my welcome.

Hurry inside. Shea has been waiting for you."

Elliot felt slightly surprised at how determined Zoe appeared to be. In his mind, Avery's face appeared.

Avery used to love him, and she was just as determined when she broke up with him. The looks in his eyes turned cold at the thought.

Zoe left Elliot's mansion and walked back to the old Foster mansion.

Rosalie retired early. Henry and his wife, on the other hand, would often stay out late into the night, and Cole would either spend the entire night out or spend the entire day home. Thus, the old Foster mansion was quiet all the time.

When Zoe returned to her room, she sent Cole a message.

When Cole received the message, he immediately came to Zoe's room.

"Zoe, our child is gone. Why are you looking for me?" Cole said coldly while standing by the door. He still could not get past the fact that she had brutally killed the child. If he had not wanted the child, then he could not care less if the child survived or died, but he wanted the child.

"Do you think I didn't want my own child? That's my own flesh and blood! But I can't have him! If the child is born, it will not end well for us!" Zoe pulled him into the room and closed the door.

Cole sobered up a little. "Then, why are you looking for me?"

"I'm moving out. I'm saying my farewell to you tonight."

"Oh, don't make it seem like we won't see each other anymore. Didn't you agree to continue treating Shea? You even accepted three hundred million from my uncle,” Cole insinuated.

“Cole, once I have enough money, maybe there is no need to care about your abilities... so long as you listen to me.” Zoe looked at him seductively.

“Dr. Sanford, what... do you mean... by telling me all this?” Cole could not hold himself back for much longer.

“It’s exactly what you think it means!” Zoe pulled him by the collar to the bed and turned off the lights!

Two days later, the paternity test center made a call to Rosalie informing her that the results were out.

Rosalie had not seen the results, but her blood pressure had already increased.

Initially, she had wanted to collect the results herself, but she felt too dizzy to do so.

After taking her medication, she ordered the driver to go collect the result.

After the driver left, Rosalie started talking excitedly to her servants.

“I did not get them to tell me the results on the phone because I want to see the results for myself!” said Rosalie radiantly. “I had a dream last night about the results! It was the result that I wanted! Hahaha!”

The servants laughed together with her.

At that moment, Cole came downstairs and asked, “Grandma, what’s the good news? Why are you so happy!”

Rosalie smiled and said, “Good news indeed! But I can’t tell you right now! I will only announce it later!”

“Oh, how secretive. I’ll head back to bed then. Call me later!”

“Okay!”

About an hour later, the driver returned with the results. The results were encased in an envelope.

Rosalie opened the envelope and retrieved the results with trembling hands! As she pulled out the document, she remembered that she did not have her glasses, so she immediately went back to her room.

She was eager to put her glasses on so she could read the results in detail!

After seeing the results, she was seized with excitement! Her face was distorted with happiness.

“I have- a grandson. Elliot- has an heir. Hayden is Elliot’s son. I knew he must be Elliot’s son. He looked exactly like Elliot when Elliot was young. How could he not be Elliot’s son! Avery has hidden it well!”

Rosalie muttered to herself. She quickly picked up her phone, browsed through her contacts, and made a call!

Chapter 381

Half an hour later, Elliot received a call from his brother, Henry.

“Elliot! Come to the hospital now! Mother fell! She’s not doing well!”

Elliot gripped his phone tightly. He strode out of the office and walked toward the elevator.

Chad noticed his darkened expression, and the alarm in him went off. What had happened?

“Mr. Foster, do you want to push back your meetings?”

“Let the vice president do it. Send the meeting notes to me,” Elliot said before entering his private elevator.

The doors of the elevator slowly slid shut.

Chad had a bad feeling. Elliot rarely looked anxious while he was in the office.

At the hospital, Rosalie was pushed into the emergency room. When Elliot arrived, the emergency room door was still shut.

“What happened?” Elliot looked at Henry with a dark expression.

“I was not at home then. Cole said he heard Mother yell out, so he came out of the room to have a look, and he saw Mother rolling down the stairs.”

Elliot furrowed his brows tightly. “She fell from the upper floor? What was she doing there?”

Rosalie was quite old. She was no longer steady on her feet, so she normally stayed on the ground floor.

Henry looked like he was in pain. “I don’t know either! I was not at home then.

Although Mother doesn’t stay on the upper floor, she can’t stay still and usually likes to walk around the house.”

“How about the nanny? Didn’t the nanny look after her?” Elliot’s voice rose a few octaves. He asked his question coldly.

Rosalie has high blood pressure, and she could not afford to take the fall.

“I rushed to the hospital when I received Cole’s call. I didn’t have time to ask all those questions!” Henry’s eyes reddened. “Cole, come and speak to your uncle!”

Cole’s eyes were a little reddened. He looked like he had just cried.

“Uncle Elliot, I was sleeping at home. When I heard Grandma yell, I rushed out of the room and saw her on the floor. The nanny was frightened to death, and she was crying by the side. I barely had time to ask the nanny anything, I just dialed the emergency number—”

Cole’s body was stiff. He clenched his fists tightly.

Cole raised his hand and wiped the tears from the corner of his eyes. “I’ll go right now and see what happened.”

After Cole left, Henry stood outside the emergency room, anxiously waiting. Elliot stood on the other side. His body was stiff, and his heart was cold.

He recalled the last time he had seen his mother. It seemed that it was when Zoe had had a miscarriage. Back then, they talked once. He said he would find another doctor to treat Shea.

Rosalie was happy then. She said that she would not force him and Zoe to be together. She was always like that. She might seem domineering, but she always gave in to him.

Elliot was not used to expressing his feelings, so he rarely said sweet things to her, but that did not mean that he did not love her.

His mother was the person that treated him the best. As a mother, there might be some things that she did not do well, but her son, Elliot, was worse than her.

Like a premonition, he was suddenly overcome with a sense of dread and disappointment. These terrifying emotions were like a virus, slowly spreading throughout his entire body, suffocating him.

After a while, the doors of the emergency room opened. The doctor and nurses came out.

“The patient’s heart stopped beating half an hour ago. We tried to resuscitate her, but we failed. We’re sorry.”

Instantly, Henry and his wife's cries could be heard in the corridors.

Elliot walked into the emergency room with heavy steps.

His mother was pale. Her eyes were wide open. It looked like she did not have a peaceful death.

Elliot reached his hand out, wanting to shut his mother's eyes, but no matter how he tried, he could not shut her eyes.

He grabbed his mother's cold hands. He swallowed. His voice was hoarse.

"Mother, did you want to tell me something?" There was no response.

Chapter 382

"If there is a next life, I hope that you will never see Shea or I. We have made things difficult for you."

Still no response.

There was nothing left in death. All the memories, hatred, desire, and reluctance vanished when the heart fell silent.

No one would force him to get married and have children in the future. No one would miss him or worry whether he was eating enough or staying warm enough, or whether his work was tiring him or not.

A moment later, Cole rushed into the hospital.

When he heard of his grandmother's death, he instantly lost it and sobbed!

"How could Grandma die just like that! Yesterday, she was nagging me to get a girlfriend!" wailed Cole. He took Rosalie's phone.

"I spoke to Grandma's nanny. She said that before Grandma fell, she was on a call, so I brought her phone over."

Elliot accepted the phone with reddened eyes. He turned on the phone and pulled up the call history.

On the screen, a familiar name suddenly appeared. It was as if someone had choked him!

Avery Tate!

The last call his mother had made was to Avery Tate. Why had his mother talked to Avery? It showed that the call lasted for five minutes.

What were they talking about? What did they have to say for their conversation to last five whole minutes?

“Who did Mother talk to?” Henry looked at Elliot’s reaction and realized something was off. He immediately walked over and looked at the phone. “Avery? Why did Mother talk to her?

They never keep in touch! I never heard Mother talk about Avery!”

Elliot’s fingers trembled. He used Rosalie’s phone and called Avery.

Avery was in her office at Tate Industries. She was in a glum mood. She had been sitting still for over an hour.

Rosalie had called her over an hour ago. She told Avery that she knew that Hayden is Elliot’s biological child!

Without waiting for Avery to say something, Rosalie read her the results of the paternity test.

Then, Rosalie mocked her!

She had commended Avery on her ability to hide the truth for this long, but she said that Avery would never be able to get anything past her. Rosalie was going to immediately tell Elliot the news. They wanted Hayden, but they did not want Avery! Rosalie had also said that if Avery was smart she would send Hayden to the Fosters, otherwise, they would take the boy by force!

She never expected Rosalie to get a paternity test done!

Avery was a sitting duck at the moment. If Elliot had known about this, she could not bear to imagine what the consequences would be. She was stumped. She did not know how to keep her children by her side.

Her phone on the table rang, pulling her back to reality. She pursed her lips and looked at her screen. She thought it would be Elliot, but it was not! It was his mother again!

Avery quickly picked up the phone and yelled hysterically, "What do you want!

What the hell do you want again!"

Avery's yells reached Elliot's ears. Why was Avery so hysterical?

What happened between her and his mother?

"Avery." Elliot swallowed and yelled her name.

Hearing his voice, Avery's fingers suddenly tightened. Her fingernails dug into her palm, but she felt no pain!

Elliot had used his mother's phone to call her. Mother and son met. Rosalie had to have told him everything

Avery was like a criminal who had committed a serious crime and was waiting for the final judgment

At the thought of how he was about to take Hayden away, her heart hurt so badly

she could not breathe. She began to cry.

“Avery,” said Elliot. This time, he sounded cold and upset. “What happened between you and my mother?”

Chapter 383

Elliot’s question made Avery furrow her brows.

What was he talking about? He was asking her about what happened between her and his mother?

That was strange! Why did he not just ask his mother?

Even stranger was the fact that Rosalie had not told him her findings? More than an hour had passed, why has she not told him yet?

Avery picked up her glass of water and took a sip. She forced herself to calm down.

“Why don’t you ask your mother this question?” As Avery said that she started to suspect something was going on.

Something must have happened which was why Rosalie had not told Elliot the truth.

“My mother is dead.” Elliot’s breath was heavy. He said bitterly, “You are the last person she spoke to before her death. I want to know what the two of you were talking about.”

Avery’s hand which held the glass swayed! She felt dizzy and quickly put down the glass.

She muttered, “Your mother has passed away? What happened?”

“Answer my question! What did the two of you talk about!” Elliot was losing patience! He initially thought that his mother’s death was an accident. However, at that moment, he started to suspect that there was something more to it.

His mother had lived in that building for most of her life. How could she have suddenly fallen? Had she been agitated before the fall?

Her last call was to Avery. This was too suspicious! They had not been in contact all this time, and then they were on call for five whole minutes?

Avery's face flushed red at his questions.

She was indeed afraid that Rosalie would tell him the truth, but she had never expected Rosalie to die!

Rosalie's death had nothing to do with her, but the tone of his voice told her that he suspected her!

Avery's heart turned cold! All the doubts and suspicions could spoil a person's relationship!

The reason she did not tell him about her children's existence was that she did not trust him!

She did not think that he would make a good father! She did not trust him to be good to her children!

From his attitude, she could see that he was selfish, dictatorial, and violent!

"The conversation I had with your mom is something between us! I had nothing to do with her death!" Avery said through gritted teeth.

Elliot was extremely disappointed with Avery's answer.

"It looks like my mother's death has something to do with you," he sneered and said hoarsely.

He was grieving for his mother, yet she was still on the defense. She was prickly and defensive! She had to make sure he bled!

He only wanted to know what his mother had said to her before she died. Was this too much to ask for?

It was not too much.

She was being too much!

"You have already determined that I killed your mother. No matter what I say, it doesn't matter! If you are accusing me, it means that I have killed your mother!"

Avery's temples hurt. She spoke, enunciating each word clearly, "Elliot. The amount of love I had for you in the past, is the amount of hate I hold for you now! I will no longer hold out any hope for you! I will remember how you have wrongfully accused me of murdering your mother for the rest of my life!"

In a single breath, she told said everything she wanted to say. She could not imagine how much pain he was in, because she was in so much more pain than

him!

That morning, his mother had yelled and gloated at her misery and pain, now that she was gone, he was suspecting her of killing his mother.

How ridiculous! How comical!

Avery's words made Elliot's heart turn even colder. Since she hated him so much, and she would not love him anymore, then why should he show her mercy?

"Go

and bring Avery over!" Elliot turned to the side and said to the bodyguard.

Chapter 384

On the other end of the line, Avery heard Elliot's command. She sneered and said, "Don't trouble your bodyguard. Where are you now? I'll come right over." Elliot waited in the hospital. He was still gripping Rosaline's phone. The veins on his forehead popped. His entire body stiffened!

He had already decided that he was going to make Avery tell him everything his mother had said on the phone. He would not allow his mother to die without trying to get an explanation.

Henry cautiously walked over to Elliot and said, "Elliot, Mother is gone. Should we arrange for her funeral?"

Elliot barked, "Have an autopsy done first!"

He wanted to rule out murder!

Although his mother had high blood pressure, her recent health checkup had shown that she was still rather healthy. Her sudden fall was rather suspicious.

Henry nodded. "Okay, I will go look for the doctor."

By the side, Cole was holding onto his mother. He did not dare breathe loudly. His heart was beating wildly. He was terrified.

He had to keep it together.

If Elliot ever found out that it was him who had shoved Rosalie down the stairs, he would kill him on the spot!

Cole had not wanted to push her! Elliot was Rosalie's favorite, but she had also loved him plenty. It was Zoe who had persuaded him into doing it! There was no way out!.

Zoe did not want Elliot to know that Avery's children were his biological children because once he knew about that, he would be even crazier over Avery, and he would treat her better than he ever had.

If Avery had Elliot by her side, how would Wanda win against Avery?

Zoe and Wanda had a common enemy at that moment. Anything bad for Wanda would be bad for her too.

After pushing Rosalie to her death, Cole destroyed the paternity test!

At the same time, he threatened everyone with death. If they dared breathe a single word, they would die.

Henry's family ruled the staff at the old Foster mansion with an iron grip. No one dared defy them.

On top of that, Rosalie had called Avery before her death. Thus, it was only natural that all the hatred and resentment would be directed toward Avery.

Avery and Zoe met at the main lobby of the hospital. When Zoe saw Avery, it was as if a hunter had seen their prey. Her eyes were filled with a provocative arrogance.

“Avery, what a coincidence.” Zoe pressed the button to the elevator and took a jab at Avery.” You look sad. What happened?”

The elevator door slowly slid open. They waited for everyone inside to alight before they entered the elevator. Coincidentally, there were the only ones in the lift.

Avery was not in the mood to deal with her.

Zoe decided to push further past the line. “Are you here to see Aunt Rosalie? I heard that before she died, she called you. Avery, what did you say to her? She died after talking to you. You’re amazing!” she said.

“Shut up!” snapped Avery coldly.

“Hahaha! No!” Zoe laughed delightedly. “Seeing you this sad makes up for everything that I had suffered through. Avery, I’ll be honest. Elliot’s mother did not fall.”

Avery looked at Zoe! She glared at Zoe.

“She knew that your children are Elliot’s biological children. After getting the paternity test results, she was about to tell Elliot.” Zoe’s expressions turned sinister. “The stupid old hag thought she was so smart! All she was, was in the way! So, after she got the results, I sent her to heaven!”

Avery’s heart constricted tightly. Her glare was ice cold.

“Do you know why I dare tell you all this?” Zoe leaned it toward Avery. “I’m telling you all this because I’m betting on Elliot being on my side. He will not believe you,” she whispered into Avery’s ear.

Chapter 385

Avery did not feel anything when she heard Zoe’s revelation. She was Elliot’s enemy. She had never held out a candle that Elliot might believe her.

“Miss Sanford. Your breath stinks. Has no one ever told you that?” Avery raised her hand and covered her nose.

Zoe’s expression turned sinister. She wanted to yell at Avery, but she did not dare open her mouth!

with a ding, the elevator stopped. Its doors slowly slid open.

Avery was the first to come out of the elevator. Elliot was standing nearby, and his eyes lit up when he saw her.

He strode over to her. He walked over and grabbed Avery by the arm and dragged her around the corner.

Zoe saw the two of them pass her by. She remained in the same spot, looking at

Avery.

She saw Avery shrugging Elliot's arm off. Then, she heard Avery speak, "Your mother was the one who called me. What we talked about had nothing to do with you! Why don't you investigate your mom's death? Do you have no other solutions than trying to find fault with me?"

How fierce! Zoe never thought that Avery would dare to be so fierce when faced with Elliot! Their exchange in the elevator seemed polite by comparison!

Elliot's back was facing Zoe, but Zoe could see him stiffen.

"I'm not asking you how my mom died! I only want to know what my mother told you! In those five minutes, what did the two of you talk about! Avery, you clearly understand what I'm trying to say, why are you pretending otherwise!"

Avery sneered. "Your mom is dead, yet you aren't concerned about how she died? If you were my son, I would be thoroughly disappointed!"

"What nonsense are you talking about!" Elliot was provoked.

"I'm talking nonsense? Do you think you're being logical?" Avery's eyes reddened.

She came clean. "Your mom did not fall down the stairs! She was pushed!"

Her words made Elliot's eyes redden with hatred.

"Who?" He spoke with force.

"Zoe!" Avery had hesitated before she named the perpetrator. If she did not tell Elliot what she knew, she would not be able to keep a clear conscience. "She told me herself, in the elevator."

Zoe heard their conversation clearly.

She never expected Avery to fall into her trap this easily. She had thought that Avery would be smarter.

Zoe took a deep breath and forced tears out of the corner of her eyes. She strode over to them.

"Avery! Why are you trying to blame me?" Zoe whimpered, looking pitiful. "I moved out of the old Foster mansion yesterday. How could I have pushed Aunt Rosalie down the stairs? Before pinning it on me, can you get your facts right!”

Avery was stunned by what Zoe had said. Those words that Zoe had told her in the elevator were just a lie?

Normally, it would be easy to tell if someone was lying or not, however, that was not the case with Zoe. Despite not being a professional actor, she had good acting skills.

Elliot’s gaze shifted from Zoe to Avery.

“Avery, what else do you have to say?” he said in a low voice. His eyes were filled with disappointment.

“Nothing.” Avery was calm.

“Apologize to her!” Each word came out slow and even. “Apologize to Zoe!”

Avery had a look of disbelief. “Even if I have defamed her, I will not apologize to her! Because what I said was what she said to me. If this is considered defamation, she did it to herself!”

Chapter 386

Zoe cried loudly. "Avery! I have never seen such a shameless woman like you!

You twist facts and blame it on me! You said that I did it. Why would I be so crazy to do that!"

"Yes! You are crazy!" Avery calmly looked at Zoe, who was still putting on a show.

"You don't have to be smug. Your act will be exposed one day."

"What act! Avery! Tell me! What act?!" Zoe pounced on Avery. Avery swerved toward Elliot and avoided Zoe. She did not want to fight with a lunatic nor get her hands dirty.

Elliot gave her a cold glance and blocked Zoe.

"Zoe, you're in the hospital!" he reminded her. "I still have unfinished business with her. You will set aside your feud!"

Then, he grabbed Avery's arm and headed to the elevator!

Zoe watched them leave, and she immediately stopped crying! Although it was all an act, she had really wanted to hit Avery.

Cole silently walked over and growled, "Zoe, I think you and I are not a match. I can't keep up with your viciousness.”

Zoe looked around and saw no one, so she retorted, “You’re calling me vicious?”

Do you think you’re a saint? You’re the one who killed your grandmother! Not me!”

“Your words mean nothing. If you didn’t constantly put thoughts in my head while in bed,”

“If you’re a good person, do you think I could persuade you? Cole, as things are, there is no way back! Let’s not talk about this in the future! Your grandmother has died. The dead can’t talk! All we need to do is sit tight and watch!” Zoe quickly regained her composure. “Your uncle won’t let go of Avery that easily.”

Cole said, “I have no feud with Avery. She is my ex-girlfriend!”

Zoe raised her eyebrow. “Oh? Do you still care for her? Then go plead with your uncle. Tell him that you were the one who pushed your grandmother!”

Cole’s expressions suddenly stiffened. He looked behind Zoe with fear in his eyes. Zoe followed the direction of his gaze and turned around.

Slap!

Henry slapped Zoe in the face.

“You vile b*tch!” Henry did not think that they had killed his mother. At that moment, grief gripped him.

“Why did you kill my mother and poison my son’s mind!”

Zoe clutched her face and secretly suppressed her anger.

She tasted blood. The slap had caused a trickle of blood to seep from the corner of her mouth. She looked at Henry viciously! Cole was the one who did it, why did he not slap Cole?

“Hehe!”

She could not challenge the Fosters as she was, so she had no choice but to endure.

“Dad, I’m sorry!” Cole knelt to the ground. “I was the one who did it. Please don’t tell Uncle Elliot. If you tell him, he will definitely kill me! I made a mistake. I shouldn’t have let this woman talk me into it,”

Henry lifted his leg and kicked his son brutally. “I would rather have a dog than have you as a son! F*ck off! Leave the Fosters! You are not allowed to come back without my approval!”

Cole was scared to death. He immediately fled. Zoe followed after him.

Henry’s wife was so frightened her face turned blue. She grabbed her husband’s arm and cried, saying, “Don’t tell Elliot about this. If you tell him this, not only will he kill Cole, but he will also hate us! Let him just take it out on Avery!”

Henry’s eyes were bloodshot. “I’m just afraid that he might kill Avery.”

“He won’t!”

“How could he not! Have you forgotten how my father died?!” Henry choked and bitterly raised his hand and covered his face.

Chapter 387

The black Rolls-Roice did not stop till they were out of the city. The cars on the road were few. Avery sat in the backseat, closing her eyes.

After a long time, the car finally stopped. She opened her eyes and looked outside. She only saw a dense forest. It was foreign to her.

She was confused. Where was she? Why did Elliot bring her there?

“Where is this?” She looked up and asked Elliot.

“One of my holiday villas.” He pushed the car door open and got down.

Holiday villa? Elliot had definitely not brought her here for a holiday.

Avery got down and followed him. They walked toward the mansion.

The mansion was in a classic gothic-styled building. The ash green building in the middle of the forest was eerie. Avery felt as if she was not walking into a holiday villa but a prison.

She turned around and saw Elliot's bodyguard following closely behind. At that moment, she was truly a sitting duck.

After entering the mansion, the open area made her furrow her brows. The decor was dark and oppressive!

"Avery, when did you and my mother start contacting each other?" Elliot's low voice echoed in the stillness.

The doors of the mansion slowly closed shut! Avery looked at the shut doors. "If I don't answer your question, does that mean I won't be able to leave this place?"

she asked, slightly confused.

"Yes, if you want to leave this place, you have to answer my questions honestly!"

His cold voice reverberated through the vast mansion.

“I’ve already said that I have nothing to say! No matter where you bring me, it will always be this answer!” Avery raised her voice. “Elliot, stop wasting your time on

me!”

Looking at how agitated she was, his eyes darkened a little.

“Did you talk about me with my mother?” Elliot speculated. “I can’t think of anything else that you two could talk about.”

“It is not important!” Despair shone in her eyes, and her voice was thick with desperation.” Why are you harping on an unimportant issue! Your mother died at home, not in my office! What problems can you solve by bringing me here!”

“You said it well.” Elliot looked at her and egged her on, “Since it’s unimportant, why don’t you just tell me? Is it because I’m less important than this problem, or do you think you can just constantly ignore my feelings!”

Avery was speechless.

“The person who died is my mother! Not some random stray on the streets!” Elliot choked.” Why can’t I know what my mom said before she died? Why can’t I know!”.

Avery looked at Elliot’s wet eyes. She realized that he was losing it. She suddenly remembered how she had behaved when her mother had passed- the overwhelming helplessness and grief! It was like a huge black hole, swallowing away her sensibility!

Only then did she realize that he was not angry because of the call, but because he had just lost his mother.

If she were in his shoes, she would also cling to the phone call with all her might.

“Elliot. I’m sorry.” Avery’s voice was hoarse. She lowered her gaze. “I can’t answer your question, not because you’re not important, and it’s not because I want to ignore your feelings. I know that you’re in pain, but I can’t tell —.”

Elliot heard the sound of his heart-crushing into pieces.

At that moment, one of the bodyguards walked over and said to him, “Mr. Foster, hand this woman to me! I’ll make her talk!”

Of course, Elliot knew what he meant. There are two ways of making a person talk. The first is to lure and seduce, the other was torture.

The first method was clearly useless on Avery, so they could only use the second method. Elliot could never bear to hurt her.

Chapter 388

How had she treated him? His forgiveness and mercy seemed like a joke.

After a short contemplation, Elliot turned around. The bodyguard immediately understood what Elliot meant and took Avery away!

The hall instantly fell into pin-drop silence!

Avery did not cry or make a fuss. She just disappeared from his line of sight. Like all those years ago, she quietly left him.

The bodyguard took her to an underground cellar.

The room was dim. With the light of dusk, she could see that the underground cellar had not been renovated. They were walking on cement and steel. Strange sounds kept ringing in their ears.

There was a nauseating coppery smell that clung to the air!

After walking for five minutes, the bodyguard shoved her forward!

Avery was caught off guard, and she fell to the ground.

She came into contact with something sticky. Fear licked her. Grass. She had touched grass, but the grass was covered in something sticky. It smelt foul.

Avery frowned and she quickly pulled her hands away! “Miss Tate, have a look at what’s behind you,” said the bodyguard with a sinister smile.

Avery turned around and came face to face with the head of a gigantic snake. It was a python! The python opened its huge jaws!

She stopped breathing. Her legs instantly turned to jelly, and her body went cold!

“Miss Tate, do you know why the python looks so good?” The bodyguard knelt next to her and snickered maliciously, “Because it only eats humans...”

Avery gasped. She could not stop the tremors that wracked her!

“Seeing as to how you have served our Mr. Foster, I won’t dig your eyes out, nor will I slice your fingers. This python is our gentlest punishment! The reason being, that it could easily swallow an entire human alive. Once you have been swallowed, you will shortly die. Unlike other forms of torture, you won't live for days. You will not be denied death..." the bodyguard whispered to Avery excitedly.

"Miss Tate. What did you say to Madam Rosalie? If you don't tell me, I will allow this python to have you. I won't let it swallow you in one go. I will make sure it bites you. One bite at a time. It will start with your face. You're so pretty, I'm sure you care a lot about your face!"

The bodyguard reached out and squeezed her small face.

Avery's face was stained with tears. She pushed his hands away with all her might and ran. She crashed into the wall next to her!

"Bloody hell!" The bodyguard was bewildered! He strode over and picked the unconscious Avery up!

"What's going on?" The other bodyguard heard the commotion and came over to check on the situation.

"She ran into the wall! Bloody hell! What a strong woman!" The bodyguard placed her on the floor and checked the wounds on her forehead.

Her head was bleeding profusely.

“Should we send her to the doctor?” The bodyguard was scared. “She won’t die just like that, right?”

If she died before he could get anything out of her, Elliot would definitely be mad at them. They would be the ones he would blame.

Elliot was in the mansion’s main hall. This was the third time he was looking at the clock. His personal bodyguard said, “Mr. Foster, Miss Tate is weak. I’m afraid that she might not withstand the punishment in the underground cellar.”

“I want her to suffer a bit!” Of course, Elliot knew that Avery was weak, but she was stubborn “I’m just afraid that they might lay it heavy on her.” The bodyguard continued,

“Why don’t I head down-“

Before the bodyguard could finish his sentence, Elliot furrowed his brows and strode toward the underground cellar!

Chapter 389

Splash!

Cold water hit Avery in the face. She came around!

The wound on her head was so painful she silently gasped.

“Not dead yet.” The bodyguard who splashed her with water threw the bucket aside. He said, ” We don’t see people dying in dramas from running into a wall, right? Hehe! No one dies that easily!”

“What should we do next? This woman is stubborn. If we don’t do something harsher, she won ‘t talk.”

The other bodyguard nodded.

Avery gritted her teeth and looked at them coldly. All of her fear in her was converted to a never-ending flow of resentment.

The more Elliot treated her this way, the more she would not tell him! Even if he skinned her with his bare hands! Even if she dies, she would never tell him who her children’s father is! Allowing the children to enter an orphanage was better than having the devil for a father!

The two bodyguards were talking amongst themselves in hushed tones. Then one came over, grabbed her with one hand, and dragged her forward.

“Miss Tate, come on. You’re so pretty! You could use that face of yours to find another rich man. You don’t have to torture yourself to death just because of this.

Tell us what you said to Madam Rosalie. As long as you tell us, we’ll let you go!”

said the bodyguard, threatening Avery.

Avery’s head started to spin. She started to see double. Although the crash just now was not fatal, it had still hurt her badly.

Avery was not afraid of death. Why would she be afraid of their threats?

Seeing her ice-cold expression and lowered gaze, told them that she was unfazed by their threats. The bodyguards gritted their teeth.

This woman really had to suffer before she would give in!

Elliot entered the underground cellar and strode toward the bodyguards.

“Where is Avery?!”

It was dim in the underground cellar, and Elliot’s darkened face looked even scarier!

The bodyguard immediately said, “Mr. Foster, this woman is intense! I first tried to scare her with the python, but she was so scared that she ran into the wall! But don't worry, she's not dead. She's still alive. We are using the freezing method right now. We'll freeze her first, then we'll burn her. We'll double her pain!"

When Elliot heard that she had run into a wall, he felt as if someone had stabbed him with a knife!

Avery had run into a wall! Was she seeking death?!

"Mr. Foster, don't worry. With a stubborn person like her, we will need to torture her for a few more days. Give us more time. Within three days, I guarantee that she will come clean!" said the bodyguard. Elliot's dark expression had given him the wrong impression.

Elliot was annoyed.

Bunch of idiots! They surely did not know how to gauge the gravity of the situation! He kicked the bodyguard and barked in a low voice, "Bring her out!"

The bodyguards were stumped. Did he find them to be too slow? Did he want to torture her himself?

They quickly opened the freezer and untied Avery.

The moment they opened the room, a bone-chilling, dry, cold air wafted out.

Elliot swallowed. A sliver of emotions flashed across his eyes. He did not know how long she was there! He did not know what had happened to her!

He will not admit that he regretted it, but he nearly drove himself crazy thinking about her! He thought of her laughter and her smile. He was still thinking of how warm her body was and her tender, small hands.

The bodyguards carried Avery over to Elliot.

“Mr. Foster! She has passed out from the cold, but she’s not dead yet! She is still breathing!” one of the bodyguards said.

Elliot’s gaze was sharp when he looked her over and saw that her hair and clothes were frozen!

Even the blood on her forehead was frozen! Her pale face stood in stark contrast to the fresh red of the blood.

Chapter 390

Avery looked like she was already dead.

Looking at her life hanging by the thread, Elliot asked himself if this was the outcome that he wanted!

Would her death relieve him? Then why was he even more heartbroken?

He picked her up from the floor. Her body was ice cold. Carrying her was like carrying a block of ice!

“Avery!” Elliot yelled hysterically, “I have not given you permission to die! You’re not allowed to die!”

The bodyguards heard other emotions besides hatred in his voice. There was anxiety and indignation too!

“What’s going on with Mr. Foster? Avery is not dead yet. Didn’t I tell him already?”

one of the bodyguards asked, stumped.

The other bodyguard replied, “I think Mr. Foster is very afraid that she might die.”

Elliot’s personal bodyguard looked at them. “You two have overdone it! If anything were to happen to Avery Tate, you two are finished!”

The two bodyguards were so frightened their faces turned green. “Mr. Foster agreed that we should take her down there! Also, we were gentle with her!

We

only used the python to intimidate her! It was she who crashed into the wall! If she had not done that, she would still be up and jumping!”

Elliot carried Avery to the big bed in the bedroom.

The doctor soon arrived!

The doctor cleaned the wound on her forehead and then said, “Take her wet clothes off and give her a hot shower. Once her body temperature returns

to normal, she should come around.

Mike was at Tate Industries. It was late in the evening, and he still could not find

her. As he could not contact Avery, he contacted Chad.

“F*ck! Did Elliot go nuts again! Did he kidnap Avery again!”

“Mr. Foster’s mother has passed away.”

Mike was stunned. “Are you joking?”

Chad replied, “Do you think I would dare joke about a matter like this?”

Mike said, “Oh, Avery went missing again! I’m going crazy! Elliot’s mom is dead, I don’t think he has the time to trouble Avery, right?”

“I don’t know. I’m going to Mr. Foster’s place right now. Shea is throwing a tantrum. He will probably not return for the next few days. Do you want to take Shea over to your place?”

Mike was speechless.

An hour later, Chad had brought Shea to Starry River Villa.

Mike roughly recounted the things that happened that day to Layla and Hayden.

Once the children processed the news, they asked, “Where’s Mommy? Where did she go!”

Chad adjusted the glasses on his nose and said to Mike, “Maybe Avery is with Mr.

Foster because he is not at the hospital.”

“That bad man! Why did he take my Mommy again?! I’m getting angry!” Layla huffed.

Shea was anxious and she blushed, “My Big Brother is not a bad person!”

“He took my Mommy away! If he is not a bad person, who is the bad person?!”

Shea did not believe that her big brother was a bad person, so she turned to her personal bodyguard, “I want to call Big Brother!”

The bodyguard held onto a phone as they looked for Elliot.

“Miss Shea is throwing a tantrum. She insists on speaking to you.”

Elliot accepted the phone from the bodyguard and said hello.

Upon hearing his voice, Layla immediately pouted and yelled, “You’re a bad person! Did you take my Mommy away! Don’t bully my Mommy! If you do, I’ll make sure Hayden will publish all the photos of you showering without wearing any clothes!”

Elliot furrowed his brows at Layla’s threats.

“If you dare to do that, I’ll kill your Mommy right now!”

He had no time to play games with these two brats! Thus, he said something vicious to put them in their place.

Behind him, on the bed, Avery slowly came around. She opened her eyes. They were unfocused, but she heard what he had just said.

Chapter 391

Avery should feel sad or upset, but no tears to her eyes. There was no reaction in her heart either.

There was only the splitting pain in her head. It was so excruciating that even breathing hurt. She wanted to get up, but her body was sore and aching.

She was having a fever. Her body was extremely hot, but she was cold.

When Elliot finished his call, he passed his phone back to the bodyguard. The bodyguard pointed at the bed.

Elliot looked. Avery's eyes were open, but there were no signs of life on her face.

She was awake, but she looked dead.

He hated her in this state! He wanted her to fight him!

Elliot strode over to the bed and grabbed her chin with his long slender fingers.

Her body was so hot that he immediately let go!

"Go get the doctor!" he sternly instructed the bodyguard. The bodyguard immediately left to fetch the doctor.

After the bodyguard left, Avery looked the other way. She did not want to see him.

Elliot was furious. He grabbed her chin once again, forcing her to look at him.

"Avery, did you think of what would happen to your children once you are gone?

They just called me."

Avery had thought of her children before she crashed into the wall.

If she died, Mike would raise the children. Tammy would occasionally visit them too. Wesley too...

She knew that her children would not lead miserable lives if she died. They would only lead miserable lives if they fell into his clutches. Her, death did not have much effect.

They would be affected, but only just a little. Her children would cry terribly, but when compared to them falling into his hands, a little disappointment meant nothing.

Avery's expression was calm. His question did not trouble her.

Elliot realized he had underestimated her! Avery was not afraid of death! What else could he use to aggravate her?

The doctor soon arrived. After taking her temperature, the doctor was going to drip her.

Elliot stood by the side, looking at the doctor attach the catheter.

“Mr. Foster, dinner is ready. Are you planning to have your meal now or later?” the bodyguard

asked.

Elliot strode out the door.

After inserting the catheter and checking that no one was around, the doctor said,

“Miss Tate, why are you making yourself suffer? This will not end well.”

Avery shut her eyes. She and Elliot were already at that stage. She could not change her mind, nor could she plead with him. She would rather die than bow down to him.

The doctor sighed and left the room.

Once the door was shut, Avery tugged the needle out of the back of her hand!

Blood oozed from her pale skin!

Half an hour later, Elliot brought some food in. He looked at the tube and needle.

Saline dripped from the needle.

At that instant, his turned ashen!

Avery truly wanted to die! If she were not having a high fever, she might have gotten out of bed, and jumped out of the window! She might have even thrown herself at the wall again!

“Avery, you want to die, but I won’t let you die!” He placed her dinner by the side of the bed Then, he took a tissue and wiped the blood off the back of her hand.

Avery closed her eyes and did not move. Elliot was stunned. He had an epiphany.

Then, he yelled her name, “Avery Tate!”

Chapter 392

Avery’s body was getting hotter, and her skin was getting redder! It looked like she was going to burn to death!

No matter how many times he said her name, Avery did not react!

His heart constricted tightly.

“Doctor!” Elliot rushed out of the room, searching for the doctor. The doctor quickly rushed over. When he saw the situation, he immediately said, “Mr. Foster, we have to stop her fever immediately. We either put her back on the drip, or we will have to administer medication. What do you want me to do?”

“She has already passed out. How is she going to take the medication? Am I to feed her with my mouth!”

Sweat beaded on the doctor’s forehead. “Then I’ll put her back on the drip.”

As the saline had pooled on the floor, the doctor had to replace the bottle before he replaced the catheter.

Elliot stood by the side of the bed, looking down at the unconscious Avery. He only wanted an answer from her! Why would she choose death over giving him the info he wanted?

At that thought, he was so heartbroken he wanted to strangle her himself!

This woman, other than causing him pain, what else could she do?

At the Starry River Villa, Layla cried until her eyes were red. She kept muttering that Elliot was a bad person.

Shea was like a child who had done something wrong. She stood to the side with her head hung low. She did not say anything.

She had never thought that her big brother would be so fierce. Elliot had never been that fierce with her. Why was he treating Avery so badly?

Chad was as equally stumped as Shea. He could understand the grief that Elliot was feeling with the loss of his mother, but why was Elliot taking it out on Avery?

“Mr. Foster must have his reasons for doing so,” said Chad to Mike as he adjusted his glasses. Mike was furious.

When Mike heard Chad’s voice, his head hurt. “Just leave!”

“Oh... then Shea stays with you for now?” Chad had to ensure Shea’s safety.

“Of course, she stays here! If Elliot dares touch a single hair on Avery, I’ll immediately dissect Shea!”

Chad replied, “Oh... Before they return, you must take good care of Shea! I’ll come again tomorrow.”

After Chad left, Mike carried Layla, “Lalya, baby, stop crying. Elliot was just trying to scare you because he’s afraid we would expose his ugly photos.”

Layla sniffled. She was a little angry. “Uncle Mike, I don’t like him anymore.”

“Uh, since when did you like him?” Mike was confused.

Layla said, “I used to like him in my dreams —”

“Oh, he must be a good person in your dreams, which was why you liked him, right?”

Layla nodded pitifully. She had hoped that her father was a good person.
She

hoped so badly to one day be reconciled with him. However, she had been disappointed time after time, and she no longer held this fantasy.

She had already come to terms with reality. She could not be reconciled with that bad person. She only wanted her mommy back!

It was ten o'clock at night when Avery's fever broke. It had taken three bottles of saline to finally break her fever.

She opened her eyes and looked at the unfamiliar room. Her memories slowly

came flooding back.

"Miss Tate, you're up?" An unfamiliar voice drifted to her. It was a nanny that Elliot

hired to look after her.

"You have not had any food the entire day, you must be hungry. There's oatmeal porridge here." The nanny unscrewed the flask and scooped some porridge out.

The aroma filled the room.

"Miss Tate, let me feed you!" Avery closed her heavy eyelids and turned her head

the other way. She refused. She did not want to talk to either Elliot or the people by his side.

If he would not let her go, she was going to die there.

The nanny sighed, put the bowl down, and went out to consult Elliot.

A moment later, Elliot's tall figure appeared in the room. He had already showered, and he was wearing a gray robe.

He walked over to the bed and looked at Avery's weary face. He threatened her fiercely," Avery, if you're not going to let the nanny feed you, I don't mind feeding you myself!" She gripped the sheets tightly, ignoring his threats!

Chapter 393

Elliot's face darkened terribly because of Avery's silent resistance!

Elliot indeed could force her mouth open and feed her spoon after spoon, but he was not going to do so!

Since she was refusing food, let her starve to death then!

He looked away and stormed out of the room!

After he left, she relaxed a little. Suddenly, a car honk came from outside the window.

Avery pricked her ears and listened to the sounds outside the window.
Many cars

pulled up in front of the mansion.

A moment later, a cacophony of sounds came from downstairs. Why were there

so many people here so late at night?

Why were they here at such a remote place?

Elliot had said that this was one of his holiday villas. Did he invite them there?

His mother had just passed, but not only was he not with her, but he was in a remote forest villa hosting a party?!

Just when she planned to get out of bed to head over to the window to have a look, the room door swung open.

The doctor entered with his case of medicine.

“Miss Tate, I hear you’re refusing food. Mr. Foster got me to come here to inject

you with some vitamins,” the doctor said with a sigh. “Why don’t you have some food? Don’t abuse your body. Although you have suffered quite a lot today, I can see that Mr. Foster still has feelings for you...”

“Ha! Feelings!” she thought.

Just because he did not kill her with his bare hands, that meant that he had feelings for her?

The doctor placed the bottle on the rack and pushed the needle into Avery. He stood by the side, guarding against any sudden movements.

Avery understood what he was doing. Thus, she said, “It’s late. Go and rest! I won’t pull it out.”

“Are you sure you won’t pull it out? If you do so again, Mr. Foster will blame it on me.”

“I won’t.”

Avery heard the sounds below getting clearer and clearer! Even if it was not a party, it was a huge gathering

As the host, Elliot must be greeting the guest downstairs. This was her chance.

“Miss Tate. I’m relieved that you are talking to me. When it’s time to remove the needle-” The doctor was about to tell her how he was going to remove the needle.

Before he could finish his sentence, she said, "I'll take it out myself."

"Oh, you do indeed know how to take it out, but violently..." The doctor teased and left.

After the doctor left, she immediately pulled the needle out and walked over to the window.

Downstairs, dozens of luxurious cars were parked outside. There were headlights shining nearby too! Some cars were coming over!

Avery did not know why the people were there. The night breeze blew by. Avery gripped the railings tightly. She thought back about the things that had happened that day. It was like a dream. It was dramatic and ridiculous.

That day was the closest she had ever been to death.

Previously, she had been extremely afraid of death because she wanted to bring her kids up and watch them grow into adults.

However, at that moment, she felt that it was luxurious to do so.

Everyone was sitting in the main hall downstairs. They were drinking and chatting.

"Elliot, we won't say much. Come, let's drink!"

Everyone raised their glass and drank.

“We haven’t gathered together for a long time, right?”

“About four to five years already! Everyone is getting busier! We have to find time to gather at least once a year in the future!”

Everyone was talking when a few bodyguards brought the barbecue rack and placed it in the middle of the hall.

“Are we having a barbecue tonight?”

“We’ll eat whatever Elliot prepared!”

“Hmm...”

Right at that moment, the two bodyguards brought supper out.

“Damn! We’re having this tonight!”

“Hahaha! What a surprise!”

Everyone looked at the barbecue feast excitedly. Avery silently walked down the stairs.

Chapter 394

When the bodyguard saw her coming down, they immediately reported it to Elliot.

Elliot got up from the sofa and looked at the staircase.

Avery was wearing his robe. It was touching the floor. The sleeves were a little long too.

She looked like a child wearing adult clothes wrapped in the huge robe.

He furrowed his brows. Should she not be on a drip at that moment? Why was she downstairs?

“Elliot, you have hidden a woman here!” Someone chuckled and teased when they saw Avery.

“He is a man! It would be weird if he didn’t have ladies! Haha!”

“Which family is this heiress from? Or is she someone you found just to have fun with?”

Elliot ignored everybody’s questions because Avery was walking toward them.

Did she not want to die? Why would she be willing to come down to meet his friends? What was she trying to do?

He strode over to her and blocked her path. He looked at her with dark stormy eyes. “Did you pull the needle out again!”

She stretched her hands out and pushed against his chest a little. “You invited friends over, can ‘t I join in?”

Join in? Hehe! Since she wanted to join in, he would let her do so!

He turned aside. Avery’s gaze naturally landed on the barbecue rack!

Her gaze turned cold. Her feet turned to jelly. She suddenly shuddered and retreated a few steps!

Their dinner that night was the python that had scared her out of her mind and made her run into the wall!

She could still remember how intimidating and alive it was when it opened its jaws. She never expected them to kill it, clean it, and serve it up as barbeque!

Looking at her terrified face, Elliot grabbed her by the wrist and led her to the sofa.

“Since you’re already here, then have a taste!” Elliot’s voice was low and hoarse with a hint of charm in it. It was as if he was talking about normal food.

Avery’s heart was beating wildly! Why did he kill the python? She did not dare to think much of it.

She was like a puppet under his control. He placed her on the sofa.

“Isn’t she Avery Tate of Tate Industries?” Someone had recognized her.

“Oh, I have heard of her before.”

“You two are amazing! I have never heard anything about you two!”

“Haha! I only started noticing her company because I heard she was young and pretty.”

Avery lowered her gaze and picked up a glass of wine.

Elliot grabbed her hand and stopped her. She had been on a drip to lower her fever. She could not consume any alcohol that day as the fluid used for the drip contained fever-reducing and anti-inflammatory drugs.

Taking away the glass of wine, Elliot signaled for the bodyguards to give her water instead.

“Just drink your own wine, don’t bother me,” Avery said, depressed. She got up from her seat next to him and sat opposite him.

Elliot furrowed his brows. He saw Avery sitting down next to a complete stranger.

She would rather sit with someone she did not know than with him!

“Elliot! Don’t worry! I won’t bully your little beauty! Hahaha!”

Elliot’s expressions darkened. He raised his glass and downed it in one go.

An hour later, the python was ready. Everyone started feasting.

Elliot headed to the washroom.

Avery looked at his back, picked up the glass of water, and took a sip.

A moment later, Elliot returned to the main hall from the washroom.

“Where’s Avery?” He asked and squinted, looking at the empty place on the sofa.

“She said she went to the washroom. Come, let’s continue drinking!” His friend replied and picked up the wine bottle, pouring Elliot more wine.

At two in the morning, Elliot went upstairs with the help of the bodyguard.

He walked over to Avery’s room and pushed the door open.

The room was empty! No one was there! Where did Avery go?!

Chapter 395

Elliot thought that Avery had gone to the washroom and then to her room. When he realized that she had gone upstairs, he stopped drinking.’

A thought suddenly flashed through his mind. Would Avery have... run away?!

The villa was encircled by the forest that was a hundred kilometers in radius.

How was she going to leave the forest when she was this weak?

He clenched his fists tightly, turned around, and prepared to head downstairs.

“Mr. Foster! I’ll go check the surveillance footage right away! I’ll see when she left!” When the bodyguard realized that Avery was gone, he immediately said, “It’s dark at night, and there are no street lights too. I’m sure she did not go far!”

“A bunch of idiots! You can’t even guard a woman properly!” Elliot snarled through gritted teeth!

“I’m sorry! I’ll get people to look for her right now! I promise we’ll bring her back by dawn!” The bodyguard swore with fear on his face.

Elliot instantly sobered up! His mind was extremely clear at that moment. He even had a strong premonition!

“She must have left before midnight! I realized she was gone after I returned from the washroom before midnight! She must have left then!” After his deduction, he said, “Go and check the surveillance footage! Someone must have helped her! If not, she couldn’t have left this building on her own!”

The bodyguard said, "I thought so too, but I did not dare to say anything."

The people in attendance were Elliot's closest friends. Elliot had known them before he got rich. Although later they did not interact much, they remained in contact.

On the ground floor, some were still drinking.

Elliot's gaze locked onto someone. Before Avery had vanished, she had been sitting next to him. Earlier on, he had thought nothing of it. He just thought that she had found a place to sit and left it at that. However, now that she was gone, it proved that her choice in seating partner was planned.

In other words, she might know that person.

"Nick, did you help Avery escape?" Elliot walked over to Nick and took the wine glass away from him.

Nick looked up with an indecipherable expression. He said honestly, "Yes."

The others looked at him.

"What's going on, Nick? Do you know Avery? Why did you help her escape? She belongs to Elliot!" said another member of their group.

"It's simple." Nick was drunk, and his eyes were red. "I owed her one. She got me to return the favor tonight. Elliot, I'm sorry! I don't like owing anyone anything. I would rather owe my brothers than owe an outsider a favor."

Elliot gripped the wine glass so tight it broke!

"You let her go, aren't you just asking her to die!" He gritted his teeth and barked,

"Don't you know how dangerous it is outside!"

Nick furrowed his brows and said unquestionably, "I know, but that is not for me to consider. She asked me to help her escape this mansion. She never asked me to help her escape the forest. Elliot, since you are asking questions, shouldn't you think about why she might want to risk her life in the forest rather than staying

here?"

Elliot's eyes were red with fury!

At that moment, the bodyguard who just finished checking the surveillance footage ran over and reported to him, "Mr. Foster, Miss Tate left from the back door! The path from the backdoor is quite steep! It'll be hard to walk! She is in such a weak state, I'm afraid it's bad for her!"

Once the bodyguard said that Elliot clenched his fists and stormed off in the direction of the back door!

He had reasons to believe that the reason she had chosen to escape at night was not so that she could get away, but rather so that she could escape life itself!

After Elliot and the bodyguards left, the atmosphere in the main hall still did not calm down.

"Nick, how did you owe Avery a favor? I have never heard you mention this before!" Someone sitting next to Nick asked curiously.

"Avery is just an ordinary entrepreneur...'

"She's not ordinary," Nick interrupted him. "A woman who could make Elliot care so much, how could she be ordinary?"

"I thought you only cared for her because of her face and body?"

"This is only one aspect of it. I'm telling you, Avery is no ordinary woman. She is also no ordinary entrepreneur, but I promised her that I will keep her secret, so I will not say anything more.” Nick took an empty glass and poured some wine before taking a sip.

“If she were to die tonight, then it would be a pity! Even if Elliot doesn’t kill me, he would still cut ties with me.”

Chapter 396

There was only the endless vast forest. There were many wild beasts in the forest. Even in the daytime, there is a chance that one might face an attack, but at night it was almost a guarantee.

Under the protection of the bodyguards, Elliot entered the unknown and terrifying forest.

He held the torch in his hand. The light penetrated the darkness, revealing a forest full of vines and branches. Desperation rose in his heart!

How did she dare?! How did she dare to step into the forest? Did she really think that she could leave this forest alive?

If she knew it was a road to death, why did she not turn back? Even if she had managed to escape the mansion, she could have just turned back? He would not have been that angry with her.

“Avery!” He swallowed and yelled out her name with a trembling voice!

After his yells, the bodyguards yelled too, “Miss Tate! We’re coming for you! If you hear us, please respond!”

The only thing that responded to their cries were the calls of the animals, the howling winds, and the rustling of the forest.

After advancing with difficulty for about twenty more minutes, the torch shone on a robe on the ground!

It was the robe that Avery was wearing!

That afternoon, after washing her up, he had no clothes for her to change into, so

Elliot had bundled her in his robe!

He had wrapped her in the robe himself! Why was it here? How did the robe wind up here?!

His heart was about to pop out. He walked over to the robe and picked it up!

“Mr. Foster, the robe is torn. There’s blood on it!” The bodyguard showed Elliot the place where the robe was torn and the bloodstains.

Elliot held onto the robe. His hands trembled!

She must have met a wild beast! If not, her clothes would not have been torn, and there would not have been bloodstains on them either.

Avery must have been injured. Also, she has nothing to cover her body. Even if she did not die from the attack, she would freeze to death without any clothes on her!

Elliot did not dare to continue to think about it.

“Mr. Foster, Miss Tate is injured. She could not have gone far. Let’s head forward to have a look. I’m sure we’ll find her!” said the bodyguard after he analyzed the situation.

Elliot’s eyes were sore. He sighed a little and walked deeper into the forest with a clenched fist!

After walking for another ten minutes or so, they saw a pale body curled up in the bushes.

When Elliot saw her pale body, illuminated by the cold beam of the torch, tears sprung to his eyes.

He never thought that he would let her end up in such a dangerous and precarious situation!

He loved her!

No woman on this earth fascinated him as much as her. He was obsessed with

her.

However, he had forced her into such a situation! The bodyguards remained in the same spot, not daring to proceed forward because Avery was not wearing any clothes.

They saw Elliot taking off his jacket and wrapping it around her. Then, he lifted her up.

The rain suddenly came pouring! The rain penetrated through the forest, falling on them mercilessly.

Chapter 397

They were soaking wet by the time they had reached the mansion. It was three in the morning.

A few of Elliot's friends were still drinking in the main hall. They were waiting for Elliot to return. When they saw him returning with Avery in his arms, they all got up from the sofa. They should have said something to lessen the awkwardness, but no one said anything.

Elliot was only wearing a thin t-shirt. He was soaked from the rain, so the t-shirt was clinging tightly to his body. Water dripped down his hair.

His deep amber eyes were filled with despair and darkness.

The woman in his arms was covered in his jacket. Only her pale and lifeless face could be seen. Her eyes were closed, and they looked as if they would never open again.

The scene at that moment was inexplicably sad and tragic!

Elliot carried Avery upstairs and vanished from everyone's sight.

After Rosalie's autopsy report came out, Henry sent it to Elliot immediately.

Rosalie did not die of poison or other injuries. It was determined that she fell to her death.

Henry realized that it would be a good time to bury Rosalie the next day.
After

Elliot's reply, Henry immediately informed close friends and family about the time

of the funeral.

At the Starry River Villa, Chad came to visit Shea.

Shea was well taken care of. After Shea's second surgery, she was much more intelligent than before. Although she still needed to be cared for, she was more independent than the average child.

"Mr. Foster's mother's funeral is tomorrow." Chad shared the piece of news
with

Mike. "He will attend the funeral. Perhaps, he would bring Avery back too."

Mike nodded. "Can you take me to the funeral?"

Chad looked at him in disbelief. "Only a few of the higher management received the invitation. I'm only a small assistant, what right do I have to bring other people? Also, why are you attending the funeral? If you dare make a fuss, don't you think the bodyguards will kill you on the spot?"

of course, Mike did not want to die, but he had been unable to reach Avery for two days. Not only was he sick of waiting, but the children were also getting more and more pessimistic.

If Avery did not return soon, he did not know what he was going to tell the children.

Hayden heard their conversation and he started thinking. He had to find a way to find his mommy! He must rescue her!

Rosalie's funeral was a grand occasion. Security guards surrounded the area, and it was tightly guarded.

At eight in the morning, Elliot's car arrived at the funeral place. He appeared in front of everyone dressed in all black.

Chad secretly texted Mike, (Mr. Foster came alone. He did not bring Avery along.)

Mike replied, (F*ck!)

[Don't worry, once the funeral ends, I'll ask him about her.]

[I'm waiting outside.]

(You're here?!)

[Hmm, I brought Big H and Shea with me.]

Chad had a bad feeling. (Why did you bring them here? Don't be reckless! Don't you dare think of using Shea to threaten Mr. Foster! He hates being threatened.

Also, there are many bodyguards here! Other than the ones you see, many bodyguards are stationed around places. You just can't see them. If you cause any trouble, you might not know who shoots you in the head!)

Mike replied, (I'm so touched. You actually care so much for me.)

Chad typed, (...)

[Big H wanted to come. I couldn't talk him into doing otherwise, so you don't meddle in this too.]

Chad was speechless. Was Hayden planning to create a scene at the funeral?

Chad's temple hurt. He wanted to report this to Elliot.

Chapter 398

However, when Chad saw Mike's messages, he held back Forget about it! He was not going to care about it! He was going to pretend as if he knew nothing. This time, Elliot was the one that crossed the line.

How could he take Avery away and not contact her family?

If Chad were Mike, he would be furious too.

Time passed, and it was almost eleven in the morning. Hayden did not cause a scene. Chad did not even see him.

He did not know what Hayden's plan was. Whatever his plan was, he might have already abandoned it.

After the funeral, the guests headed to the hotel for lunch.

Chad walked over to Elliot.

"Mr. Foster."

Elliot stopped and looked at him coldly.

Chad said awkwardly, "My condolences."

Elliot heard him and headed to the parking lot. Chad quickly chased after him and mustered the courage to ask, "Mr. Foster, is Miss Tate with you? Her children are worried about her safety-"

Elliot swallowed and said hoarsely, "She's not dead."

Chad was baffled. What sort of reply was that? She was not dead meaning she was alive but just not too well? Dying could be taken to mean not dead too.

Where was she, and what had happened to her?

Chad was in a daze, and Elliot was already in front of the black Rolls-Roice.

The bodyguard opened the door and said helplessly to Elliot. "Miss Shea insisted on waiting for you in the car."

Shea looked up at Elliot with her bright eyes. She said stubbornly, "Big Brother, I want to be with you. I'm going wherever you're going."

Elliot stood by the car door, looking at his sister's defiant face. He felt something stick to his throat.

Elliot entered the car and shut the door.

"Shea, I'm taking you home."

Shea's eyes reddened a little, and she shook her head.

"I still have something to do. Once I've settled the matter at hand, I'll return home to spend time with you," Elliot said to her while holding her hand.

"Big Brother, you're a good person, but why were you so fierce to Avery?"
Shea

was extremely disappointed when she said this. "I heard you saying you want to kill Avery. I'm scared..."

Elliot held her hand tightly and explained patiently, "I was just scaring the kids.

Shea, you are not a child, so you won't be tricked by this, right?"

Shea said, "Can you not bully Avery? If you bully her, Layla and Hayden won't play with me anymore."

Elliot's eyes darkened. "Shea, don't think too much about it. Just wait for me at home."

LUL

Although shea did not receive a satisfactory answer, she still nodded obediently.

After Elliot sent Shea home, he quickly returned to the car. The black Rolls-Roice was like a flying phantom, racing off to the north.

In the mansion in the forest, Avery was lying on the huge white bed. She slowly opened her eyes.

When she had escaped the night before, she bumped into a wolf in the forest. If it were not for Nick giving her a sharp dagger when he helped her escape, she would perhaps have been devoured by the wolf.

She never would have guessed that one day she would fight off a wolf with a dagger in her hand in the forest.

She was lucky. The wolf bit her once, but she had also stabbed the wolf. It was considered a draw.

After she had stabbed the wolf, it fled. She had passed out because she had lost too much blood.

Before passing out, she was so sure she was going to die. She never thought that she would be still alive...

The scenes of the day before ran through her mind. She looked at the room which did not seem unfamiliar to her. A question rose in her mind. Was Elliot the one who had carried her back the night before?

Chapter 399

Once the bodyguards realized Elliot's true feelings for Avery, they did not dare to say anything bad about her.

Elliot heard him and entered the mansion. He saw the nanny carry a bowl of porridge.

She was just about to head upstairs when she saw him.

"The doctor made me cook something light for Miss Tate," she informed him.

Elliot took over the bowl of porridge from the nanny's hands and headed upstairs. He carried the bowl and approached the side of her bed.

When Avery saw Elliot coming, she did not react. However, her chest felt a little tighter.

"Open up." He scooped a spoonful of porridge and brought it closer to her mouth.

"Avery, if you still want to see your children and get your revenge on Wanda, then open your mouth!"

Avery opened her mouth, but she did not do as he expected.

"I'll eat it on my own."

Her feverish voice was hoarse, but the defiance in her bones was as strong as ever.

Chapter 400

Elliot gritted his teeth and gazed coldly at her. He placed the bowl of oatmeal down and helped her up. Then he arranged two pillows behind her for her to lean against. He placed the bowl back into her hands.

Avery accepted the oatmeal, but, as she was about to pick the spoon up, her left hand that was holding the bowl suddenly fell limp and powerless. Her hands shook, tipping the bowl onto the covers.

Everything spilled.

Avery looked at the spilled oatmeal in shock. She pursed her lips.

Elliot's heart broke at the sight. She had not done it on purpose. He knew that she had not done it on purpose. Avery truly wanted to eat on her own, but she lacked the strength needed to even hold a bowl.

Before Avery's tears could fall, Elliot bundled the dirty covers away

"Avery, you will get better. Don't cry!" He had intended to comfort her, but what came out sounded more like a stern lecture.

He took a deep breath, wanting to explain, but Avery had already laid back down with her back turned toward him.

Elliot did not hear Avery crying, but he knew that she was. He took a fresh duvet from the closet and covered her with it.

“I’ll get the nanny to cook another bowl for you,” Elliot said in a low, depressive tone. He sat by the side of the bed, gazing at the back of her head.

Avery shut her eyes and said nothing. She suddenly felt extremely dizzy. It was probably due to the loss of blood.

Once she fell asleep, Elliot exited the room. He had not slept last night, and now his head hurt terribly.

He entered his room and caught up on some sleep. About an hour after Elliot fell asleep, the back of the hill suddenly caught fire.

All of the bodyguards in the mansion rushed to put out the fire.

Hayden, wearing a backpack, appeared in front of the mansion. He had hidden in the trunk of Elliot’s car.

The bodyguards and servants had gone to put out the fire. The mansion was completely empty, with not a single person to be seen.

Looking out from the spacious main hall, Hayden could not find a guest room or the main bedroom. He could only see the kitchen and the servants’ bedrooms.

Chapter 401

When Elliot saw Hayden, he thought he had somehow entered the wrong room. Why was Hayden here? How did he get here?

Elliot realized that this kid would always surprise him.

Of course, in this case, the surprise was not a delightful one.

“Why is my Mommy injured?” Hayden stood by the side of the bed, his eyes cold as he questioned his father.

Hayden had seen that Avery’s forehead was wrapped in bandages. She must have been injured, which was why it had been bandaged.

Also, when he had called out to her, Avery had not reacted. He suspected that she might not be sleeping, but, instead, had passed out.

However, he had no choice but to wait for answers. He could not carry her away, nor could he treat her.

Elliot ignored Hayden’s question. He looked at the small child condescendingly.

“How did you come here? Who else came with you?”

“I’m alone!” Hayden was not afraid. The resentment in his eyes gradually grew.

“You hurt my Mommy! I will never forgive you!”

Elliot snickered at Hayden’s threats. “What are you planning to do? Don’t think that your little tricks will work on me every time! Hayden, if your last name hadn’t been Tate, how long do you suppose I’d let you get away with this?”

Hayden had on a disgusted expression. “I don’t even want to see you! You’re the one who always comes looking for trouble with us!”

“I’m looking for trouble? Your mother and I knew each other long before you were born! Our matters have nothing to do with you!” Elliot looked at the contempt on Hayden’s face. His mood took a turn for the worse.

“You cold-blooded, evil person! My mother’s matters are my matters!”

“Cold – blooded?” Elliot yelled, “You don’t know anything, you stupid brat! Say that again, I dare you!”

Hayden was incensed. The fear in him had vanished. “I might not know anything, but I know that you are a cold-blooded, evil jerk! You’re not only cold blooded, you’re sick too!”

A vein in Elliot’s forehead popped. His gaze turned frigid. He swallowed before hissing, "What did you say?"

"Didn't you say that I don't know anything?" Hayden looked smug.

"You think that because you're sick! You're not a normal person! That's why you keep bullying my Mommy! My Mommy will never like you! Layla and I will never like you! No one likes you!"

The year before, when Layla had found herself in Elliot's study, she had returned home with a dark red box. In it had been a diagnosis report. It had been Elliot's diagnosis report.

Hayden had not understood the words on it, but, as he had been curious about the contents, he searched the Internet for the definition of every word. In the end, he understood.

The medical diagnosis stated that Elliot has a mental condition!

The laws in Aryadelle state that if a patient with a mental condition kills someone, it is not considered a crime.

Hayden had wanted to investigate Elliot's background a little deeper, but he had found nothing on the internet.

So this was the one secret of Elliot's that Hayden knew.

Chapter 402

The person lifting Hayden was Elliot!

Elliot was strangling Hayden!

Avery must be dreaming! If not, why was Hayden there? This was not the first time she had had a nightmare like this.

Five years ago, Elliot had declared that he would strangle any child of his that

Avery gave birth to, and ever since then, Avery had often had nightmares of that moment.

She had dreamt about how Elliot used an assortment of methods to torture her children to death.

A scene was just like the one in front of her eyes, She had dreamt of this scene countless times!

The only difference from the dream was that the scene in front of her was extremely real.

As Hayden was struggling with all his might, his bag had fallen to the floor with a loud thud!

Avery blinked. A switch in her body was activated. Her blood was boiling!

It was not a dream! It was not a dream!

“Elliot! Let go!” she yelled. She trembled and wanted to get up from the bed.

Due to the injuries on her leg, she could not get down from the bed normally.

After struggling for a short while, she fell to the ground in a tangle of limbs and sheets!

Her eyes were hot and wet. She gripped Elliot’s pant sleeve tightly. Her voice was angry and sad. “Elliot! You cannot do this! You can’t! He is your s—Cough!

Cough!”

Avery was so agitated she started coughing terribly. She coughed up blood!

Blood stained the corner of her mouth and splashed onto Elliot’s clothes too.

Elliot suddenly saw her miserable face. He loosened his grip.

Hayden fell to the ground. With a blue face, he panted heavily and crawled over to Avery.

“Mommy!” Hayden hugged Avery tightly. Tears fell. “Mommy, are you alright?”

When Elliot was strangling Hayden, he had not cried a single tear despite knowing that he was about to die.

However, when he saw Avery coughing blood, Hayden had lost it. Avery let go of Elliot’s clothes. She took a deep breath and hugged her son. “Hayden, are you alright? Are you alright?” Avery kept muttering. All she could think about was how Hayden would have died if she had woken a second later.

“Mommy, I’m fine! You’re bleeding! Why are you bleeding!” Hayden reached out and tried to wipe away the blood from the corner of her mouth

Avery held his little hand and let out a sigh of relief “Why did you come? Who sent you? Was it Mike? Where is he?”

Avery wanted Hayden to leave as soon as possible! Elliot was too dangerous!

She could not let the incident that happened a moment ago happen again!

Hayden shook his head and lowered his gaze. “I came alone. Layla and I were worried about you, so I came.”

Avery hugged Hayden tightly. Her face was no longer cold and emotionless.

When Elliot saw how she had finally returned to life, he felt unhappy!

He strode out of the room.

A moment later, the doctor rushed over. The doctor pulled Hayden to the side before carrying Avery back to the bed.

Hayden stood by the side of the bed and saw how heavily bandaged Avery's legs were.

Not only was her forehead injured, but her legs were too.

What did his mommy go through to end up like that?

"Elliot that jerk! How dare he hurt Mommy like this!" thought Hayden.

Hayden wiped away the tears from the corner of his eyes and pressed the red button on his watch!

Chapter 403

The red button was an alarm button. It was connected to Mike. If Hayden pressed the button, it would send Mike his location. Mike would also call the police if he pressed the button. If Hayden had not been forced to act, he would not have gone up against Elliot! Elliot made him do it.

“Hayden...” After Avery was in bed, she anxiously called out to him.

Hayden immediately came over to her bed and held her hand. “Mommy, don’t be afraid, I’m here.”

Avery looked anxious and said to him, “Hayden, I can’t really move right now. I’ll return home once I’m better. When Elliot comes by later, I’ll get him to arrange for a driver to send you home. You have to be good and listen” Hayden frowned. “Mommy, don’t ask him for help! I want to go back home with you! I promised Layla that I would bring you home!”

“I can’t move right now,”

“I’ve already called the police. They will bring us home.”

Avery’s brows fluttered. She looked behind Hayden. Elliot was standing by the door!

He had overheard what Hayden had said a moment ago. Avery immediately pulled Hayden closer to her. Hayden did not understand Avery’s reaction, he looked behind him in the direction in which his mother was looking at.

When he saw Elliot's cold face, Hayden said loudly, as if he was afraid that no one would hear him, "I've called the police!"

"Hayden, stop talking!" Avery was afraid that Hayden would aggravate Elliot.

The bruise on Hayden's neck constantly reminded her that she could not be reckless before leaving this place! She could die here, but she could not let Hayden die here!

Elliot entered with a darkened expression.

"Don't you dare test my patience!" He looked at Hayden's face and said slowly and clearly," Leave! If not, I'll throw you in the forest to feed the wolves!

Avery's breathing turned heavy. "Elliot! He is only a five-year-old child! Why are you so violent with children!"

"I don't like children! Especially this son that you adopted! I hate him the most!"

"He is only worried about me, so he came looking for me! If that is wrong, then it's my fault!" Avery choked and sobbed, "Send someone to send him home! I've already spoken to him. He won't come again!"

"Didn't he call the police? The police will naturally send him home!" Elliot said coldly. He turned to look at Hayden.

“The fire at the back of the hill. You did it, right?” Hayden looked up.

“Yes!”

“Heh! Even if you didn’t die by my hands today, you’ll be in prison in the future!”

said Elliot before he left.

The doctor hid in the corner, not daring to say a single word.

After Elliot had left, he approached them with a bottle of medicine.

“Miss Tate, is this your son?” The doctor was trying hard to find something to talk about. “How amazing! He could actually come all the way here.”

Avery took a deep breath and said, “Doctor, please help treat the bruises on his neck, thank you.”

Then only the doctor noticed the bruises on Hayden’s neck.

“Oh, okay. How did this happen?”

Avery did not reply. Hayden also pursed his lips, looking cold.

The doctor coughed dryly. “Kid, I can see that you hate Mr. Foster, but he won’t hurt your mother. The injury on your mother’s leg was because a wolf bit her in the forest.”

“Then, what about her forehead?” Hayden asked.

Before the doctor could reply, Avery said, “Hayden, I did it to myself.”

She did not want to intensify the resentment between Hayden and Elliot.

Hayden did not have the power to fight back at that moment. Offending Elliot would only get him killed.

Chapter 404

The incident that day was a painful lesson! Avery could not let her son directly go up against Elliot anymore.

“But you wouldn’t get injured for no reason. It must be him...” Hayden deduced, furrowing his brows.

“I wanted to see you and Layla badly last night, so I ran out alone. But I met with a wolf on the way,” Avery explained. “Go tell Uncle Mike and Layla that I’m fine. I don’t want them to worry about me, okay?”

Hayden nodded, not fully convinced.

“Mommy, are you really not coming back with me? The police can take us home.”

“My leg hurts badly. I’ll return home once it gets better.”

“Oh, Mommy, don’t run around. If the outside is so dangerous, just stay indoors.

We will find a way to rescue you.”

Avery nodded in relief. “Hayden, I’m very happy that you came to look for me, but, if there are any more situations like this in the future, don’t come. You’re still so small. If anything were to happen to you, I’d be very sad!”

Hayden said stubbornly, “If something were to happen to you, what would happen to me and Layla? If there is a next time, I’ll still come looking for you.”.

Avery’s eyes grew hot and wet. “There won’t be the next time.”

“Mommy, please stay further away from him in the future... He is sick.”

Avery thought that Hayden only said that because Elliot had almost strangled him to death.

“He won’t harm me. You and Layla need to stay away from him. Hayden, I told you and Layla that last year, didn’t I? Don’t go too close to him. Were you not listening to me?”

Hayden lowered his head.

“You and Layla are my most precious darlings. My biggest wish in life is to see you and your sister grow up healthy,” Avery murmured. “So you have to remember what I told you.”

Hayden nodded, depressed.

An hour later, the police arrived at the mansion in the forest. Hayden got into the car.

“Big H, where is your mother?” Mike had come with the police. All that had happened after the police had spoken to Elliot’s bodyguard was that the police had escorted Hayden to the car.

Just like that?

“Mommy’s leg was injured. She can’t move right now.” Hayden sounded a little down. He had wanted to take Avery home.

“How did your mom get hurt? Is it serious?” “She was bitten by a wolf.” Mike scanned his surroundings. “Damn! Wolves? Are there wolves here? Is the wolf actually Elliot in disguise?” Hayden was speechless.

“Mr. Foster’s bodyguards have told us that Miss Tate went out late at night and was bitten by a wolf. She is being cared for by a doctor. Once she heals, they will send her home,” the policeman said.

Mike exclaimed, “This is preposterous!” Then he saw the bruise on Hayden’s neck. “Big H, what happened to your neck? Who did that to you?”

Hayden did not want to say. His Mommy had got him to quickly leave the place and never see Elliot again. He did not want to disappoint her.

If the next time Elliot saw him and thought of killing him again, who was going to look after his Mommy and Layla in the future?

“Elliot, that bastard! How dare he strangle you! Big H, don’t worry, Avery will never be with him!” Mike said angrily.

Hayden’s eyes reddened. He had almost been killed by his biological father. It caused him quite some trauma. After all, he was only a five-year-old child.

In the mansion, Avery was lying in bed, being dripped.

Elliot was sitting in the corner of the room, smoking.

From the corner of her eyes, she saw his blurry face through the smoke. “Elliot, have you ever killed someone?” Avery asked hoarsely after a moment’s hesitation.

Chapter 405

When His Eyes Opened by Simple Silence Chapter 407

“Just get well. If he does not release you after a week, I’ll give the police another call,” growled Mike. “I already know what happened.”

Avery asked, “How did you find out?”

“Chad told me about it. He did not believe that his boss was a jerk, so he went to investigate it.

Avery smiled 25 bitterly.

Mike asked, “Is it because his mother found out about the children’s identity?”

“Hmm.”

He continued, “I knew this would be the case. You wouldn’t tell him about it, so he lost it.”

“Hmm.”

“You silly woman! If I were you, I would not have allowed my sorrow to get the better of me! So what if you had told him? Could he really kill Layla and Hayden?”

I don't believe it! I don't think he would be as cruel as to kill his own children! The two children owe him nothing!"

Avery said, "The current situation is bearable, and I don't want to risk⁴⁹ it!"

"Fine. You must call me once a day for the next few days, if not, I'll call the police," said Mike. His voice was firm and unyielding.

"I got it." Avery felt much more relaxed after the call with³⁵ Mike.

She felt as if she had been living a nightmare for the past two days. It was a never-ending nightmare. When one ended another began.

After an hour or so, the nanny came to clean her up.

"Miss Tate, Mr. Foster bought new clothes for you." The nanny showed Avery the clothes." They are all branded! He also instructed that I get you cleaned up."

At first, Avery did not move, but then she slowly tried to get off the bed.

"Miss Tate, are you trying to head to the bathroom? Mr. Foster has instructed me to wipe you down. Just lie in bed. I'll clean you up-"

"No. I'll go wash." Avery furrowed her brows. "Can you get a walking stick?"

A moment later, she returned not with a walking stick but with Elliot.

The nanny stood next to her and said, "Miss Tate, the doctor advised you to remain in bed.

Walking around might aggravate your injury, and it will affect your recovery..."

It appeared that the nanny was unaware that Avery was a doctor and that she knew all about the recovery of her wound.

However, under Elliot's gaze, Avery silently swallowed and laid back down.

The nanny immediately brought a basin of water and a wet towel, helping Avery clean herself.

After the wipe down, the nanny said, "Miss Tate, I've made some clam chowder, should I bring a bowl up for you?"

Avery replied, "Please secretly bring it up. Don't let him see it." She did not want Elliot to feed her again.

It was not that he could not feed her well, but rather, she did not want to see him.

The nanny replied, "Okay. There are quite a few people here tonight. I don't think he will notice me.”

Avery said, “There are guests again?”

The nanny hesitated for a while before coming clean, “They are the same guests from the night before, and there are a few ladies here as well.”

Avery did not pursue the topic. She could not care what Elliot did so long as he did not touch her children. Anything else he did would not get a reaction from her.

After consuming the soup, she slept soundly.

She did not think that the next few nights would be filled with entertainment, parties, and alcohol.

She was woken every night by the noise, and every time she would wonder to herself, “Did his mother not just pass away?”

Was he celebrating his mother’s death, or was he using women and alcohol to numb the pain?

Her leg did not hurt after three days of bed rest.

That night, she was once again woken by the noise. She opened her eyes and looked around the darkroom.

After a while, she heard her door being pushed open. She immediately turned to the door in alarm.

A huge figure entered the room. He looked familiar and dangerous. He was reeking of alcohol, and soon the room was drenched in its scent.

Chapter 407

When His Eyes Opened by Simple Silence Chapter 408

She immediately flicked a switch and the light flooded the room.

He was blinded by the sudden light. Filled with sudden annoyance, he slammed the door shut.

Avery looked at him with fear.

His eyes were red from the alcohol. After slamming the door, his long, slender fingers impatiently unbuttoned his shirt.

Avery immediately realized what he intended to do. She was so frightened, that she did not dare breathe.

“Elliot! You’ve entered the wrong room!” She tried to snap him to his senses. “This is my room!”

He stared at her as he walked to the bed. While he walked, he removed his shirt and tossed it to the floor.

“I’m not drunk.” He crawled up the bed and grabbed her injured leg. “Don’t move thiszd leg.”

Avery could not speak. What he said sounded true. He did not appear drunk. He knew she was hurt; why did he want to torture her?!

His warm lips landed on her49 neck.

Avery smelled the thick, cloying scent of foreign perfume on him. She instantly furrowed her brows.

A few days ago, the nanny said that there was a group of young and pretty ladies at the villa. Those people had stayed there for three days. They had not left the villa during that 35 time.

The foreign perfume Avery smelled on him should be from one of the women in the group.

Even with his shirt off, the scent of perfume was still strong.

Avery pushed his head away in disgust. She said coldly, “Don’t touch me!”

She had interrupted him, and he glared at her.

“You have the scent of another woman on you!” Avery could not control her anger.

“You’re a filthy man! Don’t touch me!”

She shoved him away using both her hands.

After three days of rest, she had recovered some of her strength, and she had almost succeeded in pushing Elliot off the bed.

Her words and actions aroused a beastly desire in him.

Supporting himself on one hand, he swiftly undid his belt. Initially, he had approached only with the intention of making out with her. He had not intended to go the full nine yards.

However, now, he had to punish her!

“Didn’t you call me a monster? Have you ever seen a monster who isn’t dirty?”

His voice was hoarse. He was breathing hard. He grabbed her chin and jerked her face up, forcing her to look at him. “I’m the filthiest man on earth! But that does not stop me from wanting you!”

He had her pinned down, and she could not resist or move.

Tears silently fell from the corner of her eyes. She looked at his face. It was blurry yet clear at the same time!

“Off! Turn off the lights!” she yelled hysterically.

Seeing her anger propelled him to deny her requests.

However, the tears at the corner of her eyes pierced his heart! He flicked the switch, plunging the room in darkness once more.

The room was dark, and the only thing he could hear was her silent sobs, and his heavy breathing

A long moment passed, and the violent storm passed. Elliot began to breathe more calmly.

He lay down next to her and fell into a dead slumber. She swiped away the tears from the corner of her eyes with her hand.

Then, she shoved him to the side. He lay on his side, next to her. His long arms curled around her waist. It was as if this was the most natural thing in the world.

How comical! He was probably not drunk, and neither had he lost his senses!

Even when he was at his craziest, he still remembered that her leg was injured!

Right from the beginning, he placed her injured leg aside. Thus, at that moment, her entire body was sore, but her injured leg felt much more relaxed.

Avery found it hard to stay calm.

Other than the scent of their bodies and sweat, there was also the scent of foreign perfume lingering in the air.

Avery's body stiffened. A terrifying thought popped into her mind – she was going to kill him! That way, she would no longer be in pain. Her two children would be safe too! Once this thought appeared, it spread to every nerve in her body. She could not stop its spread.

Chapter 408

Avery reached under the pillow and drew out the dagger!

Nick had given her a dagger when she had made her escape. She was to use it to protect herself.

When Elliot had rescued her, she still had the dagger in her hands. Initially, Elliot had wanted to take the dagger; he was afraid that she might try to commit suicide with it. However, Avery demanded that he give it to her.

Once she had the dagger back, she had stored it under her pillow. The dagger had saved her life before, and it was meaningful to her, so she kept it.

However, never once did she think he would humiliate her like he had! He had crushed her dignity, and she completely lost it! At that moment, all she wanted to do was kill him and then kill herself.

She would kill him, then kill herself!

She was a doctor. She knew where to stab for a quick death!

Avery grabbed the dagger, and she began to select a vein. She looked at his face closely

With the dim light of sunset, she could vaguely see his handsome face.

His eyes were shut, and he was sleeping soundly. The sheets did not cover his neck, and it called out to her..

Avery lifted the dagger with trembling hands.

All she needed to do was make one move, and in half an hour, she would be free!

Just as the dagger was in line with his throat, she lost her nerve.

Did she really want to kill him? Did he truly deserve to die?

By killing him, she would die too. Could she bear to abandon her two children?

Thoughts flooded her mind, and her eyes felt sore. She did not want to die. She could not kill him, but she also could not bear to stand his endless harassment!

Reducing him to a vegetable was the best thing she could do!

However, Avery was not confident that she would be able to turn him into a vegetable without killing him. Her breath came out in heavy pants.

She could not go through with the plan! She slowly calmed down.

As she was about to lower the dagger, Elliot opened his eyes.

He saw her holding the dagger above him. He did not need an explanation to

He grabbed her hands that were clutching the dagger.

Avery did not expect Elliot to suddenly wake up! She was scared half to death.

She wanted to explain herself, but her lips merely quivered and no words came out.

“Are you trying to kill me!?” He looked at her. His voice was rough, and there was a tremble in it. “Avery, are you trying to kill me?”

Avery felt as if her wrist was about to shatter under his grip!

“Elliot, let go!”

“Are you trying to kill me to avenge your son!” Elliot could not hear Avery. He was immersed in his endless grief.

Avery could no longer hide nor explain herself.

“Yes! I want to kill you! Elliot! I have had enough of you torturing me! I can’t live like this anymore!” Avery cried, spilling everything.

“Okay... Okay...” Elliot muttered. He gripped her hands tightly in his and directed the dagger to his heart. “Here. Stab right into it!”

Elliot was not wearing a shirt. His hands were strong!

Avery saw the tip of the dagger cutting through his skin. Blood trickled out!

She was so frightened she sobbed, “Let go! Elliot, let go! I won’t kill you! I don’t want to kill you! I don’t want to do it anymore!”

“What are you afraid of? That I’ll turn into a ghost and haunt you?” He pressed the dagger deeper into his chest. Pain spread through him. His voice became a low rasp, "No, I won't... I won't look for you... Avery. The next life... I won't look for you anymore..." Avery was scared out of her wits! She yelled out hysterically,

"Someone! Help !"

Chapter 409

Avery's screams brought the bodyguard, who was standing guard outside, bursting into the room!

The lights came on the moment the door to the room flew open:

The bodyguard was bewildered at the sight that met him.

"Doctor! Quick, go get the doctor!" The bodyguard yelled behind him before he sprinted to the 25 bed.

Avery cried, "Get his hand off! Quickly get his hand off!"

The bodyguard had thought that Avery was the one who was trying to kill Elliot, however, it took him quite a bit of force to pry Elliot's hand from the 96 dagger.

It was clear that it was Elliot who was gripping the dagger and trying to kill himself.

In other words, Elliot was committing suicide.

Once the bodyguard managed to pry Elliot's hand off the dagger, Avery immediately got off the bed.

The doctor rushed over with his medical suitcase.

Avery immediately snatched his suitcase and ran over to the bed to stop Elliot's bleeding!

The doctor was stunned!

"How did Avery run so quickly? Have her legs healed?" he wondered.

"She snatched the medical suitcase! She snatched the medical suitcase!" he realized.

The doctor came to his senses and quickly walked over to the bed.

He was shocked to see the dagger protruding from Elliot's chest. He was also shocked by how red the sheets were.

"Uh, uh... uh!"

The bodyguard grabbed Avery's arm with one hand, trying to pull her away, but she shrugged him off with force!

"Miss Tate, are you sure you can do it? Don't delay his treatment!" The bodyguard furrowed his brows, not trusting her.

Avery's eyes reddened. She cried in a hoarse voice, "I can stop the bleeding!"

Her voice made Elliot cough suddenly. He had regained consciousness.

He saw Avery. Her face was covered with tears, and she was clutching a medical suitcase in her hand.

He stretched out his hand, trying to push her away. He wanted to die! Life was nothing but pain. Dying would end everything.

"Hold him down! All of you hold him down!" Avery pushed Elliot's hands away and yelled at the bodyguard with tears in her eyes.

When the bodyguard heard what she said, he immediately pinned Elliot's hands down.

Elliot was so furious he coughed a mouthful of blood. "How dare you!"

The bodyguard was scared half to death, and he let go of Elliot. Avery coldly looked at the bodyguard, "Do you want him to die! Hold him down!"

Of course, the bodyguard did not want Elliot to die, so he obeyed Avery.

“I’m sorry, Mr. Foster. You’re bleeding too much. Let Miss Tate stop your bleeding!

Once your wound is dressed, we’ll immediately send you to the hospital!”
The

bodyguard explained apprehensively

Elliot was breathing heavily. He looked at Avery resentfully. “Don’t pretend to cry. I won’t send anyone to take revenge on you on my behalf. Once I’m dead you can live in peace,”

Avery ignored Elliot. She grabbed the hilt of the dagger with both hands.

“Elliot, what happens next might hurt a little. Bear with me!” She inhaled and looked at him.

Elliot’s face was pale and weary from all the blood he lost!

His eyes were cold and filled with despair. They were wet with tears, though no tears escaped them.

He had always been that way. He only showed his strongest side.

Avery gritted her teeth and yanked the dagger out! Instantly, blood splattered everywhere!

She immediately began to compress the wound. Satisfied with the slower blood flow, she applied some medication and bound the wound.

When she finished the emergency dressing, she looked at him once again. She did not know when he had passed out.

The thorns around him had wilted, leaving him fragile. "Quickly, send him to the hospital!" Avery took a deep breath and yelled in a hoarse voice.

Chapter 410

The bodyguard and doctor immediately took Elliot away.

Avery sat on the bed, hugging her knees close to her, sobbing loudly.

Time drew her deeper into the night, clearing her mind. She could hear the regret screaming in her heart.

She heard the whirring and rumbling of the helicopter on the rooftop. Soon, it disappeared into the night.

She heard footsteps outside her door, but she did not look up. She did not care who entered her room.

The individual walked over to her bed and covered Avery with a clean set of covers. He picked up the dagger still covered in 96 blood.

“Miss Tate. I gave you this dagger to protect yourself, not commit murder,” Nick

said helplessly, “I have to take this dagger back.”

Avery sobbed out loud. “I did try to kill him, but I did not dare to dozd it.”

“Well, you did provoke him,” Nick said calmly. “The result was the same as stabbing the dagger into his heart yourself. What difference does it make?”

Avery was suddenly at a loss for words by Nick’s49 questions.

“Your mother passed away last year, right? You should know when our close ones

pass away, that makes us sensitive and fragile.” Nick lit a cigarette, holding
it

between his fingers. “His mother passed away, so we came here to be with
him.

He had asked us to leave tomorrow. Maybe, he found us too rowdy.”

Avery closed her eyes and looked at the bloody bed in a35 daze.

“I don’t know what love and hatred that lies between the two of you, but I know that he has eyes only for you. No other woman has caught his eyes. We even found a bunch of beautiful women for him, but not once did he look at them.

And

all of them are prettier than you, and their bodies are better than yours too... So why do you think he came looking for you? Don't you understand?"

Avery took a deep breath. "I don't love him anymore."

"Oh..." Nick looked at her before picking up the cigarette. He inhaled the cigarette and exhaled a thick fog of smoke. "Then, why are you crying? Didn't he say even if he died, he would not bother you?"

Avery was speechless.

"Could you have been frightened by the blood? Don't lie to me. The amount of blood you've seen is more than what we see in a year's worth of fighting," said Nick "It's late. I don't bother you anymore."

After Nick left, the nanny came in with a shocked expression.

"Miss Tate... do you want to sleep in another room tonight? I'll tidy the room up."

Avery stopped crying. Her tone was cold. "I'll stay here."

The nanny took a clean set of sheets and helped Avery get off the bed.

"Miss Tate, the wound on your leg might have opened. There is blood coming out,” said the nanny. “But the doctor isn’t here.”

Avery lowered her gaze. The dressing was indeed red. It might be Elliot’s blood, but it might be hers too.

Her injury hurt a lot, but she did not want to deal with it.

After changing the sheets on the bed, the nanny helped Avery into it. Avery lay down.

When the nanny left, she switched off the light.

Avery opened her eyes and looked around the dark room. Her mind kept replaying the incident that happened a moment ago.

Hurting others could easily be explained away by his violent nature, but the harm he inflicted on himself could not.

“Lunatic!

“He is a madman!” she thought.

Avery’s tears kept falling.

Time passed by second after second. In a blink of an eye, it was morning.

There was a knock on the door, and the nanny entered bringing in breakfast.

Seeing how Avery was still sleeping, the nanny took Avery’s breakfast away with her. Avery was not asleep. She had not slept the entire night.

After the nanny left, Avery opened her reddened eyes and turned on her phone.

She did not know what had happened to Elliot after they had taken him away.

She did not know who to contact, so she began looking up news articles related to him.

Avery entered (Elliot Foster) in the search bar and soon, news related to him popped up!

[President of Sterling Group, Elliot Foster, Rushed to the Hospital by Helicopter in the Early Morning! Serious Condition Suspected! (7 Hours Ago)]

[Breaking News! President of Sterling Group, Elliot Foster, Suffered a Cardiac Arrest! Died

Chapter 411

Avery saw the news on her screen. She began to hyperventilate.

“Has Elliot died?”

“How could that be? How could he have died so easily?” she thought.

She had stopped his bleeding. The helicopter had taken him directly to the hospital. They would have rushed him to the emergency room, so how could they not have successfully resuscitated 25 him?

“Could he have moved about on the helicopter and tore the bandages? Or did he not allow the doctor to save him once he reached the hospital?” she wondered.

Avery sniffled. She could not stop her tears from falling.

No matter what had happened, Elliot was dead! He was dead!

The doctors could rescue a patient in danger, but they could not resurrect the dead!

Last night, when she had wanted to murder him, she had thought that killing him would set her free, but why was her heart aching so badly now that she got news of his death?

On the internet, other media outlets began publishing their own takes on his death.

(Tribute to Elliot Foster: A Legend Has Fallen!)

Scratch?]

Will Happen to the Fosters?]

A series of eye-catching headlines had been published. It shocked everyone!

Henry kept calling Elliot on the phone, but he could not get through. He did not know how to verify the truth of the news on the internet.

Henry's wife was rather excited. "Henry, if your brother died, do you think we will get some of his inheritance ? Didn't you say that he previously left some for his mother in his will? Now that she is dead, will we get the money?"

Henry glared at his wife. "My mother has just died, and now my brother too is gone! Yet, all you care about is money?!"

"What else can I care for then? He's dead! It was not me who killed him!"

Henry muttered, "How did he die?"

"Quickly, get Cole back! We are going to have a funeral!"

Henry did not want to hear his wife's ravings. He grabbed his phone and car keys and left the house.

The Sterling Group was in utter chaos!

How could their boss suddenly die!

Chad's phone was ringing off the hook!

Shaun and Ben's phones had been ringing nonstop too. They gathered in Elliot's office and started exchanging information.

"Who has contacted him in the past two days?" Ben asked.

"I sent him a work email the day before yesterday. He read it but did not reply. He has not checked his messages in the past two days," said Shaun.

Chad adjusted the glasses on his nose. "Three days ago, Mike and Hayden went to look for him. At that time, he should still be alright."

"I'll head to the hospital to have a look. Chad, go find Mike and get Mike to contact Avery. Mr. Locklyn, go call for an emergency meeting and calm everyone down! Before we understand what truly happened to Mr. Foster, please don't believe the news on the internet!" Ben said seriously. "I don't believe that he is dead. He barely said anything. He can't leave just like that!

When the three of them finally came to a conclusion, they each went their separate ways.

Chad rang the Starry River Villa's doorbell.

After a while, the door opened. Mike appeared with his unkempt blond hair. He looked at Chad in disbelief.

"What are you doing? Why are you here so early in the morning disturbing my sleep?" Mike rubbed his eyes and headed into the living area.

"Mike, call Avery right now! Something has happened to Mr. Foster! We can't contact him. Avery must have known what happened," Chad said seriously. He went forward and grabbed Mike's arm.

Chapter 412

Mike picked up a cup of water. "What happened to your boss? Please don't come looking for Avery every time he is in trouble-"

"He is dead." Chad felt uncomfortable.

Mike spat out the water. "Are you pulling my leg? You said he died? How did he die?”

“I don’t know. The internet said that he is²⁵ dead.”

Mike was speechless. Seeing how Chad was almost in tears, he immediately placed the cup of water down and headed to his room

Don’t worry. Let me ask Avery. She was on the phone with me yesterday afternoon. She said that her injuries were not that painful anymore. She should be able to return in a few days. She didn’t say that anything had happened to⁹⁶ Elliot

.”

“It happened early today morning.” Chad followed Mike into his room. “We can’t get to him or his bodyguard. I have been with him for so many years. This is the first time that this has happened.”

Mike got his phone and called Avery. At the same time, he put it on^{zd} loudspeaker.

It was some time before Avery answered his call.

“Avery!” Mike’s emotions had been influenced by Chad. He was anxious. “I heard that Elliot is dead. What happened? I’m sure it had nothing to do with you,⁴⁹ right!”

Avery lay in bed, looking at the ceiling. Her voice was hoarse. “I did it.”

Mike was bewildered. Chad was speechless.

“I did it,” Avery said once again.

“A-Are you alright?” Mike pulled his hair in disbelief. “Why did you kill him? Why?”

“I don’t know...” Avery had been crying for a long time, and her throat hurt. Her voice was hoarse. “I don’t know how it turned out this way-”

“Okay, stop crying! I’ll come get you immediately!” Mike said and grabbed a jacket from his room. “Don’t turn off your phone!”

When Mike ended the call, Chad was completely numb.

His boss was truly dead. Avery was the murderer.

“Hehe! How comical!” he thought.

He had initially thought them to be truly in love with each other despite the numerous arguments, and that they would be together once they had resolved everything.

Never had he thought that tragedy would be the outcome!

When Mike was by the door putting on his shoes, he suddenly saw Chad.

“... Chad. Avery is wrong this time, but I will still stand on her side.” Mike had his shoes on, and he looked at Chad. “I’m sorry. If you want to cut ties with me, then so be it!”

Mike ended his sentence and left without looking back.

He had said that to him, Avery was more important than family. No matter what she did, he would never leave.

Chad took his glasses off and wiped away his tears. Cutting ties with Mike had not been the saddest part of the day. The saddest part of the day was knowing that his boss was dead.

For a while, he could not figure out how to get back to his office, and when he was finally back at his office, he did not dare tell Shaun the news.

Chad called Ben and told Ben what he heard.

Ben said, “Did she really say so?”

“I heard it myself. She said she did it,” Chad choked and said, “I never thought that she would be as impulsive and bold to do something like this!”

“Don’t cry. I’m at the hospital. The news I got is that he is still in the emergency room, being resuscitated.”

Chad was stunned for a while. Then, he immediately collected his emotions.

“Where did Mr. Foster get hurt? Why is it so serious?”

“The heart.”

Chad exclaimed, “How could she be so cruel!”

“The bodyguard said that he did it to himself.” Ben looked serious. “Even if Avery did it, he would not blame her.”

“Is that what he said?”

“The bodyguard told me. He had passed out long before he had arrived at the hospital.” Ben rubbed the middle of his brows. “His estate attorney has also come after seeing the news.”

Chapter 413

Mike was at the forest villa.

Mike stopped the car and immediately walked over to the door. The guards stopped him.

“I’m here to get Avery!” Mike said. “Your boss has died. Perhaps, you should start thinking about whether you are going to get paid.”

The guards were baffled.

At the staircase, the nanny was helping Avery down the stairs. She was leaving the place

Elliot died. Avery wanted to see him for the last time.

When Mike saw Avery, he immediately pushed the guards away and strode in.

“Avery! I’m here to take you home!” Mike took Avery from the nanny.

After helping Avery into the car, Mike looked at her leg. She was wearing loose pajamas, so he could not see her injury.

“You were limping just now. I find it hard to believe that your injuries are almost healed.” Mike furrowed his brows. He started the car. “I’ll send you to the hospital once we get back to the city.”

Avery held onto the seatbelt with both hands. Her heart was empty.

“Avery. His lawyer... won’t find faults with you, right?” Mike had only asked her this question once they were on their way, and even then he had hesitated for a few35 seconds.

Mike had never liked Elliot because Elliot treated Avery and the children terribly.

When he heard that Elliot had died, he felt a little pity for the man, however, he was more focused on Avery. He hoped that Elliot's death would not bring the law down on Avery.

"I don't know." Avery was feeling low. She did not care whether the law would punish her or not at that moment.

"Oh. You and him... What happened?" Mike lowered his voice, due to the severity of the topic.

"I don't know." Avery's mind was heavy. Once she began thinking about him, she was so overwhelmed she could barely breathe.

"Did you not sleep the entire night?" Mike saw how puffy and red her eyes were.

"Close your eyes and get some rest. No matter what, the children need you to take care of them. I will hire the best lawyer for you. You don't have to worry about the other matters.”

Avery closed her eyes. She saw Elliot's eyes. They had been filled with pain and hatred. He had said that he would not look for her in his next life.

He had brought her so much pain, but she too had caused him plenty of pain.

There was no other explanation for why he would have stabbed himself with the dagger otherwise.

He would rather die than see her again.

During recess at Starry River Kindergarten, Hayden pulled Layla out of her class.

“The dirtbag is dead.” Hayden had seen the news, and now, he was telling it to

Layla.

Layla was shocked. “Which dirtbag? Cole... or Elliot?”

“Elliot,” said Hayden a little awkwardly. It was a name that he had loathed so much.

The shock on Layla's face slowly disappeared. Although she did not like their dirtbag dad, he was still their biological father.

“How did he die so suddenly?” she thought.

“Hayden, is he really dead? Don’t lie to me.” Layla’s eyes suddenly grew red. Her nose was sore too.

Hayden nodded.

Woo, woo, woo... He is dead. No one will bully Mommy, but why am I sad?”

Layla raised her hand to wipe her tears. “Hayden, I shouldn’t be sad, right?”

Hayden replied, “If you want to be sad, just be sad.”

“Are you sad?” Layla wiped her tears away and looked at Hayden with watery

eyes.

The bruise on Hayden’s neck was still visible. Even if he was sad, he would not show it.

“Oh, then... if he has died, should we visit his grave?” Layla suddenly thought of this. After Grandma died, their Mommy often brought them to visit their grandmother’s grave.

Chapter 414

If their Dad was dead, would they need to visit his grave?

“Go if you want. I’m not going,” Hayden said coldly before returning to his classroom.

“Hayden, woo, woo... I miss Mommy. When is she coming back?” Layla quickly chased after him and held his arm.

“She should be back soon.” Hayden had a25 feeling.

Elliot was dead. Her Mommy did not need to worry about anything anymore.

Mike drove to Elizabeth Hospital and handed Avery to Wesley.

When Avery saw Wesley she asked, “Which hospital is head at?”

Wesley replied, “At General Hospital. The latest news that I got was that they are still trying to resuscitate him. Don’t worry.”

Wesley helped her onto the49 bed.

After a while, Avery slowly came to her senses. “Wesley, did you say he is not dead?”

Wesley sighed. “He had a cardiac arrest, but they resuscitated him. It’s still going35 on.”

Avery sighed.

Wesley pushed her to the emergency room. He used a pair of scissors and cut her pants.

Her bandage was dyed red with her blood.

“Avery, how did your injury turn out this way? Did you not care for it?”
Wesley

furrowed his brows. He carefully undid the bandage.

Avery said lightly, “It doesn’t hurt very much.”

“Even if it doesn’t hurt, if you don’t take care of yourself, this will happen.
You risk infection by neglecting it!” Wesley sighed. “Thank goodness Mike picked you up.”

Mike was standing at the main entrance, calling Chad.

He wanted to tell Chad that Elliot was still alive, but he could not reach Chad.

“Hehe, that b*st*rd! How dare he block me!” Mike stored away his phone
and

walked back into the emergency room.

When he saw the injuries on Avery’s leg. He cursed in a low voice, “Avery, how did you end up this way?! Please don’t tell me you need an amputation!”

Mike’s outrage rekindled some emotion in Avery.

“Can you not nag at me?”

“Look at your leg. What do you want me to say?” Mike raised his hand and slapped his head. “Wesley, will her leg be fine?”

Wesley shook his head. “The wound is large. It will definitely scar over.”

“Oh, that’s fine. As long as she’s not disabled.” Mike looked at Wesley cleaning Avery’s wound. He asked, “Does she need to stay at the hospital?”

“It’s best if she does, but if she doesn’t want to stay then she is free to go home.

I’ll go to her house to change her bandages on a daily basis,” Wesley said and looked at her. “Avery, why don’t you stay at home? It’s much more comfortable than the hospital. The children have not seen you for a long time too. I’m sure they missed you.”

Avery nodded.

Her eyelids were heavy. She had not slept for a day and a night. She had been under constant duress, and the moment she heard that Elliot was still alive, she had relaxed a little. Sleep overwhelmed her.

Wesley dressed her wounds, and Avery fell asleep on the bed. Mike tucked her in.

Wesley prescribed anti-inflammatory medication and put Avery on drips.

“Mike, go do your thing. Once she wakes up, I’ll send her back,” Wesley said.

“Oh... I’ll head to General Hospital to see Elliot. Though I have nothing to do with him, Avery does not want him dead.”

Wesley nodded.

Mike teased, “Wesley, just give up on her! Even if she doesn’t end up together with Elliot, she won’t choose you. I don’t want to see you wasting your time.”

Wesley blushed awkwardly. “I know. I never hoped for anything much.”

At General Hospital. After being resuscitated for more than ten hours, Elliot was transferred to the ICU. Elliot needed to survive for a week before he would be officially deemed out of the danger zone.

As night fell, Ben treated Elliot’s estate attorney to dinner.

The estate attorney refused.

Ben said, “Don’t worry, I’m not planning to hear about the distribution of his estate, because I know how it's being distributed.”

Chapter 415

The estate attorney looked at how confident Ben looked. He said, “After Mr. Foster’s mother passed away, he had instructed me to make some changes.”

Ben said, “Oh?”

The estate attorney said, “I’m not drinking or having dinner. If there is any progress with Mr. Foster’s condition, please inform me at once.”

Ben replied, “Okay, then. I’ll send you out.”

After Ben sent the estate attorney out, he looked at the time. Without knowing it, it was already seven in the evening.

After sleeping deeply for quite some time, Avery finally woke up. She was still in a daze

“Avery, let’s go home!” Mike saw that she was awake and said, “I just returned from General Hospital. Elliot is not dead. He has been transferred into ICU. The media has crossed the line. He is not even dead and yet, they are so quick to declare him dead!"

Mike helped Avery up. Avery returned to her senses more quickly than she had before

"What time is it?"

Mike helped Avery into the wheelchair. "It's almost eight. Are you hungry?"

Avery nodded.

She had barely had a proper meal the past few days. All she wanted to do right then was to have a good meal, a shower, and a good night's sleep.

She was still feeling dizzy. She had not slept well for the past few days. All she wanted to do was to catch up on her sleep.

"There's food at home! We'll go back and eat! The children heard that you're back. They are waiting for you!" Mike carried her into the car and placed the wheelchair in the boot.

Half an hour later, the car slowly entered Starry River Villa's compound.

Avery looked at the familiar surroundings. She was extremely emotional. She had only been gone for a week, but it felt like she had just come back from death.

Once she reached home, she collected her messy thoughts.

The two children pounced on her.

“Mommy!”

“Mommy!”

Avery looked at her children. She was happy and sad at the same time.

“I missed you all.”

“Mommy, Hayden and I missed you too! Your leg is injured. Does it hurt?”
Layla

looked at Avery’s leg. “Mommy, which is the leg that is hurt?”

Avery replied, “The right one.”

“Oh... Mommy. Rest well at home. Don’t go around. It’ll be better after a few days,” Layla said sweetly.

Avery nodded. “I won’t go anywhere. I’ll just stay at home.”

For the next week, Avery stayed home, resting in bed.

Mike initially wanted to stay at home and care for her, but Avery made him go to work.

Every day, the bodyguard would send the children to school, then buy groceries, and cook for her.

Wesley would come around every afternoon to change her dressing and medication.

After a week of rest, the wound on her leg had recovered nicely. She could get down from the bed and walk around in the yard.

The weather was getting better. In a blink of an eye, summer was here. Elliot was at the hospital. He had spent a week in ICU. After that, he was transferred to the special care unit.

When he opened his eyes, he looked at the white walls. His mind was blank.

“Elliot, you’re finally up.” The voice belonged to a woman. “How are you feeling?”

Elliot turned to the side and looked at Zoe.

“Elliot, I’ll go get the doctor,” Zoe said with reddened eyes before leaving.

“Am I patient? Am I sick?” he wondered. He tried to lift his arm, but he found that he had no strength.

After Zoe left, Ben entered. “Elliot, you’re awake.” Ben had a relaxed expression.

“I really don’t know what I’m going to do if you’re dead. Perhaps, I would have dissolved the company.

Elliot’s face remained void of expression.

“No matter what happened in the past, forget them all. If your mother was still around to see you in this state, she would be heartbroken. Even if you won’t do it for her, you should live for Shea. Shea has not been to school these past few days. We were worried that she would hear the rumors in school. She still does not know about the incident.”

Chapter 416

Ben stood by the bed and spoke to him.

Elliot’s face still remained blank and emotionless despite hearing Ben’s words

Ben spoke the truth. He wanted to die. Was there anything there that he could not let go of?

If he died, naturally there would be someone to take care of²⁵ Shea.

A moment later, the doctor arrived. After examining Elliot, the doctor said, “Mr.

Foster, you're very weak. You need to stay in the hospital to recuperate. During this time, if you feel any discomfort, you can let me know at any moment."

Elliot closed his eyes.

Ben pulled the doctor outside to talk to him.

"He should not be in any danger, right?" Bened asked.

The doctor replied, "As long as he cooperates and follows the treatment plan he will not be in any danger. However, he does not want to live, and this is not good for him."

Ben pursed his lips. "I'll think of something."

An hour later, Ben brought Shea to the hospital.

"Shea, your brother is terribly hurt. Could you go comfort him, please?"

Shea blinked her eyes and furrowed his brows. "Why is he hurt?"

"... You could say that love has wounded him."

"What do you mean by that?"

"It means... Elliot fought with Avery- badly." Ben used simpler terms to explain the situation to her. "Because of that, he does not want to live anymore. He wants to die. What you need to do is to make sure that he does not die."

Shea looked troubled. "Why don't you call Avery here? I don't think he'll listen to me."

Ben replied, "They fought. He does not want to see Avery. Don't go looking for Avery in the future too. It was a bad fight, and they are completely done with each other this time."

Shea said, "Then, does that mean I can't go looking for Layla and Hayden?"

Ben said, "Your brother is dying, yet you still have the time to care for others?"

Shea responded, "Oh. How do I make sure he does not die? Tell me!"

Ben took a deep breath. "Stay by his side and keep an eye on him."

"Okay."

When Elliot woke from slumber, he saw Shea's bright and innocent face.

Shea was sitting by the bed, and she was looking at him with her clear, large

eyes.

"Big Brother," Shea said sadly, "I don't want you to die. What will happen to me if you die? If you want to die, take me along! I don't want to be alone. I want to be with you...

“No one has ever truly liked me. Only you,” Shea muttered in a low voice, “I don’t need anything. I only want you.”

Elliot blinked.

He was in the same boat as Shea. There was no one but Shea who loved him.

Shea held his hand with both her hands. “Big Brother, your hand is so cold. Let me warm it up for you.”

Elliot was discharged from the hospital four days later. He went home to recuperate.

That day, all the major news outlets in Aryadelle published apologies.

Avery saw the news notification appearing on her phone. She was completely relieved.

Elliot was not dead. He had been discharged from the hospital. He would start a completely new life. She too would follow suit.

She hoped that they would never meet again! That way, they would not be in pain anymore.

Her phone rang. Avery saw who it was and picked the call up.

“Avery! Elliot has been discharged!” Tammy had held herself back for many days before she had finally dared contact Avery. Jun had told her that it was Avery who had tried to murder Elliot. Therefore, before Elliot was discharged, Tammy dared not contact Avery.

“I saw the news,” Avery said in a calm tone. She lowered her gaze.

“Hmm! Those news outlets are disgusting! They would do anything for clicks!”

Tammy said and changed the topic. “Jun just heard from him. He won’t be attending our wedding. I’m assuming he is trying to avoid you.”

Chapter 417

Tammy was afraid that Avery would misunderstand, and she immediately added, “Avery, if he doesn’t want to come, that’s up to him, but you have to come! You’re my best friend. If you’re not coming, I won’t get married.”

Avery said, “I’ll attend your wedding.” Tammy let out a sigh of relief. “That’s awesome! I heard you injured your leg. How is it? I had always thought of contacting you, but Elliot was still in bad shape then, and I was afraid that you would be in a bad mood. So, I didn't contact you."

"My leg is much better."

"That's good to hear. Let's go shopping tomorrow!"

"It did not heal very well." Avery looked at the injury on her leg. It was no longer wrapped in bandages, and the scar looked bad.

Thankfully, she had bought quite a few long skirts in the past. So, she could easily hide the scar.

"Then I'll come to visit you tomorrow. Don't worry. I won't ask you anything regarding Elliot, Tammy promised.

"Hmm."

The next morning, before the two children headed for kindergarten, Tammy arrived. Not only did she bring a big bag of fruits, snacks, toys, and new clothes, but she also bought a huge bag of breakfast.

Avery was stunned.

"Tammy, you didn't have to. Layla told me that during the time I wasn't around, you came and played with them every single day, and you even bought them new toys and snacks for them daily..."

“It’s my duty!” Tammy passed the bag of breakfast to Avery before lifting up Avery’s skirt.” My goodness! What a huge wound!”

Avery said, “It doesn’t hurt that much anymore.”

“What on earth! This is the first time I’m seeing a relationship turn out this way.”

Tammy did not say much apart from that one comment. She took the bag of toys and clothes to the children.

“Are you two heading to school?”

“Aunt Tammy, I really hope you get married today. That way, I don’t have to go to school.” Layla was carrying her bag. She was rather reluctant to go to school.

“Babe, why don’t you want to go to school?”

“Because I want to play with Mommy at home,” Layla answered honestly.

“Layla, I’m going back to work tomorrow,” Avery said.

“Which is why I don’t want to go to school today. Aunt Tammy is also here. I don’t want to go to school. Let me stay at home and play with you too, please!” Layla pouted and begged.

Without waiting for Avery to say anything, Tammy immediately took Layla’s bag off her shoulders. "Okay, okay! You'll stay home today! Kindergarten is not like elementary school. It's fine if you skip one day."

Tammy said this for Avery's benefit. "Tammy, if you ever have children of your own, they would be spoiled rotten by you," Avery said with a sigh.

"My babe, Layla, has already said she wants to play at home today. When you go back to work, she'll go back to school!" said Tammy placatingly to Avery as she scooped Layla into her arms. "If I have a daughter as cute as Layla, I couldn't bear send her to kindergarten! I would hire a tutor to teach her at home.

"I'm only saying that because I'm free and can afford to stay at home to care for them. You aren't in the same boat! You're a strong working woman!" said Tammy and quickly added," But going to kindergarten and getting used to society in preparation for elementary school is quite important too."

Avery took a sip of water and thought for a while. She said, "Tammy, you don't have to tiptoe around me. I'm not used to it."

Tammy raised her eyebrows and said, "Then what happened to you and Elliot?"

Avery was speechless.

“You were the one who told me not to tiptoe around you,” Tammy said in a matter-of-fact manner. “But I can guess without you telling me. The fight between couples is one where even a misspoken sentence can end lives.”

Avery shook her head. “Tammy, you should stop guessing. A guest is coming over later.”

Tammy and the two children immediately perked their ears up.

“Who is it?!” Mike heard the commotion in the living area. He came out of his room.

He appeared in front of everyone wearing only his boxers. Tammy immediately rushed over and pushed him into his room.

“Can you pay attention to your image? Don’t defile our precious Layla’s eyes.

How many times have I told you? Why won’t you change?” Tammy barked.

Mike was rather speechless. “Are you a modern woman or not? I have such a good body, how is this defiling Layla’s eyes?” “Go in and put on some clothes!”

Tammy pushed him back into his room.

Chapter 418

At that moment, the guest that Avery had mentioned arrived.

A black Buik Business pulled up by the entrance.

The car doors opened, and two bodyguards stepped out of the car. 'Tammy watched the commotion outside.

"Who is it? Why did they bring so many bodyguards along!"

Avery got up from the sofa. When she passed by Tammy, she replied, "Eric Santos."

After a few months of rehabilitation, Eric could finally stand up. He, accompanied by his family, had come to pay Avery a visit. They wanted to thank her in person.

Eric was in black-striped sportswear with a cap on his head. His face was covered by a mask and sunglasses

No one could truly make out what he looked like underneath it. However, his statuesque figure and charisma made him stand out from the rest of the crowd.

He looked stunning!

"Avery, can I scream!" Tammy's body trembled a little.

Avery said, "It's best you not. I'm afraid that neighbors would call the49 police."

Tammy suppressed the urge.

Eric and his family entered the living area under the protection of his bodyguards.

When Eric saw Avery, he hugged her. He had not even removed his35 mask.

"Dr. Tate, thank you."

Avery was stunned. "You don't have to call me Dr. Tate."

"Avery, thank you." Eric released her and took off his cap, mask, and glasses.

The golden sunlight illuminated his handsome face. Now, everyone could see his angular face and flawless skin.

Everyone looked at him in a daze. He was far more good-looking in person than he was in the pictures.

Layla's mouth hung open. She clenched her fist and stuffed it into her mouth.

What a good – looking person! He was even more handsome than her Dirtbag

Dad!

No! He was in a completely different league compared to her Dirtbag Dad!
Eric

was just her type- young and exquisite.

“Mister, I’m Layla!” Layla mustered up her courage and ran over to Eric.
“I’m

Avery’s darling

daughter! I like you a lot!”

Eric was rather taken aback. Then, he gently picked Layla up.

Hayden felt embarrassed so he returned to his room. Mike had put on some clothes. When he saw Layla in Eric’s arms, his nose turned sore. He was rather jealous.

“Avery, I’m here today not just to thank you, but I do have something to tell you.”

Eric was still holding Layla in his arms. He fixed his light blue eyes on Avery. “I have decided to make a comeback.”

Tammy yelled, “Ah-!”

Eric looked at her.

Tammy said, “I’m Avery’s best friend! I-1 – I’m also your fan!”

Eric smiled brightly. “I brought my new single over. If you have any suggestions

after listening to it, you can let me know.”

Tammy was so elated she was about to pass out!

Mike supported her before she could pass out.

Mike looked at Avery. "Avery, I'm going to work! We have a physical examination scheduled for all our employees at the office this afternoon. I'll come to pick you up. You have to do it too!"

Chapter 419

At noon, Eric had lunch at Avery's before leaving.

"Avery, go and rest, and then go for your physical examination in the afternoon. I'll take the kids out for some fun. What do you think about that?" Tammy had noticed that the weather was rather pleasant. She did not want to stay home. "I'll bring the kids back home by six."

Avery saw how much the children wanted to go out. Naturally, she did not disagree with Tammy's suggestion.

"Tammy, would it be troublesome for you?"

Tammy said, "It's no trouble. They are not babies that I need to carry. I'm not tired at all if it's taking them out to play!"

Avery got the bodyguard to follow them. After sending them off, Avery returned to the house and shut the main door.

There was a white box on the coffee table in the living area. Eric had left it behind.

It was his gift to her.

He said that it was his lucky charm. It was not anything expensive. He only hoped that it would bring her luck.

Avery could not bear to refuse him, as the gift was not an expensive one but a meaningful one.

She took the white box and went to her room. She was sitting on the edge of her bed when Mike called.

“Avery, I’ll pick you up in two hours. You can take a nap,” Then, Mike quickly asked, “Is that babyface gone? If he’s not gone yet, it’s time to make him go, no?”

“Don’t call him that. He is a true artist. I heard his new song today. It’s a great song,” Avery said objectively. “I have never followed an artist before, but I truly am attracted by his charm. I’m officially a fan.”

“I’m having goosebumps! Please don’t tell me you have fallen in love with him!”

“I admire him.”

“Oh, you admire him! But, if you end up with him, I won’t object. When searching for partners, you either get someone rich or handsome, or someone with good abilities. Someone like Eric. I have to admit that he is handsome.”

“If you have nothing else to say, I’m hanging up.” Avery did not want to continue this conversation.

Having ended her relationship with Elliot, Avery did not plan on entering into another relationship or getting married.

A relationship takes up too much energy. She refused to be in another one.

Avery placed her phone down and opened the white box. In it was a rather unique-looking necklace.

The pendant was a ring. There were carvings on it too. It was in a language that Avery did not understand. She did not know which language it was nor its meaning.

Avery placed the necklace back into its box and lay down in bed. She had been getting sufficient sleep the past few days, so she did not feel tired.

She looked out of her window, watching the bright sun and the occasional passing bird. She felt extremely relaxed. She had never been this calm in such a long time.

These days she rarely thought about Elliot. She also did not think about their shared past. She did not have her future planned out. She never truly had such a calm life.

She hoped she could continue living it.

Two hours later, Mike came to pick her up. Avery met the colleagues whom she had not seen in quite a long time. She was rather emotional. Everyone missed her, as they had not seen her for a long time. They asked her how was her holiday, where she had gone, and whether she had fun or not.

Avery looked at Mike. Mike whispered in her ear, "I couldn't tell them that you had been kidnapped by Elliot. How embarrassing would that be? I told them you had gone on a holiday."

“Why didn’t you tell me earlier? I didn’t prepare any gifts for them.”

“Aren’t you only going back to work tomorrow? After the checkup, I’ll go with you

some.”

Avery let out a sigh of relief.

After a series of checkups, Mike and Avery left the hospital.

“Why don’t I send you home first. Just tell me what you want to buy, and I’ll go get them.” Mike was worried that Avery could not walk for long.

Chapter 420

Avery shook her head. “I want to go out.”

“Then, tell me if your leg hurts. Don’t force it.”

“I know.”

“Avery, if I had known how many miserable things would happen to us when we came back to this country, I would not have allowed you to return.” Mike helped her into the car. “When we were in Bridgedale, everything went smoothly. I never once worried about you. Who could have known that your return would bring me an endless amount of worry.”

Avery was apologetic. “Why don’t you return to Bridgedale!”

“That’s not what 196 meant!”

“I know that. I think that I can handle work here. You should go back to Bridgedale

—”

“Come back with me.”

“I’m not going. I like my country better than I love Bridgedale.”

Mike snorted. “Then, I’m not going either. I’ll be where you are.”

“You miss Chad, huh?”

“Why did you have to bring him up? He blocked my calls.” Mike stepped on the gas. “That jerk! He only has his boss in his heart.”

Avery said, “I’m sorry!” “Why are you apologizing to me? Even without you, we will still have to face this problem. I will not accept it if he constantly places his boss first.”

11.

They both went to a shopping mall. Avery bought some imported snacks. Then, she went to the jewelry shop to get each female employee a gold zodiac bracelet.

“Avery, you’re constantly making things difficult for yourself! You have to know each of their birthdays,” said Mike, taking a jab at her.

Avery said, “But they would be happy when they receive the gift.”

“They would be happier if you gave them money.”

“You might be right, but I feel some happiness can’t be bought with money,” Avery said. For instance, the gift that she had received from Eric. She was much happier with the gift than she would have been if Eric had given her cash.

After buying the gifts, Mike carried the shopping bags in one hand while holding onto Avery with the other.

After shopping for a while, her injured leg began to hurt.

“I already said I should have gone alone, but you wouldn’t listen. You never listen to others!” Mike nagged.

Avery automatically filtered his nagging.

The next morning, Mike drove her to work. After distributing the gifts, Avery returned to her office which she has not been in in a long time.

There was a bouquet on her table. She walked over and looked at the card on it.

On it was written, 'Today is a beautiful day!'

The signature only had one letter, E.

It was from Eric Santos.

Avery smiled. She walked over to her office chair and sat down, switching the computer on.

She had half a month's worth of work piled up. Although most of it had been dealt with, she still had to go through them. Thus, Avery spent the entire morning in her office.

At noon, Mike knocked on her door, asking her to head out for lunch.

"Have you received the medical examination results? It's in your email," Mike reminded her.

She nodded and got up from the chair. "I just received it, but I haven't checked it yet. How was yours?"

"The doctors advised me not to drink for the time being," Mike was troubled.

"What meaning is there to life if I can't drink?"

“Listen to the doctors. I’ll keep an eye on you,” Avery said as she tapped on the email icon of her phone. She read the results of her medical examination.

Mike walked in front and pressed the elevator button. The moment she entered the elevator, she read a line that shocked her. Early Pregnancy: Three Months!

Chapter 421

Avery was pregnant!

According to the report, she had gotten pregnant the night Elliot had stabbed himself in the heart.

It was ironic! They were already estranged, and here she was pregnant with his child. Avery had no words or emotions to express the shock she felt. It reminded her of the time she had been pregnant with Hayden and Layla. She was extremely heartbroken.

Back then, Elliot was fighting for a divorce. Now, things were different. She was financially independent. She could raise the children herself. It did not matter if it was one, two, or three; she could raise them²⁵ all.

However, should she tell him about this matter?

After all, back when Zoe had a miscarriage, he blamed it all on her, insisting that she give him a baby in return. Although they were no longer in contact, what if he tried to get in contact with her because she had not given him a96 child?

Mike saw her panic through the corner of his eyes. He immediately closed the distance between them and glanced at her phone.

Avery pressed the power button of her phone. The screen immediately went2d black.

“Is there any problem with your report? Your expression is quite scary.”
Mike

wanted to take her phone, but Avery swerved.

“I’m fine... I’m only slightly anemic.” Avery found some random excuse.
“Right, I have something to do in the afternoon, I won’t be in the49 office.”

She had to go to the hospital. She needed to see if the results were wrong.

Mike had a look of suspicion on his face. “What’s going35 on?”

“I never hid my private life from you!”

“Well, I do. So, I can’t tell you what it is for now,” said Avery flatly.

“Then, when will you tell me?”

The elevator doors opened, and Avery walked out.

“I’ll tell you when I want to.”

Mike replied, “Avery, are you going to look for Elliot behind my back? Don’t go seeking death! He might have stabbed himself this time, but the next time, it will surely be you!”

Avery’s head felt numb when she heard what Mike said.

“I’m not going to look for him.”

“Oh, okay, then! As long as you’re not looking for him, I don’t care about the rest,”

Mike explained.

Avery said, “Even if I’m going to look for him, you can’t stop me anyway.”

Mike furrowed his brows.

“I’m joking! What are we having for lunch?” Avery tugged on Mike’s arm.

“Why

don’t we have something lighter! Did the doctors stop you from drinking because you have stomach problems or liver problems?”

Avery managed to distract Mike.

“My body is still strong!” Mike said defiantly.

“Oh, is it? Then, let’s go drinking.”

Mike caved in. “My stomach has some problems. Stomach issues. Many of them have it.”

“Don’t take stomach problems lightly.” Avery’s expression was a little cold. She tilted her head up slightly to look at him. “You have to stop drinking. Even if it is an occasional drink, you can’t drink too much. Do you hear me?”

“I got it! Where are you going this afternoon? I’ll send you!”

“No need. I’ll call a taxi.”

Mike stopped asking her questions.

After lunch, they went their separate ways. Avery got into a taxi. She asked to be taken to the nearby hospital.

Then, she opened the medical report and looked through it once again.

They had detected her pregnancy from the blood test. The results were probably correct unless the doctor had mislabeled the blood sample and given her the wrong results.

However, with modern medical procedures, such mistakes were rare. The act could have been a deliberate one. Avery gasped. She placed her palms on her abdomen.

Chapter 422

In Avery, a small life was growing. However, up till that point, she did not feel anything at all. When she was pregnant with Layla and Hayden , her early pregnancy symptoms were rather obvious.

At that thought, a new problem cropped out.

When she was pregnant with the child, she was in utter depression. Also, because of her injuries, she had been on a lot of 25 antibiotics.;

Avery furrowed her brows. She was so heartbroken she could not breathe!

Even if she got pregnant with the child, this child would most likely be 96 unhealthy!

The taxi stopped right in front of the hospital entrance.

Avery paid and got out of the taxi.

She registered with the gynecology department. After explaining her situation to the doctor, the doctor gave her an ultrasound request form. She took the form to the ultrasound room and waited.

After 40 minutes later, it was her turn. A moment later, she left the hospital with the results in her hand.

As she expected, she was pregnant! She was once again pregnant with Elliot's child! She did not know if this child was healthy or not at that moment because it was still too small. If the child was unhealthy, naturally, it would be eliminated.

She did not need to wait for three months to be miscarried.

It would be possible that the child would be unhealthy and last more than three months. She would only be able to find out after the 35 checkup.

Avery's mind was a mess at that moment. She did not know what to do. If Elliot did not want this child, she could choose to abort it, because there was a high possibility that it would be unhealthy.

However, she would only decide after three months.

Should she let Elliot know? Should she let him know now?

Avery stood by the side of the road, looking at the traffic. She was very lost. At Tate Industries, Mike was holding a business card in his hand. He looked at it and sized the other person up.

“You’re Eric Santos’ manager?”

“Yes. Eric has asked me to come and talk to you.” The manager explained his intention there and explained, “His comeback single is called Fly. Initially, we wanted to publish it on the internet. With his fame and outreach, this song will be a hit! But, he insisted on giving Tate Industries this single.”

Mike furrowed his brows. “Giving them to us?”

“He said that he wrote it for Tate Industries. You could use this song to promote a certain series of products, you can also use it as your company’s anthem because the lyrics to this song fit rather well with your products.”

Mike nodded. “I have not listened to his new song. Is it any good?”

The manager was rather annoyed.

Mike said, “Has he talked to Avery? Avery is the boss.”

“Miss Tate likes this song a lot, but she might not accept Eric’s gift.”

“Oh, we can pay! Make it a collaboration.” Mike was not so fixated on whether Eric’s new song was great or not anymore. His fame was the most important thing.

The manager nodded. "I do think this way is better, but Eric is not willing to accept money from you."

Mike said, "Then, just put it as a friendship price! If not Avery would not accept this too."

The manager replied, "Okay. Wonder Technologies has cropped up recently. They are doing drones too and they are coming on strong! Not only have they signed the hottest celebrities as their spokesperson, but they also got a lot of social media influencers to live stream as well. I checked their sales, it's amazing! Why does your company not have any promotional activities?"

Mike said, "So Eric gave us this single because he could not bear to watch how our company is doing?"

The manager said, "I guessed so. He is even more worried about the growth of the company than you all."

Mike took a deep breath. He had a 180-degree change in his impression of Eric.

This babyface was not only handsome, but he was also smart.

The next time he visits Avery, Mike would definitely open the door for him.

At five in the evening, Avery took a taxi to Elliot's mansion. She hesitated for the entire afternoon. She decided to tell the news of her pregnancy to Elliot. After all, he insisted on having this child.

Chapter 423

When the guard saw Avery, he thought he must be hallucinating. She had fought so terribly with Elliot. How dare she still show herself?

Previously, when the guard saw her, he would immediately let her in. At that moment, the guard did not open the door for her.

The guard called the internal phone in the living room. Mrs. Cooper picked the phone up. —

"Avery Tate is here. She's standing outside the gate," The guard²⁵ said.

Mrs. Cooper was stunned. "Oh, I'll go have a look." After hanging up, Mrs. Cooper strode outside to have a look.

Previously, the skies were still cloudless, at that moment, it was dark and⁹⁶ cloudy.

Mrs. Cooper did not let Avery in, she walked to the gate.

“Avery,” Mrs. Cooper has a darkened expression. “Are you here to see Mr. Foster?” She knows that Avery was the one that hurt Elliot, so she had no pity or any feelings toward Avery at that moment.

Elliot has almost lost his life this time. He would definitely not want to see Avery

again.

Avery nodded. “Is he home?”

“He is. After he was discharged from the hospital, he had been home recuperating,” Mrs. Cooper replied, “The doctor has instructed him to stay home and rest for at least a month.”

Avery pondered for a few seconds, she said honestly, “I am looking for him.”

Mrs. Cooper said, “Avery, what do you have to look for him for? He needs to rest in his current situation. The doctors have warned me to not disturb him if there is nothing important.”

Avery understood what Mrs. Cooper meant. He did indeed need time to recuperate.

“Avery, I’m very sorry. It’s not that I don’t allow you in or I don’t allow you to see him. Even if I report to him now, he might not want to see you,” Mrs. Cooper explained patiently after seeing the disappointment in Avery’s eyes.

Avery nodded and said calmly, “I’m not blaming you.”

Seeing how Avery was, Mrs. Cooper gave in. “Why don’t you stay here? I’ll go ask him right now.”

“No, it’s fine! Let him rest!” Avery calmed down. It was inappropriate for Elliot to receive any agitation or provocation at that moment.

She was unsure if the child was healthy or not at that moment, so she could still wait to see if the child could last three months.

Avery turned and left.

Suddenly, the skies started to drizzle.

Mrs. Cooper immediately ran back to the living area and took an umbrella out.

She chased after Avery.

Avery did not drive here. If she was about to hail a taxi, she still had to walk a distance.

Avery heard Mrs. Cooper calling after her. She immediately stopped in her tracks.

When she saw Mrs. Cooper passing her the umbrella, she suddenly lifted her head up and looked at the skies.

Was it raining already?

“Avery, take this.” Mrs. Cooper passed her the umbrella.

“No need. It’s not heavy.” Avery refused. Avery did not accept the umbrella because she did not want to return the umbrella.

She only came here today because she was in a daze of the news of her pregnancy. After the last incident, there did not seem a need to contact each other anymore. Perhaps he did not even care if she was pregnant. She was completely dead to him.

Avery quickened her steps and left under the rain. Mrs. Cooper slowly returned back with the umbrella in her hand.

On the balcony on the upper floor of the mansion.

Elliot stood up. He saw Avery leaving.

Why was she here? When this question appeared in his mind, his heart suddenly ached.

Chapter 424

If Elliot did not see her or think of her, he could eat, sleep, and live like a normal person.

However, the moment he thought of her, his body would have symptoms.

A moment later, a knock came on his door. Elliot entered his room from the balcony.

He opened the room door. Mrs. Cooper was standing²⁵ outside.

“Sir, Avery came by just now. She said she was looking for you. I asked her what about, but she did not tell me,” Mrs. Cooper said, “She left.”

“I saw.” Elliot’s expressions were calm. His tone was⁹⁶ cold.

“Oh, the next time she comes, should I invite her in?” Mrs. Cooper asked.

“No.” After a short moment of silence, head muttered

When Avery returned home, she was completely⁴⁹ drenched.

“Mommy, why are you so wet? Did you not bring an umbrella?” Layla said heartbrokenly.

Mike pushed her upstairs. “Quickly go take a shower. You might catch a³⁵ cold.”

Avery headed upstairs.

“Uncle Mike, why did you let Mommy come back alone?” Layla looked at Mike reproachfully.

Hayden was glaring at Mike too.

Under the attack of the two children, Mike lifted his hands up in surrender. “Your Mommy said that she has something to do in the afternoon! She forbade me to follow her! i’ll go make her some tea! She won’t catch a cold if she has tea!” Mike said and escaped to the kitchen.

Avery took a shower and washed her hair. She went downstairs after drying her hair.

Mike stuffed a cup of tea in her hands. After thanking him, she drank all the tea.

“Avery, where were you this afternoon? It’s one thing if it’s raining outside. Don’t you know how to avoid the rain?” Mike grumbled.

Layla pursed her lips and stood up for Avery without thinking. “Mommy was already wet, why are you still nagging her!”

“Fine, let’s go have dinner.” Mike dragged the two children toward the dining table. "Avery, our bodyguard's cooking is amazing! Give him a raise!"

Avery walked over to the dining table and looked at the feast on the table. She nodded. "Hmm.

"Aren't you anemic? Have more meat," Mike said.

Human psychology was a strange thing. Avery had a ham sandwich that morning but she did not feel nauseated or uncomfortable.

However, at that moment when she knew she was pregnant, she looked at the table full of different dishes, not only did she not have any appetite, but her stomach felt bad too.

Mike saw how she did not touch her utensils, so she grabbed some pork for her.

She took a bite and said, "It'll be good if there are some vegetables."

"Oh, I'll get him to make some vegetables tomorrow." Mike noticed that Avery looked down. He guessed that she went to look for Elliot in the afternoon because before noon she was still fine.

"Eric's manager came to look for you this afternoon, but because you're not around, I had a chat with him," Mike simply explained the incident in the afternoon to Avery.

“Oh, have you guys reached a deal?” She raised her eyebrows.

“Almost. The rest is up to you,” Mike said, “Eric is a great guy. I won’t call him a babyface anymore.”

“Since you guys are almost there, then just go according to what you have discussed.” Avery did not have any other suggestions.

“Oh, don’t you dislike marketing?”

“Everything is not absolute.” Avery had no appetite, so she put her utensils down.

“I’ve been paying attention to Wanda’s company. They have been using all their ways to promote and market their product. It seems to be going well. Eric is doing this to help me. I have no reason to refuse him.”

“Not bad!”

“I cannot lose to Wanda.” Avery got up from the chair. “I’ll make a proposal then I’ll discuss it with Eric.”

“Hey, have some food first!” Mike saw the remaining half of the food on her plate.

He immediately called after her.

“I’m not hungry right now. I’ll make some food for myself when I’m hungry,”
Avery

said and headed upstairs.

Once she was upstairs, she turned on her laptop and started working.

The rain outside was getting heavier, pitter-pattering against the windows.

She finished her work in distraction and jumped up from her chair. When she saw the time, it was almost eleven at night. She had to make a trip right at that moment.

Avery was still worried for the child in her womb. Before she could make sure that the child was healthy or not, she wanted to rectify the situation. She did not care

whether it was too late to do so or not, at least she would feel better.

Avery put on a jacket and left with an umbrella.

Coming out of the neighborhood, about three minutes’ walk away, there was a pharmacy.—.

She bought a bottle of folic acid and put it in her pocket. She was walking in
the rain with the umbrella²⁵ opened.

Although the rain was heavy, she was not cold. It was spring. Spring was the time when all beings came to life. It was a season of hope. She hoped that the child in her womb was as healthy as Layla and Hayden. As long as the child was healthy, she would give birth to it.

As for Elliot's thoughts, it was no longer that important.

While being under the rain that evening helped her figure out a lot.

Elliot's life and hers were two parallel lines. All she needed to do was to live her own life. As long as she did it with a cleared conscience.

When she returned home, she kept the umbrella and placed it outside the door.

Before she entered, she heard noises coming from the living area.

"You're strangling me!" Chad's angry voice came through.

Mike said, "Shut your mouth! Don't wake Avery up!"

Chad was breathing heavily. "Why did you bring me here? Send me home

now!"

Mike sat on the sofa and scratched his head. "I drank some alcohol, how could I send you home? Why don't you just stay here for the night!"

"You're asking me to sleep on the couch?!"

“What’s wrong with sleeping on the couch! It’s already a very good option for you!

Don’t make a fuss! Does that mean you want to sleep in my room?”

“Are you nuts? What if Avery and the two children find out about me? How embarrassing would it be for me?” Chad struggled to get up from the sofa and headed to Mike’s room.

Mike followed behind. “Wait up! Chad... why don’t you resign? Come to our office.

Elliot that jerk....”

“F*ck you! My boss is not a jerk. I know that you want to talk about Shea again. I can promise you. He does not have any relationship with Shea other than siblings! As for Zoe, it’s even more absurd! Mr. Foster has never liked her before!

Even if they accidentally slept together, that was all Zoe’s doing! Mr. Foster is very picky! Whether it was in his life or relationship wise, he always had high standards!”

Chad forgot that Mike asked him to be softer.

Even if Avery was in her room upstairs, she would be able to hear his yells.

“Our Avery has even higher standards!” Mike tried to argue with him. “Ever since I knew her, she has never had a single relationship! No matter how good-looking or amazing the guys pursuing her are, she remained calm! Is your boss as good as

Avery?"

Chad said, "But Avery is vicious! She almost killed Mr. Foster!"

Mike said, "You're the vicious one! Your boss was seeking death himself! A weak person like Avery would find it tough to even kill a chicken. How could she kill your boss? With a brain like yours, how did you manage to become the president's assistant?"

Chad had one hand on the door handle. He adjusted his glasses with the other hand. He looked lost.

Mike's words seemed to make sense.

Looking at him in a daze, Mike pushed him into the room and then closed the room door.

Avery could no longer hear what they were talking about after that. She entered the house and closed the door.

Chad's words kept repeating in her mind. Whether he was telling the truth or not, she had been affected by him.

Avery quickly headed upstairs and returned to her room. After taking off her jacket, she took a glass of water and took some folic acid.

She wondered what on earth did she deserve to get pregnant with three of Elliot's children!

Although the last two came out at the same time, it was still equally challenging bringing them out, not as easy as bringing one child up.

That was not the most important thing. The most important thing was because of these three children, she would never be able to break it off cleanly with him for the rest of her life!

Avery lay in bed and switched off the lights. She flipped around in bed for a long time. The more she flipped, the less sleepy she felt.

She picked up her phone and looked at the time. Only half an hour has passed.

She sighed in the dark and closed her eyes, forcing herself to sleep.

Chapter 426

After flipping around for a while longer, Avery picked up her phone and looked at the time again.

It was past midnight, soon approaching one. However, she could not sleep. She was completely wide away.

Almost by reflex, Avery pulled open the drawer of her nightstand and took some melatonin from it. She opened the bottle. When she was about to swallow the pill, the folic acid by her bed stunned her! She immediately threw the pill into the bin.

She had to sleep. It was for the child in her womb.

The next day at eight in the morning, after Avery sent the children to kindergarten, she bought breakfast home.

At that moment, Chad came out of Mike's room. He hurriedly buttoned his shirt and walked quickly.

He must have planned to leave before Avery could find out.

"Chad, I bought you breakfast," Avery said politely.

Chad was speechless. Hearing Avery's voice, Mike came out of his room.

"Avery, uh..." Mike blushed a little, trying to explain himself.

Avery calmly interrupted him. "If you two are together already, I think it's best you move out. After all, the children and I are here. We might disturb you. If you don't want to stay too far from me, we could buy another building in this neighborhood.

We could be neighbors."

Mike said, "No! You won't disturb us. I'm not moving out. Even if I bring Chad back, it's at 35 night..."

Chad slapped his forehead.

Mike said, "Chad, come to have breakfast." Chad was forced to sit by the table.

He looked at Avery.

She dressed up today. It was so gorgeous one could not help but notice it. She was in a cream sweater and a red dress. She was wearing a pair of leather flats on her feet.

She has made up a little. She looked good.

"Miss Tate, are you going on a date today?" Chad asked.

Mike said, "Eric Santos, do you know who is his? He has decided to sign his comeback single to us. We'll have an official signature ceremony at the hotel today.

Chad looked at Avery, stunned. "So, it's true that you cured Eric?!"

Avery changed the topic. "Didn't you block Mike? Why did you get back together?"

Talking about this, Chad was even more expressive. "I was drinking with colleagues last night. He directly went to where we were gathering and pulled me away!"

Mike furrowed his brows. "Speaking of which, you haven't taken me out from your blacklist of calls?"

Avery did not want to be the third wheel, so she got up. "You two slowly eat. I'll make a move."

At eleven in the morning, at the oldest five-star hotel in the city.

Eric Santos' first event after his comeback was held there.

The event was streamed live on the internet. The thousands of fans made this a trending topic!

At the Sterling Group in the President's office.

Elliot's computer screen was playing the broadcast of this famous event. In the broadcast, Avery was smiling sweetly next to Eric. They were both in cream sweaters, looking like a couple!

Elliot furrowed his brows tightly. The sweater that she was wearing was the one that she made for him previously!

Later on, they broke up, so he returned it to her. However, it was a sweater that he has worn before. How could she wear it to match another man? Elliot was so furious he coughed furiously!

Chapter 427

The office door was pushed open. When Ben saw how violently he was coughing, he immediately walked over and gave him a cup of water.

"Don't come to work if your body has not fully healed! You never listen to the doctor."

Elliot placed the cup down on the table and strode over to the washroom. Ben wanted to follow him, but he saw what was playing on Elliot's computer screen from the corner of his eyes.

“Eric, everyone is curious why you chose to collaborate with Tate Industries? Was it because they paid too much?” The reporter chuckled and asked.

Eric looked at Avery and smiled. Just when he was about to answer, Avery said,

“No. Eric said he has left the industry for three years. At that moment, he was like a newcomer, so he only charged us a little.”

There was an uproar below the stage. Miss Tate, how did you know Eric? Are you two close together? I see that you two are wearing a cream sweater today...” The reporter said in a gossiping manner.

Avery blushed a little.

jacket because the hotel is quite hot, so I took it off.”

“Eric, your comeback this time, you must have a lot of choices, yet you pick Tate Industries. Are you close to Miss Tate? When did you know each other?”

Eric replied, “We got to know each other when I was sick. This song was also written when I was sick.”

Suddenly, someone below the stage demanded, "Eric, can you perform this new song live for us?"

After this was demanded, everyone cheered together too. Avery smiled and looked at him before retreating to the side, letting him have the stage.

At the Sterling Group, Elliot came out from the bathroom. Ben had already switched off the live stream on Elliott's laptop.

Ben could not understand. Since they have already broken up, why was he still concerned about her news? Whoever she ended up with is her own matter.

Why did he still care? Was he not hurt badly enough from the previous incident?

"Elliot, I'll send you home!" Ben stood in front of him, determined. "Look at you right now. Are you planning to die in the office?"

Elliot's face turned blue. He clenched his fists tightly and strode over to the elevator. Ben followed behind him.

"She came looking for me yesterday," Elliot said in a low hoarse voice when he entered the elevator.

Ben looked at him in disbelief. "You said Avery went looking for you yesterday?"

"I didn't see her." Elliot's Adam's apple moved a little. "She deliberately wore the cream sweater today to annoy me."

Ben found it hard to believe that Avery was this type of woman.

However, the wound in Elliot's heart constantly reminded him that he did not understand Avery very well.

"If you don't love her, no matter what she wears, it will not provoke you," Ben went straight to the point, "You can't change her, so change yourself."

It was easier said than done!

If he could force himself to not love her, he would not be in so much pain up till that moment.

At the hotel, after Eric sang his new song, the atmosphere there was at its peak!

After that, Avery, as the President of the company, explained to everyone the direction in which Tate Industries was growing. She also introduced the upcoming products and explained their functions.

Because Eric had always been standing next to Avery, the viewers of the live stream did not reduce but increased on the contrary.

The marketing effect of Tate Industries was at its most effective.

At Wonder Technology, when Wanda saw the live stream, she was so furious her facial expressions were distorted.

Chapter 428

“Avery has some tricks up her sleeves!” Wanda said coldly.

Although Eric was not the hottest celebrity at that moment, he once was! His official comeback that day had sensationalized the entire entertainment industry!

Wanda did not understand why Eric wanted to help Avery. Previously, he tweeted for the Tate Industries, rescuing them once.

This time, he actually wrote a song for them! How absurd!

Wanda dialed Zoe. The call was soon picked up.

“Zoe, do you know why Eric Santos is helping Avery? Are they secretly together?”

Zoe was also watching the live stream. She was also in a bad mood.

Eric was not only talented. He was also very good-looking. The women would find it hard to resist hiszd seduction.

“He already told us the answer just now at the live stream,” Zoe said frigidly, “He said that he knew Avery when he was sick.”

Wanda did not understand what Zoe meant. “What’s so strange about49 that?”

“He was a vegetable previously! They don’t have consciousness! Even if Avery was in front of him every day, he would not get to know Avery! So, he must have known Avery after he was cured! How was he cured? Why was he so nice to Avery? Isn’t that clear?”

Wanda was shocked. “Are you saying Avery cured35 him!”

Zoe gritted her teeth. “Yes! Avery must have cured him! He must be grateful to Avery for saving his life, which is why he is doing everything to pay back!”

Wanda suddenly laughed.

Zoe was confused. “What are you laughing at? Avery has Eric as her trump card!

You should find a way to stop her!”

“Since when did Avery become so great? Why have I never heard of it before?”

She could cure a vegetable? If she really has the abilities, why does she have to open a company? She should just be a doctor and cure patients. Look at you treating Shea. Elliot has paid you three hundred million. Isn't that much more than operating a company?”

Wanda went against Zoe's speculation.

Zoe said, “If you don't believe me, forget about it! I'm not planning to persuade

you!”.

Wanda said, “It's not that I don't believe you, I don't believe Avery! How could she be so great!

Zoe took a deep breath. “Initially, I didn't believe how great she was either, but... this was a fact that I can't ignore even if I can't believe it! Lying to myself would only make a fool out of me!”

The smile on Wanda's face completely vanished.

“Are you afraid already?” Zoe mocked when she did not hear a response from Wanda, "If I knew you were only like that, I wouldn't have invested all my money in you!"

Wanda was provoked, "Zoe, you have been defeated by Avery. Do you think everyone is like you? Just wait and see!"

Zoe was not angry, on the contrary, she laughed. "I'll just wait and see how you defeat her!"

At the hotel, after the official signing ceremony ended, Eric got into a black sedan under the protection of bodyguards.

The fans waiting outside the hotel screamed!

Avery was behind Eric. She looked at the group of people swarming all over. She truly felt the difference between celebrities and ordinary people.

After Eric left, the fans waiting outside dispersed too.

Not far away, a black Rolls-Roice was parked there. Elliot was in the car.

After the crowd dispersed, he looked at Avery in the cream sweater with cold eyes. She was talking to Mike. Mike affectionately wrapped his arms around her shoulders, taking her to the parking lot.

This scene broke his heart.

Avery never had a shortage of men protecting her.

Ben was gripping the steering wheel. He looked at Elliot's cold yet pained expression. "Elliot, forget about her! Without you, she is still doing well."

Chapter 429

Elliot could see. Avery was indeed doing well.

After Avery got in the car, she took a flask out from her back, twisted the cap open, and drank some warm water.

Mike waited for her to finish drinking before moving the car.

"What are we having for lunch?" He asked.

Avery said, "It's not lunch yet, I'm not hungry."

Mike replied, "We could still decide beforehand!"

Avery pondered for a few seconds before saying, "Next time, I'll deal with lunch on my own.

Mike had to have meat for every meal. Avery was not interested in meat at all at that moment. Before her pregnancy, she had a good appetite, so if Mike saw her not eating meat, he would definitely be suspicious.

“Are you trying to lose weight?” Mike asked suspiciously, “Avery, stop doing that to yourself! You’re not becoming a celebrity. You don’t have to compare yourself to 49 them!”

Avery clutched her forehead. She knew Mike was meticulous, he would surely simply speculate.

“I’m not going on a diet. I just don’t want to have lunch with³⁵ you.”

“Why? If you don’t have lunch with me, who are you having lunch with?”

Avery said, “I think we should still keep some distance. I heard what Chad said last night. You care so much about Chad and Elliot’s relationship, what if Chad also cares about your relationship with me?”

Mike was speechless.

Avery continued, “We’ll eat on our own in the future. We can still head back home together after work.”

Mike said, “Oh...okay!”

At that moment, Mike’s phone rang. He fished his phone out and had a look at who was calling. He slowed the car down and put on his Bluetooth earpiece.

“Are you with Avery right now?” On the other end of the line, Chad’s voice came through.

Mike glanced at Avery. “N-N.... What’s going on?”

He only lied because he wanted to know what Chad was about to say.

Chad said, “Do you know where Avery’s cream sweater she wore today came from? She’s terrible! She made the sweater for Mr. Foster previously...”

Mike looked at the cream sweater on Avery and said calmly, “Oh. If she gave your boss the sweater, why is it in her hands?”

Chad exhaled. “Perhaps he returned it to her after they broke up!”

“Since he has returned it to Avery, Avery will wear it whenever she wants to! What the hell does it have to do with your boss!” Mike was gradually getting infuriated.

He did not mince his words.

Chad did not expect that Mike would be so fierce.

“My point is, Avery is doing that only to provoke Mr. Foster! She must have agreed to do so with Eric! How dare they wear white together. What? Are they trying to announce their relationship? Mr. Foster saw the live stream this morning!

He was pissed off!”

“Since he has already seen the live stream, he should have already heard Eric’s explanation, right? What is he upset about? Does he expect Avery to be single for the rest of her life to please him?”

Mike’s question made Chad ponder silently. Mike made sense. Why was his boss so angry then? They have long split up and even tried to kill each other. Logically speaking, there should not be any feelings for each other left!

Avery was sitting in the front passenger seat. She could basically guess what

Chad said.

The reason she wore the cream sweater that day was because Eric requested that she wore the necklace the night before.

The necklace was black, so wearing cream would match it more. Avery did not have a cream jacket, so she chose to wear the cream sweater.

She never thought that Eric would wear a matching color sweater that day. She was quite embarrassed that it caused a misunderstanding.

Chapter 430

However, Avery did not want to explain herself.

“Chad, go and tell your boss that Avery is already together with Eric!” Mike wanted Elliot to give up and stop harping on Avery.

When Avery heard what nonsense Mike was spewing, she immediately snatched his Bluetooth earpiece from him.

“Chad, don’t listen to him,” Avery said, “Eric and I are collaborators. Also, your boss was the one who returned the sweater to me, so I will wear it whenever I want to. In the future, if I ever get together with someone, I might wear this to the date25 too.”

Chad was speechless.

Mike, that idiot! How dare he lie and say that he was not together with96 Avery.

Other than awkward, there was nothing else to describe his current situation.

“Miss Tate. It’s your clothes. You can wear them whenever you want to. I’m just complaining to Mike. I don't mean anything by it. I have already realized that Mr.

Foster is no saint. He has his flaws too. I will constantly remind myself in the future," Chadad said.

"Hmm. Did he go to work today? Shouldn't he be at home resting?" Avery asked calmly.

Chad replied, "He never listens to the doctor, but Ben has sent him⁴⁹ home."

"Hmm."

Up to that point, they did not know what else to talk³⁵ about.

Chad suddenly said, "I hope you have a great sales record, becoming the number one in the industry."

Avery was speechless.

Mike took the Bluetooth earpiece back to end the awkward conversation.

"Avery, you're pretty nifty with your fingers! When are you going to make me a sweater?" Mike teased.

Avery glared at him.

Mike chuckled and changed the topic. "Elliot is terrifying! How is he still not giving up on you yet! It looks like you did not stab him deep enough!”

Avery corrected him. “I did not stab him.”

“Oh. I suspect that he is probably mentally unstable.”

Avery said, “I used to read a book on success. In it, it mentioned that successful people usually have different thinking than an ordinary person.”

Mike said, “But you’re normal!”

Avery said, “I’m not considered a successful person.”

“You’re not successful? You got the business tycoon, Elliot, to fall in love with you, then you got the dazzling celebrity, Eric, to fall head over heels for you. Truth be told, I think Eric might have fallen for you. During the event just now, he kept looking at you. The gaze... is not right,” Mike exaggerated.

Avery said, “Are you asking for a beating?”

Mike shut up.

In the evening, many topics were trending on Tweeter.

[Eric Santos Announces Relationship]

Tapping into this trending topic. A marketing account posted a new Tweet. It said that Eric and Avery were not only collaborators. They were lovers!

More importantly, the crucial evidence was the necklace that Avery was wearing that morning. It belonged to Eric!

The account posted a screenshot of an old fan commenting.

[I have been Eric's fan for 8 years! Even when he retired because of his injuries during the past 3 years, I have never forgotten him! I have been waiting for him to come back! He brought such a huge surprise to his comeback today! New fans might not be able to recognize the necklace on Avery Tate, but the old fans would know! This necklace is Eric's personal belonging! Back then, out of 10 events, he would wear the necklace 8 times! Now he has given the necklace to Avery. If this is not love, what is it?!)

Below it was countless photos of Eric in events back then. In every photo, Eric was wearing a black necklace.

Was this considered confirmation!?

After the hot topic appeared, the internet was in mourning! Avery was hated on the internet too.

At Elliot's mansion. A news notification popped up on Elliot's phone.

[Eric Santos' Relationship Exposed! His Lover: The Gorgeous President of Tate Industries, Avery Tate!)

Chapter 431

Elliot has just finished showering. Water beads dripped down from his hair.

He had a dry towel in one hand and his phone in the other.

When he saw the news, he tapped it with trembling fingers. After he read through, his eyes were darkened and cold!

Since when did Avery accept Eric's token of affection? Did she come to look for him yesterday to tell him that she has started a new relationship? Was there the need to do so?

He threw his phone at the cabinet. It slammed loudly!

In the luxurious European-manner mansion, Wanda had a glass of wine in her hand, slowly swirling.

She looked at the news on the internet smugly before taking a sip of red wine.

"Do you know what celebrities are most afraid of?" Wanda said in Zoe's direction, “They’re most afraid of losing fans. What would make a celebrity lose fans?

The

announcement of a new relationship. No matter how famous Eric is, he can’t escapezd this!”

Zoe was in admiration of Wanda.

“This would definitely hurt Eric. No matter how he tries to explain it, he would surely lose fans.” Wanda laughed delightedly. “The times have long changed. We are no longer short of handsome and talented 49 celebrities.”

Zoe said, “Don’t be too smug too early. The most famous male celebrities right

now are not as great as Eric.”

“You hold him in such high regard. Don’t tell me you’re his fan too?” Wanda looked at Zoe in³⁵ disbelief.

“Will it be strange that I’m his fan? Our main intention is not to smear Eric.
Our

target is Avery, so you should know not to cross the line,” Zoe said, grabbed her

bag, and left.

At that moment, Wanda was staying with Richard, so Zoe often came to have a meal together.

After Zoe left, Richard said to Wanda, "Don't bother her. Do it accordingly to your way. You're a businesswoman, profit is what you need to consider."

Wanda responded distractedly, "Your daughter pissed me off, shouldn't you repay me in some way? Massage my feet."

Richard immediately came over to massage her feet. Wanda lay on the sofa with a comfortable expression. She sighed. "Why did I have to marry Jack back then?

You don't know that when I was his wife, I had to obey him all the while, relying on him for my living expenses. What a loser! How I wish he was alive. I want him to see how great I am right now!"

Richard said pleasingly, "If he was still alive, you would never have come out on your own. We would never be together either."

Wanda said, "That's true. Although he is dead, his daughter is still alive. Whatever he owes me, I'll make his daughter pay back with interest!"

At the Starry River Villa, when Avery saw the news, she was stunned because before Eric was cured, she was a fake fan of his. She did not know that the necklace was something Eric used to wear often.

If she knew it, she would not have accepted the gift. When Eric requested for her to wear the necklace the day before, she did not think much about it.

She picked up her phone and dialed Eric.

When Eric picked up the call, his tone was as calm and gentle as usual.
“Avery,

do you want me to clarify or...”

“Yes.” Avery did not wait for him to finish talking before saying firmly, “I’m sorry, Eric. I didn’t know how much the necklace meant to you. I’ll return it to you tomorrow.”

“I’ll clarify, but please do not return the gift to me. I’ll be sad,” Eric pleaded.

Avery gave in. “Okay, I’ll keep it, but you have to clarify our relationship.”

Eric was silent for a few seconds before agreeing to it. After the call, Avery picked up a glass and drank some water.

Chapter 432

“How manipulative! See, I said he was interested in you!” Mike was sitting next to her. He heard their conversation clearly. "But if you're interested in him too, you'll be an item with him by tonight!"

"He is too young. Young people are easily impulsive," Avery explained, "I was once young too.

Mike said, "I know! When you were young, you were impulsive for Elliot. Now you're having retribution."

Avery was speechless.

"Avery, stop looking at Tweeter." Mike touched her head. "The people on the internet are so rude! They say such harsh words! Don't take their words to heart."

"I'm not looking at Tweeter," Avery said calmly, "Even if I did, it would not affect me. I can still take it."

"That's great!" Mike looked at the time. "Chad asked me out for supper. I'll head out first! Call me if there is anything."

"Go! Don't drink!"

"I know. I promise you I won't drink!" Mike promised before grabbing the car keys and heading out.

At nine at night, Avery switched off the children's room's light. When Avery's footsteps gradually grew softer, Layla tugged on Hayden's⁴⁹ arm.

"Hayden, Mommy rejected Uncle Eric. I'm a little sad. Why doesn't Mommy like Uncle Eric? I like him a lot. He is so handsome. How good would it be if he was my father?" Layla found it hard to calm down, so she started chattering.

She did not dare to say all those in front of Avery because she knew that she could not change her mother's³⁵ decision.

Hayden was quite calm toward this matter. Although Eric was very good-looking and he also helped his Mommy, he felt that no one in this world was worthy of her.

"Then, good luck."

Layla was confused. "Hayden, what do you mean? I don't understand."

"Good luck in growing up. Once you grow up, you marry him," Hayden explained.

Layla was stunned. "Hayden, are you serious?"

"It looks like you don't really like him."

"I really do! But once I grow up, won't he be old?" Layla was conflicted.

Hayden said, "If you really like him, you won't mind how old he is."

Layla took a deep breath. "Okay then..then wish me luck."

Avery returned to her room and turned on her phone.

Eric posted a Tweet five minutes ago. His clarification was simple.

[If I am lucky enough to find someone I love and who loves me in the future, I would surely share the good news. As for Miss Tate, she is my goddess. I will always admire and respect her. I implore all my fans to stop attacking her. Thank

you.)

After his Tweet, it was immediately trending!

Before bed, Elliot looked at his phone again. Another news popped up.

(Eric Santos Claims That Avery Tate Is His Goddess!)

Elliot gritted his teeth and looked at Eric's Tweet. Goddess?

What a shameless person! He should just proclaim that he loves her!

However, it seemed like Avery was not seduced. If not, Eric's Tweet would not have been that way. He would have written, (Yes, I am together with Avery Tate!]

Elliot furrowed his brows. A sense of indescribable crisis loomed over his head.

He could not help but send a message to Avery. This was the first time they contacted each other after his injury.

Chapter 433

Avery did not see Elliot's message immediately because she went to bed after she saw Eric's Tweet.

Early pregnancy was usually associated with nausea and drowsiness. She could sleep easier for the past two days.

Usually, when she occasionally could not sleep, she had to rely on melatonin to get a good night's sleep.

However, that night, she fell asleep after lying in bed. She slept all the way until five in the morning the next25 day.

If it were not for her wanting to pee, she should still be able to sleep.

Once she woke up, the first thing she did was to take her phone and look at the time. Turns out, she saw Elliot's message. She was stunned. She quickly took her phone to the96 washroom.

Elliot's message read, [Were you looking for me yesterday?)

Yesterday? Avery thought back carefully. She did not look for him the day2d before!

Hold up!

She looked at the time he sent the message. It was ten-thirty the night before!

Avery felt chills running down her back. She was completely 49 awake.

Coming out of the washroom, she took her phone back to bed. After lying down in bed, she looked at his news. She was hesitating about how to reply to him.

Should she tell him that she was pregnant? He needed to recuperate at that moment. She better not use that to agitate him.

However, it was not easy to come up with a lie. Elliot was extremely alert. He was not that easy to lie35 to.

After thinking and struggling for a while, Avery replied, (I passed by your place the day before, so I thought to stop by.)

After sending the message, she completely lost her urge to sleep. Avery held her phone and looked at the ceiling with her eyes wide open.

Her heart was about to pop up. He only sent a single message. Why was she so nervous?

Why when she was facing other men, she could remain calm and composed, yet when she faced him, her thoughts were often easily messed up?

Her notification was on silent mode. Also, she reckoned that Elliot must be asleep at that moment. He would surely not reply to her message. Thus, she held onto her phone and opened her eyes wide in a daze.

When her eyes were rather dry, she picked up her phone to look at the time, yet...

she saw his reply!

His reply was sent after her message! It was replied instantly! It was five in the morning, yet he replied to her message instantly. Avery had to suspect that he did not sleep the entire night! That was because Elliot did not have the habit of playing with his phone.

Avery sat up and looked at his reply.

Elliot replied, (Stop by? What is there to stop by? Don't tell me that you wanted to see me!)

The exclamation mark frightened Avery a little. It made her feel that Elliot was furious when he typed the message. Avery smacked her forehead.

How should she reply to him?

She had a good night's sleep. She should be feeling spirited, yet when she saw his message, she was rather bewildered.

Avery's fingers moved. [Have you stayed up all night?]

She wanted to change the topic, so she sent that message. However, that message infuriated Elliot!

After sending the message to her the night before, Elliot has been waiting for her message for the entire night! Halfway through, he tried to turn off his phone and force himself to sleep but to no avail!

Chapter 434

Elliot thought about how he was the President of the Sterling Group, yet his heart was broken by her. He took the initiative to send her a message, yet she did not reply to it immediately!

He was in an utterly bad mood! He looked at her message with reddened eyes.

He quickly typed on his phone, (Aren't you delighted?)

Avery was speechless. What a heated message.

However, Avery considered that he did not sleep for the entire night. It was only normal that he was throwing a25 fit.

Avery calmed herself down and patiently replied. [It's almost 6. Go to bed! I'm going to sleep for a while longer too.).

After this message, Avery lay down once96 again.

Elliot did not reply to her anymore. He lost this round! In relationships, whoever took the initiative, they were the loser!

At seven-thirty in the morning, the gates of Elliot's mansion slowly opened. Mrs.

Scarlet was carrying her bag. She was about to leave.

Shea looked at her back and quickly chased after her. When Mrs. Scarlet heard footsteps coming from behind her, she immediately turned around and looked.

When she saw that it was Shea, she stopped in her tracks.

“Shea, I have something to do in the morning. I have to make a trip. Could you be a good girl and wait for your teacher at home, please?”

Shea shook her head. Mrs. Scarlet has been with her every day. She was used to Mrs. Scarlet’s accompaniment.

“Where are you going, take me with you.”

Mrs. Scarlet furrowed her brows. “I’m going to the bus station. It’s quite far and there are a lot of people. You won’t want to go there.”

Shea did not like crowded places. She was afraid of strangers. However, that day, she wanted to try.

Mrs. Scarlet could not persuade her otherwise, so she could only take Shea along. If Shea was afraid, she would get the bodyguard to take Shea home.

At eight-thirty in the morning, Mrs. Scarlet brought Shea to the bus station. There was a huge crowd at the station.

Mrs. Scarlet was holding Shea’s hand tightly. She also constantly paid attention to Shea’s emotions.

Although Shea has been furrowing her brows, she did not show any signs of fear or resistance.

A moment later, the person Mrs. Scarlet was looking for walked over from one of the stops.

“Shea, why are you here?” The person that spoke was Mrs. White, the servant that used to work for Rosalie.

That day, Mrs. Scarlet came over to send her off.

Shea looked at Mrs. White curiously.

“Shea, you’re so brave now. You dare to come to a place with so many people,”

Mrs. White lamented, “I hope you get better soon.”

“She has recovered quite a lot,” Mrs. Scarlet said, “You’re going back home. I’m guessing you won’t be here anymore, right!”

Mrs. White nodded. “They gave me a huge sum of money. I don’t have to worry about the future.”

Although they received a sum of money, there was an obvious melancholy between Mrs. White’s brows.

“Shea, why didn’t you attend your mother’s funeral? Did your brother forbid you to attend?” Mrs. White’s eyes were rather reddened. “You should have attended it.

She’s your mother!”

When Shea heard what Mrs. White said, she was rather shocked. “What mother?”

“Your brother’s mother is your mother!”

Shea blinked. She seemed to understand what Mrs. White was saying. “Big Brother did not ask me to call her mother. I’m not close to her.”

“Hmm. You are indeed not close to her, but she is your mother. Shea, if she were to know how much you have recovered now, she would be very happy.”

“But she’s dead, she won’t be able to see me anymore.” Shea’s words made Mrs.

White’s eyes wet.

“Shea, your mother was killed by someone. I don’t ask for you to avenge your mother. I only hope you get well soon. Because once you get well, you will naturally seek revenge on her behalf. Also, don’t go to the old mansion in the future. Don’t go there because your mother’s killer is right there,” Mrs. White said very softly. She was afraid that she would be overheard.

Shea's head hurt from receiving so much information at once.

"I don't dare to tell your brother this. I'm afraid that I might be silenced.
Shea, just remember what I tell you. You must remember. When...when I'm dead, or when you've recovered, you avenge your mother..."

Shea was stunned. She could not help but grab Mrs. White's arm.
Something

struck her in her heart! It hurts!

"Also..." Mrs. White could see that Shea understood what she was saying, so she went in closer to Shea's ears, "Hayden Tate is your brother's son. His biological

son. Your mother was killed because she knew about this."

Chapter 435

The Tate Industries.

After Avery had handled all the work at hand, she could not help but look at her

phone.

She clicked on her chat history with Elliot and looked through it a few times.

Why did he think of messaging her the night²⁵ before?

She went to look for him the day before yesterday. He should have known about it on that night itself.

Why did he not contact her that night?

She then clicked on scandal about her and Eric. She could not help but think if Elliot had seen the news about her and Eric the night before, so he took the initiative to message her?

What kind of attitude did he have toward her at that moment?

If he hated her to death, even if he had seen the news regarding her, he probably would not have contacted her.

He contacted her last night, and he did not mention the past, has he already gotten over it?

It was impossible!

He was hurt so severely, so how could he get over it so easily?

She furrowed her brows, and her mind was slightly in a mess.

If he had not messaged her last night, she actually would not have thought of him

so frequently

Her phone on the table rang. She picked up her phone and answered it.

“Avery! I am downstairs at your company! Come on down quickly! We’ll have lunch together! “Tammy’s bubbly voice could be heard coming from the other end of the call.

Avery agreed without thinking too much into it.

Five minutes later, she saw Tammy downstairs.

There were two sweet girls standing next to Tammy. They were cute and pretty, and they were stylishly dressed. Just like Tammy’s style.

“Avery, let me introduce them to you. This is my good friend, Lisa. This is my cousin, Ellie. Both of them are also my bridesmaids at my wedding.”

“Hello, Avery! We have met before! I am Tammy’s college mate!” Lisa said enthusiastically.

Ellie said, “Hello, Avery. We have not met before, but I have often heard about you from my cousin, so I am very, very familiar with you!”

Avery smiled as they went together to a restaurant nearby.

“Are you three out shopping today?”

“We had only shopped for a while. They asked me to invite you, so we came over to your company.” Tammy wrapped an arm around Avery’s shoulder and said, “Avery, both of them are Eric’s die-hard fans! I took a photo with Eric a few days ago, and both of them are jealous to death. Hahaha!”

Avery instantly understood what they meant.

“If there’s a chance next time, I will bring you guys to meet him.”

Since they are all good friends, of course, she would be willing to help.

“Avery, you’re really the best! I didn’t expect you to be so straightforward! As to be expected of Eric’s goddess! Hahaha!” Lisa said with excitement.

Ellie proposed, “Avery, could you invite Eric to attend my cousin’s wedding? We can pay and hire him to sing a few songs!”

Tammy said, “Avery, would that put you in a difficult position? If it’s too difficult for you, then just forget it. It’s fine to just bring us to his events when there’s a chance in the future. He had just made his comeback, so his schedule is probably particularly packed. I saw that his new song has already topped the charts on all music platforms. How awesome!”

Avery nodded. “I’ll ask later. What if he is free, right?”

They had meat stew for lunch.

It has already been two days since Avery touched any meat.

She no longer felt disgusted anymore, so she was craving it a little.

“Avery, you usually don’t have spicy food, don’t you?” Tammy saw that she had put quite a bit of pepper in her bowl so she was slightly surprised.

Avery had a piece of meat with the pepper and her appetite instantly increased.

“Why do I feel that you’re getting thinner and thinner? Are you not eating properly?” Tammy asked with puzzlement as she stared at Avery’s thin face.

Chapter 436

Avery said sheepishly, “Is that so? It’s just your illusion.”

After she had happily eaten her fill, she took out her phone and sent a message to Eric, asking him if he was free on the first of May.

She did not expect him to reply so quickly.

After he had explained the matter to him, he quickly²⁵ agreed.

“Tammy, Eric said he will be coming to attend your wedding on the first of May.”

As soon as she finished saying that loud cheers of excitement instantly sounded!

Tammy, Lisa, and Ellie were all crazily excited.

In just a blink of an eye, Tammy told Jun the news.

Jun then told Ben the news.

“My wife said Avery was the one who invited him,” Jun said resentfully, “I suddenly don’t want to get married anymore. My wife is Eric’s fan...a crazy fan!

Her good friends as well... I should say that almost all those women are Eric’s fans. When the time comes, who would be looking at me? All of them would be looking at Eric! As the groom, all my thunder would be stolen. This is completely different from what I imagine the wedding would be!”

Jun felt upset, but he did not dare to tell Tammy.

Ben sympathized with him very much but felt a little delighted about his misfortune as well.” Don’t worry. You won’t be the only person feeling upset. Eric likes Avery. Elliot would probably be upset as well.”

Avery had only worn a white sweater yesterday, which coincidentally became so-called matching outfits with what Eric had worn, and Elliot was furious.

If Avery truly were to date Eric, perhaps Elliot would be up all night losing sleep.

“Does Elliot have a masochistic tendency? If any woman dared to hurt me, it would already be very kind on my part to not hurt her twofold. It would absolutely be impossible for me to continue liking her.” Jun was puzzled.

Ben said very objectively, “It’s not exactly a masochistic tendency. After all, Avery was once heartbroken as well. He is just more stubborn, no matter if it’s the career or the person that he likes.”

Once he had made up his mind, he would never change his mind anymore.

Others would turn back when they hit a dead-end, but he would not even turn back if he had hit a dead-end.

“Oh, then should we tell him about this?” asked Jun.

After thinking about it for a few seconds, Ben said, “I’ll find a chance to tell him.

At three in the afternoon, Avery got back to her company.

Before she pushed open her office door, Mike called out to her.

“Avery, come over here!”

Avery strode over to Mike as soon as she heard that. “What’s the matter?”

Mike took her by the arm and brought her to the reception room.

A man and a woman were sitting inside the reception room.

“They are the staff from Fashion Forward, the magazine, and they would like to interview you, “Mike whispered in Avery’s ear, “I have checked them out. Fashion Forward is quite famous. See if you want to accept being interviewed by them.”

After Avery gave it a quick thought, she nodded.

“Hello,” Avery greeted the staff.

The staff said politely, “Hello, Miss Tate. We can first conduct a simple interview.

After that, you may come to our studio to have some photos taken when you are free. If you are free now, we can start the interview immediately. It will take up around half an hour of your time.”

Avery looked at the time and gladly agreed.

“Miss Tate, would you have an even more in-depth collaboration with Eric after this? For example, invite him to be the ambassador. Have you ever considered that?" The reporter mentioned Eric right off the bat.

Avery was not the least bit surprised at all.

If the scandal between her and Eric had not gone viral last night and caused a ruckus, this kind of fashion magazine would not have come to interview her at all.

"There are no plans for that at the moment," she replied.

"Eric said that you are a goddess to him, then is he your dream hunk?" the reporter asked while smiling

That question made Avery hesitate for a moment. "He could be considered so! I admire him very much."

"We found out online that you once had a relationship with the president of the Sterling Group, Elliot Foster. May I know if this is true?" The reporter's questions got more and more tricky.

Chapter 437

Of course, Avery would not answer that question.

She could not show too much resistance as well, so she implicitly said, "You shouldn't mention any questions related to him. I'm afraid that when the time comes, your magazine won't be able to be distributed smoothly

Her answer made the gossipy staff of the magazine aware of their foolishness.

"Alright, Miss Tate. You have studied medicine. Why did you think of starting your own business after you graduated? What is the motivation that made you choose to go into²⁵ business?"

Avery furrowed her brows slightly at that question.

If she were to answer it seriously, it would take more than a day and a night for her to finish her⁹⁶ story She planned to deal with them as simply as possible.

Just as she was about to open her mouth to speak, an insuppressible nauseated feeling emerged within her. She covered her mouth with one hand and rushed out toward the washroom outside.

"Miss Tate! What's wrong?" Both the staff also rushed⁴⁹ over.

The incident happened too quickly and no one could react in time.

After Avery ran to the washroom, she threw up into the toilet ³⁵ bowl!

She threw up everything that she had eaten during lunch.

Because it was too uncomfortable, tears welled up in her eyes.

After her stomach was emptied from throwing up, the sense of discomfort instantly vanished without a trace.

She flushed the toilet and leaned against the wall to stabilize herself.

Mike rushed over with strides into the washroom as soon as he heard.

“Avery, what’s the matter?” Mike grabbed her arms and pulled her around to make her face him. “Why is your face so pale? Did you throw up?”

Avery pulled his big hands away and walked over to the sink. She turned on the tap and got some water to wash her face. “I had meat stew together with Tammy for lunch, and we ordered a bit too much. I didn’t want it to go to waste, so I overate.”

“You could’ve packed the food if you couldn’t finish it! Why did you stuff yourself until you threw up?” Mike furrowed his brows and said, “I will send you back to rest.”

Avery said, “The interview is not over yet! I will go back on my own after the interview has ended.”

“You’ve already thrown up. Other matters can first be put aside.”

“I don’t feel uncomfortable now.” After she had washed her face, she felt a lot more relaxed. Therefore, when she walked out of the washroom, she said, “Mike, leave me be. Carry on with your work!”

After saying that, she said to the two staff apologetically, “I’m sorry! Let’s continue!”

Because she was not feeling well, the two staff just followed up with a few simple questions, and then they ended the interview.

After she had sent the people from the magazine away, Avery returned to her office to grab her bag and prepared to go home.

She was not feeling that uncomfortable at that moment, but after she had thrown up, she felt as if her body had been emptied and she became slightly weak.

She wanted to go home and lay down.

Ever since she learned that she was pregnant, she never drove herself anymore.

That was because her morning sickness was more severe during her first pregnancy, and she was afraid her symptoms would be even worse for this pregnancy.

It would be more dangerous to drive under such circumstances.

She hailed a taxi at the roadside after she walked out of the company.

After she got home, she nestled on the sofa in the living room, took out her phone, and sent a text to Tammy.

After she had thought it through, she decided to tell Tammy about her pregnancy.

After Tammy received the message from Avery, she immediately found a hidden place and called her.

“Avery Tate! You’re pregnant? Whose baby are you carrying? F*ck! That’s too shocking! I am going to get a cardiac arrest!” Tammy shouted on the phone. She was extraordinarily excited. She was even more excited than meeting Eric.

Chapter 438

Avery pulled her phone further away from her ear as her eardrums hurt a little.

“Avery Tate! Don’t play dead! Hurry up and tell me! Whose child are you carrying?”

Ah! I am going crazy! Where are you now! I want to go find you! I want you to explain everything to me face-to-face!" Avery could not help but laugh at Tammy's reaction.

"I am at home now. Don't come looking for me. I'm going to rest after I finish up this call with you," Avery said lazily, "Whose child can I still be carrying... I'm telling you about this because my morning sickness is starting to get worse now.

Even eating has become a problem, let alone drinking... If someone were to persuade me to drink at your wedding, I'll have to trouble you to help me block it."

They had previously agreed to have fun together at Tammy's bachelorette party the night before her 25 wedding.

Once a group of them gathered, it would certainly be inevitable that there would be drinking. Telling Tammy beforehand could avoid a lot of trouble.

"You're pregnant so you certainly can't drink! I won't let you drink by then," said

Tammy, and then she guessed, "You can't be pregnant with Elliot's baby, right?"

My God, what are you two trying to do?"

When Avery heard his name, sleepiness instantly overwhelmed her.

Things between her and Elliot were temporarily irresolvable, so her mind would automatically avoid all information related to him.

That way she would not be in so much pain.

“Help me keep this a secret because the child may not even live past three months.” Avery got up from the couch and walked upstairs.

“Alright, I certainly will help you keep it a secret,” said Tammy. Suddenly, she got angry.” Other than spreading his seeds, what else can that jerk, Elliot, do? Is he still a man?”

Avery’s temples throbbed a little. “Don’t curse him anymore. This kind of thing won’t happen again in the future.”

She would just take it that this child that she was carrying was compensation to

Elliot.

It did not matter if she was able to deliver this child smoothly, she and he no longer owed each other anything anymore in the future.

“You’re really easy to bully!” Tammy stood up for Avery. “If he dares to touch you again next time, you just directly take out a pair of scissors!”

After Avery realized what Tammy had implied, both her cheeks instantly became completely reddened.

“Tammy, don’t be angry. If the child is healthy, I will deliver the child. It’s not hard for me to raise an additional child.”

“Hmm. Go and rest! I won’t bother you anymore.”

In the evening at Elliot’s mansion.

Ben’s car slowly parked in the yard.

Elliot was in gray loungewear. He stood at the door and surveyed Ben.

“I am here to mooch dinner from you.” Ben put the gifts that he brought in the living room. After that, he told Elliot about what happened at the company that day. Following that, he said, “Just continue resting at home after this! After resting at home for a day today, you clearly looked better.”

Elliot ignored it.

“Where is Shea? I’ll go call her to dinner.” Ben looked around but she did not see

Shea.

“She is not feeling well today.” Elliot headed toward the dining room with big strides. “Aren’t you taking a little too much effort just to come to my house to mooch dinner from me?”

“I am mainly here to see you. How were you yesterday? I had a nightmare last night.” Ben kept nagging while following by his side. “How is Shea not well? Is the injury on her head making her unwell? When is her third treatment?”

“You’re extra talkative today,” Elliot said with disgust. A sharp ray flashed past his eyes. “Is something up with you?”

“Nothing is up with me.” Ben got sheepish.

Elliot noticed his reaction and he did not continue hounding him anymore.

Both just coldly refused to give in like that. In the end, it was Ben who lost the battle.

“Are you really not going to Jun’s wedding?” Ben sat on the dining chair and raised his eyebrows. “Eric is going. Avery was the one who invited him.”

Surely, the calmness on Elliot’s face had disappeared.

“The day before the wedding, they have booked a holiday villa by the beach as they have decided to party all night!” Ben continued, “I don’t know if Eric will be going, but Avery certainly will be going.”

Elliot’s gaze was cold. All his emotions were suppressed at the bottom of his heart. Three words coldly came out of his thin lips. “I’m not going!”

Chapter 439

Ben was quite surprised by Elliot’s answer.

“You’ve thought it through?” Ben teased, “You should have long come to your senses. Do you know what she said to Chad? She said that since you returned her the sweater, she will wear it whenever she likes. She’s right, but she also said that she might wear it on a date in the future

Elliot’s knuckles gripping onto his utensils turned white.

“Do you think 125 care?”

Ben said, “I’m trying to make you forget about her?”

“Then, why bring her up?” He swept Ben a cold gaze. “Don’t mention anything to do with her anymore. I’m notoc interested.”

“That’s great! I was still worried you wouldn’t be over her.” Ben sighed in relief.

“Too bad you can’t drink. I’ll drink alone.”

Ben walked over to the small bar and picked up a bottle of wine. Soon, Elliot finished his meal. He put down his utensils and left the dining hall

Ben was holding onto a glass of wine. He was unhappy, “Hey! Come talk to me!

It’s no fun eating alone!”

Elliot walked to Shea’s room. He did not sleep the entire night before. He slept all the way till noon that day.

After getting up, he heard Mrs. Cooper say that Shea was in a bad mood, so she did not go to class nor eat anything.

Elliot went to her room to check on her. She was sleeping back then, so he could not ask her why she was feeling down.

At that moment, it was dinner time. The skies were getting dark too. It was not appropriate to continue sleeping. If she were to continue sleeping, she would lose sleep at night.

Elliot pushed Shea's door open.

Shea's eyes were opened. Her black eyes were looking at one spot in a daze.

Elliot did not know what Shea was thinking.

"Shea." He sat down by the side of the bed, looking at her in a daze. He said gently, "It's time to get up for dinner."

Shea grabbed Elliot's huge palms and asked, "Big Brother, your mother is my mother, right?"

Elliot's eyes moved a little. "I heard you went out with Mrs. Scarlet this morning.

You went to the bus station. Were you afraid?"

"Big Brother, your mother is my mother, right?" Shea asked once again as if she did not hear him.

"Hmm." Elliot could obviously sense that his sister was quite different than usual.

She rarely asked him any questions, let alone sensitive questions like this.

At that moment, not only did she ask them, but she insisted on an answer too.

"Why did you not bring me to your mother's funeral?" Once Shea got confirmation from her brother, she started to believe what Mrs. White said to her.

“Because there were many guests at the funeral that day. You didn’t like crowded areas in the past. I’m afraid you might get scared.” Elliot looked into her eyes.

“You’re not afraid of crowded areas anymore, right?”

Shea nodded courageously.

Elliot was rather surprised by her change of attitude.

“Then, I’ll bring you to crowded places to play the next time?”

“But you have not got better yet.” Shea got up from the bed. “Big Brother, I’m hungry.”

Elliot helped her down from the bed and brought her to the dining hall.

When Ben saw Shea, he immediately kept the bottle of wine.

“Shea, I heard you’re not feeling well today. Where are you not feeling well? Did you call the doctor?” Ben asked in concern.

Shea shook her head. She picked up her utensils and ate with a lowered head.

Elliot walked over to the living area and made a phone call.

Chapter 440

Once the call was connected, Elliot briefed through Shea's situation and asked, "is it true that she can recover herself without further surgery?"

On the other end, the family doctor didn't dare to make any guarantees. "It's a good thing, but I can't say for sure if she can continue to recover. One thing that's certain is that going through with further surgery will damage her body."

Elliot was aware of that. He had taken Shea to other doctors after the two craniotomies Zoe had performed on her. Shea had gone through a couple of other procedures since then, and Elliot was at a crossroad.

"Mr. Foster, have you consulted with Doctor Sanford?" The family doctor²⁵ asked.

"No."

"Oh... If you don't intend on letting Doctor Sanford continue Shea's treatment, perhaps you can try asking Avery Tate. I had a look at Eric Santos's performance after he came back from his break, and he was doing great ... Apart from not being able to dance like he did before, he could sing just as well, which means he is recovering well. It's a miracle," the family doctor^{gc} exclaimed.

The reason that the family doctor mentioned this was because he was not aware that Avery was related to Elliot's injury at the time.

Elliot's mood took a sudden turn, because he had discussed this with Avery²³

before.

Avery once said that she would never treat Shea even if she could, so he was not going to seek help from that merciless woman.

Meanwhile, inside a grand European-style mansion, Zoe did not leave immediately after dinner like she usually did, because Wanda's plan did not go as planned.

Wanda had thought that Eric would lose all his fans once the scandal between him and Avery went public; but in reality, Eric did not lose many fans after explaining his relationship with Avery on social³⁵ media.

Perhaps there were indeed a lot of fans who gave up on Eric, but because of the insanely large fan base he had, the scandal did not truly affect him; on the contrary, his discussion about him had placed him on the top news. With his new songs selling out rapidly on all platforms, many people had become new fans of his and he was as popular as ever.

“Aunt Wanda, what do you plan on doing next?” Zoe asked calmly after taking a sip of her tea. “I heard that Tate Industries’ sales rate has reached a new high...

With how expensive their drones are, all they need is to sell one of their drones and it would bring them the profit equivalent to a hundred of ours. They gain a hundred percent of their profits, whereas we are still putting capital on marketing... If this goes on, there won’t be enough money for you to carry on!”

“You are really not suited for managing a business if you are this impatient,” Wanda mocked sarcastically, “Tate Industries belongs to Avery, not Eric. Eric’s fans can’t keep buying her product and once the trend passes, their sales will naturally drop.”

“But you need to find a way to make it difficult for Avery!” Zoe set her teacup down and said with a dark expression, “I can’t stand seeing how smug she is!”

Wanda, on the other hand, was at ease. "I've already come up with a new plan!

Just wait and see."

Just then, Zoe's father decided to intervene. "Zoe, Wanda already has her hands full with the company, you need to be more polite when you talk to her."

Zoe glared at her father. "I am her major stakeholder and it's my right to make sure that she does her job! I can listen to you if you can find a way to invest 300 million as well!" :

With that, she stormed out.

Time flew and soon it was the end of April.

It was the night for the bachelor and bachelorette party for Tammy and Jun, and they arrived at Starry River Villa early in the morning to pick Avery up.

It had been a while since Jun last saw Avery and was stunned when he saw her.

"Avery, why have you grown so thin? Are you ill?"

Tammy glared at him. "Shut up if you don't have anything nice to say! Avery looks great! She is slim!"

Avery had lost three kilograms since she got pregnant. She had not been able to eat anything apart from soup and some fruits. She looked even better after losing weight, but appeared fragile due to the lack of energy.

Chapter 441

Tammy helped Avery into the car and Mike followed closely behind to remind her, “try talking some sense into her, Tammy! She refuses to eat because she is on a diet! It’s not right, but she doesn’t even recognize the severity of the issue! Look at how thin she’s gotten! She used to take walks around the area and now she won’t even move...”

Tammy patted Mike on the shoulder. “I’ll talk to her. Don’t worry. She wants to go on a diet now, but maybe she will change her mind after a while.”

“Oh... Why didn’t you guys invite me out as well today?” Mike was jealous.

“Because you need to take care of the kids!” Tammy25 said.

Once Tammy was inside the car, she waved at Mike. She closed the car door and the car tookgc off.

Avery laid in the backseat and asked, “did you invite Chad?”

“Why would I? He is Elliot’s assistant... I didn’t invite anyone related to Elliot, including my husband’s senior23 Ben...”

Avery couldn’t help but chuckle.

“It’s not entirely for you... I just don’t like them... I’ve already told my husband to stay away from them,” Tammy explained, “you know that saying, birds of a feather flock together? Elliot is a scum and so anyone around him couldn’t be any better.

If only I met my husband a little later, he might just fall under their influence asza

well.”

From the rear-view mirror, Avery saw Jun pursing his lips, not daring to object.

“Avery, when did you buy this dress that you are wearing? It’s so pretty!” Tammy’s attention was drawn to Avery’s clothes. “This white jacket looks nice,35 too!”

Avery’s morning sickness had been intense and so she had stopped going to the office. Feeling bored about staying home, she started enjoying online shopping and the clothes she was wearing were purchased online.

“Let me send you the link later!” She said.

“Sure! It’s been a while since I shopped online.”

Jun couldn’t help but join the conversation from the passenger seat. “Avery, if you really want to lose weight, you can go shopping with Tammy more often!

Shopping is a kind of exercise as well, and it’s better than not eating.”

Avery was about to respond, when Tammy seized the chance and said, “it’s up to Avery how she wants to lose weight. Stay out of it.”

“Don’t be unreasonable, Tammy! I am only concerned for her health because she is your best friend.”

“Avery doesn’t need your concern. She only needs mine.”

Jun pursed his lips and sighed in his mind. Tammy didn’t usually speak to him in such a defensive manner, but would often become very protective when it concerned Avery.

‘It’s bad enough that she won’t talk some sense into Avery for trying to lose weight like that, now she won’t even let others do it. What’s her problem?’ He thought.

They arrived at the seaside mansion in an hour. The weather was great and the sun shone bright, with the temperature going up to twenty-five Celsius.

Tammy and Avery got out of the car and walked towards the mansion hand in hand, while Jun took out his phone to snap a picture of them from behind.

Once the photo was taken, he sent it to Ben with a message.

‘Guess which one is Avery?’

Ben had not paid much attention to news concerning Avery since he last went to eat at Elliot’s house; after all, Elliot said that he didn’t wish to hear anything about her at the time.

Ben narrowed his eyes at the photo he received from Jun and zoomed in. Tammy was very recognizable due to her ashy-gray coloured hair. The woman next to her was dressed in a flower dress with a white jacket on the outside.

One could hardly tell that it was Avery from behind, because of how thin she looked. It was almost as though a breeze could easily lift her off the ground.

Ben replied, ‘don’t tell me that the woman in the flower dress is Avery.’”

‘That’s her! She went on a diet to lose weight and got so thin! I don’t know why she has to torture herself like that. Could it be for Eric’s sake? Otherwise, it doesn't make sense.

'It's a shame that you can't see it yourself. She got so thin that she looks different!

I could barely recognize her when I first saw her this morning!'

'Aren't you exaggerating?

'No! But she looks good after slimming down as well. She looks kind of fragile and weak from the diet and seems so vulnerable! If she looks the way she does right now back when she was with Elliot, those two wouldn't have fought.'

Chapter 442

Intrigued by Avery, Ben took a moment to think before sending a message to Jun.

'Snap a photo from the front and send it to me.'

'You can't be thinking of sending it to Elliot, can you?'

'Hurry up!'

There were heaters inside the mansion and the temperature was slightly warm.

Both Tammy and Avery removed their jackets and sat down on these couch.

Tammy had prepared a lot of fruits and displayed them before Avery.

Avery picked up a peach in surprise and said, "I thought it's not the season for peaches²³ yet."

"You can have this anytime of the year you want as long as you have the money.

Try it!" Tammy urged.

Avery nodded with a smile.

Jun took the chance and took a picture of her biting into the peach.

The result was great; the structure, lighting and general outlook of the photo were perfect. Avery looked both seductive and adorable in the³⁵ photo.

Jun sent the photo to Ben and Ben couldn't help but exclaim after seeing it.

'Are those arms even real?'

The dress Avery wore inside the jacket was sleeveless, and showed her slim and fair-skinned arms.

'Doesn't she look like someone who lost weight after being terminally ill?'

Jun

typed.

'You are such a big mouth. You shouldn't wish for her to get sick even if she had separated with Elliot!'

Jun felt mistaken. 'I'm not wishing her ill... You haven't seen her in person, but it's even more shocking to look at her in real life!'

Ben instantly wanted to head over for a look, but going alone felt lonely, so he wanted a companion.

He sat on his leather chair thoughtfully, before dragging his finger across the screen of his phone to locate Elliot's number.

Naturally, he couldn't directly send Avery's photo over, or Elliot would be mad, so he sent Elliot a message.

'Elliot, the financial report for Quarter 1 is being sent to you right now. Look at it when you have the time.'

Shortly after, Elliot replied. 'Okay.'

Ben sent the financial report over with a smile, and attached Avery's photo along with it. He stared at the screen after pretending to have accidentally sent the

He desperately wanted to know how Elliot would react, but couldn't see Elliot's reply even after refreshing the chat a few times.

“Could it be that he didn’t recognize Avery?!” Ben mumbled to himself, “that would be funny!

Ten minutes had passed but still, there was no reply and Ben could no longer contain himself. He stepped out of his office and strode towards Elliot’s office.

Meanwhile, in the President’s office.

Elliot stared at the photo of Avery and scowled. He couldn’t recognize Avery at first, and simply thought that the woman in the photo looked familiar.

It was not after seeing Tammy next to her that Elliot managed to reach the conclusion that the woman holding the peach was Avery.

‘Why has she slimmed down so much? Is she sick? A person couldn’t possibly lose so much weight in such a short period of time if they weren’t sick,’ he thought as his heart sank.

Chapter 443

Ben did not knock before walking in and simply pushed open the door to Elliot’s office.

Elliot immediately put his phone down at the sound.

“Ahem! Elliot, I accidentally sent a photo of Avery to you...Ben said in a pretentious tone.

Elliot looked up. “I won’t do anything to you even if you just be straight and say that you did it on 25 purpose.”

Ben laughed awkwardly. “Jun said that Avery lost a lot of weight, almost as though she was sick. I didn’t believe it, so he sent me a photo of her.”

“I suppose she is not actually sick based on the fact that you are laughinggc now.”

The smile on Ben’s face froze. “Um... I heard that it was because she was trying to lose weight. She sure is determined. There are plenty of ways to lose weight and she chose to go on a diet. Isn’t she a doctor? Doesn’t she know that not eating isn’t healthy? I feel like she’s lost her senses... It’s almost as shocking to me as the time she tried to kill you.”

The composure on Elliot’s face faded as he set the documents in his hand down.

“Why don’t you go work for Tate Industries instead, if you care so much about23

her?”

“Forget I said anything! I came here for something serious! I am getting off work a bit earlier today. I want to go join them for the big meal.”

“Since when do you need to report to me about yourza schedule?”

“Alright, no more beating around the bushes. Do you want to come? Jun said that there will be a lot of pretty ladies around...”

35”Scram!”

Ben escaped swiftly.

Once the door was closed, Elliot unlocked his phone and the photo of Avery came into sight.

He zoomed in on the photo and saw the cheerful smile on Avery’s face. She looked like the way he remembered when they met for the first time: naïve, young and innocent.

It had been so long since he last saw her this relaxed, because she did not behave this way in front of him.

Back in the resort, the guests slowly began to arrive. Most of the guests were under the age of thirty, with each looking fashionable and stylish.

Avery sat on the couch and felt as though she was an audience to a fashion show.

There were no activities for the morning, so everyone simply gathered around to eat and chat happily.

They had to prepare their own lunch, so everyone went over to the open kitchen to discuss who was to cook and what to cook.

Avery had no appetite and went to rest in the guest room after informing Tammy.

When Jun spotted Avery walking away, he leaned over to Tammy and asked, "she can't be thinking of skipping lunch, can she?"

"She is! Jun, I told you to stay out of it, have you forgotten already?" Tammy shoved his head aside.

Jun grabbed onto Tammy's wrist and deadpanned, "I think that you are acting weird. You get all worked up whenever I mention her, almost like you are scared of having me talk about her."

“I don’t like you talking about her because you side with Elliot.” Tammy made up an excuse and said, “Avery doesn’t want anything to do with Elliot anymore, so whether she is on a diet or not is none of your business!”

Jun sighed. “Fine! I’m only asking out of concern because I feel like she could just pass out at any moment.”

“I get it! But she’s not a child and doesn’t need others telling her what to do. If she really ends up fainting, we will just send her to the hospital.”

After lunch, Tammy called everyone out to play at the beach, and the mansion instantly became quiet.

Avery slept all the way until evening. It wasn’t until Tammy brought her dinner that she woke up to the wondrous smell.

“Avery, I brought you spicy chicken soup. My mom once told me that she couldn’t eat when she was pregnant with me, but she loved spicy chicken soup.” Tammy placed the bowl of spicy chicken soup onto the coffee table in the room and said,

“I kind of feel bad when I see you suffering so much. How long until you recover?”

Avery got out of bed.

Chapter 444

Avery felt much better after sleeping for most of the day, and the nausea seemed to have subdued as well.

“It’s hard to say. It might get better soon, or later. Don’t be afraid, some people barely react to pregnancy, so maybe you won’t suffer from morning sickness when you are pregnant.” Avery went to sit down on the couch and beamed at Tammy. “Thank you for being so considerate, Tammy. It’s been so long since I had spicy chicken soup.”

“Don’t eat too much, or you might puke.” Tammy sat on the couch across from her and said,” do you know what Jun did today? He was worried that you might pass out in here because you skipped lunch, so he went and booked an ambulance, which is still waiting outside the mansion as we speak!”

Moved, Avery smiled. “Tammy, I wish that you and Jun would live happily ever25

after.”

“I know! Right now, your mission is to take care of yourself and the baby in your belly. When I picture your baby to be as smart and pretty as Hayden and Layla, I can’t help but pray that it comes into this world safely and healthily.”

”Yeah.” After dinner, Avery came out of the guest room with Rammy.

When everyone else saw her coming downstairs, they urged her to sit down in the middle of the couch.

“Avery! Come play games with us! Don’t worry, Tammy already took us that you are not feeling well, so we don’t force you to do anything even if you lose!”

Avery gave Tammy a look of gratitude.

“What are we playing? I am not that good at games.” Avery felt rather energetic at the moment and was itching to play with the others.

“We are doing this challenge where you can’t get attracted! We will play some videos and you lose if you feel 35 attracted!”

After hearing the introduction of the game, Avery felt it was almost too easy. She had never truly been attracted to anyone apart from Elliot before, so she couldn't possibly lose.

Seeing how confident Avery was, Tammy reminded her, "they are shameless, and they might show you videos that are way out of line..."

Avery instantly blushed, but was still very confident.

Just then, Tammy's cousin Ellie put a heart rate monitor around Avery's wrist.

"Avery, if you win, you get to make an unreasonable request to anyone here;

though, I don't think you can win this."

"I am so going to win this," Avery said.

The lights in the room dimmed and a large screen lit up before them.

A handsome man appeared on the screen and lifted his shirt to reveal the sixpack hidden underneath.

Everyone in the living room burst out laughing.

Avery, too, was chuckling, but her heart rate had only risen slightly.

Soon, they jumped to the next video but Avery managed to maintain her heart rate and composure.

She had met plenty of handsome men back when she was in Bridgedale, and had since become immune to them.

Finally, Eric's alluring face appeared on screen. Videos of him in a white shirt, a knight's armor and suit flashed by and the room erupted into chaos as everyone shouted excitedly.

Avery's heart rate rose immediately, when suddenly, the lights in the living room were turned on following a 'snap' and the room was instantly as bright as day.

Everyone looked over to the door in shock and saw Elliot standing there in an allblack outfit; he appeared mysterious and elegant with the darkness of the night behind him. He oozed an intimidating aura with the cold expression on his handsome-looking face.

Chapter 445

Avery glanced at the heart rate monitor on her wrist and noticed the number going down from a hundred to eighty.

'Why is he here? Tammy said she didn't invite Elliot or his friends, so is he here uninvited?' She thought.

Tammy, too, was stunned. She pinched Jun on the arm and asked, "what's going on? Why is he here?"

The temperature in the air dropped the moment Elliot²⁵ arrived.

Tammy did not welcome his presence, but couldn't pluck up the courage to chase him out.

Jun leaned towards Tammy. "Now that Elliot is here, we should welcome him!

Enough with the long face and do this for me!"

After that, Jun hurried over to Elliot to welcome him with a smile. "Elliot, Ben, here you are! Have you eaten? If not, there's still something in the kitchen..."

"We aren't hungry at the moment," Ben said, "what were you guys playing? You were all shouting so²³ loud!"

Ben's words had eased up the tension and those who were stunned instantly felt less nervous.

"We were playing a game where you lose if you are attracted! Do you want to join?" Tammy's best friend Lisa invited them^{za} enthusiastically.

"Sure! How do we play?" Ben dragged Elliot along and walked towards the group.

Tammy glared at her best friend for doing something³⁵ unnecessary.

Feeling misunderstood, Lisa whispered her plan to Tammy. “We can prank them if they lose!”

Tammy instantly came to a realization.

“Avery, let’s sit on the side.” Tammy helped Avery up from the center of the couch, while Ben and Elliot were invited to sit instead.

The heart rate monitor around Avery’s wrist was taken off and Lisa walked towards them with it. “Which one of you want to go first?”

Without a moment of hesitation, Ben pointed at Elliot. “Him first.”

Elliot stared daggers at Ben.

Ben cleared his throat and picked up the snacks on the table, before explaining,

“I’m a bit hungry, so I’ll eat something first.”

Lisa handed the monitor to Elliot. “Put this on.”

Elliot had always hated games, regardless of genres or nature of the game itself, so he rejected coldly, “I’m not playing.”

“If you are not here for games, then why are you even here?” Lisa looked at him in confusion.

Jun tensed beside them nervously. Tammy was fearless and apparently, so were her friends.

'How are they not afraid of Elliot?' He thought.

Just when Jun was about to intervene, Elliot took the monitor from Lisa's hand.

Ben assured him with a smile, "I just looked it up online and it's a simple game.

They are going to show you some videos and you win as long as you don't feel attracted. Hahaha, this is the perfect game for you, because you won't budge no matter what they show you."

Being overly confident, Ben announced, "let us bet on this! I bet that he's going to win! Which one of you think that he would lose? Let's place bets on this!"

Other than Ben, Jun, Tammy and Avery, no one else in the room knew anything about Elliot apart from the fact he was a powerful man.

In order to cheer everyone up, Lisa stepped up. "I'll bet that he loses, then! If I lose the bet, I will drink three glasses of wine; but if you lose, you need to drink a bottle! How's that?"

“Hahaha, sure!” Ben agreed.

The women gathered around and started looking for videos. For men as successful as Elliot, he must have seen his fill of beautiful women, so they had to find something more stimulating to make him lose. “I have some classic kiss scenes in my collection, along with some really hot sex scenes!”

Chapter 446

“Hahaha, let’s put all of them in here! We also need something else. What if he doesn’t like women? Let’s include some handsome guys as well!”

“Sure! I have a collection for men!”

“What’s that? Show me!”

“Hahaha! It’s hilarious! Not25 bad!”

The women were having a wonderful time trying to look for videos, but they were too young and were clueless as to what kind of man Elliot9c was.

Ben did not waver despite hearing every word they said, and even felt amused.

Elliot might not lose even if they were to show him R-rated videos.

Jun walked towards Tammy and Avery, before explaining, “I can’t refuse Ben when he asked for the location. He is my senior... Ben didn’t mention that Elliot would be here, but even if he did, I would welcome²³ them!”

Tammy glared at him. “What’s the point of explaining when you’ve already gone and done it?”

Jun cast her a flattering smile. “I was scared that you two would be mad, especially^{2a} Avery....”

“They are your friends. It’s normal that you invite them here. I’m fine,” Avery said.

Gratitude filled Jun’s face. “You are so understanding , Avery! Seriously though, I wasn’t the one who invited them. They wanted to ³⁵ come.”

Naturally, Jun couldn’t tell the truth about taking a photo of Avery in secret; otherwise, it would expose the fact that he was the reason why Ben and Elliot had decided to come.

Tammy looked over at Elliot coldly.

It was obvious that Elliot had come for Avery; he wouldn’t have come if Avery wasn’t here.

“You two should go sit on the couch! Don’t you feel tired standing here?” Jun said.

“Avery doesn’t want to sit there.” Tammy had tried to lead Avery to sit on the side of the couch, but she refused to. Because Elliot was on the couch, Avery walked over to somewhere where Elliot couldn't see her.

"Alright, I will move two chairs over for you, then." Jun hurried over to bring chairs

over to them.

Once the two sat down, Tammy leaned towards Avery and whispered, "I saw your heart rate going up to a hundred just now during the challenge. Hahaha! You are attracted!"

Avery had completely regained her composure and responded calmly, "it's still within the normal range as long as it is within a hundred."

Tammy felt like Avery was making an excuse. "If only Elliot hadn't barged in just now, your heart rate is definitely going to be above a hundred!"

"It doesn't matter. It didn't go above a hundred in the end."

"Haha! Avery, can you be falling for Eric? He seems pretty obedient towards you, so he will surely spoil you rotten if you are willing to let him!"

Avery cringed at her words.

“I’ll admit that I admire him. I also like his face, but that has nothing to do with romance. Aren’t you his fan as well? Does that mean that you don’t love Jun?

Don’t make that kind of joke again, I don’t want to have my face on the news for being involved in scandals.”

Tammy nodded awkwardly.

Soon, Lisa and the others had gathered the videos and Elliot’s challenge was about to start.

“Avery, do you think he’s going to lose?” Tammy asked.

“I don’t know.”

Just then, the scene of a couple kissing on bed appeared on the big screen and Avery blushed. She couldn’t imagine Elliot’s reaction to the video.

Chapter 447

Avery awkwardly took out her phone to focus on something else.

Ben glanced at the screen and lowered his gaze to look for any change to Elliot’s heart rate.

‘Good for him! His heart rate is as steady as a rock!’ He thought. Ben even started to suspect if there was something wrong with the monitor, or Elliot had truly overcome all urges.

Jun, too, was staring at the heart rate monitor around Elliot's wrist and said, "the monitor should be fine. The number was moving when Avery was wearing it just25 now."

"How did Avery do on the challenge?" Ben asked.

Jun glanced at Avery; Avery was expressionless, but Tammy was staring daggers at him. He looked away and said, "she won. The monitor will ring if the heart rate is too high, but I didn't hear anything when she was9c playing."

Ben hummed in response and looked over at Avery.

Avery lowered her head and was looking at her phone, clearly trying to avoid23 them.

The first video ended and the second one began with a mature-looking beauty posing in front of the camera in sexy outfits. Everything, including her expression and body language, was seductive.

Someone catcalled in excitement, while some other people peeped at Elliot to observe his reaction.

Elliot scowled sternly. Despite the fact that he was watching a video of a beautiful woman, his expression looked as though he was attending someone's funeral.

His heart rate was affected slightly, on the other hand, as he was still human, but there was barely a change and was most likely only the result of him breathing faster.

"He doesn't seem to like women! Show him hot guys!" Lisa had been paying close attention to Elliot's reaction and shouted to the person controlling the screen

when she noticed that Elliot was not reacting in any way.

Soon, the face of a handsome foreign man appeared on screen. Not only did the man have silky, golden locks, but he also had strong muscles...

Elliot's expression turned from stern to dark, because he immediately associated what he saw with Mike's face.

Lisa felt defeated at the way Elliot frowned, because it was obvious that he didn't like men either.

"Show that video that's labeled 'must watch for macho men...'"

A few seconds later, a chubby baby face appeared on screen.

The group burst out laughing; most of them being men.

'See? Guys like to watch babies,' Lisa thought and glanced at Elliot.

Elliot's brows were no longer furrowed as tightly, but his heart rate remained steady at around eighty without the number increasing by five or less.

Ben sat beside him and chuckled smugly while looking at the video of the baby on the screen." This game isn't challenging at all!"

Lisa had already admitted defeat in her mind, but still didn't want to give up.

"I've never seen a man who's not interested in anything."

"Why else do you think he's successful? It's because he's only interested in money."

"Alright! But the game is not over yet! I won't admit defeat just yet!"

Another round of videos of kissing scenes and sex scenes started on screen, when suddenly, Avery was being pushed over to Elliot.

“...” Rendered speechless, Avery thought, ‘has Tammy gone mad?! How can she push me towards Elliot?’

Chapter 448

Elliot gaped at the woman next to him.

He had only gotten to take one look at Avery from afar when he first entered the mansion. She was smiling at first, but the smile on her face disappeared the moment she saw him. By the time he sat down on the couch, Avery had already moved out of his sight quietly.

Now that she was sitting beside him, Elliot could see how slim her face was as well as the panic in her eyes.

‘She has slimmed down so much!’ He²⁵ thought.

Avery seemed to have lost her edge and became extremely fragile, to the point that he felt as though he could crush her with just one hand.

She met his eyes for a brief moment, before trying to get up and^{9c} leave.

Elliot immediately grabbed onto her wrist and refused to let her go.

Everyone else in the room watched the drama unfolded with anticipation.
All of

Jun and Tammy's friends knew that Elliot and Avery were once in a romantic relationship, and they couldn't help but feel excited when they saw the way

the

two interacted with one another.

Perhaps their will for something to happen was too strong, and as they wished,

the situation began to spin out of control.

"Ding!"

The alarm on the heart rate monitor around Elliot's wrist went off as his heart rate

rose from eighty to a hundred and twenty.

Elliot, who had not reacted to videos of beautiful woman, handsome men, adorable babies, kiss scenes or sex scenes, had lost all control over his heartbeat

within two minutes of Avery sitting beside him.

'How curious!' Everyone was surprised at the sudden turn of events.

The alarm struck both Elliot and Avery like a hammer to the head.

Embarrassed , Avery blushed and put her hands over her face, not daring to face

the others; whereas Elliot swiftly took the monitor off his wrist and threw it away.

'Damn that bracelet!' He thought.

Elliot's expression was both stern and awkward, and everyone around him was trying to suppress their laughter; but Ben, who sat next to him, started laughing and everyone started laughing as well.

Instantly, the living room was filled with deafening laughter.

Avery desperately wanted to hide and flung Elliot's hand away, before escaping the room. After leaving the couch, her eyes locked onto the culprit, Tammy.

She dragged Tammy with her and the two went into a guest room. As soon as she closed the door, Avery questioned angrily, "Tammy Lynch! Are you crazy?!"

Tammy couldn't hold back her laughter and said, "I did it on purpose. Don't you want to know why he showed up out of nowhere? I thought that he came here for you, but couldn't be sure, so I ran a test... And well, here's the result!"

Avery was completely rendered speechless.

"Don't be mad, Avery. I wanted to test him for your sake. Now that you know he still wants you, you will have to avoid him by all means! That man is just terrifying!

How can he not give up even after you stabbed him? I have to say I'm impressed!" Tammy explained her action.

Naturally, Avery's anger couldn't be appeased that easily, because she didn't want to know how Elliot felt to begin with.

It took a lot of effort for her to finally find peace and everything turned into a mess after what happened earlier, and she didn't know how to face him from now on, unless they were to never see each other again.

"I'm sorry, Avery! I went ahead of myself. Why don't you rest in this room tonight?"

Tammy said, "I will let you know once they are gone."

Avery was in a horrible mood, but it was Tammy's wedding the next day and she didn't want to ruin it for her.

"Yeah, I'm not mad. Go play with them! I will go shower." Avery opened the door and let Tammy out.

Meanwhile, in the living room.

Elliot had failed the challenge, so both him and Ben had to finish a bottle each.

Ben had a glass in his hand and drank the bottle glass by glass; while Elliot, on the other hand, held the bottle and drank the entire bottle in one-go.

Chapter 449

However, no one was forcing Elliot to drink. Once he finished the bottle, Ben looked at him and asked, "is your injury completely recovered? Didn't the doctor tell you to stay away from alcohol for three months? It hasn't been three months yet, right?"

Jun heard them and hastily brought over a bottle of fruit juice.

"Elliot, drink some juice!" Jun cleared all the wine bottles in front of Elliot. "There's still food left in the kitchen, do you guys want some?"

Ben finished his own bottle and dragged Elliot towards the kitchen. As soon as the two left, the mood in the living room had lightened up instantly.

Ben went to pour a glass of juice and passed it to Elliot.

"If only I knew that it's going to be this awkward, I wouldn't have brought you here," Ben said with a bitter smile, "why don't I send you back?"

Jun stood beside them and said, “you both drank, so neither of you can drive. I booked an ambulance today, so maybe you guys can go back by ambulance?”

Both Ben and Elliot were rendered speechless by the notion.

Seeing how shocked they were, Jun said, “um... If you don’t want to head back, you can just rest here. I booked a total of eight mansions, so there should be enough rooms.”

Confused, Ben asked, “why did you book an ambulance?”

“...Avery skipped lunch today and needed Tammy’s help going upstairs. I was worried that she might faint, so I called an ambulance here to standby,” Jun explained, “this place is miles away from the closest hospital, after all.”

Ben felt even more confused. “Why didn’t she eat?”

“I don’t know! Tammy won’t let me ask about it and said that I am on Elliot’s side... It’s not that she hates Elliot, but she is very protective over Avery. I can understand, since they have been friends for many years...” Jun said while peeping at Elliot.

Elliot’s face was slightly flushed from the wine he drank earlier, but he wasn’t sure if he was in the right mind. “Did she eat at night?”

“I think so! Tammy drove and bought some spicy chicken soup for her. Avery seemed quite energetic when she came downstairs, so she must have eaten,”

Jun said.

Elliot picked up the glass of juice and took a sip. Jun suddenly remembered something and added, “Avery ate a lot of fruit this morning, though! She hadn’t touched any other snacks and only ate fruits. Tammy had ordered those fruits from overseas beforehand, and I was wondering why she had ordered so many; I didn’t realize it was for Avery until I saw how happy she was when she was eating those fruits this morning.”

Both Elliot and Ben remained quiet thoughtfully.

After a while, Ben narrowed his eyes and concluded, “I guess she is really trying to lose weight, then. My last girlfriend tried losing weight by eating nothing but fruit back then. She won’t even touch anything that has gluten in it because it contains high sugar content.”

“Isn’t that the case for fruits as well?” Jun asked in confusion.

“Still better than gluten. They will have to calculate the calories of their food intake precisely... “Ben explained, “my ex-girlfriend went on a diet to please me. She wasn’t fat to begin with, just slightly chubby. But when she found out that all my exes were skinny, she went on a crazy diet... In the end, I was just too worried that her body would collapse from the diet, so I broke up with her.”

“So... Can Avery be on a diet to...please a certain guy?”

Ben glanced at the dark expression on Elliot’s face and said, “probably for Eric’s sake!”

The temperature in the air instantly dropped.

To ease the tension, Jun picked up a wine glass and said, “Ben, if you guys are not going back, then let’s drink.”

“It depends on whether Elliot wants to head back. I’ll go with him if he wants to; if he is not going, then I’ll stay and drink with you.”

“You two go ahead!” Elliot said in a dark expression, before getting up from the chair and heading towards the stairs.

Sensing that something was wrong, Jun followed him. “Do you want to rest, Elliot?”

Elliot only hummed in response.

“I’ll take you to the guest room next door, then.” Jun took his arm and tried to lead him outside, as the guest rooms in this mansion had been assigned.

Elliot scowled. “Leave me alone.”

Chapter 450

“I’m going to find Avery.”

‘So scary! This is terrifying!’ Jun thought. He had not been there to watch Avery and Elliot fight one another the time before, but his heart still cringed at how long

Elliot had to remain in the ICU ward afterward; yet now, Elliot wanted to go look for Avery again, when their last conflict was not even resolved. Was Elliot trying to make the same mistake?

Jun was terrified. Unable to stop Elliot, he ran to find Ben and25 Tammy.

“He had only had one bottle,” Ben analyzed the situation calmly, “he can’t be that drunk.”

“But Avery doesn’t want to see him!” Tammy retorted anxiously, “Avery told me this herself! No way, I need to stop him!”

With that, Tammy tried to head upstairs to stop Elliot. Jun and Ben grabbed onto each one of her arms and stopped her.

“Relax, Tammy. I’ll go up to check on them.” Ben was concerned that if he let Tammy go up, everyone in the mansion would become aware of what was happening. Elliot had embarrassed himself once, so Ben wanted to preserve some of his friend’s pride.

“Let Ben go!” Jun pulled Tammy into his arms. “Don’t worry, those two wouldn’t do anything as long as Ben is Meanwhile, on the second floor.

Avery came out of the shower in a white sleeping gown.

She had slept for most of the day and had a hearty dinner, so she felt energetic after the shower; hence, she did not suspect her own eyes or thought of it as hallucination when she saw Elliot before her.

Elliot strode towards her and stared down at her. "You are on a diet for Eric?"

'How ridiculous!' She thought.

She understood every single word he said, but still felt that it was absurd for him to say that she was on a diet because of Eric.

'What kind of mind would come up with such an idea? Do I have to go on a diet only because of some guy? Besides, I won't have to lose weight if I really want to be together with Eris, since he never once said that I was fat to begin with!' She thought.

"Elliot, have you been drinking?" She scowled at the scent of alcohol on him.

"Have you even recovered? If you drink now... Do you not want to recover at all?"

"Why aren't you answering my question?" He swallowed as his patience ran out.

"You don't get to say that when you look like a ghost yourself."

'A ghost? How dare he call me that!' She thought.

Avery didn't want to argue with him, as she was the one who caused the accident from last time, but Elliot's words were simply far too provoking.

"Who I am on a diet for is none of your business." Avery pointed at the door and commanded sternly, "get out!"

Elliot's rage was instantly ignited at the sight of her affectionless expression.

"Does he know about us?" He asked in an evil and rude tone, "would he still want to be in a relationship with you if he finds out that we are sleeping together?"

Chapter 451

Avery stared at Elliot's handsome, yet expressionless face, and was instantly rendered speechless in rage. She would have argued with him before, but her body had weakened to the point that she no longer wanted to argue or fight with him.

If Elliot shamelessly insisted on staying inside her room, there was nothing she could do. After all, he had let go of his pride entirely.

Elliot was confused that his words had not provoked Avery to the point he thought they would.

“Am I not straight-forward enough, or has she already spoken to Eric about this?”

He thought “Avery Tate, I won’t let you go no matter who you end up with in the future. You are not marrying someone else as long as I’m still breathing,” he threatened her once again.

Avery felt nothing at his threats. She had not thought of marrying again, so his threats meant nothing to her.

“Do you want to be the ‘mistress’ that badly?” She stared directly into his eyes and mocked.

Embarrassment flashed by Elliot’s eyes briefly at her words.

“If I’m in a relationship with Eric and you refuse to leave me alone, then you are the other man. A lover.” Taking advantage of Elliot’s silence, Avery added.

As expected of someone as capable as Elliot, he readjusted himself swiftly and drawled, “so what if I’m a lover? I don’t mind.”

‘See? He really is shameless,’ she thought.

Avery shoved him aside and went to sit down by the bed, before taking out her skincare35 products.

She had stopped using skincare products ever since she found out that she was pregnant. All the products she had been using before smelt horrible to her and the ingredients were not suitable for pregnant women as well.

After a while, her skin started to become flaky from the dryness, so Tammy bought her a set of skincare products that carried no scent and were suitable for pregnant women.

Avery felt good after using them.

Elliot stared at her while she was putting skincare products on and was becoming increasingly certain that she was on a diet and taking care of her skin for a man.

She used to be more casual and rarely used skincare after shower back then.

Sensing his eyes on her, Avery gazed up to meet his eyes.

“What are you staring at me for?” She placed the cover back onto the skincare once she was done. “Is there anything else you need? You can’t be thinking of sleeping in my room, can you?

Her words seemed to have reminded him that he was, indeed, slightly lightheaded after drinking the bottle of wine earlier.

He strode towards her and sat down. It was apparent what he meant and so he looked at her in a challenging manner. "I can't?"

"Do you think three adults would be able to all fit on this bed?" She said.

Elliot couldn't quite understand Avery, but glanced at the bed. It was spacious, but to be shared between three adults...

He scowled defensively. "Who are you about to sleep with tonight?"

"Tammy, of course! She's sleeping with me tonight." Worried that Elliot might not believe her, Avery pointed at the red purse resting on the dressing table. "That's her purse."

Elliot stood up from the bed abruptly as though he had been shocked by electricity.

Avery desperately wanted to laugh, but couldn't do so. She might be able to run from Elliot this night, but what about the future?

She had thought that he would stop seeing her after he had his heart broken from the incident before, but to her surprise, he refused to give up. She had never seen a man as stubborn and obsessive as him. Elliot sobered up and turned to leave after standing up from the bed.

Chapter 452

Avery called out to him, "Elliot, can you stay away from me from now on, if I give you a child like we agreed on?"

She didn't want to be involved with him any longer.

Elliot stopped and responded coldly, "give me back a child, and then you can negotiate with me."

With that, he opened the door and stepped out of the 25 room.

Ben was waiting outside the door and asked, "Elliot, are you okay?"

Avery heard him; she felt irritated and she could not seem to suppress or avoid the emotions she felt.

She collapsed onto the bed once the footsteps outside the door disappeared into the distance. After a few minutes, she picked up her phone to make a video call to

Mike.

Mike picked up immediately. "Avery, have you eaten?"

Mike was playing with Hayden and Layla.

Avery spotted a faint figure moving in the kitchen from her screen, but Mike adjusted the camera right away to focus on the children.

“I have...” Avery relaxed at the sight of her children. “Hayden, Layla, what are you two playing?”

“We are playing puzzles! I’m watching Hayden...because he won’t let me do it.

He says I’m messing it up.” Layla pouted. “Mom, Uncle Chad cooked for us 35

today.”

Stunned, Mike said, “Layla, didn’t I tell you not to tell your mom? You promised!”

“But I’ve already told Mom!” Layla said with an innocent expression, “it’s not like Mom would get angry.”

“Mike, have you forgotten about the surveillance camera outside our door? I saw Chad’s car parked outside our yard this evening,” Avery said.

Layla burst out laughing. “Stupid uncle!”

“Aren’t you supposed to be on vacation? Why are you going through surveillance footage?” Mike asked in confusion, “are you laying in bed now? What’s going on with you? If you are there to sleep, why bother going all the way there for that?”

“A certain someone showed up,” Avery explained in response to Mike’s questions,

“so I’m hiding in the room.”

“A certain someone?” Mike immediately realized what she meant. “Elliot is there as well? Damn! I thought he wasn’t going?”

“Let’s not talk about him.”

Mike took his phone and went outside. Chad overheard their conversation and followed Mike outside as well.

“Avery, is he causing you trouble again? That bast*rd!” Mike cursed.

“He won’t do that with so many guests around,” Avery said.

“Which means he would have if there weren’t so many guests, right?”

“Don’t freak out. What happened last time won’t happen again.”

“How can I not freak out? He’s

Chad couldn’t stand it any longer and snatched Mike’s phone out of his hand.

“Avery, I’ve read Mr. Foster’s medical report and he is healthy. He is not crazy,” Chad argued, "he's just stubborn and doesn't like other people challenging him.

He won't hurt you as long as you refrain from arguing with him."

Chad was right. Elliot was not all that crazy, but Avery simply couldn't control her emotions and would always lose patience before him.

It was odd to Avery, as she was usually composed and calm in front of everyone else; she would only transform to an entirely different person in front of Elliot.

If he said a word that annoyed her, she would be sure to return it by a thousand folds.

"Chad, I didn't argue with him today," Avery said awkwardly, "thank you for cooking for my kids today."

"Oh, it's fine... Your bodyguard is on leave today, so Mike invited me over."

Avery remained quiet for a few moments, before saying, "the bodyguard didn't ask to be on leave! That's just Mike's excuse, I suppose?"

'???' Mike thought, 'can you not expose my lie straight away?'

Avery ended the call with a smile, when suddenly, she heard the sound of the doorknob turning The door was pushed open the next instant...

Chapter 453

“Avery!” Tammy stormed inside the room. “Do you know what Elliot just told my husband?” Avery tensed and sat up from the bed, thinking, ‘why did he go to Jun? Could it be that...”

“He said that he wasn’t going to attend our wedding, and he changed his mind just now! He said that he will be attending the wedding tomorrow,” Tammy blurted out hastily, “how can he change his mind so quickly?”

Avery sighed a breath of relief.

“By the way, why did he come looking for you? What did you two talk about?”

Tammy sat down by the bed and stared intently at Avery’s face. “He didn’t bully you, did he? I wanted to come help, but Ben said he will come up instead...”

“He didn’t,” Avery said calmly, “there are far too many guests around for him to lose his mind.”

“Good, then. Do you want to go out for a bit? The breeze out there is so cool tonight! It’s not cold!” Tammy suggested, “you probably can’t sleep this early.”

Without any hesitation, Avery nodded. "I don't have extra clothes, though, is my sleeping gown²³ okay?"

"Hahaha! They are all playing at the pool right now and everyone is in a swimsuit...so of course it's okay for you to wear your sleeping gown!" Tammy took her hand and led her out of the room.

It was seven at night and the silhouettes stretched indefinitely under the street²⁴ lights.

There were a lot of people playing by the ocean.

The temperature was approximately fifteen Celsius and though it was cool, it was hardly³⁵ cold.

Avery felt more sober in the sea breeze and mumbled, "Elliot should probably get some air as well."

Perhaps the sea breeze would bring his senses back.

"Huh? I think he went to rest. Not only was his face red when he talked to my husband just now, even his eyes were red. He is really bad at drinking." Tammy stepped on the soft sand and said, “he insisted on staying in the same mansion as us...so my husband ended up letting Elliot have his room. He is such a weird guy, Avery, how did you even manage being in a relationship with him back then?”

“I don’t really want to think back to my past with him.”

Avery was scared that she would remember the good things about Elliot. Back when they were together, the sweet memories outweighed the bitter ones; he once saw her as his most precious and treated her with care.

At the time, he was the only thing on her mind apart from her study. First love was often unforgettable because it was the first time she had a taste of love.

“Weren’t you the one who mentioned him first?” Tammy teased, “you are the one who felt something after seeing him tonight, right? After all, he did just prove how he feels about you in front of everyone.”

“We showed him videos of famous actresses and sexy women tonight and he didn't feel a thing! His heart only beats for you... Avery, do you know how envious my friends are?" Tammy continued to tease Avery. "Why didn't I know how attractive you are until now? Beauty is in the eyes of the beholder, is that it?"

Avery cringed at Tammy's words.

"We got into an argument tonight, actually." Avery told Tammy what had happened and said, "he thought that I'm on a diet for Eric's sake."

"Damn! What a wild imagination he has! He might as well guess that you are doing it to debut as a movie star." Tammy was laughing her head off.

"Maybe because I'm too old for that. Idols these days start their career early before they turn twenty, right?"

"Some start after they turn twenty as well, but of course, those people are the minority. Hahaha! So what did you tell him?"

Chapter 454

"I didn't respond directly," Avery said carelessly.

"That's so mean, are you trying to keep him on the hook? You know that he likes you, but refuse to tell him the truth."

Avery shook her head. "I just don't want to bother because he is being unreasonable."

"Oh, that's true. The two of you aren't back together ... Hey, is there a chance that you would get back together with him?" Tammy grabbed Avery's arm and stared as the wind ruffled Avery's hair.

"How could we?" Avery tugged her hair at the back of her ears. "He hasn't even explained to me what is going on with Shea. Besides, I feel disgusted every time I am reminded that he was in a relationship with Zoe once. I would rather stay single for the rest of my life than to get back together with him."

"It makes sense that you would feel disgusted ... He shouldn't have gotten Zoe pregnant if he didn't like her!" Tammy commented, "why else do you think I call him a dirtbag all the time? How dare he act all loyal and in love with you right now? Ugh!"

Avery chuckled. "I used to get all worked up when I think of him, but I don't feel as annoyed today. Something funny happened, too... He said he wants to become my lover to destroy my relationship so that I can't get married."

Tammy was stunned for a few moments, before bursting into laughter after finally comprehending what Avery23 meant.

"Are you really talking about the Elliot Foster that I know?" Tammy was laughing her head off. "My husband would never believe it if I told him this!"

"Maybe it's because he drank tonight," Avery thought back to it and felt as though it had all been a dream

Though Elliot was occasionally shameless, he couldn't possibly be so childish.

"He had only had one bottle... He can't possibly be that drunk." Tammy took a deep breath and said, "he likes you, but couldn't get his hands on you, so he is reluctant to see you marrying some other man. You better pray that you don't meet your true love in the future, or things are going to be very³⁵ complicated..."

Avery gazed up upon the sky; it was glittered with stars that shone beautifully.

'I hope that everything goes well with no accidents for Tammy's wedding tomorrow,' she thought.

Within a blink of an eye, it was morning on the next day.

Tammy and Jun's wedding venue was set to be in the most sophisticated five-star hotel in the city.

Both Layla and Hayden woke up early in the morning and started demanding to be sent to the hotel so that they could see their mother. Because of that, Mike had to wake up just as early to send them both to the hotel.

To their surprise, all the guests arrived rather early and there were already quite a lot of people in the restaurant of the hotel.

"The two of you need to follow me and don't go running around," Mike reminded the children while holding a plate in his hand. "I know you won't get lost, but we still need to be careful. After all, your mom is earning a lot more now. What do we do if some bad people decide to kidnap you and blackmail your mom?"

Fear crept up the faces of both Hayden and Layla. Terrified by what Mike had suggested, Layla grabbed onto the corner of his clothes; while Hayden took a plate and went to search for food that he liked.

Suddenly, someone tapped Hayden on the shoulder and he gazed up.

“Hayden Tate, I know everything now,” Shea drawled while grabbing onto Hayden’s arm,” you are my brother’s son, so I’m your aunt.”

Hayden gaped at Shea and couldn’t react to her hand on his arm.

“I haven’t told my brother yet,” Shea continued, “but you have to call my Auntie from now on.

Hayden flung her hand off coldly. “Are you saying that you are Elliot Foster’s sister? Where’s the proof?”

Chapter 455

Hayden’s question had Shea thinking. “What kind of proof do you want?”

To Shea, there was no need to prove her relationship with Elliot. Elliot was her brother, and she was her sister, as it had always been.

Hayden voiced out his questions, “you say that you are Elliot’s sister, so why isn’t your name on the Foster Family book? Do you have your identification card?

Show it to me.”

Shea wasn't sure if she even had an identification card, but she could ask for it from her brother.

"I will show you the proof!" She assured Hayden, "I am your aunt."

Shea believed every word Mrs. White had said, because when Mrs. White told her that her brother and her shared the same mother, her brother had admitted to it as well.

If they were from the same mother, they were naturally siblings.

"I won't acknowledge it until you show me the proof!" Hayden said coldly, before leaving with the plate in his hand.

Shea watched as he left and felt both impatient and frustrated. It was a shame that her brother was not around, otherwise she would have been able to ask for the proof she needed from him right away.

Hayden returned to Mike, and Mike asked, "what did Shea say to you? I thought

Elliot isn't coming, but seeing that she is here, I suppose Elliot is planning on attending today's wedding as well."

Hayden's expression darkened. "She didn't say much."

Mike's heart softened when he noticed the way shea was looking at their direction. "We don't really have to be so cold to someone that's mentally35 disable..."

"She isn't as stupid as she used to be," Hayden said.

"Oh. Well, I never once doubted your mom's skill."

A proud expression appeared on Hayden's face.

"Your mom, on the other hand, seems to be losing her wits lately. You saw it, too.

She won't eat properly and just look at how thin she's become... Elliot doesn't even need to use much strength if he tries to kidnap your mom again... It's bad enough that she won't exercise, how could she give up on herself like that?"

"We can hack into Mom's phone to find out what's going on," Hayden suggested.

"Are you afraid?"

"Of course I am! She's your mom, not mine. If you make a mistake, the worst she could do is give you a scolding; if I make a mistake, she will chase me out of the house!"

“Oh.”

Intrigued by Hayden’s suggestion, Mike contemplated for a while, before suggesting, “Big H, let’s give it a go. If your mom finds out, we will both take responsibility for it together, okay?”

Hayden nodded.

After breakfast, Mike went back to the parking lot to take his laptop, while Hayden and Layla waited in the event hall.

After watching Mike leave, Shea walked over to their table.

“I have gifts for you two.” Shea took out a shiny piece of accessory from her purse. “Layla, this is for you. Do you know what this is? It’s a rainbow creator! You hang it on the window of your room and when the sun shines in, there will be a rainbow in your room!”

Layla couldn’t resist the gift and was instantly impressed.

“Shea... Thank you! Though my brother told me to not hang out with you, I really like your gift!”

Shea looked at Hayden in confusion. “Why would you tell Layla not to hang out with me? I’m your aunt...”

“Proof!” Hayden retorted.

Shea beamed at him and said, “I will definitely show you the proof.”

“Even if you have proof, I’m not calling you Auntie! I don’t want Elliot as my father.

I don’t acknowledge him!”

Shea felt a lump forming in her throat and felt somewhat misunderstood.
“It’s fine

if you don’t want to acknowledge him as your dad... but you have to acknowledge me... I haven’t done anything bad to you two!”

Hayden was instantly rendered speechless. As odd as Shea’s way of thinking was, she seemed to be right.

Chapter 456

It was Elliot who almost choked him to death, and it was also Elliot who bullied his mother; Shea had never harmed them. Mike came back with his laptop. He greeted Shea with a smile when he saw her, “hi, Shea!”

Shea felt slightly awkward as she looked at Mike.

Mike smiled gently at her. “Are you here²⁵ alone?”

“My brother will be here later,” she said.

“Oh. How’s your wound recovering?” Does your head still hurt?” Mike studied her beautiful wig and reached out to touch it.

Shea shook her head. “It doesn’t hurt as long as I don’t touch it.”

Mike leaned towards her, before parting his hair to show her the wound on his head. “See, we have matching wounds.”

Shea was taken by surprise at first, but soon nodded with a smile. “Is there something wrong with your head as well?”

“Yeah! But I’m better now, so you should work hard to recover as well!”

“Yep! I have something important to do once I recover!”

“Oh? What’s that?”

Shea’s expression froze, and she immediately ran back to her bodyguards.

After Shea left, Hayden and Layla took their seats next to Mike to watch him hack into their mother’s phone in hope of finding the reason why Avery wasn’t eating.

To their surprise, Avery arrived shortly after Mike had started.

She missed her children, and had come ahead of time. She saw the screen on Mike’s laptop and did not suspect for a moment that he was trying to hack into her phone when she asked,” what are you doing?”

Startled, Mike came close to screaming and shut his laptop abruptly.

“Mom!” Layla hugged Avery in excitement and said, “Mom, you look so pretty!”

Avery was wearing the gown she bought the day she went shopping with Tammy.

The gown was a little loose, but it did not affect the outlook.

Tammy had hired a team of makeup artists and Avery’s makeup was done by a professional makeup artist.

Her dark, long hair was tied up and her makeup was refreshing, which made her appear both sweet and elegant.

“You look really pretty, too, my baby! Who did your hair?” Avery lifted her daughter up, but soon remembered that she was pregnant and set Layla down immediately.

“Uncle Mike did...”

Avery’s curiosity returned at Layla’s mention of Mike and asked, “Mike, what were you doing just now? Who are you hacking?”

Mike batted his blue eyes and said, “nothing! I wasn’t hacking anyone. I was just...resetting the system.”

“Oh? We are here for a wedding, and you bring along a laptop to reset the system?” Avery sat down next to him suspiciously.

“I always keep a laptop in my car! I was bored because we arrived too early. Your kids woke up at six this morning and insisted on coming to look for you in the hotel. Can you see the dark circles under my eyes?” Mike complained.

Avery stared into his eyes, before suddenly turning her attention to something behind Mike.

Mike followed her gaze and looked over.

‘Oh, great. Elliot is here,’ he thought.

Elliot became the center of attention the moment he showed up in the event hall.

When Shea saw him, she ran towards him to grab his hand.

Not only did Elliot not refuse her touch, he wrapped his arm around her and everyone saw how close the two were/ Avery watched them and her expression darkened.

Chapter 457

“Big Brother, do I have my own identification card?” Shea asked.

“Why are you asking about this out of the blue?” Elliot responded.

“Because everyone has their own identification cards and I want it, too.”

“You do, but it’s a 25 home.”

“Oh... Can you give it to me when we go home later?” Shea smiled.

“Why do you need it?” Elliot helped her find an empty9c seat.

“It’s my identification card, so of course I should keep it.” Shea opened her purse and took out a brand-new phone. “Big Brother, I bought a new phone. I can make calls from now on.”

“???” Elliot looked up at the23 bodyguard.

The bodyguard immediately explained, “Miss Shea bought it when she went shopping yesterday. She even registered a sim card with Mrs. Scarlet’s identification card.”

Shea had changed drastically and Elliot was slightly taken by surprise. Feeling proud of her progress, he said, “Shea, you can go ahead and get a sim card with your own identificationza card.”

“Okay! When will we go home, Big Brother?”

She couldn’t wait to go35 home.

“We need to at least wait until lunch time to head home. Don’t worry, shea, your identification card is safe with me.”

Shea nodded and switched on her phone. “Big Brother, can you teach me how to use my phone?”

“Sure,” Elliot responded with patience.

“Stop staring already, Avery! Your eyes look like they are about to pop out of your sockets.” Mike waved his hand in front of Avery.

Avery looked away awkwardly.

Elliot was teaching Shea how to use her phone and he seemed very sincere and patient at it. It had been very long since Avery last saw him behaving in such a gentle manner, so she couldn’t help but stare.

She took a sip of water from her glass to try and conceal the panic on her face.

“Why hasn’t Eric arrived?” Mike looked at the time. “He should be sitting next to you, right?”

Avery nodded. “What did you all do yesterday in the mansion? Did you have fun?”

Mike refilled her glass after she had finished the water.

“I was sleeping most of the time.”

“Oh? Have you eaten anything?”

“I did. I had spicy chicken soup.” Avery’s stomach rumbled at the memory of how tasty the spicy chicken soup was.

She had her breakfast earlier, but vomited within ten minutes of finishing it. Had it not been for Tammy’s wedding, she wouldn’t have come. The morning sickness of her pregnancy this time had rendered her helpless.

“I talked to Chad last night,” Mike lowered his voice as he leaned towards Avery, “I said that I’ve never seen you going on a diet before and you don’t seem to be in love with someone, but still, you refuse to eat... Do you know what Chad says?”

Avery’s heartbeat sped up at the mysterious expression on Mike’s face.

“He said that women lose their appetite when they are pregnant. His sister was pregnant a while back and she was acting exactly the way you are right now! His sister vomited no matter what she ate...”

Before Mike could finish, Avery covered her mouth and gagged.

Mike was instantly shocked.

“Mom!” Startled, Layla screamed.

Hayden immediately picked up the tissue box and handed a piece of tissue paper

to Avery.

Elliot heard Layla’s scream from a distance and immediately looked over. When his dark, brooding eyes landed on Avery, he couldn’t help but move his legs towards her.

‘Why did Layla scream just now? What’s happening with Avery?’ He thought. “I’m fine. Don’t worry.” Avery did not vomit in the end and the nausea subdued almost immediately, but the way she was looking at Mike was slightly guilty.

Mike had already realized what was happening, as the looks in her eyes had betrayed her.

She was pregnant.

The staff in the wedding venue contacted a doctor swiftly, and Avery said awkwardly, “I’m sorry, but I’m fine.”

The staff confirmed a few more times that she was fine, before leaving.

Elliot had been standing beside her the entire time, and was observing her at the moment. Because of the makeup she was wearing, Elliot couldn't tell her expression.

Chapter 458

"What are you doing here? Here for the drama?" Mike mocked.

Elliot ignored Mike and strode towards the empty seat next to Avery, before sitting down.

Avery's lashes shivered briefly as she said, "that's Eric's seat."

"This is my seat!" He gritted out angrily, "don't worry. He will be on this table as25

well."

Avery came to a realization that Elliot must have gone to Jun to have his seat changed.

Once Elliot took his seat, Shea walked over and sat down next togc him.

Noticing how uncomfortable Avery was, Mike got up immediately to exchange seats with her; but before he could say anything, Shea beat him to it.

“Mike, can I change seats with you?”

Mike was sitting next to Hayden and she wanted to sit with Hayden.

Mike wasn't sure how to reject Shea, and neither did she gave him the chance to do so. Shea walked directly towards Mike and Mike was left with no option but to give her his seat.

After that, it didn't matter if Mike changed his seat with Avery, because she would still be sitting next to Elliot either way.

Mike summoned up the courage and asked Elliot, “let's exchange seats, what do you say?”

“No.”

Mike stared daggers at him.

Time flew and soon, it was twelve at noon and the wedding ceremony started.

Elliot wasn't interested and therefore did not keep his eyes on the stage; Avery, on the other hand, was taking pictures at the stage throughout the ceremony.

Shortly after the ceremony ended, it was time for the bouquet toss.

Tammy took one glance at Avery's direction, before turning around to toss the bouquet towards Avery with all her might.

Following a "Whew!", Elliot caught the bouquet and everyone erupted into excited screams.

"???" Avery was stunned.

Elliot did not pass Avery the bouquet after catching it, as he didn't want Avery to marry someone else to begin with, so he handed it to Mike.

"Thank you!" Mike said.

The lights dimmed as soon as the ceremony ended, and a familiar melody started to echoed within the hall.

The crowd erupted into screams simultaneously.

"Eric! Eric!"

Eric's alluring voice emerged, leaving everyone in exclamation.

Elliot stared at Avery and noticed that she was quietly eating instead of looking at the stage like everyone else.

She was eating mainly the cold dishes and vegetables, and stayed away from meat.

He picked up his fork and took a piece of pork rib, before placing it onto her plate, as she used to love pork ribs.

She gaped at him and said, "I don't want it. Take it away."

If Elliot didn't take it away, she would likely be so nauseated that she ended up spitting out the vegetable she had eaten; however, he seemed to be determined and commanded, "eat!"

Avery's head started to hurt.

Just then, her caring daughter Layla reached out to pull Avery's plate towards her and devoured the piece of pork rib swiftly.

"Mom, change seats with me! I'm not afraid of this bad guy!"

"It's okay, baby. I'm not afraid of him either." Avery had lost her appetite and set her fork down.

After a while, Eric's performance was over and he stepped down from the stage.

Mike immediately went to talk to him. "Change seats with Avery, and then I'll exchange mine with yours."

With that, Avery was separated from Elliot with Eric sitting in between them.

Sensing the tension around the table, Eric looked at Elliot and said, “hello, Mr.

Foster.”

Elliot’s expression darkened as his eagle-like eyes locked onto Avery’s face.

“Avery, are you pregnant?!” He gritted out.

Chapter 459

Elliot had described Avery’s symptoms to his family doctor through messages earlier, and the doctor had suggested that Avery had to be either ill, or pregnant.

Elliot quickly denied the former, as Avery was a doctor herself; if she truly was terminally ill, she would not attend Tammy’s wedding, not to mention the bachelorette party the night before.

But what could cause a person to lose so much weight within such a short period of time if one wasn’t terminally ill?

Apart from that, Avery clearly could eat; she simply avoided meat and ate only fruits and vegetables. Was that not exactly the symptoms of 25 pregnancy?

Everyone at the table was stunned at Elliot's words.

Mike was slightly annoyed and taken by surprise that Elliot managed to realize it so soon, so he said, "Avery's not pregnant."

Avery was on pins and needles. She did not look at Elliot, but could still sense his sharp eyes on her face. She could have lied like Mike did, but she couldn't, simply because it was too easy to check if she was pregnant.

She couldn't explain why she gagged or why she refused the pork rib he placed on her plate.

Elliot was a skeptical person and she knew that she wouldn't be able to fool him, so she picked up her purse and stood up.

Everyone turned to look at her, wondering what she was going to do.

Elliot stood up as well when Avery did, before taking long strides towards her and grabbing her wrist to drag her out of the event hall.

Tammy, who was toasting, saw the two leaving and hurried over to ask, "why did they leave? What happened?"

Mike looked up at Tammy. "Tammy, do you already know that Avery is pregnant?"

Tammy's eyes darted around guiltily.

"Avery is pregnant?!" Jun exclaimed in shock, "that's so dramatic! Do you all know about that? Does Elliot know?"

Mike lifted an eyebrow. "What do you think?"

Jun rubbed his hands together. "Hahaha! That's great, isn't it? Why do you all seem so gloomy?"

No one was happy, perhaps not even Elliot, considering how terrifying his expression was when he left with Avery. Jun suddenly came to realization and exclaimed, "could it be that Avery's baby isn't Elliot's?!"

Tammy couldn't bring herself to listen to the conversation any longer and dragged Jun away.

Elliot dragged Avery out of the event hall and into the elevator by the wrist. The elevator door shut slowly and the tension in the air was suffocating.

Avery never thought that Elliot would find out about her pregnancy at such a time under such circumstances.

She observed him quietly through the metal wall of the elevator.

His brows furrowed as he pursed his lips in silence. In his mind, countless thoughts arose and he was caught in emotions.

It wasn't that he had not thought of the possibility of Avery getting pregnant with his child, considering how many times they had been intimate without protection;

but the discovery had taken him by surprise. Apart from that, he was also angry about the fact that Avery kept the pregnancy from him.

'Why didn't she tell me? Could it be that... she is pregnant with someone else's child?' He thought.

Elliot tensed and decided to take Avery to the hospital right away.

In the quiet corridor of the hospital, the door to the ultrasound room was pushed open. Elliot stepped out with the ultrasound image in one hand and grabbed onto Avery's wrist with another.

He exploded the moment they entered the elevator and stared coldly at her.

"Avery Tate, whose child are you pregnant with?!" According to the ultrasound, she had already been two months along.

Chapter 460

Yet he had just found out about it.

Avery met his eyes, which were burning with rage, and retorted in frustration, “you always manage to find a way to humiliate me!”

‘Whose child does he think it would be, if not his?’ She thought, ‘Eric’s, or Mike’s?’

“If it’s mine, why didn’t you tell me?!” Elliot did not realize that there was an issue with his suspicion, as her action had brought back memories of the 25 past.

It was not the first time she had hidden her pregnancy from him. He hated how it felt to be kept in the dark while she toyed with him like a fool.

“Don’t you ever get tired of this, Elliot?” She stared at the furious expression on his face and said in desperation, “I am... I am so tired... No matter what happens, you can always find a reason to be mad at me! Who do you think I am? What exactly am I to you?!”

Avery pressed on the button in the elevator to open the door.

Elliot glanced at the display screen and realized that they had only reached the third²³ floor.

The elevator opened slowly and Avery strode off.

Elliot followed closely behind as his heartbeat sped up. "Avery Tate! What are you^a thinking?

"I am getting rid of this child!" Resentment filled her eyes as she shouted in a hoarse voice, "I have had enough! This child would only suffer if I give birth to it! If that's destined to happen, why should I give birth to it?!"

Elliot had forced her to go through abortion when she got pregnant five years ago, and he had never imagined that things would take such a turn at the³⁵ time.

He felt as though he had been stuck in the heart when he heard that she was going to get rid of their child and he could barely breathe through the excruciating pain.

Unable to think properly, he followed his instinct and stopped her.

"I won't allow you to get rid of our child!" His eyes reddened as he grabbed her by the shoulder and stopped her from moving forward. "Give birth to it! Even if it's a freak, you have to give birth to it!"

'A freak! This is how he cursed his own child?' Tears scrolled down her face at the thought and she shouted in tears, "you are the freak! You are!"

Unable to move her arms, she resorted to kicking him in the legs with all her might.

They were in the maternity ward at the time; there were countless women who came for abortion, and countless others had been overjoyed to find out that they were pregnant here.

There had been many couples who argued about what to do with their children, but it was rare to see an instance where the woman wanted an abortion while the man tried to keep the baby.

Someone took out their phone to take a video of them, and the bodyguard immediately hurried over to stop them.

Elliot lifted Avery up and strode towards the elevator.

'She is too emotional right now. I have to take her away from her, or she will keep thinking about getting an abortion,' he thought.

"Let me go! I have legs! I can walk on my own!" She punched him on the chest, but he refused to let go.

Once they were out of the hospital, he carried her towards the parking lot.

The bodyguard ran back to the car to open the car door for them.

Reluctant to be exposed to public view, Avery buried her face in Elliot's chest.

Once she was inside the car, she commanded coldly, "send me home, my home!"

Elliot sat down next to her and closed the car door.

The bodyguard sat in the driver's seat and started the engine. "Where to, Mr.

Foster?"

"Her house," Elliot responded in a hoarse voice.

Avery was pregnant and it could affect the child inside her if she was too emotional, so he didn't wish to provoke her any further.

Car sped forward. Once Avery had regained her composure, she took her phone out of her purse.

Elliot stared at her slightly flushed face which was directed towards the window at the moment, and swallowed, "Avery, I forbid you from getting rid of our child! Not if I don't agree to it. Don't even think about it!"

Chapter 461

Her eyes reddened in rage. "And what if I have a miscarriage?"

Her question had caused a lump to form in Elliot's throat and he was rendered speechless.

"The baby is barely three-months old, it's not certain that it will survive! If you keep pissing me off every single day, I can assure you that it won't." Avery watched as Elliot gaped at her words and felt a rush from being able to retaliate.

He moved his lips, but did not say a word in the end. He knew that he shouldn't provoke her any further when he remembered how hopeless Avery appeared to be back in the hospital.

She had plenty of chances to get rid of the baby before, but she didn't; she suffered through the morning sickness in silence and did not get rid of the child despite losing so much weight, which meant that she wanted to give birth to it.

Elliot slowly began to regain his composure.

Avery calmed down and unlocked her phone to find messages from Mike, Tammy and Eric. She replied to them one by one to inform them that she was safe.

Shortly after, the car drove into Starry River Villa and stopped before Avery's mansion.

Once the door was unlocked, she pushed it open and got out of the car; but so did Elliot.

"Why are you getting out as well? Go back." Avery held onto her purse and stared at him across the car.

"Let's talk."

"Talk? What's there to talk about?"

She was exhausted from the fight they had earlier and only wanted to go to sleep.

However, Elliot simply stood in front of the entrance of the mansion and waited for her to open the gate.

She walked towards him and opened the gate, before stepping into the yard with Elliot following closely behind..

She felt as though she was inviting a wolf into her house. When the door to the mansion was opened, he even hurried inside before she did.

She gaped when she saw him taking a pair of brand-new slippers from the shoe cabinet and changing into them.

“Don’t you see how ridiculous you are being, Elliot?” She watched as he changed into the slippers from the door and mocked, “weren’t you disgusted by the idea of me having your child back then? Have you forgotten about what happened all those years ago?”

‘How can I forget? Not only do I remember, the memories are carved into my brain,’ he thought.

“Throw sarcastic remarks at me all you want if that makes you feel any better, Avery.” He changed into the slippers and turned to look at her calmly.

“Are those pretty words supposed to cover the mistakes you made back then?”

She said, before walking towards him to place her purse onto the shoe cabinet and changing into her slippers.

“My mistakes?” He chuckled and said, “I would do the exact same thing even if I have to do it all over again.”

She froze.

“Did I even know you that well back then?” He questioned sharply before she could react,” have you ever tried standing in my shoes to think about what you would have done back then if you were me?”

She stared at him dazedly.

“If you were me and you woke up to a wife you didn’t know, who was pregnant with my nephew’s child, what would you have done? No matter whose child that was, I couldn’t have accepted it,” he said coldly.

It was the first time Avery had heard about Elliot’s true thoughts throughout all the years and she felt that the rock on her chest was slightly lifted.

“You accuse me of not standing in your shoes, but have you tried standing in mine?” She retorted, “how do you think I got pregnant to begin with? It’s not like I can get pregnant on my own, can I?”

Elliot, too, was taken by surprise at her words.

“It was your mother’s plan! You knew all along, but you didn’t care. I understand that you forced me to get an abortion at the time because you didn’t love me, but I still hate you for it. It doesn’t matter what excuse you try to use, nothing can change that,” she gritted out while staring into his eyes.

Elliot was not enraged. He tried to calm down and thought about it. Though an abortion was a comparatively minor surgery with no life risk, but there would surely be pain and emotional trauma; just like how much it hurt for him when she said that she wanted to get rid of their child in the hospital. Perhaps she hurt as much when she was forced to go through the abortion five years ago.

Chapter 462

He strolled towards the living room and stood still to wait for Avery to approach.

“What else do you want to talk about?” She walked towards the stairs, longing to go upstairs to rest.

“Are you going to sleep?” He studied her slim frame and lowered his defense.

“Yeah. We can talk first, though, if that’s what you want.”

Avery remained standing by the stairs with the sole intention of staying away from him, as her heart ached whenever she caught onto his scent. It was so familiar, yet destiny had made it so that their hearts were miles apart.

“Go to sleep!” He sat down on the couch. “I will leave in a while.”

“Oh...” She looked away from him and went upstairs.

Elliot stood up from the couch as soon as Avery was upstairs. He finally realized how self centered and selfish he had been all this while. He had never truly understood what she wanted. He had thought that he gave her everything he could and blamed her for not accepting him, when the truth was that what he gave was not what she wanted; and he had never once given her what she truly wanted.

After half an hour, Elliot assumed that Avery was asleep and unlocked his phone to call his family doctor.

“Congratulations on becoming a father, Mr. Foster,” the doctorza said.

The hospital that Elliot had taken Avery to was the one where his family doctor worked.

“Is there a way to ease the morning sickness?” Elliot scowled and asked.

“No,” the doctor responded, “she will have to make it past it on her own. Usually, the symptoms would improve when the pregnancy progresses to around twelve to sixteen weeks. Miss. Tate is currently eight-weeks into her pregnancy, so she should feel better after a month.

“She has lost so much weight that she barely looks human.” Elliot clenched his fists, as his voice tightened up as well.

“That bad, huh? We can put her on IV if she really can’t eat. She’s a doctor, too, so she should know; unless she doesn’t want the child...”

“Indeed, she doesn’t want the child.”

“Huh? Why not?”

“He hates me,” Elliot paused briefly, before continuing, “but I won’t let her get rid of the child.”

“Well, women often become more emotional when they are pregnant due to the change in hormones. Perhaps it’s not that Miss. Tate doesn’t want the child, she is simply in pain and doesn’t know what to do about it,” the doctor assured, “she will need you to care for her with patience at times like this.”

“She doesn’t want to see me.”

“...If that’s the case, then it’s best that you leave her be for the time being.”

“I can’t do it,” he concluded after thinking it through.

Meanwhile, Avery went upstairs to change into her cotton-made pajamas and laid awake on the bed with her eyes wide open, unable to fall asleep.

‘He’s still there. I wonder what he’s doing downstairs. I don’t even know what he’s thinking,’ she thought. ‘Did he insist on keeping our child because he wants to be a father, or because he wants me to compensate for the baby he had with Zoe?’

‘Once the child was born, do I really give it to Elliot? Can he even raise a child?’

He has such a bad temper and gets angry easily, so I can’t rest assured knowing that the child is with him.’

Countless thoughts crossed her mind and she felt as though her head was about to explode.

Just then, she heard footsteps approaching from outside the door. Without a doubt, she knew it was Elliot.

Avery immediately closed her eyes.

The door was pushed open and Elliot strode towards the bed.

She had thought that he only came in to check on her, but he sat down; not only did he sit down, he then lied down next to her.

Chapter 463

She immediately tensed. Since she was facing her back at him, she couldn't see his face and had no clue as to what he was trying to do.

She was instantly at a crossroad, thinking to herself, 'what should I do if he tries something?'

To her surprise, he did not move after laying down.

His breath was close to her and she could feel his strong heartbeat. As the pace of his breathing slowed down, he wrapped his arm around her waist abruptly; like the way he would naturally pull her into his arms back when they were in 25 love.

She opened her eyes and dazedly thought back to the past. After a while, tears began to gather in her eyes, while the man behind her fell deeply into sleep.

She lifted his arm off of her and sat up, before wiping the tears in her eyes as she studied Elliot while he was asleep.

Her gaze lowered to his chest and she suddenly felt the urge to see the wound on his chest. She reached out and unbuttoned his shirt.

As soon as she unbuttoned the first one, he scowled and instinctively shoved her hands away forcefully.

She looked at him dazedly and thought to herself, 'but he's asleep! How can he be so alert when he doesn't even know who touched him? Has he always been so alert to others' touch? But if that's the case, how did he manage to be intimate with Zoe?'

She sank into depression at the thought.

She had never been with any other man apart from him, so she couldn't tolerate the fact that he had been with another woman. She couldn't possibly accept a flawed relationship, even when his heart still beat for her.

She sat dazedly as tears scrolled down her face uncontrollably. She knew that she would easily get emotional because of the pregnancy, so she had been trying to remain calm to counter the effect of her hormones; she never expected that Elliot would be able to break her with ease.

As though he had sensed something, Elliot opened his eyes abruptly.

Avery didn't have the time to adjust herself and so he caught sight of her in such a discomfited state.

"What's wrong, Avery?" Startled, he sat up hastily before he was fully awake and reached out to wipe away her tears. "Why are you crying?"

Embarrassed, she stopped crying and came up with an excuse. "I wanted to see your wound, but you shoved me away."

"I'm sorry. I was asleep," he said, before unbuttoning his own shirt. "The wound isn't that good to look at."

She saw his exposed wound the next moment and she felt as though she was being mocked by the hideous wound.

Avery reached her fingers to touch it.

He shivered slightly and grabbed her hand. "Don't touch it. It doesn't hurt anymore."

She retracted her hand from his and scolded, "you are a madman! If you died back then, even if your families and friends didn't come looking for trouble, they would be certain that I was the one who killed you! I could have been condemned for life!"

He studied her reddened eyes and pursed his lips.

He acted on impulse at the time because he was provoked. He loved Avery so much, and yet she wanted to kill him. He felt that there was no longer any meaning in life and thought that it would be better to die and be free.

"Are you blaming me for wanting to kill you?" Though Elliot didn't say anything, Avery had guessed what he was thinking and retorted, "what I think is my own business. It doesn't count as long as I don't act on it!"

Chapter 464

"Why are you mentioning this now?" Elliot didn't want to fight, because there was something else between them; and that was their child.

"Why not? Just because we don't talk about it, doesn't mean it's in the past!"

Avery knew it was bad to be hung up on the past, but she also knew that there were things that had to be clarified, or they would all turn into knives that come back to haunt them.

Elliot pulled her into his arms and said in a gentle voice, "weren't you going to sleep? Did I wake you?"

Her face came into contact with the burning skin on his chest before she could react and she panicked, so she shoved him away and lied back down with her back facing him.

Elliot stared at her slim frame dazedly as his heart ached. Avery had not told him what his mother had said to her before she died, and naturally, he did not have the courage to ask about it.

If she was this frustrated when he didn't ask about it, she would only be angrier if he confronted her.

He pulled up the blanket and covered her body with it, before lying down next to her once again.

At six in the evening, Mike and Chad came home with the children. When they opened the door to the mansion, they saw Avery watching television from the couch.

"Avery, I brought you dinner." Mike unpacked the food in front of her.

"There are some of your favorite fruits, some soup and appetizers... Try them."

Avery took one glance at the food and her stomach instantly started rumbling.

"Mom! Why didn't you tell Hayden and I that you have a little baby in your belly?"

Layla went to sit down next to Avery and scowled in a slightly frustrated expression. "Why do you want another baby, when we are being good? I'm 35 upset!" Avery felt extremely awkward at the question. "I'm sorry, Layla, I should have told you and your brother. It's my fault and I will reflect upon it."

"Oh... An apology is good enough, you don't have to reflect on it." Layla reached out to touch Avery's on her belly. "Huh? Where's the baby? Why isn't there anything?"

Avery had gone through most of the day without eating and her belly shrunk due to hunger.

Both Chad and Mike stared intently at her belly and started to have different thoughts.

Avery!" Mike roared, "did that bast*rd Elliot took you to get an abortion again?"

"..." Avery couldn't respond.

Chad was having a hard time believing that Elliot would be so ruthless, but he started to waver when he saw how pale Avery was along with her flat abdomen.

In order to prove that he was normal human being, Chad promised, "Avery, if Mr.

Foster forced you to get an abortion again, I'm going to resign right away."

Just then, a towering figure appeared by the stairs and both Mike and Chad gazed over.

When Chad saw Elliot, all strength was instantly drained from him and he only managed to remain standing by grabbing onto Mike's arm.

Elliot strode down the stairs and went towards Chad, before asking, "are you resigning?"

Chad hesitated and dared not to speak while being stared at by Elliot's sharp

eyes.

Mike, on the other hand, was furious. "You bast*rd! That's Avery's baby, who do you think you are to force her into getting rid of it?"

Mike became increasingly agitated and was about to start a fight, but Chad stopped him with all his might.

Seeing how chaotic the situation had become, Avery clarified, "he didn't make me get an abortion. Also, can you all control yourselves in front of my kids?"

Mike instantly quieted down.

Elliot glanced at the dinner laid out before Avery and said to Chad, "come, Chad."

"Okay... Mr. Foster, I'm not resigning... Of course, I'm not resigning when you didn't force Avery to get rid of her baby..." Chad explained in a flattering tone while following Elliot out.

Once they left, the living room returned to silence.

"Avery, Avery! Are you crazy? You already have two kids and now you are having another one! Are you a breeding cow or something?" Mike scolded in disappointment, "you already took a cut to the belly before and now you will have to go through that again for that dirtbag's sake. Is it worth it?"

Avery felt as though her head was about to explode. She didn't want to give birth to another child had it not been for Elliot relentlessly demanding that she compensate him with a child. What other option did she have?

"Oh, right, so what's his take on all this?" Mike shoved his hands into his pockets and asked," he wants you to give birth? And then what?"

Chapter 465

Avery lifted her gaze to look at Mike, then said, "Can't you just let me eat in peace? We didn't talk about any of that!"

"What did you talk about all afternoon, then?" Mike said with a look of astonishment. "Why was he upstairs? Did he sleep in your room? Well?"

"Do I ever freak out when you bring Chad home to stay the night?"

"Chad's my boyfriend. Is Elliot Foster your boyfriend?" Mike teased. "How can your ex husband possibly compare to my boyfriend? Or are you planning on making things official with him 25 again?"

Avery was taken aback.

"You're so annoying," she said with furrowed brows.

"Fine, I won't say anymore. Go on and eat," Mike said as he felt bad seeing Avery's skinny figure.

Avery picked up her spoon and took a sip of her²³ soup.

It was still warm.

The children were staring at her without blinking their^{2a} eyes.

Avery's cheeks flushed as she said, "Why are you staring at me like that?"

"Mommy, will you still love Hayden and me once the baby's born?" Layla³⁵ asked.

"Of course!" Avery exclaimed. "Of course I love you and your brother."

It was because she loved them too much that she did not want Elliot finding out about them.

Layla felt relieved. Her eyes that were filled with curiosity blinked as she asked,

“Is the baby a boy or a girl?”

Avery could not help but chuckle.

“The baby’s still really tiny, sweetie. It’s too early to tell if it’s going to be a boy or a girl.”

Layla was surprised.

“I see...”

Layla was even more shocked.

“Were Hayden and I like that when we were babies, too?”

“That’s right. We all start out as tiny babies and grow up slowly.”

Layla nodded, then raised another question.

“Why aren’t you eating much, Mommy? Is it because the baby won’t let you?”

Hayden thought his sisters incessant questions were interrupting Avery’s meal, so he pulled Layla away and took her back to their room.

Mike took a sip of water, then walked over to Avery’s side.

“Your pregnancy was a huge surprise this time. You should’ve told the kids about it first... They've been upset since yesterday," Mike said softly.

"Elliot wanted this baby," Avery said bitterly.

"What? Are you giving the baby to him to raise once it's born?"

"That's the plan for now, but I don't know if I'll change my mind later on."

"That's right. You might as well just give birth to it first!" Mike said as he very quickly accepted the situation. "You shouldn't go to the office, then. Stay home and take care of yourself and the baby."

"Early pregnancy symptoms only happen during the first trimester. I'll go back to work once the nausea goes away."

"Why are you working so hard? What if something happens to the baby?" Mike said as he shot Avery a look. "Since Elliot wanted the baby, he'd go insane if you suddenly lose it."

"How do you know him so well?"

"I just have to see him as a lunatic!" Mike shrugged, then said, "If you accidentally miscarry, I bet he'll force you to get pregnant again."

His words put Avery's stomach in knots.

Over at the Foster mansion, the black Rolls-Roice pulled into the front yard. Elliot emerged from the car, but Shea grabbed onto his arm before he could stand upright.

“Give me my ID, Big Brother.” Elliot sighed internally when he saw the nervous expression on his sister’s face.

“Am I more important, or is your ID more important?”

Shea froze for a moment, then said, “Both are important.”

Elliot did not expect Shea’s clear thought process and high adaptability.

This was the happiest day of his life since his mother’s passing.

Not only was Shea’s condition improving, Avery was also pregnant with his child.

Elliot entered his study, got out Shea’s ID and gave it to her. “This is an important document, Shea,” he said. “You have to tell me right away if you lose it.”

Chapter 466

Shea nodded and said, “I’ll keep it in my room. I won’t lose it.

“Good. Have you had dinner yet?” Elliot asked.

“I did! I ate at the hotel with Hayden.”

“You seem to like Hayden a lot,” Elliot said as he recalled the way she switched seats with Mike that afternoon.

When they used to go out, Shea would never leave his side.

Today, however, she actually preferred sitting next to Hayden.

“I like Hayden and Layla,” Shea said.

She had a strong feeling that she was not only Hayden’s aunt, but also Layla’s.

This was because the relationship that Hayden and Layla had was the same as the one she had with Elliot.

Elliot could not help but recall the way he almost strangled Hayden to death back at the mansion in the forest.

When they met that afternoon, Hayden did not once look at him.

It was as if he was avoiding him on purpose.

Elliot was sure that the boy was traumatized.

He felt guilty as he recalled what happened.

He never used to feel guilty about anything he did because he would never do anything wrong unless someone angered him.

He would not have lost his reason if Hayden had not provoked him.

In retrospect, however, although Hayden was wrong, Elliot himself did not handle the situation well either.

At dinner, Shea suddenly walked over with her ID.

“Why isn’t my last name ‘Foster’, Big Brother? Didn’t you say we were siblings?”

Shea had sent a photo of her ID to Hayden earlier.

Hayden was the one who pointed this matter out.

“Isn’t Shea a nice name?” Elliot asked.

“It is, but I want my last name to be Foster, too.”

“You’re too good for that last name, Shea. Your name’s Shea. It’s a good name.”

Shea froze for a few seconds, then nodded and said, “Okay, Big Brother.”

She returned to her room and explained things to Hayden.

When Hayden looked into Shea’s ID number, it was an individual account that had no relation to Elliot.

“There’s another way to prove it,” Hayden said.

Shea walked over to the dining room once more to see Elliot.

“Say I’m your biological little sister, Big Brother,” she said as she sneakily turned on the voice recorder on her phone.

Hayden told her that he would not believe her unless he heard it from Elliot's lips.

Elliot put down his knife and fork, then looked at Shea and asked, "Why do you want me to say that? Are you sure you're the one who wants to hear it?"

He quickly figured out what was going on when he noticed Shea hiding her hand behind her back.

"Don't tell too many people that you're my little sister," he said earnestly as he gazed at Shea. "I'm worried that my reputation would get you in trouble. If people found out that you're my sister, they would follow you, harass you and even kidnap you."

Shea did not fully understand, but said, "I won't tell Hayden about it, then."

"I'll go public with our relationship when the time is right, Shea," Elliot promised.

"You're still recovering right now. There's no need to rush."

"Okay, Big Brother."

The next day, Avery was a trending topic online. This time, she was not trending with a certain man, but with her two children.

The viral headlines were sensational. (Goddess or Single Mother?! The scandalous Avery Tate is a mother of two!)

Chapter 467

Avery almost passed out when she saw the trending topic online that morning.

It was not because it called her private life a mess, but because the immoral business account had posted photos of her two children!

It was a paparazzi shot that did not show the front of the children's faces, but it was just the same!

One could clearly see the children's features in the 25 photos.

The post even went as far as to reveal the name of their preschool.

Avery dragged her weak body out of the gc bedroom.

She knocked on Mike's door, then walked right into his room.

"Wake up, Mike!" she called out as she yanked the covers off.

It was a good thing Mike was wearing his underwear.

Otherwise, Avery would have immediately regretted her recklessnes.

"What's wrong?" Mike said as he looked at Avery with groggy eyes.

"Avery... Is

the sun even up yet?"

"It is! The kids are waking up soon."

Avery showed the viral news to Mike, then said, "Can you delete Hayden and Layla's photos? I don't know how to contact the website's office... This business account is despicable!"

Mike glanced at the children's photos on the post, then quickly sat up.

"Don't worry and leave it to me."

He put on a t-shirt, then walked over to his desk and turned on his computer.

"It looks like someone's trying to mess with you.

"I think so, too. Are you able to find out who posted the photos?" Avery asked.

"Definitely. I just need to look into this business account, but it'll take some time,"

Mike said as he quickened his tempo. "Give me a minute."

"Okay. I'm going to get some breakfast."

Mike turned to Avery, then said, "Don't leave the house! Just order some takeout.

What if you pass out while you're out there?"

Avery hesitated for a moment, then nodded and said, "What do you feel like eating?"

"I'm good for now... I'll have a glass of milk if we have any."

“We have some in the fridge. I’ll get you a glass,” Avery said, then headed to the kitchen.

By 8 a.m. that morning, Avery was the number one trending topic online.

The number of people who knew about Avery Tate having two children increased rapidly.

However, when everyone excitedly clicked into the business account’s profile and saw the photos of her so-called children, they were dumbfounded!

(Am I seeing things? Isn’t this account a famous entertainment outlet? When did it venture into comedy?]

(I almost thought that Avery Tate’s kids were my dear Eric Santos’s, but what is

this??]

[I spat out my breakfast this morning! This account owes me a meal!]

The title of the trending topic remained the same, but Mike had replaced the photos of the children with pictures of pandas and changed the name of Starry River Kindergarten to the National Zoo.

This made it look like the business account posted the breaking news that Avery

Tate had given birth to a pair of pandas that were attending school at the zoo.

A series of questions would pop up in one's head as they read the post. What was going on with the trending topics that day? Did Avery Tate pay for the publicity?

That seemed unlikely!

Even if she was dumb enough to do that, who would come up with a story about themselves giving birth to a pair of pandas?!

It was unbelievable that anybody could come up with a story this bizarre.

Mike removed all traces of Hayden and Layla's photos from the internet, then finally let out a sigh of relief.

He sent the masterpiece he made that morning to Chad and bragged.

Mike: [I'm pretty fast, right?]

Chad: [I figured it was you.]

Mike: [You have no idea how freaked out Avery was this morning. She still has to depend on me at key moments like this. That sc*mbag you call a boss is absolutely useless.]

Chad: (Praise yourself all you want, but can you not put down my boss?
Since

you worked hard

today, I don't want to fight with you.]

Mike: (Fine... I'm thinking of getting a nanny to help Avery out. Otherwise, I'd be worried about leaving her at home alone once I get back to work.]

Chad: (That's true. Do you need my help?)

Mike: (Sure!]

Then, Chad called up Elliot. Today was the second day of the Memorial weekend.

Chapter 468

Elliot could not sleep a wink the night before, so he was sleeping in at that moment.

When his phone rang, he got up to answer the call.

"Sir, Mike said he wanted to hire a nanny to help Avery out. He accepted when I offered to help look for one."

Chad received new orders from Elliot last night telling him to keep an eye
on

Avery's movements through Mike.

Chad thought it was nice of his boss to do that.

Elliot was clearly doing this because he wanted to take on the responsibilities of a father, so Chad agreed without hesitation.

"I see. I'll arrange something," Elliot said hoarsely.

"Also, Avery went viral today. Someone got an entertainment news account to post paparazzi photos of Hayden and Layla. The post said that Avery was a single mother and even said that her private life was a mess..." Chad continued to report.

Elliot's eyes furrowed as he said, "Look into it immediately and find out who's behind this."

"Yes, sir. Mike said Avery woke up at six in the morning and has been in a panic over the news. Since she's pregnant, her emotions are easily affected. She must be upset over this. Why don't you go cheer her up?"

"How would I do that?"

"She can't eat much right now. You should get her a gift."

Elliot massaged the space between his brows, then said, "Do you think she'd accept anything from me?"

"Even if she doesn't, I'm sure she would be able to feel your sincerity."

Elliot thought that made sense.

He refused to let her abort the baby, but could not bear the difficulties of pregnancy for her.

Giving her a present was only natural.

Over at the Starry River Villa, Mike told Avery about wanting to hire a nanny for

her.

"Aren't things fine the way they are right now?" Avery said with furrowed brows.

"It's not like I'm so nauseous I can't get out of bed. Besides, the kids are going back to school soon, so there isn't much else to do."

"Don't you plan on spending any of the money you made?" Mike teased. "How much could hiring a nanny cost?"

"It's not about the money... It's just weird having a stranger live in our home."

“We don’t have to hire a stay-at-home nanny. We could just get someone to come in during the day to clean and cook.”

“Fine. Bring them over to the house once you’ve found someone suitable,” Avery said as she decided to no longer retaliate. She then changed the subject and asked, “Do you have a date today?”

“I don’t! Why?” Mike said.

“Layla and Hayden have class activities ... If you have time today, then take them over to the science museum to learn a thing or two about airplanes. Take some photos while you’re at it.”

“You got it! I’ll take them when you’re taking your afternoon nap,” Mike responded.

At eleven that morning, Avery was sitting on the couch with a book in her hands.

Mike and the children were playing with a new toy.

Suddenly, the doorbell rang.

When Avery looked outside, she saw the black luxury sedan parked outside the gates, with Elliot and Shea standing side by side.

Mike felt suspicious when he saw them, but opened up the gates anyway.

Once the gates were opened, Elliot and Shea very quickly made their way into the living room.

Shea was holding a bag in her hands.

“Layla! Hayden! I’ve brought gifts for you!” Shea said as she distributed the gifts to the children.

Ilm

Finally, she pulled out an exquisite gift box, handed it over to Avery and said,

“This one’s for you, Avery! Open it up and take a look!”.

Avery was surprised.

She opened the box and saw the extravagant diamond necklace inside of it.

She was a little taken aback.

Why would shea give her such a lavish present?

“Wow! I love this necklace! Can I trade with you, Mommy?” Layla pleaded.

Shea anxiously interjected and exclaimed, “No! Big Brother got that for Avery! He told me to give it to her for him!” Both Elliot and Avery were speechless.

Chapter 469

Shea was worried they did not understand her, then added, “My brother bought this gift for Avery.”

Avery closed the box, then lifted her eyes at Elliot and asked, “What’s the meaning of this?”

The spark of war was instantly ignited.

Mike immediately dragged Shea and the children out of the house.

It would be bad for the children’s mental health to watch their parents fight too much.

Once Shea was out of the house, she turned to Layla and Hayden and explained,

“My brother may have bought Avery’s gift, but I was the one who got you your presents. It was me! You have to accept them!”

“Sure,” Layla said then began to open up her gift.

On the other hand, Hayden had his eyes pinned in the direction of the living room.

“Relax, Big H! Your mom’s pregnant with that dirtbag’s baby, so there’s no way he’d pick on her!” Mike said as he tried to comfort the boy. “Let’s go somewhere to play!”

“I’m not going out,” Haydenza responded.

He was still worried about his mother.

Shea took Hayden’s hand, then said, “Let’s go out and play! My brother won’t pick on Avery. When he was picking a present out of her today, he wanted to buy everything for her! He really loves 35 her!”

Her words gave Hayden goosebumps!

That b*st*rd Elliot Foster knew how to love a woman?

He refused to believe it!

In the living room, Elliot took a seat on the couch across from Avery.

He had expected Avery to reject his gift.

Otherwise, he would not have asked Shea to come along.

Avery probably would have accepted the gift if Shea had not let her tongue slip.

“Is this gift some kind of compensation for carrying your baby?” Avery asked as she slid the gift box towards him. “What else could it be?”

“Do I need a reason to buy you a gift?”

“Why would you buy me something without a reason?” Avery retorted.

“Shea didn’t have a reason to buy presents for your children, either.”

“You’re not Shea, neither am I a five year old child.”

Seeing her stubborn attitude, Elliot had no choice but to correct himself.

“Since your daughter likes it, then give it to her!”

“My daughter doesn’t take sloppy seconds,” Avery said.

Elliot was at a loss for words.

“Is there anything else?” Avery asked.

She might as well have told him he should leave.

Elliot took a look outside.

Mike had already taken Shea and the children out.

“I’ll wait here for Shea to come back,” he said plainly.

Avery was bewildered.

Elliot’s attitude towards her was a complete one eighty from what it used to be.

She was already used to his past self. She would even go as far as to consider their past dynamics normal.

“Did you get a gift for Zoe the second she got pregnant with your child, too?”

Avery said as she could not help but stab at him with her words. “Our relationship remains unchanged whether I’m pregnant with your child or not. There’s no need for this confusing behavior. It only makes me feel disrespected.”

Elliot’s treatment towards her was completely different before and after she got pregnant.

Did he think that being pregnant made her a different person?

She hated the idea of gaining honor and respect through one’s own offspring!

The child she was carrying was not Elliot’s alone, but it was hers, too.

Even if the child ended up being raised by Elliot, she refused to sit back and be uninvolved.

Avery’s words made Elliot frown.

Bringing up Zoe probably meant that she was bothered by the fact that Zoe once carried his child!

In Avery’s eyes, Elliot was damaged goods. That was something that would never change.

No matter what he did, she would never let herself be affected.

Elliot laughed at himself for thinking that they would become closer now that

Avery was pregnant with his child.

Chapter 470

It was nothing but a ludicrous fantasy!

With reddened eyes, Elliot stood from the couch.

“Don’t ever come here again,” Avery said as she lifted her cold gaze at him.
“I’m sure you haven’t forgotten what you did to my son before. He will always recall

what happened that day every time he lays eyes on you.”

Elliot’s Adam’s apple rolled in his²⁵ throat.

“All you saw was that I attacked him, but did you ever ask him what he said to

me?”

“No matter what he said to you, you could always retaliate with your words.
Was

there a need to use^{9c} force?”

She was right.

He was in the²³ wrong!

“That’s exactly that kind of ruthless, savage person!” Elliot snapped.

“I don’t need a self introduction!” Avery said as she shot a glare at him. “I already know^{2a} that!”

The light extinguished from Elliot's eyes as hopelessness took over.

He suppressed his desire to explain himself and maintain the little reason and self respect he had³⁵ left.

He picked up the gift box from the coffee table, then left the house.

Avery took a deep breath.

She watched with reddened eyes as Elliot stepped out of the villa.

She continued to watch as he chucked that lavish gift right into the trash can in the front yard!

What a maniac!

Not only was he insane, he wanted to make everyone around him lose their minds as well!

Once Elliot drove off, Avery walked outside with gritted teeth.

The bodyguard noticed she was walking outside as he emerged from the kitchen, then quickly followed behind her.

"Where are you going, Miss Tate?"

Avery did not respond.

She stopped in front of the gates, opened up the trash can, then pulled out the gift box that Elliot threw in earlier.

The bodyguard was dumbfounded.

Avery could have ordered him to go through the trash. There was no need for her to do something like that herself!

“It’s a good thing we use trash bags in the house,” said the bodyguard as he tried to lighten up the awkward atmosphere. “The gift box still looks pretty clean!”

Avery’s hands clenched tightly around the box, then she went back into the house.

The bodyguard trailed along behind her and rambled, “Forgive me for speaking out of turn, Miss Tate, but Mr. Foster has been really polite since he got here earlier... Maybe you shouldn’t have rained on his parade. Since you picked up his gift, it shows that you’re not a heartless, cold blooded person. Why are you always acting like such a cruel woman?”

Avery suddenly turned to face him.

“There isn’t enough time in the world to explain the grudge between us. You don’t need to know what happened between us, but you shouldn’t come to your own conclusions about it.”

She raised the box in her hand, then continued, “As to why I went back for this...

It’s because I’m not used to seeing people trample on beautiful things! I hate him because this is something he always does!”

The bodyguard was speechless.

The Memorial Day weekend went by in a breeze.

At the president’s office at Sterling Group, Ben knocked on the office doors and entered the room.

He walked towards the desk, then placed a few books on top of it.

“Elliot, I got these from the bookstore for you. I hope they’re helpful to you.”

Elliot glanced coldly at the pile of books. “The Pregnancy Bible” “The Sears Encyclopedia of Intimate Parenting”

“Caring for your Fetus”

“Caring for your Baby”

Elliot shoved the books into his desk drawer.

Ben pursed his lips, then said with a confused look on his face, “Why do you look so depressed when you’re about to be a dad? Don’t you want the kid?

From what

I heard, you seem to really want this kid!"

"Why didn't you hear about my fight with Avery, then?"

"Oh... About that... I might have heard something about it. Women lose their temper easily when they're pregnant. Hang in there."

"She's upset about my past with Zoe. She knew I was forced into it, but she doesn't care about the reason, only the result," Elliot said as a wave of gloom washed over his face. "She doesn't love me, so she can't accept even the smallest mistake from me."

Chapter 471

Ben took a seat and listened closely to Elliot's woes.

"It's true that you were forced into being with Zoe, but that wasn't because of Avery. It was for Shea's sake," Ben said bluntly. "Avery still has no idea about your relationship with Shea, so it's understandable for her to be upset."

Elliot's deep set eyes were moved as he asked, "What do you think my relationship with Shea is?"

Ben chuckled lightly, then said, "Are you really asking me to guess?"

"I know you'd figure it out," Elliot said confidently. "You know me well."

“Are you upset that Avery doesn’t trust you enough?”

Ben had a feeling that, if he was right, Elliot’s relationship with Avery was about to worsen.

“Wouldn’t that explain the problem?” Elliot retorted.

Ben stroked his chin and said, “Not everybody is as calm and reasonable as you are. Besides, love is a completely different matter. You were jealous of Mike last year. You weren’t as calm as you are right now.”

The light in Elliot’s eyes dimmed, and his voice was feeble as he said, “This entire mess is my fault.”

“Of course not!” Ben said as he noticed Elliot’s dejected mood. “Shea’s your sister, right? I bet Avery never even thought of that. You’ve never specifically told her about it, so she could never confirm it herself. The more someone cares about something, the easier it is to think negatively about it.”

A pained expression flashed across Elliot’s face.

“Everyone has their secrets, Elliot. You’re not wrong, and neither is Avery. You’re just not meant for each other,” Ben consoled. “It might sound harsh, but I don’t think she’s worth the pain you’re going through. You’ve given up way too much for this. It’d be even harder to walk away if you don’t retreat in time.”

Elliot raised his brows, then said, “You want me to walk away while she’s pregnant with my child?”

Ben coughed, then said, “That’s not it. I just don’t think you should be putting in so much energy on her anymore. She’s a doctor and she knows how to take care of herself. Once the baby’s born, you should take the child and finally end things with her.”

Elliot fell into deep thought after hearing Ben’s suggestion.

Perhaps he was right.

It would only hurt him and Avery if they continued to get entangled with each other.

If Avery successfully gave birth to his child, he would grant her freedom in return.

There was a symposium going on at a five-star hotel in the city.

At 10.30 a.m. that morning, Avery stealthily entered the venue under the company of her bodyguard.

Wanda Tate was sitting up on stage with a few other entrepreneurs as they shared their startup experiences and secrets to success.

Avery took off her shades and stared coldly at Wanda.

The night before, Mike had found out the person bought off the business account that revealed the children's photos online.

She was not surprised to find out that it was Wanda's assistant.

Wanda's assistant's deeds were Wanda's own.

Why would her assistant do something like that without her boss's orders?

After all, it was not cheap to buy off the business account and make the news viral!

Halfway through the symposium, the host opened up the floor to the audience for questions.

When Avery raised her hand, the host pointed her out.

Avery stood from her seat, then asked, "Can I ask my question on stage?"

The host froze for a moment, then nodded and said, "Of course!"

Avery could feel the eyes of everyone in the hall on her, including Wanda's.

Since Wanda did not expect Avery to be there, there was a hint of shock on her face.

The bodyguard took a deep breath. He did not expect Avery to be this brave!

Chapter 472

The bodyguard felt like things were about to go out of control.

He quickly sent their location to Mike along with a text message.

(Miss Tate's going head to head with Wanda Tate! Get over here once you see

this!]

When Mike saw the hotel location that the bodyguard sent over, he was in complete shock.

Avery had thrown up this morning after barely having a bite or two of her breakfast. She could barely get out of bed.

How did she manage to go find Wanda Tate?!

Mike grabbed his keys, then rushed out of the office.

Back at the hostel, Avery casually walked onto the stage.

She took the microphone from the host, then turned to Wanda.

“I have a question for you, Madam Tate,” she asked loudly. “Is your assistant’s name Fayeza Johnson?”

Wanda’s eyes were cold as she said, “I don’t think that question has anything to do with our talk today.”

“Aren’t we discussing the advantages of marketing in the success of a business?”

Avery said, then pulled out a few pieces of 35 paper.

Everything on stage was being projected onto the large screen in real time, which made it easier for the audience to clearly see what was happening.

“On the night of Memorial Day, your assistant bribed a certain entertainment business account to release a slanderous news article against me the next day.

After that, she incessantly contacted the trending topic team at a certain social media website... All in all, you spent about seventy five thousand dollars. Did you report these expenses?”

Wanda’s expression turned livid as she faced the evidence in Avery’s hand.

“Since you’re so shameless, of course I’ll expose you in public!” Avery said, then threw the papers in Wanda's face and continued, "I've already reported this to the police! You just need to sit and wait for a subpoena!"

Seeing this, Wanda's bodyguard rushed onto the stage, grabbed Avery's arm and yanked her off the stage.

The entire venue broke into chaos!

Avery's bodyguard charged towards her and roared, "Let go of her! F*ck! She's..."

He wanted to say that she was pregnant, but he held back when he remembered that it was a private matter that she had not made public.

"Get your hands off me!" Avery cried in pain.

Two of Wanda's bodyguards had tightened their grips around each of Avery's arms.

Her bodyguard rushed over, then jerked away one of the bodyguards. The other bodyguard violently shoved Avery away, then said, "She started it! Don't blame me for being rough! Get out of here now!"

Avery was shoved out and fell to the ground with a hard thud.

Her head slammed onto the ground, but she wrapped her arms around her belly in reflex.

“Miss Tate! Are you okay?”

Avery’s bodyguard was terrified. Without another thought, he picked her up into his arms and ran outside.

“I’ll take you to the hospital! There’s one nearby!”

At that moment, Avery’s phone began to ring frantically in her bag.

Mike was in his car and waiting impatiently at a red light.

He put on her bluetooth earphones and called Avery, but nobody was answering.

He tried calling the bodyguard, but there was no answer either.

Mike was an anxious wreck.

He called Chad and got an answer right away.

“Avery is insane! She was just throwing her guts out this morning, but went and looked for Wanda Tate the second I left for work!” Mike said through gritted teeth.

“I can’t reach her or her bodyguard right now! Traffic won’t f*cking move!”

“Do you know where she is?” Chad said calmly. “I’ll go to her.”

“I’ll send you the location!”

Mike hung up the phone, then sent the hotel's location to Chad.

Half an hour later, Elliot received a call from Chad.

Chad did not dare mention that Avery was at the hospital after getting pushed to the ground.

He simply told Elliot that Avery was at the hospital.

"You don't need to com sir. Mike and I will be here to watch her," said Chad.

Elliot shut his laptop, then walked out his office. With a deep frown, he snapped coldly, "What's the use of watching her?! What happened?!"

Chapter 473

Realizing that he could no longer hide the truth from Elliot, Chad said, "Avery went to see Wanda Tate today and ended up falling down after a bodyguard pushed her."

That morning, Chad had informed Elliot that Wanda's assistant was the one behind the viral news a few days ago

Elliot had planned to make some time to see Wanda over this matter.

He did not expect Avery to be one step ahead of 25 him.

Chad heard Elliot's heavy breathing on the other side of the line and instantly turned anxious.

"It was an accident, sir. You can't blame Avery... She doesn't want anything to happen to the child, either... She's really down right now. Please don't get mad at her when you get9c here..."

Elliot hung up the phone.

Ever since Chad got together with Mike, his thoughts turned severely23 biased.

Elliot cared about the child, but that did not mean that he did not care for Avery's wellbeing.

If it ever came down to having to choose Avery or the child, he would always choose2a Avery.

Over at Wonder Technologies , Zoe rushed over the moment she heard about the altercation between Wanda and Avery.

"Was this your so-called plan, Wanda?" Zoe snapped as the anger that she had suppressed for the past two days finally erupted. "Did you not have any other ideas apart from revealing her 35 children?!”

Wanda glanced at Zoe, then said, “Do you know the effect that a business owner has on their business? Exposing her children was only a part of it. What matters is ruining her reputation!”

“Is having children before marriage considered a scandal? What century do you think we’re living in right now?!” Zoe said with a puzzled look on her face.

“You don’t get it. Most of the customers that buy our products are over forty years old...”

“I don’t want to listen to your analysis! Did you know Avery Tate’s children are Elliot Foster’s?!” Zoe snapped angrily. “If Elliot finds out about this, don’t you think he will take Avery’s side?”

Wanda’s face was composed as she said, “I guessed it. The boy looks a lot like Elliot. When Elliot will fight for custody of the children when he finds out they’re his?! There must be a reason why Avery is so terrified of Elliot finding out about it!”

Wanda's answer made Zoe lift her hands and massage her temples.

She hoped that she was overreacting.

"Avery's right-hand-man, Mike, is a computer genius," Wanda said with a seething expression. "He ruined a perfect plan. He's got something on me now, instead. I can hide my connection to the entire thing, but we can't use the same move again."

The moment Wanda finished speaking, her phone rang.

She answered the phone, and was welcome by the pleading cries of her bodyguard, "Madam Tate! Help! Save me!"

The line suddenly went dead.

Wanda did not have time to ask what was going on.

"What is it?" Zoe asked.

When she saw the pale expression on Wanda's face, she felt her heart jump to her throat.

With furrowed brows, Wanda walked towards the door and said, "It was my bodyguard... I think he's in trouble!"

As the two women exited the office, the elevator doors steps away opened up slowly.

A man covered in blood slowly crawled out of the elevator.

Zoe let out a horrified shriek!

The color completely drained from Wanda's face!

It was her bodyguard!

How did he get beaten up like this?!

"It was Avery Tate! I must have been her!" Wanda hissed through gritted teeth.

At that moment, her phone rang once again.

Cold sweat had formed on her back as she pulled out her phone and stared at the unknown number on the screen.

With trembling fingers, she answered the phone.

"Hey, Madam Tate. Ask your assistant to watch herself when she leaves the house!" threatened the unknown man on the other end of the line.

Wanda instantly confirmed that Avery was behind something this cruel.

"I'm calling the police! You're the one who should watch out!"

"Sure! Go ahead and call the police as long as you're sure you can handle the consequences of being Mr. Foster's enemy," said the voice on the phone as he let out a sinister chuckle.

Wanda's face turned from pale to bright red! Mr. Foster?

Chapter 474

It was Elliot Foster?!

At the hospital, Mike was keeping Avery company in the hospital room.

Chad was standing outside the room waiting for Elliot.

When Elliot arrived, Chad quickly tried to settle down his emotions and said, "Sir, the doctor said that Avery needs to rest right now. She needs to stay in bed for at least a week. She's not supposed to go through any stressful emotions,25 So..."

"Are you holding me back?" Elliot snapped as he glared at him with cold eyes.

Chad instantly surrendered and opened the door to the hospital room for him.

Once Elliot entered the room, Chad shot Mike a look to get him to leave.

Mike ignored him, then puffed up his chest and said to Elliot, "The baby's23 gone."

A strange emotion flashed across Elliot's eyes.

"Leave us. I want to talk to Avery," he said hoarsely.

Avery was in a daze, but turned towards him after hearing his words.

Chad stormed in and dragged Mike out of the 35 room.

Only Elliot and Avery were left in the room.

Elliot sat down by the bed, held Avery's hand that was set up with an IV drip, then said gently, "Avery, it's fine if the baby's gone. Don't be too upset."

His comforting words left Avery speechless.

She watched his dazzling, handsome face and felt as if she was in a magnificent dream.

How could he be so composed about her losing the baby?

"You need to take care of yourself and get your health back," Elliot said.

Avery's blank face made his heart tighten in his chest.

Whether she wanted the child or not, she had gone through many days of suffering for it. Now that the baby was gone, she must be heartbroken.

"Take care of my health..." Avery mumbled her brows furrowed. "Then, what?"

Elliot stared at her delicate face.

He guessed what she was doubtful about, and he knew what she was afraid of.

She was afraid that the reason he wanted her to recover was so that she could get pregnant

again.

“I’ve never seen you as my enemy, Avery.”

Elliot watched Avery’s colorless face, and could not bring himself to say anything that might trigger her.

“I won’t force you to have my child again.”

His words unraveled the knot in Avery’s heart.

“Didn’t you suspect me of falling down on purpose?” she asked.

Elliot’s eyes widened in disbelief as he said, “It looks like you no longer see me as merely a monster, but a maniac.”

Avery felt like laughing.

“Don’t be so reckless again, Avery,” Elliot said sternly when he saw her relax, “Neither crashing a symposium nor going on stage to confront someone are reasonable behaviors.”

Avery was upset at being told off.

“You’ve always used violence against your enemies. I’m afraid my recklessness can’t compare to yours.”

“So, you can still talk back to me,” Elliot said frustratedly. He opened the container of food on the table, took a look at it, then asked, “Do you want some soup? It’s still warm.”

“I can’t keep it down. I’ll throw up.”

Elliot was confused as he asked, “You’re still nauseous? Why are you showing early pregnancy symptoms if the baby’s gone?”

He thought that early pregnancy symptoms would disappear immediately after a miscarriage.

“The doctor never said anything about the baby being gone,” Avery said nonchalantly.

Mike had lied to him earlier.

She wanted to see his reaction, so she did not expose the lie.

Elliot slammed the bowl of soup on the table.

He did not feel happy about that change in events, but instead felt a rising anger at being deceived.

He shot up from his seat and walked towards the door.

“Mike wasn’t completely wrong. The doctor told me to be on bedrest. The baby might still be fine for now, but we don’t know if that would still be the case a week from now.” Elliot instantly froze in his tracks and his entire body stiffened.

Chapter 475

Avery’s heart ached at the sight of Elliot’s rigid back.

“Whether or not this baby makes it, I hope you can maintain a calm demeanor.

The risk of a miscarriage is natural with every pregnancy, and not every child comes to term successfully.”

She said this because she had a bad feeling inside of her heart.

She had been pessimistic ever since she found out she was 25 pregnant.

She got pregnant while undergoing medical treatment. If it were not for luck being on her side, the child would not make it under normal circumstances.

Everything obtained from luck came with the possibility of loss.

Avery’s words hurt Elliot.

He turned to face her, then said, “Are you trying to make me feel better? Who exactly is the one who can’t stay calm? Didn’t you test me just now? Since you never wanted this child in the first place, then let's just act as if it's already dead."

Then, he turned and stormed out of the room.

After Elliot left, Mike entered the room and asked, "Why did he leave so soon?"

What did you talk about? He didn't look like he was in a good mood. Did he really think the baby was gone?"

Avery's eyes were unfocused and she was lost in a daze.

"Mike... He's actually... Not that awful to me... Is he?"

Mike placed his hands on his hips, took a deep breath, then said, "Do you have feelings for him again?"

Avery lowered her gaze. Her long lashes fluttered as she said, "When you told him the baby was gone, he told me to take care of my health and that he won't force me to get pregnant again."

"When he's rude to you, you think he's the worst. Now that he's showing a hint of kindness, you think he's a saint. I'm worried you've got Stockholm syndrome or something, Avery.”

Avery shot Mike a cold look.

“What are you glaring at me for? I’m just reminding you to keep your guard up no matter how nice he is to you.”

He pulled a chair up by the bed, then continued, “I’m begging you, Avery. No matter what you decide to do from now on, at least let me know about it! Won’t you cry yourself to death if you lost the baby? Even if you weren’t pregnant, you shouldn’t have gone to confront Wanda Tate like that! You want her dead, but she wants to kill you, too!”

Avery admitted that she had acted too recklessly that day.

It was a last minute decision to go see Wanda.

She could not bring herself to let things slide.

“I should’ve listened to you back then,” Avery said.

“Exactly! You should’ve listened to me in the first place! Everything I do is for your own good!

“I should’ve listened to you and hired a few more bodyguards. If I had gone to the hotel today with more bodyguards than Wanda had, she would’ve been the one being thrown to the ground and not me,” Avery said.

Mike was absolutely speechless.

About half an hour later, Wanda appeared in Avery’s hospital room with her assistant , Faye Johnson to apologize.

Faye fell to her knees in front of Avery’s bed.

“I’m sorry, Miss Tate! It was all my fault! I’m disgusting! I deserve to die!” she cried as she slapped herself in the face again and again.

The sound of her palm smacking against her cheek echoed through the room.

Avery watched the performance, then shifted her gaze and landed her eyes on Wanda’s face.

“Let me guess what you’re playing at. If I take this to court, all you have to do is pay a fine. This is nothing much to you at all.” Avery had a hunch, then asked,

“Who sent you here?”

Wanda’s smile didn’t reach her eyes when she said, “Why are you acting all innocent? Elliot Foster still cares about you even after you’ve broken up. Did you give him some kind of love potion?”

“I see... In that case, why aren't you on your knees!?!” Avery snapped as her voice grew louder. “Even if your assistant slaps herself rotten, nothing can hide the fact that you were the one who orchestrated the entire thing!”

Elliot did not make Wanda come to apologize to Avery.

Avery needed rest, so he would not allow Wanda to disturb her peace during this crucial time in her recovery.

Wanda was the one who brought her assistant to apologize herself because she was concerned for Faye's safety.

Who would have expected Avery to threaten her this way?!

Wanda was afraid of escalating things to the point of no return.

She clenched her jaw, then fell to her knees.

She silently swore in her heart that she would one day make Avery pay back today's humiliation ten fold!

As Avery sat up in bed and watched Wanda kneeling in front of her, the unhappiness in her heart subsided.

Chapter 476

Wanda was a prideful woman who despised Avery.

Being on her knees in front of Avery must be pure agony for her!

When the nurse entered the room moments later, she was shocked to see the two women kneeling in front of the bed.

“Take your lackey and get out of here!” Mike roared as he threw out the fruit basket they brought along with them.

The hospital room returned to its initial peace once Wanda and Faye were gone.

Once the nurse tended to Avery’s IV drip, Mike held his phone and waved it in front of Avery.

“Chad said the two bodyguards that pushed you this morning are ripped down,”

Mike said as he grinned cheekily. “I’m not Elliot Foster’s biggest fan, but I’m satisfied with his work this time.”

“What do you mean by crippled?”

Mike covered his mouth and said, “Chad told me not to tell you... He’s worried you’d be scared

Avery remained a silent.

“Why did you think Wanda would come and apologize to you? She’s obviously terrified!” Mike teased. “I didn’t expect you to use Elliot to scare her earlier.”

Avery’s cheeks flushed as she said, “Wasn’t he the one who wanted to be a hero first? Since he offered, it’d be a waste not to make use of 35 it.”

“That makes sense,” Mike said. “Just treat him like a little puppy! Play with him when you’re happy, then ignore him when you’re not.”

Avery absentmindedly picked up her phone and looked at the time.

“I’m going to take a nap. Let’s go home after I wake up.”

“Okay! Get some sleep! I’m going out for a cigarette.”

Mike lay Avery down on the bed, then walked out of the room.

The moment Wanda entered her car, she lifted her head and broke into uncontrollable tears.

Faye apprehensively handed her a napkin and said, “I’m sorry, Madam Tate. I dragged you into this.”

Wanda shoved the napkin away and wiped her tears away with her hands.

“It’s got nothing to do with you. I’m just not strong enough! Nobody can lay a finger on me when I surpass Elliot Foster!” Wanda said through gritted teeth.

She took her phone out of her bag and called Zoe.

The call was answered very quickly.

“Do something for me, Zoe.” “What? I’m not doing anything dangerous!” Zoe said.

“I suspect Avery Tate’s pregnant. All my bodyguard did was push her but she’s in the hospital now,” Wanda said. “She’s staying in a room in the maternity unit.”

Zoe froze, then said, “You want me to confirm if she’s pregnant or not?”

“That’s right. I suspect her baby is Elliot Foster’s! Why would he help her out otherwise?!”

Zoe’s heart broke to pieces.

She wanted nothing but to have Elliot’s child, but he never touched her or gave her a chance.

On the other hand, Avery not only gave birth to two of his children, she was pregnant with his baby once again...

Elliot gave all of his love to Avery.

Zoe arrived at the hospital that Avery was admitted into at four in the afternoon.

She easily found out about Avery's condition.

She called Wanda back and said, "Avery Tate's pregnant, but she might not be able to save th baby after today's fall."

Wanda felt a lingering fear in her heart.

"No wonder Elliot Foster was so furious!"

She paused for a moment, then said, "I really hope she loses the baby! Haha!"

One week later, Avery went to the hospital for a checkup. It was to see if the baby was still alive.

Chapter 477

Avery walked familiarly into the hospital and was about to go to the maternity unit.

Instead, Mike dragged her to get an ultrasound scan.

Avery raised her brows and questioned him with her eyes.

"I think... You should get an ultrasound scan right away," Mike tried to say nonchalantly, but25 failed.

In the end, he said, "Elliot's here. He's waiting for you at the ultrasound room."

Avery shook off his grip, then snapped unhappily, "When did you start working forgc him?"

Mike raised his hand and swore, "I'm not! Chad told me!"

"Chad works for him. What's the difference between Chad bribing you and Elliot bribing23 you?"

"Of course it's different! Chad isn't like that dirtbag! He's not an unreasonable person!," Mike argued as he held Avery's arm. "Chad promised me he'd quit if that dirtbag ever picks on you again!"

"Still, you don't have to tell them2a everything!"

"I didn't tell them everything... I didn't tell them that your appetite's gotten better the past couple of days, or that you haven't been throwing up as much and that you have a feeling the baby's gone..." Mike sighed, then said, "It's such a shame for a child to be gone just like that. Will you be going into surgery today, then?"

With a heavy heart, Avery said, "I'll have to go into surgery if there's no 35 heartbeat."

Her early pregnancy symptoms drastically decreased in the past few days.

Avery did not feel relieved or happy about it at all, because it meant that there was a possibility that she had lost her child.

She had a big breakfast before coming to the hospital, but she did not feel nauseous at all.

Although she was prepared to find out that she had lost the baby, the agony she had been feeling rose as she stepped into the hospital.

She also did not expect Elliot to show up.

How would he feel if he found out the baby was gone?

Avery and Mike took the elevator to the ultrasound lab.

When the elevator doors opened, Avery's eyes landed on the man standing outside of the ultrasound room.

Elliot was wearing a high quality, light gray shirt and a pair of casual, dark trousers.

It was a stark contrast from his usual dark outfits. It

Avery's each step grew heavier as she approached him.

Elliot watched as she walked towards him.

He wanted to say hello, but he could only focus on taking her in with his eyes as she got closer.

Avery looked good, and her cheeks were fuller.

It seemed like she spent the past week quite well.

She strode past him and entered the ultrasound room.

Elliot followed closely behind.

Avery lay down on the bed, then pulled up her shirt.

The doctor applied the cold lubricant onto her abdomen, then began to press the ultrasound wand on her skin.

Since Elliot was standing next to her, Avery shut her eyes and waited for the results in silent torment.

Moments later, the doctor asked, "Are you experiencing any other symptoms at this point, Miss Tate?"

Avery opened her eyes, looked at the doctor and said, "My appetite's gotten better."

The doctor smiled, then said, "That's good. Is there anything else apart from the increased appetite? Any bleeding, for example?"

"No, nothing like that," Avery answered.

“Okay. The baby seems to be doing well so far,” the doctor said, then took a few pieces of tissue and wiped down Avery’s abdomen. “You can continue to stay home and rest if you’re worried. You can come back again when the baby’s three months old.”

Avery was frozen in shock.

The baby was fine?!

The early pregnancy symptoms... Just ended early?

Seeing Avery in a trance, Elliot helped her out of the bed and said, “Did you think the baby was gone?”

Avery’s cheeks flushed as Elliot saw right through her.

Once the ultrasound scan was printed out, they walked out of the room together.

Mike stepped forward and said, “Don’t be sad, Avery! Forget about the baby. Your health is more important than anything!”

Then, he pulled out an appointment slip and said, “I already found a doctor to carry out the surgery for you!”

Avery was at a loss for words.

With a dark expression, Elliot snatched the slip out of Mike's hand, then tore it to pieces and tossed it into the trash. A savage fury raged in Mike's light blue eyes!

Chapter 478

"The baby's fine, Mike," Avery said, embarrassed.

"Really?"

Avery grabbed Mike's arm and walked towards the elevator.

"Let's head to the 25 office!"

"Is the baby really okay?" Mike asked in disbelief. "Did the doctor say you can go back to work?"

"Yes, it's fine."

The baby was safe and her condition improved. Going to work should not be a problem.

Chad stood next to Elliot and said, "Congratulations, Sir! The baby will be three months old soon. Once it's stable, miscarriage is unlikely."

Elliot's emotions were a mess.

He had a nightmare last night that the baby was gone.

It was a good thing that it was all nothing but a scare.

When Avery arrived at the Tate Industries offices, the vice president immediately came up to report to her.

The heads of each department regularly send her emails on the company's various affairs.

Although she was not in the office, she was up to date with everything that was happening in the company.

While the vice president gave his report, Avery picked up a magazine from the table.

It was the Fashion Forward magazine that came to interview her before.

Avery was on the front cover.

The original plan was for her to go to their studio for a photoshoot, but since she was sick, she ended up sending a few photos to them.

The photo the magazine chose was a lifestyle shot taken when she was in graduate school.

In the photo, she was holding a cup of coffee and beaming dazzlingly under the sun.

Avery opened the magazine and found the article from her interview.

Apart from the question and answer section, there was also a section about her personal introduction.

It was filled with praise.

Avery blushed and shut the magazine.

“We bought five thousand copies of the magazine, Miss Tate,” said the vice president when he noticed her interest in the magazine.

Avery was stunned.

“Didn’t Mike tell you?” The vice president chuckled. “He said to distribute it to all of our staff, then send one each to all of our customers.”

Avery’s temples began to throb.

“Why wasn’t I informed about this?!”

This behavior was too pompous!

Those who did not understand might think that she wanted to become a celebrity!

“Mike said he paid for the magazine with his own money and not the company’s, which is why I didn’t tell you.”

“Just give them to the staff. Don’t send them to the customers!”

With an embarrassed expression on his face, the vice president said, “They were already couriered out this morning...”

Avery picked up a glass of water and took a sip to calm her nerves.

“Have they been sent out to all of our customers?”

“I think so! We followed the list from the sales department. We only sent it to our biggest clients.”

“Show me the list...”

The vice president noticed her discomfort, then guessed, “Did you want to see if Sterling Group was on the list, Miss Tate? They’re our ultimate client, so I already asked my assistant to drive over and personally deliver it to them.”

Avery buried her face in her hands.

At eleven that morning, the latest issue of Fashion Forward magazine was delivered to Elliot’s office at Sterling Group.

When Elliot returned to his office after a meeting, his eyes were drawn by the magazine on his table before he could even take a seat.

He could not miss the fact that Avery was on the cover of the magazine!

He picked it up and glanced at the headline of the interview.

“An Exclusive Interview with Goddess Avery Tate: My Dream Hunk is Eric Santos”

A chill washed over Elliot’s face as he threw the magazine onto the table with a loud slam!

Chapter 479

When His Eyes Opened Chapter 480 by Simple Silence

Elliot stood in silence for a moment, then called Chad on the office intercom and asked who sent the magazine over.

“One of the employees from Tate Industries delivered it. They sent a total of twenty copies to us. I’ve asked the secretary to distribute a copy to each department head.”

“Have you seen it?” Elliot asked with a frown.

“Not yet. I was going to buy myself a copy after work²⁵ today.”

“You can take mine!”

Moments later, Chad entered Elliot’s office.

When he saw the grim expression on his boss’s face, he instantly had a feeling that there was something wrong with the magazine.

He had only glanced at the magazine's cover.

The photo of Avery was beautiful, so that could not be the problem.

The issue must have something to do with the content of the interview.

"Should I take the magazine, Sir?" Chad asked.

"Take it away!" Elliot snapped.

His expression was icy, and his voice was even colder.

Chad picked up the magazine from the desk then walked out of the room.

He flipped to the page of Avery's interview and quickly read the title.

What the hell?!

Avery Tate's dream hunk was Eric Santos?

Chad returned to his office, then called Mike to ask the meaning behind the interview.

"Wanda Tate was selling the whole 'boss lady' and 'superwoman' angle, and people were eating it up," Mike said. "Avery accepted the magazine's interview to increase our company's exposure. What's up?"

"So you used Eric Santos to hype things up?"

"That wasn't our intention. The magazine decided to go with that direction. They need the sales!” Mike explained. “Besides, Eric Santos was the one who called Avery his goddess first.”

“How could Avery publicly announce that Eric Santos is her dream man? My boss got jealous!” Chad hissed under his breath. “You even sent a copy of the magazine to him. What were you thinking?”

Mike chuckled, then said, “That’s the vice president’s work. I told him to send copies of the magazine to our biggest clients. Why did he send them to you, too?

You may be one of our biggest clients, but it’s obvious that we don’t need to keep up rapport with you!”

Mike’s words gave Chad a headache, so he hung up the phone. He picked up the magazine, then knocked on Elliot’s door once again and walked into his office.

“Sir, I just made a call and found out that Avery accepted the interview as a counter to Wanda Tate’s marketing plan. The contents and title of the interview were exaggerated for the purpose of entertainment. The magazine needed the ale, and Tate Industries needed Eric Santos for the hype.”

Chad’s explanation was rational and reasonable.

After a few seconds of silence, Elliot said calmly, "Give me the magazine."

He only saw the title earlier and did not actually read the contents of the interview.

Chad immediately handed the magazine over to him.

"You can leave for now," Elliot said as he felt a little embarrassed and humiliated.

After all, he was asking for the magazine only after less than ten minutes of demanding for it to be taken away

Chad left the room in a flash.

Elliot flipped open the magazine and read through Avery's interview.

When the interviewer asked her if Eric Santos was her dream hunk, Avery answered, "I guess so. I admire him very much."

It was a straightforward answer that could not be taken out of context.

Elliot relaxed his furrowed brows as his deep set eyes naturally began to admire Avery's photo.

It was a lifestyle photo taken when she was abroad.

Her dazzling smile was brighter than the sun shining behind her.

Her eyes sparkled with a child-like aloofness.

Elliot's heart could not help but race wildly for her!

At noon, Wanda returned home for lunch, and Zoe informed her of the news that Avery's baby was safe.

"When she went back to work today, I thought the child was gone!" Wanda said indifferently.

"We need to get rid of that baby!" Zoe scowled. "I looked into it. Once the baby's born, Elliot is the one who's going to raise it! If we don't get rid of the child, Elliot will continue to help Avery until she gives birth!"

Wanda gritted her teeth and said, "Why does Elliot care so much about his exwife?! Avery would do anything for the sake of money! Giving birth to a man's child without status like this ... If her father were still alive, he would die from shame! It's despicable!"

Zoe felt uneasy after hearing those words, because she was also willing to give birth to Elliot's children without status. Besides, Avery and her were not the only women who were willing to do that.

Chapter 480

“Don’t even think about beating her if you can’t stop her from having the child!”

Zoe said as she used her words to trigger Wanda. “You can also forget about getting any investments from me after that!”

Wanda’s eyes lit up, then said, “How much more money can you get from Elliot

Foster?”

Zoe lifted her chin, then said confidently, “At least another one hundred and fifty five million.

“Don’t worry!” Wanda said. “I won’t let the child she’s carrying see the light of 25

day!”

When Avery returned home from work that evening, she noticed a car parked at the front gate. Did they have a guest

She parked her car, then opened the door and got 23 out.

The two children and Shea walked out of the villa’s front door together.

“Mommy!” Layla called 2a out.

Mike picked Layla up when she ran up to Avery.

“What’s Shea doing here?” Mike 35 asked.

Shea approached them with a soft smile on her face.

“I’m going home, Avery!” she said, then left.

Avery glanced at Layla and asked, “When did Shea get here, Layla?”

“She was waiting at the front gate when Hayden and I got home from school,” Layla said with furrowed brows. “She told Hayden a secret, but won’t tell me about it.”

Hearing this, Avery turned to look at Hayden.

A secret?

What secret could there possibly be between Hayden and Shea?

“Didn’t you say you were hungry, Avery? Let’s have dinner!” Mike said, then carried Layla into the house.

Hayden did not tell Avery about his secret with Shea, neither did she ask him about it.

She should respect her son’s privacy.

The next day, the finals of the National Youth Programming Championships were being held at the city’s science museum.

Over sixty of the country’s child geniuses were competing.

Shea sat in the audience and fixed her eyes on Hayden.

She was the one who brought Hayden to participate in the competition.

Her teacher told her that the champion of this competition would be enrolled into the country's top university and enter its elite class for young prodigies.

Shea thought it was a great opportunity, so she convinced Hayden into participating.

An hour and a half later, the judges unanimously granted Hayden a perfect score!

When the host announced that Hayden Tate was the champion, Shea's heart pounded with excitement.

After the prize giving ceremony, Shea rushed on stage with a bouquet of flowers.

"Hayden! I knew you were the best!" she exclaimed as she picked Hayden up and happily twirled around the stage.

"Put me down!" Hayden said with a pained expression on his face.

Shea released him, then turned to the host and said, "Can we go now? We need to go and celebrate!"

There were other winners standing on the side who were older than Hayden but placed behind him.

They were extremely unhappy.

When they saw Shea holding Hayden's hand, one of them shouted, "Isn't that the crazy lady who ran off last year? The one that Elliot Foster spent millions to look for, remember?"

"Holy crap! I think it is her!" cried another boy. "I was wondering how Hayden Tate managed to get straight to the finals and become the champion! It was all because of Elliot Foster! That's some shady business!"

Everyone in the venue glared at Hayden with mocking eyes and used cruel words to attack him.

Hayden's body stiffened as he felt a throbbing ache in his heart.

He did not use Elliot Foster to win the competition!

He did not! With reddened eyes, he threw the trophy across the room!

Chapter 481

Over at Sterling Group, Elliot answered his ringing phone.

"Mr. Foster, Miss Shea brought Hayden Tate to participate in the finals for the National Youth Programming Championships today,” said the bodyguard on the other end of the line.

Elliot’s brows furrowed, and he was dumbfounded as he said, “What are you talking about?”

The bodyguard repeated himself, then explained, “Miss Shea asked me not to tell you about it.”

“Why are you telling me now, then?”

Elliot massaged the space between his brows as a sense of foreboding rose inside him.

“When Hayden Tate won the competition, Miss Shea ran up on stage. Someone recognized her and things turned chaotic. Miss Shea’s isn’t hurt, but she’s a little shaken up.”

Elliot listened to the bizarre story and felt like it was made up.

Why would Shea take Hayden to the Youth Programming Championships?

Hayden was a loner who disliked meeting strangers. Logically, he would not be willing to compete in anything like a this.

How did Shea manage to convince him?

“Send me the address!” Elliot said in a deep voice, then hung up the phone.

Hayden was at a park near the science museum when he got tired of walking and saw down on a bench by the street.

With the trophy in her hands, Shea took a seat next to him.

“I’m sorry, Hayden,” she said apologetically. “I only brought you here to compete because I wanted you to join the elite class.”

“Why do I need to join an elite class?” Hayden snapped angrily.

“My teacher told me that everyone in the elite class is super smart. I think you’d be happier if you went to school there instead,” Shea explained herself.

“Everyone there is the same as you. If there was a place where I could be with people like me, I’m sure I’d be happy.”

Hayden wanted to retaliate, but he was thrown off by Shea’s innocent, child-like face.

He did not want to reprimand her, but he was worried that she would repeat the same thing again.

“Did you think you could butt into my business just because you’re my aunt?”

Hayden said as he shot up from his seat. “Even if you’re my aunt, you should

mind your own business!”

Then, he turned and stormed off.

Shea held the trophy in her arms and continued to apologize as she ran after him.

“Don’t be mad, Hayden! Forget about the elite class! I won’t make you mad again!

I’m sorry!”

The one that Hayden was most upset with was not Shea, but it was Elliot.

“I hate Elliot Foster!”

Shea was perplexed, but she did not know how to make Hayden like her brother.

The only thing she could do was make sure Hayden did not hate her.

“Let’s go get some ice cream, Hayden,” she said with sparkling eyes as she took his hand in hers. “We don’t need to care about what others say. They don’t matter at all! They called me a crazy lady, but I’m not mad at all. To me, you’re the best of the best! Even if you don’t join the elite class, you’re still a genius!”

The iciness in Hayden's heart slowly melted away upon hearing those words.

Earlier, Shea had forced the boy who said there was shady business involved to apologize to Hayden.

The boy was so terrified of Shea that he reluctantly apologized.

"I want ice cream," Hayden said as he no longer wanted to recall the events of the day.

"I'll go get some right now! Wait here for me!" Shea said, then strode off with the trophy still in her arms.

The bodyguard left along with her. As Hayden watched them leave, he had the urge to leave himself.

He wanted nothing more than to be alone at that moment, but Shea would be disappointed if she returned with the ice cream and found him gone.

He did not want to hurt Shea.

She was completely different from Elliot Foster.

He should not treat them as equals.

A black Rolls-Roice came to a halt outside the park.

Once Elliot entered the park, his dark eyes instantly fell on Hayden who was standing by a bed of snow.

Perhaps it was because his gaze was so sharp, but it made Hayden lift his head and meet his eyes.

Chapter 482

The moment Hayden's eyes met Elliot's, he felt the blood in his body freeze!

His mother had told him to stay far away from him.

Hayden immediately walked off.

"Hayden Tate!" Elliot called out when he saw Hayden avoid him like the plague.

Hayden's footsteps slowed down, but he did not stop walking.

Elliot had to quicken his steps and run after him.

He blocked Hayden's path, then demanded, "What are you doing here alone?"

"Where's Shea?"

"Stay away from me!" Hayden did not want to speak to him, nor did he want to see his face." Didn't you owe me a wish? I want you to grant it right now. Stay away from me! Never come close to me ever²³ again!"

A peculiar sense of frustration surged inside of Elliot as he watched the conflicted expression on Hayden's face.

He did not want his relationship with Avery's son to be this^a horrible!

Breaking ties with Hayden would have a severe impact on his own relationship with Avery.

If he did not mess up and almost strangled Hayden to death back then, Avery would not forbid him from entering her³⁵ home.

"I'd like to apologize," Elliot said as his Adam's apple bobbed in his throat. "I'm sorry."

Hearing his apology made Hayden think he was hearing things.

How was it possible for someone as prideful as Elliot to admit he was wrong?

"I don't need your apology!" Hayden said, not giving Elliot any room left for his dignity.

Hayden then picked up his backpack and stormed towards the park entrance.

Elliot was concerned for his safety, so he ran after him and said, "I'll take you

home."

"I don't want you to!" Hayden refused loudly.

Elliot swiftly picked him up and said, "I'm taking you home! There's no use in throwing a tantrum! I'll leave once I send you home!"

Over at Tate Industries, Mike pushed open the doors to Avery's office, then yanked her out from behind her desk without a word.

"What's wrong?" Avery asked as her eyebrows twitched.

"There's trouble!" Mike said with a heavy face. "I wouldn't have found out that Big

H did something this big behind our backs if I hadn't read the news! He competed in the National Youth Programming Championships! He won, but someone's causing trouble."

Avery's brows furrowed tightly as she asked, "What kind of trouble? Is Hayden okay? Where is he right now?"

"Elliot Foster sent him home!"

"What does this have to do with Elliot?!"

“Shea was the one who took Hayden to the competition,” Mike said in disbelief as he led Avery into the elevator. “She was the one who got him straight into the finals! The other participants felt suspicious after the competition and caused a ruckus.”

Avery was stunned.

“How did Shea pull that off?”

“What’s even scarier is that she hid it from Elliot, too. She’s definitely not just an idiot now!” Mike said with certainty. “With her current mental abilities, she shouldn’t have any trouble taking care of herself at all.”

Avery felt relieved, but still asked with concern, “Is Hayden okay?”

“He should be alright, but he hates Elliot to the core... They’re together right now... I don’t want to imagine what that’s like,” Mike said as he shrugged.

Cold sweat began to form on Avery’s back.

When Hayden was sent back to the Starry River Villa, he immediately locked himself in his room.

Elliot sat in the living room and waited for Avery to come home.

He was surrounded by pin drop silence, but he could not calm his chaotic mood.

He had always thought that Hayden looked a little like him.

However, he found out today that Hayden's looks were not the only thing that resembled him, but his temper was also as bad as his!

Elliot could not stop himself from overthinking. Did Avery really adopt this strange, temperamental boy? Was Hayden really not his son?!

Chapter 483

Avery arrived home about half an hour later.

She rushed into the house, and charged toward Elliot without even changing into her house slippers.

"Where's Hayden? Why are you here alone?"

Elliot was about to speak, but Avery interjected when she noticed his disheveled clothes.

"What happened to your clothes?" Elliot's shirt was completely wrinkled. She followed the wrinkled lines to his back and saw a piece of his shirt that was ripped off.

She saw the bloody bite mark under the ripped fabric.

The bleeding had stopped, but she could imagine how painful it must have been.

Avery faced them, then asked, "Did Hayden bite you?"

"I brought it onto myself," Elliot said nonchalantly. "He's in his room."

"I see. I'll go take a look. Wait here for me," Avery said, then walked up the stairs.

Mike sauntered behind Elliot, took a good look at his wound, then sighed and said, "Big H really did you in! You look like you were bitten by a dog!"

Elliot turned around and stared grimly at Mike, then said, "Mike, is Hayden my son?"

Mike's face froze, and he did not snap out of his daze until a few seconds later.

"What nonsense are you spouting? Didn't you force Avery to abort your first baby with her? Hayden was adopted! Do you want to see the adoption papers?"

Elliot nodded and said, "Show me the adoption papers."

Mike was dumbfounded.

"Is something wrong?" Elliot said. Mike's face flushed with guilt as he said, "I don't have the paper! You have to get them from Avery. Although I don't suggest you bother her about it. If you mention Hayden, she will definitely recall the time you almost strangled him to death!" "I already apologized to Hayden about that today."

"So what?" Mike said as he decided to take the opportunity to test him. "Even if Hayden was your son, he won't accept you after what you've done to him."

Elliot felt as if a knife was pierced through his heart.

Mike was right.

Even if he was Hayden's biological father, Hayden would never forgive him.

Just like the way he had never forgiven his own father.

Elliot did not expect himself to turn into the person he despised the most in the world.

Mike noticed Elliot's reddened eyes, dejected expression and silent demeanor, then coughed awkwardly and said, "I'm just messing with you! Hayden does have a bad temper, though. He won't forgive you if you wrong him. Unless..."

"Unless what?" Elliot asked in a hoarse voice.

"Unless Avery asked him to forgive you," Mike suggested.

Then, he changed the subject and said, "Why didn't Shea come along? I wanted to ask her what she was thinking! I can't believe she snuck Hayden out to join such a huge competition. It's a good thing he won. Otherwise, it'd be embarrassing."

"I asked the bodyguard to send her home."

"I see. I think you should have a nice, long talk with her. Maybe you could also give her a more advanced education."

As the two men conversed, Avery walked down the stairs.

She was holding a first aid kit and a men's t-shirt.

"Go sit with Hayden, Mike," she said.

"I'll take him out for a drive!"

Mike walked over to the stairs, then whispered in Avery's ear, "Elliot suspects Hayden is his son."

Avery was stunned upon hearing those words.

Elliot was sitting on the couch with his deep set eyes fixed on her.

She felt his searing gaze, then composed herself and walked toward him.

"Let me tend to your wound," she said.

Elliot meekly unbuttoned his shirt to reveal his chiseled torso.

Avery lowered her gaze in embarrassment, then opened up the first aid kit and took out the disinfectant and anti-inflammatory cream.

“Can I ask you something?” Elliot said suddenly, making Avery tense up.

“Don’t distract me while I’m cleaning your wound. Don’t blame me if I mess up.”

She was afraid he would ask about Hayden’s parentage.

As long as Elliot looked deeper into it, he could quickly find out that Hayden was his son.

Avery’s threat was effective, Eliot did not say another word before she was done dressing his wound.

Chapter 484

Avery finished tending to Elliot’s wound, then said coldly, “Put your clothes on.”

Elliot put on the t-shirt she gave him, then looked up at her and asked, “Can I ask my question now?”

“What is it?” Avery’s expression and tone were icy. “Hayden doesn’t like you.

Don't touch him again. If something like this ever happens again, just give me a call."

Elliot's mind went blank.

He really did bring all of this onto himself.

He picked up his torn shirt, stood up and prepared to leave.

Avery suddenly felt anxious.

Her feet took an involuntary step forward as she said, "What did you want to ask me?"

Elliot turned to look at her, then said, "Do you think she needs to continue her treatment? I'm worried it would end up taking a toll on her health if we keep going."

"Isn't Zoe Sanford Shea's doctor?" The moment Avery mentioned Zoe's name, her reason began to crumble. "Since you went to her and even paid her an exorbitant medical fee, you should just listen to her advice."

Elliot did not expect his question to hit Avery right where it hurt.

"I won't bother you with Shea's sickness ever again, Avery," he said emotionlessly as his Adam's apple bobbed in his throat.

However, Avery saw what looked like a hint of disappointment in his eyes.

“You should show some basic sincerity if you’re asking a genuine question,” Avery said as she met his gaze. “You better keep the truth from me forever! You didn’t tell me when I wanted to know about it. By the time you decide to tell me, I would already not want to hear what you have to say.”

Elliot tightly clenched his ripped shirt, then left in humiliation.

Avery no longer wanted to know about his relationship with Shea.

He was too foolish!

Back when he made his decision, he had ignorantly made one mistake after another.

He chose to hide the truth from Avery all because of his d*mned pride!

Now, however, his pride was worth absolutely nothing to her!

Once Elliot was gone, Avery fell back onto the couch.

She placed her hands on her flushed cheeks as every breath she took hurt her.

Mike and Hayden stood by the stairs and watched the entire fight.

It was not actually a fight.

Elliot did not argue with Avery.

He had not made one wrong move ever since he found out she was pregnant.

What Avery was doing now was equivalent to a “counter-abuse”.

However, in the process of hurting Elliot, she was also hurting herself.

Hayden walked over to his mother’s side and hugged her.

“I’m fine, Hayden,” Avery said as she composed herself and hugged her son back. “Tell me when you go to a competition next time, okay? I’ll go and support

you.”

Hayden nodded his head.

As the black Rolls-Roice drove out of the Starry River Villa, Elliot did not make his way home.

His mind was in turmoil.

Hayden and Avery’s voices continued to ring in his head, until the two voices were finally interwoven together and gave him a splitting headache.

Without realizing it, he drove the car to the hospital where Avery got an abortion all those years ago.

He saw in the hospital director’s office, then lit up a cigarette and asked, “Can you look up abortion records from five years ago?"

The director quickly nodded and said, "Of course. All I need is the patient's name.

I'll get my staff to bring out their file right away!"

The cigarette trembled slightly between Elliot's fingers, and ash fell onto his slender fingers.

His face was shrouded in a fog of smoke, making him look almost dream-like. He parted his thin lips and said Avery's name.

Chapter 485

The next day, the doorbell at the Starry River Villa suddenly rang at seven in the morning.

Avery walked out of her bedroom in her pajamas and made her way toward the front door.

When she saw Tammy through the front door's camera, she opened the door.

After Tammy married Jun, she went abroad for her 25th honeymoon.

She had told Avery before that she would spend a month-long holiday.

Why was she back only after two weeks?

“How are you feeling, Avery?” Tammy asked as she entered the house with bags of souvenirs.

“I’m fine. I already started going back to work,” Avery said. “Why are you back so soon?”

Tammy pulled a long face and said, “I didn’t have fun at all! We were supposed to spend our honeymoon relaxing, but Jun gets over twenty calls from work every day. Honestly, I feel like getting a divorce.”

Avery poured her a drink, then said, “Don’t be reckless. He just took over his family’s business. Give him some time.”

“Hmph, it’s not like I’m not giving him time. He’s just not very capable, so he’s still struggling until now.” Tammy picked up the glass of water and took a sip, then said, “I sometimes envy people like you who are so good at your jobs...”

“I’m always working overtime,” Avery said as she sat down next to Tammy. “I sometimes even have to bring unfinished work home. It was normal for Mike and I to stay up until three in the morning back when we were starting up the company.”

Her comforting words made Tammy feel a little better.

“Thanks, Avery. Jun said I’m being too unreasonable. Maybe I really am a little bit like that!”

“Did he actually say that?” Avery said in disbelief. “He said I idle and sit around all day, but still interrupt his work. He even said that you’re working so hard at your job despite raising two kids. He told me to learn a thing or two from you, even if just a little bit,” Tammy said as her eyes teared up.

Avery took a deep breath.

Jun went too far with his words.

“It’s not all his fault... I’m the one who chastised him first. I mentioned how Elliot

Foster seemed to have enough free time to go out without having to answer calls from work...” Tammy said with puffed cheeks. “Maybe I should find something to do and distract myself.”

“Tammy, you might think Elliot has it easy, but he works really hard. You just can’t see it,” Avery said. “He has a huge study at home that he uses at his home office.

He can spend all day there when he’s busy.”

“Does it really get that bad?”

Avery nodded and said, “Nobody’s success comes easily. Even as an heir taking over a family business, one would still need to figure out how to maintain the family’s fortune, right?”

“I guess so... Are the kids still sleeping? Don’t they need to go to school today?”

Tammy said, then stood up and walked upstairs.

Avery’s phone rang, and she saw an unknown number calling.

She hesitated for a moment, then answered the phone.

Elliot waited in the hospital director’s office the entire night under the director’s company.

The director had asked Elliot to go home and rest, and said that he would call him right away once they found Avery’s records.

However, Elliot insisted on waiting at the hospital until he got the results.

The director had no choice but to ask his staff to search for the file through the night.

At the crack of dawn, Elliot went to the records room himself.

It was a large room with countless files.

The records were arranged by year and by each medical department.

Logically, it should not be this difficult to find a simple record.

More than ten employees sifted through the maternity unit's files from five years ago, but there was no sign of Avery's records.

They began to confirm a second time upon Elliot's arrival.

They finished their second search an hour later.

"Mr. Foster, there are no medical records for Miss Avery Tate here," said one of the staff.

Elliot frowned as suspicion grew inside him.

"Could you have gotten the wrong hospital, Mr. Foster? Maybe Miss Tate didn't undergo her abortion procedure at our hospital?" said the director. "If she underwent surgery here, we would definitely have her records in storage."

Before Elliot could speak, his bodyguard interjected, "I was the one who brought her to this hospital. How could it be a mistake?!"

The director froze for a moment, then said, "The possibility of losing a patient's medical records is practically zero.

Chapter 486

"Then let's see the doctor who did the surgery back then!" said the bodyguard. "Do you remember the doctor's name?" asked the hospital director.

"How would I know?! She was wearing a surgical cap and mask. I didn't even get a good look at her face!"

"How about I ask all of the doctors in the maternity unit and see if any of them remember Miss Tate?"

Elliot left the room.

He already had his answer.

Avery did not go through with the abortion five years ago.

Hayden Tate was his son.

Even so, what could he do after knowing the truth?

Hayden would never forgive Elliot for hurting him.

Avery never planned to tell him about the children, so there was no way she would speak up for him.

Elliot did not blame Avery.

It was all his own fault!

Five years ago, he had said that he would strangle their child with his bare hands if Avery ever got pregnant.

Sure enough, he almost strangled his own son to death five years later.

Elliot's bloodshot eyes glistened with tears.

He got into the car, stepped on the gas pedal and sped off.

He drove the car to Starry River and stopped in front of the villa.

Then, he got out of the car and stood in front of Avery's house.

Elliot's eyes were drawn by a red BMW.

It seemed to be Tammy Lynch's car.

He rang the doorbell.

Moments later, Tammy appeared in his line of sight, holding Layla's hand.

"Are you here to see Avery? She's not home," Tammy said from inside the front yard.

Elliot's eyes landed on Layla's face.

"Isn't Layla going to school today?" he asked in a hoarse voice.

Layla immediately hid behind Tammy and timidly peeped at him.

“She’s not feeling well, so she’s staying home today.”

Tammy felt something was off about Elliot.

Neither his expression nor his voice seemed normal...

It was as if he was a completely different person, but it was still his same familiar face standing before them.

A sense of fear grew inside of Tammy. She wanted to take a closer look at him, but she was too afraid to approach him.

“Did you need something?” she asked.

“Did she go to work?” Elliot answered with another question.

Tammy walked closer toward him and noticed his bloodshot eyes.

She froze in her tracks. She did not dare take another step, and she was too afraid to open the gates for him.

Did he stay up all night?

Did something happen? Could it be that he’s gone insane again?!

Tammy’s hand tightened around Layla’s, then she responded ambiguously, “She had something to do. I don’t know anything about it.”

“Where’s Hayden?” Elliot asked softly.

“What are you doing, Elliot?” Tammy asked in confusion. “I’m calling Avery if you don’t come clean now.”

Elliot looked sullen as he prepared to leave.

Within three seconds of him turning around, a sudden buzz rang in his ears, and he fell straight to the ground!

Chapter 487

Layla let out a horrified scream! Tammy picked her up and rushed into the house.

"Don't be scared, Layla! I'm calling the ambulance right away!" She placed Layla on the couch, then pulled out her phone from her bag and called 911.

Layla was wailing uncontrollably.

"Is my Daddy dead?" she sobbed.

"He still doesn't know that I'm his daughter!"

Tammy held the hysterical Layla in one arm and held her phone with her other hand. Once the call went through, she gave the operator the address, then hung up the phone.

"Wait here in the house, Layla. I'll go take a look," Tammy said, then quickly ran out the door.

Avery received a call from the associate dean at Central University that morning and brought Hayden to the campus.

Yesterday, Hayden had won the National Youth Programming Championships. He was not the youngest participant in the competition, but he was the youngest one to enter the finals.

What was even more unexpected was that he was the champion.

"Hayden might have skipped the conventional procedures to enter the finals, but the purpose of the competition was to search for child geniuses. We are willing to relax any rules for a prodigy like Hayden," said the associate dean with a smile.

"Are you willing to let Hayden enroll in our college's elite class, Miss Tate?"

Avery had gone through the elite class's introduction in detail.

Every student out of Central University's elite class was a pride of society

DEu&AxNK a pillar of the country. Of course she was willing to let Hayden enroll in the elite class.

"Do you want to give it a try, Hayden?" Avery asked gently for her son's opinion.

"I'll do whatever you want, Mommy."

"I've always wanted to find a suitable place for you to learn and grow, Hayden. I hope you can try out different environments and find the best fit for you."

Avery did not want Hayden to betray her son's trust in her, so she expressed her thoughts to him.

"Don't worry, Miss Tate. Hayden can join us for a trial run before making a decision," said the associate dean warmly.

"Alright. Thank you."

Once Avery handed Hayden over to the associate dean, she walked out of campus. She pulled her phone out of her bag and saw two missed calls from

Tammy.

Apart from the missed calls, there were also a series of text messages from

her.

[Avery! Elliot came to see you just now and ended up passing out at the gate!

Layla and I were freaking out!]

[I've called for an ambulance!]

[The ambulance took him away! I didn't follow them.I called Jun!]

[Did something happen between you two again? Call me when you see this!

Layla won't stop crying!]

Avery's heart tightened in her chest.She quickly called Tammy back.

Tammy answered right away and said, "Don't worry, Avery.It's nothing serious.He just passed out from extreme fatigue."

"Extreme fatigue?" Avery repeated under her breath as she clenched her phone tightly.

"He seemed fine yesterday."

"I'm sure he stayed up all night.His eyes were bloodshot when I saw him this morning,"

Tammy described vividly.

"He said he was just in the neighborhood.I checked the map on my phone earlier, but your place is completely out of the way from his office and his house." Avery's heart began to ache.

She sped up and walked toward her car.

"How are things there with you? Did everything go well?" Tammy said, changing the subject to something more relaxed.

"The associate dean said Hayden can start a trial run." Avery entered her car, put on her bluetooth earphones, then drove off.

"How's Layla doing?" she asked.

"She wouldn't stop crying because she thought Elliot was dead. She stopped crying only after I told her that he passed out from exhaustion."

Avery's brows furrowed as she could not figure out how Elliot ended up like that. They were constantly fighting.

The light bickering between them the day before was nothing.

What was going on with him? Why was he torturing himself to this extent?

Chapter 488

How dangerous would it have been if Tammy was not there when Elliot fainted at Avery's front gates? That evening, Avery decided to stop by the Foster mansion after much consideration.

"I'll drive you there," Mike said as he walked out of the house with her.

Avery shook her head and said, "I'm going to see Shea. I'll be back soon."

"Drop the act! If you're really going for Shea's sake, all you have to do is call her and ask her to meet you. She has a phone now, after all." Since Mike exposed her mercilessly, Avery did not want to waste her time talking to him.

"You don't need to drive me. I'll go there myself."

"You're insane! You're pregnant right now! How could I let you drive alone this late at night? Elliot would kill me if anything happened to you!" Mike argued.

"How about this? I'll drive you there, but I won't go into the house with you."

Avery opened the door to the driver's seat of her car, got in, then closed the door.

She rolled down the window, then said, "It's not dark out yet. Take the kids out for a walk. I'll try to be back before it gets dark."

Then, she drove the car away. Mike placed his hands on his hips. He was upset.

On second thought, however, no matter how big of a *st*rd Elliot Foster was,

he was the man that Avery chose herself.

There were plenty of ways for her to rid herself of him. Her lips were stubborn, but her body was brutally honest.

Elliot did not return to the Foster mansion the night before.

After receiving the news of him being admitted to the hospital, Mrs. Cooper could not bring herself to report what happened at home to him.

There was no way for her to inform him about it either.

Nobody had the courage to disturb Elliot while he was resting at the hospital.

Avery's arrival surprised Mrs. Cooper.

"What are you doing here, Avery? You should've told me you were coming,"

Mrs. Cooper said with a forced smile.

"Have you had dinner? I'll whip something up for you."

"I already ate," Avery said.

"I'm here to see Shea."

The smile on Mrs. Cooper's face completely vanished.

After the bodyguard sent Shea home last night, she woke up from a nightmare and spent the whole night crying. She caught a fever in the morning, so they called for the family doctor to come see her.

Her fever subsided, but she was still barely conscious and babbling to herself.

Both Mrs. Scarlet and Mrs. Cooper were nervous wrecks.

They did not dare contact Zoe Sanford without Elliot's orders.

They knew that Elliot was always trying to rid himself of Zoe.

Besides, Zoe's medical fees were too high, with each surgery costing a hundred and fifty five million dollars...

Who would possibly have the guts to contact her without Elliot's permission?

"What's wrong? Isn't Shea at home?" Avery asked when she saw the strange expression on Mrs. Cooper's face.

Mrs. Cooper pulled Avery's arm and led her to Shea's room.

"She got sick last night and hasn't settled down until now," Mrs. Cooper said in distress.

"The bodyguard said she suffered some kind of trigger while she was out yesterday. She was recovering just fine, but I suppose she still can't just leave the house on a whim.

Avery frowned as she listened to Mrs. Cooper's words. She had come by to thank

Shea.

When Hayden came home from his trial run at Central University's elite class that evening, he told her he wanted to continue studying there.

Avery could feel that Hayden was very satisfied with the elite class.

If Shea had not taken Hayden to the programming competition, he might still be attending Starry River Kindergarten and living the life of an average child.

She never realized that her son was a genius. Shea was the one who changed everything.

Just as Avery was about to enter Shea's room, the bodyguard ran upstairs and said, "Miss Sanford is here! She said the boss asked her to come see Miss Shea!"

Chapter 489

Avery saw Mrs. Cooper let out a sigh of relief. She was happy that Zoe had come to check on Shea.

"Is Master Elliot awake? Did he say when he was coming home?"
Mrs. Cooper

asked the bodyguard as she walked toward him.

Before the bodyguard could answer, Zoe walked in with a first aid kit in her hand.

"Did Master Elliot call for you to come by, Miss Sanford?" Zoe nodded and said,

"He'll be back soon. How's Shea doing right now?"

She walked to the bottom of the stairs, then froze in her tracks. Avery stood on the second floor, and the women's eyes met.

Zoe quickly took control of the situation. She shot a look at Mrs. Cooper, then asked coldly, "Who called Avery Tate here?"

"Avery just happened to come by to meet Shea about something," answered

Mrs. Cooper awkwardly.

"I see...I thought someone invited her over!" Zoe mocked.

She walked up the stairs, then stood in front of Avery and taunted, "Didn't you break up with Elliot ages ago, Avery? I heard you were the one who dumped him. You're always acting as if you look down on Elliot. Who are you trying to kid?

Did you come here without an invitation? What a joke."

Zoe then walked past Avery and deliberately bumped into her shoulder.

Seeing this, Mrs. Cooper quickly rushed up the stairs and whispered to Avery,

"You should head home for now, Avery. I'll call you when Shea's feeling better."

Avery's expression was cold as she clenched her fists. She wanted to leave, but her feet were glued to the ground and she could not move a muscle.

Would it not be even more laughable if she left after a few mocking words from Zoe? She had come to thank Shea, but she could not bring herself to leave now that Shea was sick.

More importantly, she was not certain that Zoe could relieve Shea's symptoms.

Avery decided not to listen to Mrs. Cooper's advice. She strode toward Shea's door, opened it, then walked into the room.

Zoe looked up when she heard the door open.

Her expression changed drastically when she saw that it was Avery.

"Who said you could come in here?! Are you that shameless? Get out of here!"

When Mrs.Cooper saw Zoe explode in anger, she quickly grabbed onto Avery's arm and pulled her out of the room.

"Come out for now, Avery...Let's Miss Sanford tend to Shea in peace!"

Mrs.Cooper knew that Avery had taken a blow from Zoe, but Shea had been sick all day.She was worried that things would get worse if she was not treated right away.

Mrs.Cooper led Avery out of the room, while Mrs.Scarlet cooperatively shut the door.

Avery felt a wave of gloom as she stared at the closed door.

In their eyes, Zoe was the one who cured Shea.

They did nothing wrong by chasing her out of the room.It was just as she told Elliot yesterday.

Zoe was Shea's primary doctor.

They should see Zoe for anything relating to Shea's illness.

Elliot must have felt the same way she was feeling like now.

How ironic! Avery's cheeks felt hot as her heart ached.

"I'm sorry, Avery. I know you're upset, but we can't drag Shea's sickness on any longer," Mrs. Cooper said.

She felt torn and embarrassed.

"Even if Miss Sanford manages to treat her tonight, Shea might not have the energy to meet you right away. It's better if you just head on home!"

Faced with Mrs. Cooper's sincere words of advice, Avery's final line of defense crumbled. It would only look bad if she continued to remain there.

Avery pursed her lips, then made her way down the stairs.

"Take care of yourself, Avery," Mrs. Cooper said.

She was racked with uneasiness.

"I know you're pregnant. You shouldn't have to go through this indignity, but Shea suddenly fell ill, and Miss Sanford is the only one who could help her... I'm so sorry..."

"You have nothing to be sorry about," Avery said calmly as she continued to walk down the stairs.

"I was too reckless today. I shouldn't have come."

"Don't say that, Avery. Master Elliot would be so happy if he knew you came by,"

Mrs. Cooper said as she walked by Avery's side and helped her down the stairs.

"Drop by again once Shea's recovered. I'll entertain you properly, then."

Chapter 490

Avery did not respond to Mrs. Cooper. She should not have come here. She should have listened to Mike. Shea had her own phone.

If Avery wanted to thank her, all she had to do was give her a call and ask to meet her.

Once Avery arrived on the ground floor, she walked over to the couch and picked up her bag.

At that moment, a black Rolls-Roice came to a halt at the front yard.

Elliot was home.

Avery was chagrined.

If she had come down a minute earlier, then she would not run into him. She was upset enough as it was and wanted to be alone to let out her frustrations.

"Master Elliot's home, Avery!" Mrs. Cooper said.

So what if he was home? Avery lowered her gaze and walked toward the front door with her bag.

Elliot already noticed the Rower parked at the front yard.

He did not expect Avery to come here.

As he got out of the car, his deep set eyes watched as she walked out of the house.

Elliot walked over to Avery's car and waited for her there.

Even with the cool night breeze, his heart felt like it was on fire.

Avery quickly arrived in front of him. She glanced light at him, then said, "Move aside."

Elliot's body stiffened. He did not know why she was in a bad mood.

"Did you come here for something?" Elliot asked in a hoarse voice as he tried to stay patient.

"I came to find misery," Avery responded self- mockingly.

Elliot glanced toward Avery's car. CFyAyJL noticed the black Portia parked next to it. It was Zoe's car.

"Shea's sick, so I ask Zoe to come take a look," he explained, then asked, "Did she upset you?"

"So what if she did? She's your guest of honor, and I'm nothing," Avery said coldly, then pulled out her keys and unlocked her car doors.

Elliot reached out and grabbed onto her arm.

"Why would you say something like that, Avery? If you're nothing to me, then what about our child?"

Avery felt an ache in her abdomen. Her early pregnancy symptoms subsided early, so she regularly forgot about the fact that she was pregnant.

More than that, she did not want to think that there was any connection between her and Elliot.

"Did you come to see me?" Elliot asked when Avery remained silent.

"I didn't," Avery said as she gazed at his handsome yet haggard face.

"I came to see Shea. I won't bother her since she's sick."

She got into the driver's seat and fastened her seatbelt.

Elliot stood outside the car door as he watched her with blazing eyes.

The agony in his voice was undisguised as he said, "What do you want from me, Avery? I wouldn't have to beg an outsider if you were willing to help me."

"Why should I help you?"

Avery did not look at him because her eyes were already reddened.

"You gave up on us because of the secret between you and Shea. Even if I said

I felt like a homewrecker, you never considered my feelings or my circumstances. What reason do I have to help you? You're not the only one who is hurting in the world. Other people's hearts can break, too!"

Elliot saw the glistening of tears in the corner of her

eyes.

It felt like thousands of arrows were piercings through his heart! "Avery, Shea is my..."

He decided to tell her the truth.

Avery suddenly looked up at him. She heard the coldness in her own voice as she said, "Shut up. Don't tell me. I don't want to hear it!"

The tears finally began to stream down her face.

She took a deep breath, started the car, then sped off into the dark night.

Elliot remained where he stood and threw his head back in tortured anguish.

Chapter 491

"Let's go inside, Master Elliot!" Mrs. Cooper walked up to Elliot after waiting for a moment.

She did not know what he talked about with Avery, but what she could confirm was that he never wanted Avery to suffer.

After all, she was now pregnant with his own flesh and blood.

Zoe went too far tonight, but it was understandable.

If she had not suffered a miscarriage, her baby would have been born by now.

Elliot clenched his fists tightly and walked into the living room.

Zoe was sipping a cup of tea on the couch. She placed her cup down when she saw him walk in.

"Elliot, I gave Shea a sedative. She hasn't slept for twenty four hours, so she will need a nice, long rest," she said as she looked at Elliot.

"She'll need to go to the hospital for a cranial checkup tomorrow." Elliot responded curtly.

"I hear you passed out today. Are you alright?" Zoe asked with a thoughtful expression on her face.

"You have to prioritize your health no matter what. Not only for yourself, but for Shea's sake, too. She hasn't completely recovered yet. She might need a third surgery."

Elliot glanced at her. Mrs. Scarlet said, "You can leave now!"

"Alright. Shea's asleep. You should get some rest, too." Zoe stood up, walked past him, then calmly left the house. Once Zoe was gone, Elliot walked toward Shea's room.

Seeing him approach, Mrs. Scarlet quickly said, "Shea just fell asleep, Master

Elliot."

"Go get some rest. Thank you for your hard work," Elliot said.

"This is nothing as long as Shea recovers quickly," Mrs. Scarlet said, then added, "You need to take care of yourself, too. I heard that Miss Tate is pregnant with your child. That's amazing news. Your mother would be ecstatic if she were still alive."

Elliot felt a lump in his throat as gloom flashed across his eyes.

After Mrs. Scarlet left, he sat down by the bed and watched Shea with gentle

eyes.

They were biological siblings, but they looked nothing alike.

Shea took after their father, while Elliot took after their mother.

Humans are complicated creatures.

Elliot despised his father more than anything, but although Shea resembled him, she never reminded him of their father at all.

Both his parents were gone, and he never really got along with his brother

Henry due to their huge age gap.

In his heart, Shea was his closest family. He did not want to lose her.

When Shea woke up the next morning, she sat up in bed and saw her brother sleeping by the edge of the bed.

She reached out and patted Elliot on the shoulder.

"Why are you sleeping here, Big Brother?" Elliot woke up, then lifted his hands and massaged his aching temples.

"How are you feeling, Shea?" Shea blinked and said, "I feel good! I'm just...Really hungry!"

Elliot was relieved.

"I'll get someone to send some breakfast up. I'll take you to the hospital for a checkup after breakfast."

Shea stayed silent for a few seconds as she recalled the events of the day before.

"Don't worry, Shea. You'll get better soon."

"Okay."

After breakfast, Elliot took Shea to the hospital for her checkup.

The CT scan of her brain was surprisingly normal.

The doctor took a look at the scan, then said, "Shea should stay away from anything that may trigger any stress from now on.

Maintaining the current condition is already a huge improvement."

The knot in Elliot's heart finally unraveled.

As they walked out of the hospital, Elliot's phone rang.

It was Zoe. He helped Shea into her seat, then stood outside the car and answered the phone.

Chapter 492

"Hey, Elliot. Did you take Shea to the hospital for her checkup already? Didn't we agree to go together?" Zoe said disconcertedly.

She had driven to the Foster mansion, but Mrs. Cooper told her that Elliot had already left the house with Shea.

Elliot watched the bustling hospital entrance, then said plainly, "The results were fine."

"I see. That's good. I'm already preparing a third treatment plan for Shea," Zoe said enthusiastically.

"I have a new idea. If everything goes well, we should be able to proceed with her third surgery later in the year."

"Can you guarantee that a third surgery would turn her back to normal?" Zoe was stunned.

Even a miracle worker would not be able to guarantee they could successfully cure a patient.

"I'm not a hundred percent certain, but I think..."

"In that case, let's just stop this!" Elliot said coldly.

"Come to me again once you have a hundred percent guarantee." Zoe was shocked by his words.

"Elliot...Are you saying you want to stop Shea's treatment? Or perhaps...Have you found a better doctor?" she asked with a slight tremor in her voice.

Never in her wildest dreams did she expect Elliot to make such a decision.

Could it be that he found out that she was not the one who operated on Shea the first two times? However, if he knew about that, he would not have called her to check on Shea last night!

"That's not it," Elliot said as all the warmth vanished from his voice.

"Zoe, you could have used the money I gave you to buy anything you wanted, but you invested in WADm'[qKMa Tate instead."

Avery's resentment toward him was not purely because he had given up on their relationship in the past for the sake of keeping his secret.

It was also because Zoe and Wanda were between them.

Elliot pondered a lot while he was in Shea's room last night.

The more he thought about it, the more he understood Avery's suffering.It was true that everyone had their own hardships to endure.

He could not undo his past mistakes, but he wanted to do his best to not repeat his wrongs in the future.

After hearing Elliot's explanation, Zoe sobbed silently.

"I'm sorry, Elliot...I didn't know how much you still loved Avery Tate."

"You knew," Elliot said, exposing her lies.

Zoe did not expect him to be this blunt!

"There's no need for us to contact each other again, Zoe."

Elliot used his most tranquil voice to say the most brutal words.

Zoe wanted to let out a bitter chuckle, but there was no laughter left inside of

her.

She had just told Wanda a few days ago that she was still able to get at least a hundred and fifty five million dollars out of Elliot.

Was life punishing her for her greed? However, was she not forced to do all of this because of Elliot? If he had shown her even an ounce of affection, she would not want a penny from him.

The sound of the call ending rang through Zoe's ears.

Elliot had hung up the phone. Zoe burst into tears as she felt her world crumble around her.

Elliot did not need her anymore! She had nothing left. She made her way home in a daze...

It was not until she got to the front door that she realized she had arrived at Wanda and her father's place.

"What's wrong, Zoe?"

Of all the coincidences in the world, Wanda just happened to be home that day.

"Ha! Elliot already decided to stand on Avery Tate's side!" Zoe placed all of her bets on Wanda.

"If you don't deal with her now, you'll lose all hope once that baby's born."

Wanda's face turned solemn.

"Is it that bad?"

"It is! He told me himself that he wanted to cut all ties with me because of Avery

Tate! As much as he cares about Shea, he's willing to stop her treatment for Avery's sake!" Zoe said as her eyes filled with tears once again.

"I lost!"

Wanda handed her some tissue, then said,

"Don't cry. I've come up with a solid plan, but I'm going to need your help."

This time, Zoe did not ask for details before agreeing right away.

"As long as I can make Avery Tate suffer, I'll do anything!"

Chapter 493

The weeks flew by in a flash.

The next day was Children's Day, as well as the day of Avery's prenatal checkup.

At first, she was afraid that it was impossible for the baby to make it.

After all, she had ingested too many medical drugs at the early stages of her pregnancy.

Unexpectedly, the baby was strong enough to hold on until today.

If the checkup goes well tomorrow, the hospital would open a new pregnancy medical file for Avery.

"Is Elliot going to the checkup with you tomorrow, Avery?" Mike asked during dinner.

"Do you have a date tomorrow? I can just go by myself," Avery said.

Mike raised his brows and asked, "Elliot isn't going with you?"

"I don't need him nor you to come with me. Otherwise, people might think that you're the father."

"Get the nanny to go with you."

"She needs to stay home with the kids. Go on your date and don't worry about me," Avery said, then took a sip of soup.

"I already made an appointment. I should be done by noon."

"Okay,"

Mike responded absentmindedly as he tapped his slender fingers away on his

phone.

Less than two minutes later, he looked up at Avery. "Dax-AoK, I said, "Elliot's going to the checkup with you tomorrow!"

Avery put down her spoon, then lifted her gaze at him and said, "Did Chad say that?"

Mike nodded and said, "Elliot probably didn't tell you because he's afraid you'd refuse."

Less than five minutes after their conversation ended, Avery's phone rang. Elliot's name flashed on her phone screen. She left the dining room, then answered the call in the living room.

"I'll wait for you at the hospital tomorrow morning, Avery," Elliot said firmly as if the matter was not up for discussion.

Avery did not want his company, but she also could not refuse.

If she refused, he would use the baby as leverage.

"Got it," Avery responded after a moment's silence.

"Let's have dinner tomorrow night. Didn't you come over the other day to see Shea? I'll take her with me tomorrow." Elliot's voice was low and magnetic.

"Bring the kids along. It's Children's Day tomorrow."

"Elliot..."

Avery began to speak as she prepared to discourage him.

However, Shea's voice came from the other end of the phone.

"Who are you talking to, Big Brother? Is it Avery? I want to talk to her."

"Shea wants to talk to you," Elliot said to Avery.

"I'll pass the phone over to her."

Once Shea was on the phone, Avery pulled back her hostility.

After the phone call, she walked over to the children.

"Do you two want to see Shea? Shall we have dinner with her tomorrow?"

Worried that the children would refuse, she decided to play the sympathy card and added, "Shea got sick a little while back."

Layla showed a pitying look, then said, "Sure! It's Children's Day tomorrow. I want to buy a present for Shea! She's always the one giving us presents."

Hayden did not express his objection. His silence was a sign of his agreement.

After hesitating for a moment, Avery added, "Elliot Foster will be joining us for dinner tomorrow."

The children stared at her with widened eyes. They did not protest.

Avery could not figure out what they were thinking. At 9 p.m. that night, once the lights were turned off in the children's bedroom, the siblings began their nightly conversation.

"I don't feel like having dinner with Dirtbag Dad," Layla said as she pouted her lips unhappily.

"Listen to Mommy," Hayden said.

Hayden despised Elliot more than Layla did, but he knew that he could not upset his mother right now.

Otherwise, Avery and the baby she was carrying might be in danger.

"Okay...Do you think the baby will live with us once it's born?"

"I don't know."

"I feel like living with it sometimes, but sometimes I don't...I don't want it stealing my toys, but I'm also worried it would get picked on at Dirtbag Dad's place."

"Go to sleep."

Hayden only wanted his mother to be happy.

Everything else was secondary.

The next morning, Elliot's car pulled up outside of Avery's house.

When he called her last night, he had said that he would wait for her at the hospital.

That was the original plan, but he could not sleep a wink all night.

Coincidentally, Avery also woke up earlier than usual today.

She got out of bed, then walked to the windows and opened up the curtains.

As the morning sun poured into the room, she followed the light and saw Elliot's familiar silhouette outside.

Elliot was standing as straight and as still as a statue at the front gate of Avery's house.

Avery's heart began to pound wildly against her chest! She rushed back to the side of her bed and picked up her phone to check if Elliot had called or left any text messages. He did not. He did not contact her at all that morning.

When did he arrive? Why was he here this early? If she had not noticed him, would he have waited silently out there the entire time? Avery quickly changed into a dress from her closet, then rushed down the stairs.

When the front door of the villa opened, Elliot's deep set, hawk-like eyes looked over.

Dressed in a white dress, Avery slowly walked out of the house.

Elliot lifted his wrist and glanced at the time on his watch.

It was only seven in the morning.

Why was Avery up so early? Do pregnant women not tend to suffer from lethargy? Avery arrived at the front of the yard and opened the gate.

"What are you doing here?" she asked as she gave Elliot a once over.

His bloodshot eyes told her that he most likely did not sleep much the night before.

"I came to pick you up," Elliot croaked.

"It's still early. You should get some more sleep."

"I can't go back to sleep now that I'm awake."

"Shall we go get some breakfast, then?" he suggested.

"I'm supposed to fast for one of the tests later," Avery replied.

"Let's go to the hospital now, then!"

Elliot was worried she might get hungry if they dragged things on for too long.

Avery nodded, then turned into the house to grab her things.

Moments later, she emerged with her bag.

Once she got in the car, she did not immediately fasten her seatbelt, but said,

"We're going to Elizabeth Hospital."

"Okay."

Avery did not expect Elliot to agree to this so easily.

Elizabeth Hospital was Wesley's workplace, and she remembered that Elliot was not his biggest fan.

Once she fastened her seatbelt, they began their car journey.

It was not even eight in the morning when they arrived at the hospital.

Wesley was waiting at the hospital in advance, and had already arranged for a series of routine tests.

"Let's draw some blood first," he said as he led them toward the lab.

"Did you ask Wesley to come to the hospital this early, Elliot?"

Avery asked softly as she and Elliot trailed along behind Wesley.

"He told me to let him know when we were on our way," Elliot responded in the same soft tone.

"Have you guys been in touch?" Avery asked in surprise.

"We've been in touch for a while." Elliot's answer made her think of Professor Hough.

Time was a cruel mistress.

Some of the things that happened in the past were brushed aside and slowly forgotten with time.

Avery almost forgot that Elliot knew Professor Hough way before she did.

He had given it his all for the sake of Shea's illness.

It was noon once all the tests were done.

Wesley invited Avery and Elliot to his house for lunch.

Once there, Wesley's mother took a look at Elliot, then said with a smile, "You're an exceptional man, Mr. Foster. I'd choose you, too, if I was Avery."

Both Elliot and Avery blushed.

"Don't just say whatever you want, Mom. Their relationship isn't what you think it is," Wesley said.

Wesley's mother let out a bitter chuckle, then said, "With your emotional intelligence, you can practically say goodbye to any chance of love. Why would they be having a baby together if they were not in that kind of relationship?"

Wesley was at a loss for words.

Avery felt uneasy and was about to explain.

At that moment, Elliot held onto her hand tightly under the table. Avery's body instantly began to burn up.

Chapter 495

Avery's mind went blank. She forgot everything she wanted to say.

"They're not even denying it! Hahaha!" teased Wesley's mother.

Wesley scratched his head, then awkwardly changed the subject.

"The results from the blood test should be out by the time we're done with lunch."

Avery nodded, then lowered her head and began to eat.

After lunch, Avery insisted that Wesley did not need to accompany her back to the hospital to get her results. She already felt bad for troubling him that morning.

Wesley's house was near the hospital, so Avery and Elliot walked to the hospital together.

"Why didn't you let me explain earlier? Do you find pleasure in ambiguity?" she mocked.

"We're not exactly close to Mrs. Brook, so there's no need to argue with her."

Elliot walked by her side as he kept his eyes peeled on their environment.

"You might not be close to her, but I am."

"Since you know her so well, you can explain things to her at any time."

When the light at the crosswalk turned green, Elliot naturally grabbed Avery's hand and led her across the street.

"I can walk by myself," Avery said as she shook his hand off.

Then, she glanced coldly at him and said, "I will only admit that you are the father to my child. I won't acknowledge any other connection with you."

"Even if you don't acknowledge me as the father of your child, it's the truth," Elliot reminded her.

"We just need to maintain this relationship." Avery had nothing to say.

They arrived at the hospital and got her the results from the checkup.

Avery went through each report in detail.

"How is it? Is it okay?" Elliot asked anxiously.

"Is what okay?" Avery said without looking up.

"Are these results yours or the baby's?"

Elliot did not understand much about these things, because Avery was now made up of two people.

Avery's eyes shot up as she said, "The baby's still tiny! We can only check on its condition through an ultrasound for now."

"I see. These blood results are fine, right?"

"The results for syphilis and gonorrhea are going to take another week," Avery said as she shoved the reports into her bag.

Elliot was taken aback, then comforted her and said, "It's impossible for you to get those diseases."

"Are you saying I'm a woman of virtue?" Avery said.

"Thanks, but no matter how virtuous I am, I could still catch the consequences of your promiscuity." Elliot was speechless.

"I'm taking a cab home," Avery said.

"You can leave!"

She pulled out her phone and booked a cab online.

Elliot should have held her back and insisted on taking her home.

However, he was stunned for a good few seconds, and Avery had already walked away from him by the time he snapped back to reality.

Her words hurt him deeply.

He did medical checkups every year. He was perfectly healthy and did not carry any of those nasty diseases! Even so, Avery was still suspicious of him! That afternoon, Avery took a peaceful nap.

By the time she woke up and picked up her phone to check the time, it was already five in the evening. She remembered their dinner with Elliot and quickly pulled back the covers. She fixed herself up, then walked out of the bedroom.

The door to the children's room was open, and Layla's laughter could be heard from the hallway.

Avery walked in to find the room in a complete mess! Her brows instantly furrowed.

Layla's many clothes were usually kept in the closet, but her clothes were now scattered all over the room.

She was wearing a white, puffy dress. It was her birthday gift from Tammy the year before.

She loved it, and it immediately turned into her number one favorite dress.

Did Layla choose to wear this dress today because it was Children's Day, or because she was going to meet her father tonight? At that thought, Avery could not bring herself to reprimand her daughter about the mess. She had always known that Layla was a little fond of Elliot.

Not many people can resist a handsome, capable man after all.

Chapter 496

Although Elliot once had a relationship with Zoe, rumors about his love life were less scandalous compared to successful men.

At six in the evening, Avery and the children arrived at the restaurant that Elliot sent her the location to the night before.

Elliot had reserved a private VIP room.

When Avery mentioned the room number at the reception desk, a waiter immediately led them to the room.

The moment they stepped in, Layla exclaimed in shock! "Mommy! It's beautiful

here!"

The room was decorated in a Children's Day theme.

The colorful balloons, lights and flowers, as well as the presents that covered the floor left them in awe.

"What's in all these gift boxes, Mommy?" Layla asked as she picked up one of the presents.

"They're decorations. There's nothing inside of them, " Avery said.

The waiter smiled and said, "Actually, Miss Tate, there are gifts in every single one of these boxes. Mr. Foster was the one who prepared them. They're all Children's Day gifts for you and your children."

Avery was stunned.

Her lips moved, but she did not know what to say.

"Miss Tate, Mr. Foster said to serve the food if you arrive before him," said the waiter.

"Would you like dinner to be served now?" Avery shook her head. DAV'uJK said,

"We'll wait for him."

Dinner was on Elliot, so it did not feel right to start eating before he arrived.

Besides, the dining table was covered in all kinds of fruit, desserts and snacks.

"Alright. Please call for me if you require any assistance. I'll be waiting right outside," said the waiter before leaving the room.

Layla wanted to open the presents, but Hayden stopped her.

"I'm just lookin', Hayden," Layla said as she put on a pitiful face.

"Dirtbags are the best at wooing women. You'd definitely like the presents he gives you," Hayden said.

Layla pouted, then reluctantly put down the gift box.

Avery saw how much her daughter wanted to open the gifts, then said,

"Hayden, no matter what presents Elliot Foster gives you, I can always return a gift to him. Let's let Layla open them! We should have some fun today."

Layla leaped in joy upon receiving her mother's permission.

"I promise I'll just take a look, Mommy! I won't take them with me!"

Avery agreed, but since she was worried that Layla might not be able to open the presents herself, she walked over to help.

Hayden had no interest in the presents, so he took a seat at the table. He was a little hungry.

Normally, they would have already finished dinner by this time.

Avery opened up the first gift and pulled out an exquisite fighter jet model.

It looked like a miniature version of the real thing.

The quality was exceptional.

Layla grabbed the model, then ran over to Hayden and said, "Hayden! Didn't you say that I'd like anything Dirtbag Dad gave me? Well, I don't like this one very much, but I think you would."

Avery opened up another gift to reveal a child's tiara that was embellished with colorful gemstones.

Sparkling accessories like this were Layla's favorite.

There were a total of eighteen presents.

Eight for a boy and eight for a girl.

When Avery was tired of opening presents, she pulled out her phone to check the time. Her back broke into a cold sweat when she saw what time it was.

It was already seven in the evening, but Elliot was nowhere in sight! The children were hungry and were sullenly snacking at the table.

The presents were beautiful, but how could Elliot make them wait this long?

Avery's emotions were a mess.

She dialed Elliot's number, and her call was answered more than a few seconds later.

"Elliot..." she began.

As she was about to ask if he was stuck in traffic or if something important came up, she heard Zoe's coquettish voice come through the phone.

"Elliot, if Avery didn't kill our baby...He would be celebrating Children's Day today, too!" Zoe sobbed.

"Did you forget about our son? He looked so much like you...How could you forget him?!"

A high-pitched buzz rang in Avery's head as the color drained from her face!

Chapter 497

Elliot did not come to dinner because he was with Zoe. This was not what hurt

Avery the most.

The most painful thing was remembering the fact that Elliot and Zoe once shared a child together.

Moreover, Zoe had accused Avery of murdering her child...

And Elliot had believed her.

Otherwise, Avery would not be pregnant with his baby right now.

At this point, her eyes filled with tears. She hung up the phone as all the energy drained from her body, and she had to hold onto the dining table for support.

When the children noticed the change in their mother's demeanor, they immediately leaped out of their seats.

"Mommy! What's wrong?!" Layla exclaimed as her eyes glistened with tears.

"Is he not coming, Mommy?" Hayden guessed.

"Don't cry, Mommy. Let's go home!"

Avery forced herself to swallow her tears, then guiltily said, "You're both hungry, right? Let's go somewhere else for dinner."

The children shook their heads in unison.

"I'm not hungry, Mommy! I'm just mad..."

Layla said with reddened eyes as sadness surged uncontrollably inside of her tiny body.

She had chosen her most beautiful dress to wear today, I even bought a special present for Shea.

It showed just how much she was looking forward to tonight's dinner.

However, they were blown off! Elliot Foster was a liar, and so was Shea!

"Let's go eat somewhere, Mommy!"

Hayden suggested thoughtfully as he was worried his mother was hungry.

Avery agreed, then left the room with the children.

The waiter panicked when she saw them leave.

"Miss Tate, you and the children haven't had dinner yet! Should I ask the kitchen to serve dinner now? Everything's ready..."

Avery stopped in her tracks and replied, "It's fine."

The waiter was confused and did not know what was going on.

Since Avery insisted on leaving, there was nothing the waiter could do to hold her back.

"You can take the presents in the room, Miss Tate. If it's not convenient for you to take them with you, you can leave your address and I can arrange for them to b e delivered."

"It's fine," Avery said, then walked away with the children.

The waiter reported the situation to the manager.

The manager immediately called up Elliot and reported everything to him.

"Miss Tate's daughter was crying."

Elliot was speeding down the road toward the city.

After hearing the manager's report, he asked bitterly, "What about her?"

The manager was stunned for a moment, then understood his question and answered, "Miss Tate didn't cry, but her eyes were a little red. I'm guessing she might cry once she leaves the restaurant... Her son didn't cry, nor were his eyes red, but he looked pretty furious."

Elliot imagined the entire scene in his head.

His eyes instantly teared up.

That afternoon, Zoe had called him to say that she had contacted a doctor who could help Shea.

She also said that she had passed the third treatment plan to that doctor. She told Elliot that the doctor was also one of Professor Hough's students, and that his medical career surpassed hers.

After hearing Zoe's words, Elliot agreed to take Shea to meet that doctor after some consideration.

The doctor was in the country on vacation and was staying near a popular tourist sight that was far away from the city center.

It took about two hours to drive to the destination.

However, soon after meeting with the doctor, Zoe began to break down... She whined about all the energy she spent for the sake of treating Shea's illness. She cried about how Elliot avoided her and treated her like trash despite how much she loved him.

Elliot did not forget his dinner appointment with Avery and the children.

They departed at 4.30 p.m. and made their way into the city. Zoe asked him for a ride, and Elliot agreed since it was not an unreasonable request.

The drive was a peaceful one until Avery called.

The phone call from Avery triggered something in Zoe, which was why she said those things! Elliot did not expect Zoe to suddenly lose control like that, so he could not speak up when all of that was happening.

Chapter 498

It was not until Avery hung up the phone that Elliot realized what had happened. He brought the car to a screeching halt, then roared, "Get out!"

Shea flinched in shock, while Zoe was a mess of tears in the backseat.

Zoe knew that Elliot was speaking to her, but she did not want to get out of the car until they were in the city.

"Don't make me use force, Zoe!" Elliot snapped as his dark eyes glared resentfully at her.

Zoe turned pale from fright.

She immediately opened the door and got out of the car.

Once she was out, the car sped off into the night like a bolt of lightning.

Twenty minutes later, Elliot arrived at the restaurant.

Once he entered the private room, the manager pointed at the presents and said, "They opened up all the presents, but didn't take any of them with them."

A lump formed in Elliot's throat and his eyes reddened as he stared at the unwrapped gifts.

"They ate some of the fruit and snacks," continued the manager.

"You were only a little late. It wasn't an inconvenience at all... Besides, the waiter told them many times that dinner could be served early..."

Elliot frowned, then lifted his hand to stop the manager from talking any more.

Avery was not upset because he was late, but because of the things Zoe had said.

He led Shea to the table, then said to the manager, "Bring out the food."

The manager immediately instructed the waiters to remove the desserts and fruit from the table, then informed the kitchen to serve dinner.

Very quickly, the dining table was covered in a spread of delicacies.

Shea looked at the food on the table, but could not bring herself to feel happy.

"Give Avery a call, Big Brother."

"She won't answer my call," Elliot said.

He knew Avery's temper too well.

She may look gentle and docile, but she was more stubborn than anyone he knew.

He planned to apologize to her, but he had yet to decide how to go about it.

"Avery's mad," Shea said persistently.

"Call her right now."

Elliot could not win against his sister, so he dialed Avery's number on his phone.

"Sorry, the number you have dialed is unavailable."

It was just as he had expected.

Even if she went to her house right now, she would not open the door for him.

Avery and the children returned to Starry River Villa after dinner.

The house was shrouded in darkness.

Mike was on a date with Chad and had not returned home.

Avery opened the door, then flipped the light switch.

The room instantly lit up in brightness.

"I prepared some presents for you," Avery said with a smile.

"I hid them in the living.

Go on and search for them!"

The children immediately began their search.

Moments later, the children were beaming from ear to ear as they found their presents.

As they unwrapped their gifts, the sound of a car horn came from the front yard.

Avery cautiously glanced outside. It was Mike's car.

Mike already knew about what happened.

Elliot had given him a call.

Although it seemed like Elliot was not at fault, Mike was still on Avery's side.

When he entered the living room, Avery asked, "What are you doing home so early?"

Mike scratched his head and decided to lie.

"Chad had something to do, so we called it a night. Go and get some rest! I'll take care of the kids."

Avery noticed the flicker in Mike's eyes. She knew he was lying, but she did not expose him. She returned to her room and shut the door behind her.

Tears instantly streamed down her cheeks as she could no longer hold them back. She was devastated.

She could not get the image of Layla's crying face and Hayden's disappointed eyes out of her head.

She could give her children all the love in the world, but she could not make up for their lack of a father's love. Elliot Foster could not give them that love either!

Chapter 499

In the living room, Layla buried her head in Mike's embrace and sighed, "Elliot

Foster didn't show up. We waited for him for so long... We only found out he wasn't coming when Mommy called him... Mommy took us somewhere else to eat instead.”

Mike hugged Layle tightly as he patted her back and said, “Don’t be upset. It’s all his fault! Let’s never eat with him again!”

Two streams of tears rolled down Layla’s cheeks as she said, “Yeha! I never want to eat with him again! I won’t let Mommy eat with him ever again either!”

“That’s right! Don’t cry, sweetie. If your Mommy sees how sad you are, her heart will break,” Mike comforted Layla as he silently cursed Elliot!

All the other children were having a happy Children’s Day, but their own sweet babies were sitting at home all depressed.

That b*st*rd!

Elliot might think he had just stood them up once, but he had no idea how much he hurt the children.

Mike wanted to take them out to ease their minds, but both children shook their heads.

After playing with them for a while, Mike took the children up for their bath.

Layla was usually the one who was the toughest to get into bed.

However, she climbed into bed after her shower tonight and tucked herself in.

Mike turned off the lights in their room, then walked out.

He glanced over at Avery's room.

She was probably still awake.

He wanted to go in and comfort her.

After all, she was a pregnant woman and different from an average person.

What if she took things to heart?

Mike walked over to Avery's room, knocked lightly on the door, then pushed it open.

The room was shrouded in pitch darkness.

As the light from the hallway shone in, he could see Avery lying on her side on the bed, as if already asleep.

She did not usually go to bed this early.

However, even if she was pretending to be asleep, Mike did not want to bother

her.

He closed the door, then returned to his own room.

Chad had sent him several messages asking about Avery's condition

Reading the text messages made Mike feel even more frustrated.

Mike: (Did your boss tell you to ask about her? Can he really call himself a man? Ask him to come and see it for himself if he can!)

Chad: (Can you talk on the phone right now?)

Mike: (I don't feel like talking! I can't f*cking figure out what awful luck Avery ran into to know such a sc*mbag!)

Chad called, and Mike answered.

"Take a look outside... I have a feeling my boss went over here," Chad said in a relatively calm voice. "His bodyguard said that there was a crash on the way back to the city earlier, so there was traffic. Otherwise, he wouldn't have been late."

"Is this only about him being late?" Mike said sarcastically. "He told me everything. It's got to do with Zoe Sanford."

"He already broke up and cut off all ties with her, though!" Chad said resolutely.

"He isn't going to let Zoe treat Shea's illness anymore. I didn't tell you about this because I thought it was something that he should do."

Mike's rage turned down a notch.

"Zoe called him today under the premise of introducing him to some doctor...

Mr. Foster may not want Zoe to be in charge of Shea's treatment anymore, but if there's any chance of curing her, he would still go for it!" Chad began to plead,

"Please go check outside. If he's really there, can you please open the door for

him?"

Mike put his foot down and said, "I can't promise you that. Avery and the kids are already asleep.

As he spoke, he looked out the window.

Sure enough, Elliot's luxury sedan was parked right outside the front gate.

Elliot was standing in front of the gate. He did not make a sound nor did he move a muscle. His deep set eyes were fixed in the direction of Avery's room as he stood as still as a statue.

If what Chad said earlier was true, then Elliot was not completely unforgivable.

Of course, this was merely Mike's own opinion.

Whether or not Avery decided to forgive Elliot, Mike would not interfere.

He opened the front door, then walked toward the front gate.

When Elliot saw Mike approaching, he instantly turned from a statue to a living man of flesh and blood.

Mike arrived in front of Elliot, then said through the gate, “You should go! Avery and the kids are asleep. You can save your apologies and explanations for tomorrow.”

Chapter 500

After listening to Mike, Elliot turned and left.

Once Elliot’s car sped off, Mike finally let out a heavy sigh.

Shea arrived at Avery’s house the next morning accompanied by Mrs. Scarlet.

The children were in the middle of breakfast when they saw Shea walk in. Their eyes flickered, but they did not say anything, nor did they walk out of the dining room.

Mike flashed a smile at Shea and asked, “What brings you here this early?”

He thought that Elliot was the one who arrived!

“I came to apologize to Avery, Layla and Hayden, “Shea said in a clear, determined voice. "It was wrong of my brother and me to be late last night.

"You don't need your apology, Shea. The one who should be apologizing is your brother," Mike said as he walked over with a glass of milk in his hand.

"Big Brother will come over to apologize later," Shea said as her cheeks turned pink. "I couldn't wait, so I came myself first."

Mike chuckled , then said, "This has nothing to do with you. You don't need to apologize, nor do you need to feel bad."

Shea did not agree with him.

"My brother took me to meet a new doctor yesterday. The doctor was staying somewhere really far away and we drove for a long time before we got there...

If it weren't for me, Big Brother wouldn't have been late."

At this point, Layla walked out from the dining room.

"Is that true, Shea?"

Her eyes were still swollen from crying too much the night before.

Shea nodded furiously and said, "It's the truth!"

Hayden finished his breakfast and walked past the living room. He picked up his backpack and prepared to leave for school.

Shea saw him, then hurried over to him and said, "I'm sorry, Hayden! I really didn't mean to be late last night."

Hayden was not upset with Shea. He shook off Shea's hand, then said coldly,

"I'm going to school"

Shea released him, then pulled out a little box from her bag and shoved it into Hayden's arms.

"This is your Children's Day present! Please accept it."

Mike was worried Hayden would refuse, so he strode over to him and pushed him out the door.

"We have to leave now or we'll be late!"

Once Mike and Hayden were gone, Layla ran back to her room and emerged with the gift she prepared for Shea.

Shea was ecstatic to receive her present.

At the same time, she pulled out Layla's gift. She had bought a newly released hair clip for Layla.

Layla was so happy that she forgot all about the sadness of the night before.

“The truth is I really like you, Shea. I like all the presents you give me,” Layla said as she led Shea over to the couch to sit down. “I don’t like Elliot Foster...

I’m still very angry at him. He broke my Mommy’s heart, and hurt Hayden and

me, too...”

Outside the front gate, a black Rolls-Roice came to a halt.

Elliot emerged from the car.

“My brother’s here!” Shea cried out excitedly when she saw Elliot. “He’s here to apologize to you all, Layla!”

Layla’s cheeks flushed a crimson red. She was so nervous she wanted to hide, but there was nowhere for her to hide at all.

Mike had sent Hayden to school, and her mother was not home...

“I have to take Layla to school now, Mr. Foster,” said Avery’s bodyguard. “Please take Miss Shea home. I need to lock the doors.”

A look of surprise flashed across Elliot’s face.

“Where’s Avery?”

“She went out to attend to some business,” replied the bodyguard.

Elliot’s eyes darkened.

What business does she have to deal with this early in the morning? Where did she run off to?

Chapter 501

After listening to Mike, Elliot turned and left.

Once Elliot’s car sped off, Mike finally let out a heavy sigh.

Shea arrived at Avery’s house the next morning accompanied by Mrs.

Scarlet.

The children were in the middle of breakfast when they saw Shea walk in.

"I have to take Layla to school now, Mr. Foster," said Avery's bodyguard.

"Please take Miss Shea home. I need to lock the doors."

A look of surprise flashed across Elliot's face.

"Where's Avery?"

"She went out to attend to some business," replied the bodyguard.

Elliot's eyes darkened.

What business does she have to deal with this early in the morning? Where did she run off to?

Shea and Layla walked out of the living room to the villa's front door.

Elliot glanced at them, then approached in long strides.

"Layla has to go to school now, Shea. I'll take you home," he said as he arrived in front of Shea.

Shea nodded, then said softly, "I already apologized to Layla, Big Brother. You should, too."

Layla's gaze was lowered, but her lips were protruding in an adorable pout.

Elliot crouched down, then gazed at Layla's face that was the spitting image of Avery and said gently, "I'm sorry, Layla. Not only was I late last night, I even made you sad. I'd like to explain everything to your mother."

At this point, he asked, "Do you know where your mother went?"

When Elliot asked the bodyguard regarding Avery's whereabouts earlier, he had kept his lips sealed and refused to reveal it.

As Layla looked closely at Elliot's face, the nervousness that she felt slowly subsided.

He may be a dirtbag, but he was also very handsome.

"Of course I know where Mommy went," Layla said confidently as she lifted her chin at him. "I have to go to school now, so I can't talk to you anymore. I won't be late like you!"

Her double entendre left Elliot feeling embarrassed and helpless.

Layla clenched her tiny fists and basked in her glory.

In truth, she had no idea where her mother was. Avery was already gone by the time she woke up. She tempted Elliot on purpose as a little form of punishment.

The bodyguard walked over with Layla's backpack, then picked her up with one arm.

Elliot stood up, then glanced at Shea and said, "Let's go home."

Shea nodded regretfully. As he drove out of the Starry River neighborhood, Elliot dialed Mike's number.

Mike answered the call very quickly.

"Where did Avery go, Mike? Don't tell me she's back at the office."

Elliot decided to send Shea home, then go and look for Avery. He needed to know Avery's whereabouts as soon as possible.

As long as he could not explain things to her, his heart could not rest.

Mike had just dropped Hayden off at school. He was standing in the school's parking lot under the warm morning sun.

"Call her yourself!" he said lazily. "Did she block your number again? Ha... I can't reveal her location without her permission. I won't have a place to live if she blames me." Elliot frowned at Mike's spiteful behavior.

"My company recently decided to expand into the international market. I'm thinking of sending Chad abroad to do some recon work. What do you think?"

Mike was speechless. How absurd!

Elliot Foster was a f*cking b*st*rd! He was using Chad to threaten him!

"You won't be able to see Avery even if you threaten me!" Mike took a deep breath, then said coldly, "She may not have gone to the office, but she's working! She went on a business trip. Her flight took off this morning."

"Which city did she go to?" Elliot asked with furrowed brows.

At three months pregnant, it was not suitable at all for Avery to do any strenuous work

Did she decide to go on a business trip this morning because of what happened last night?

She was not an unreasonable person. She would not go on a business trip during this period if she had any rationality left.

“She went to Zirconia,” Mike said as he gave in.

It was not because Elliot threatened to relocate Chad abroad.

It was because Mike knew, even if he gave Elliot the address, it was a place that he could not get to.

“Zirconia City?” Elliot’s heart tightened in his chest as he felt breathless.

“Why did she go somewhere that far away? Even if there’s a customer there, she doesn’t need to go there personally! What were you thinking?! How could you let her go there alone?!”

Mike was not upset at all about being scolded.

“I told her the same thing this morning. I said I’d go with her and look after her, but she wanted me to stay home and watch the kids!” Mike gritted his teeth, then snapped, “She’s always telling me to watch the kids! It’s as if my dignity as a man is nonexistent!”

After a moment’s consideration, Elliot said, “Send me her itinerary and the location of the hotel she’s staying in. I’ll get Chad to go and help you out.”

Chapter 503

Mike tried to hold back his glee as he said, “It’s a deal!”

“Alright,” Elliot responded.

“Our client this time is the Border Security Force. As for accommodation, Avery’s staying on the base itself,” Mike said as he broke into a maniacal cackle. “I told you that you can’t get in there. They won’t just let you into their base.”

Elliot gritted his teeth, then hung up the2e phone.

Zirconia City was at the country's border. It would take a four-hour flight to get there from here.

He did not know what time Avery's flight was that morning, but she probably did not arrive in Zirconia yet.

Even if her plane already landed, it would have just done so.

Avery had gone to a unique place that was not typically dangerous, so Elliot was not as worried.

He could wait for her to return from her business trip to explain things to her.

If he hastily showed up in Zirconia and interfered with her work, she might be even more upset with him.

Once Elliot dropped Shea at home, he made his way to his office.

Not long after he arrived, his secretary walked in and said, "Miss Zoe Sanford is downstairs, Mr. Foster. She said she's here to apologize to you."

"Add her to the black list and never let her take one step into the company ever again!" Elliot snapped coldly without hesitation.

"Yes, Sir!"

Zoe's self esteem took a huge blow after she was kicked out of the Sterling Group building.

Before she met Elliot, she was still considered an outstanding lady of some status.

She could not believe that Elliot would treat her this way.

It was a good thing that the child she was pregnant with before was not his.

Otherwise, she would lose her mind if he treated her this way.

Zoe got into her car, pulled out her phone and called Cole Foster.

"Cole, go on vacation abroad with me."

"What's wrong? Did my uncle upset you again?" Cole asked.

“Ha! I wish he cared about me enough to do that. He won’t even see me now,” Zoe said with a bitter laugh. “Won’t you come cheer me up?”

“Let me settle some work I have on hand... Didn’t you say you gave up on him before, Zoe? Why did you go looking for him again?”

“I gave up on him a long time ago. I just didn’t expect him to take away my chance to earn more money!”

“I see. You already made three hundred million. That’s already a lot,” Cole said, then asked, “Where do you want to go?”

“Bridgedale.”

“What’s so fun about Bridgedale? Didn’t you live there for years? Let’s go somewhere else!”

A sinister grin appeared on Zoe’s face as she said, “You don’t really think I’m going just for fun, do you? There’s something important I need to do in Bridgedale.”

“Something important?” Cole was confused. “Didn’t you decide to settle down here in Aryadelle? What important thing do you have left to do there?”

“I’ll tell you when I see you.”

At noon, Ben walked into the president’s office at Sterling Group.

“Let’s go out for lunch, Elliot!”

Elliot finished up the last bit of his work, then shut his laptop.

“You go ahead! I’m going to the airport.”

He decided to go to Zirconia to look for Avery.

Even if she found him annoying, he still had to explain things to her face!

“Oh? Are you going to look for Avery?” Ben teased. “I knew you’d go to her.

She’s pregnant with your child, after all. How could you not cheer her up?

Haha!”

Then, Ben pulled out an envelope and handed it over to Elliot.

It was a ticket for that afternoon's first flight out to Zirconia.

Elliot took the ticket from Ben.

His hawk-like eyes were deep and vast globes as he said, "Even if she wasn't carrying my child, I would still go to her."

Chapter 504

It was noon in the city of Zirconia as a bulletproof car slowly made its way into the base of the Border Control Force.

Avery sat in the car and curiously looked out at the scenery outside the window.

There were no colossal skyscrapers here. They were far from the hustle and bustle of the city. The only things here were the most pristine beauty of nature and the soldiers that defended the31 country.

"Miss Tate, we're far away from the city here. The environment's a little rough, so you might have a tough time the next couple of days," said the director of the logistics department, Sean Tennant.

"It's no trouble at all. It's our company's honor that you chose our28 products."

Sean laughed and said, "We compared several of the drones produced by local companies and your company's products turned out to be the best in the end. Our deputy director, Mr. Lowe, demanded that we use your drones!"

Avery felt slightly embarrassed as she said, "It's always been our goal to produce the best89 products."

"By the way, Miss Tate, you mentioned on the phone that we could add some functions to drones based on our needs... When do you think is the earliest you'd be able to deliver the goods?"

“We’ll first have to see what kind of functions you’d like to add, then I’ll have to discuss it with my director of operations,” Averyec said.

“Alright. Let’s get something to eat for now. Mr. Lowe will meet with you later.”

”Alright.”

After lunch, Mr. Lowe took Avery out for a stroll. As they walked, they talked and discussed their plans.

The base was massive. After a while of walking, Avery’s belly began to ache before her legs did. She had made a last minute decision to come here, so she did not inform anyone at the base that she was pregnant.

However, now that she could no longer take another step, she had no choice but to reveal her condition to Mr. Lowe.

When Mr. Lowe heard that Avery was pregnant, his eyes immediately shot to her abdomen.

She was wearing a plain pair of jeans and a long sleeved t-shirt. It was not a loose t-shirt, so it showed her flat belly. “You’re barely three months pregnant, aren’t you, Miss Tate? You’re not showing at all! Why didn’t you just rest at home? You could have sent someone else to come here!” Mr. Lowe, puzzled. Avery felt embarrassed to say that she had decided to come here on a whim in an effort to avoid Elliot.

“I’m just three months pregnant now. My checkup yesterday showed that everything was going well. Besides, I’m usually working anyway, so I wanted to come here personally with the hopes of improving our collaboration,” Avery explained after she composed herself.

“I can tell you’re very serious about your work, Miss Tate. Tell you what, I’ll call for a car and show you around the base,” suggested Mr. Lowe.

“That sounds perfect. Thank you!”

At four in the afternoon, Avery woke up from her nap and began to work. She opened up her laptop, typed up a document that included the points that Mr. Lowe had requested earlier and sent it to Mike. Mike replied to her email right away.

Mike: [How much longer do you plan on keeping your phone turned off?]

Avery's cheeks flushed in embarrassment. Avery: [I didn't notice.]

Mike: [Turn it on now, then!]

Avery took a look at her phone, then put it back down.

Avery: [Why should I? I don't need to use my phone here]

Mike: [Don't you want to make a video call with the kids tonight?]

Avery: [I can use my laptop for that.]

Mike was completely defeated.

After a moment of silence, he sent another email.

[By the way... Elliot Foster came by this morning looking for you, then he used Chad to threaten me and forced me to tell him where you were... So... He's gone to look for you.]

Avery: [...]

Mike: [He took the 1 p.m. flight out earlier, so he should arrive at the Zirconia Airport around 4.30 p.m. in the afternoon... Then, he'd be in Zirconia in about half an hour. Prepare yourself! I don't think he'll be able to get into the base, but isn't there a saying in Aryadelle about how money makes the world go round?]

Avery: [...]

The sound of someone knocking on her door drained the color from Avery's face and left her in a daze of horror! Was he not supposed to arrive in Zirconia at 4.30 p.m. later?!

Chapter 505

It was only 4.10 p.m. right now!

Did Elliot take a plane or a jet over here?

While she was overthinking and stuck in a daze, a loud voice came through the other side of the door.

"I'm here to send you some fruits, Miss 33 Tate."

Avery let out a heavy sigh of relief, then quickly opened the door.

"Mr. Tennant specially asked us to take good care of you after he heard that you were pregnant, Miss 88 Tate."

The soldier was holding a bag of fruits in his left hand and a bag of snacks in his right hand, all the while flashing a warm smile at her.

While Avery was touched by the moving gesture, she could not help sigh. So, men could be this nosy, too!

She estimated that the news of her pregnancy had spread throughout the entire base by now.

"Feel free to let us know if you need anything, Miss Tate. We'll try our best to help!"

The soldier put down the goods, then prepared to leave.

"Thank you! I don't need anything else right now. Thanks for making the trip!"

Avery said as she walked him out.

Once the soldier was gone, she shut the door, returned to her desk and turned on her phone.

The base was heavily guarded. It was unlikely that Elliot would be able to get in. She was still upset with him, but she was now beginning to worry about him.

With his bad temper, he'd get into trouble if he forcefully tried to barge his way in. It would be bad if he could not get in and ended up waiting outside, too. It was desolate out here and it was completely secluded. Besides, it was going to be dark out in a few hours.

When Avery turned on her phone, she saw Elliot's missed call from the night before.

There was only one missed call. She wondered if he would contact her when he landed later. She felt torn as she stared at her phone. She did not want to see him, but she could not ignore him if he came all the way out here to find her.

Avery was in a daze throughout dinner.

Mr. Tennant noticed her unusual demeanor and asked, "Is the food not to your liking, Miss Tate? Or are you not used to the environment here?"

Avery shook her head and said, "The food is pretty good, and I'm quite happy with the accommodation."

"Why aren't you eating, then?" Mr. Tennant asked, then added with a warm smile, "You should've brought someone along to keep you company."

Avery took a bite of her food and was preparing to come up with an excuse to explain herself.

Suddenly, a soldier appeared and reported, "Sir! An outsider arrived claiming to be the head of Sterling Group. He said he wants to make a donation!"

Avery almost spat the food out of her mouth.

Mr. Tennant saw Avery's reaction and picked up on a clue.

"Do you know this person, Miss Tate?"

Avery glanced out of the window. The sky was turning dark.

Things were not the same as the bustling city out here. There were no street lights at night. She could not afford to let her emotions get the better of her.

Ten minutes later, a soldier led Elliot to Mr. Tennant's office.

"Did you say you wanted to make a donation? How much do you plan on donating?" Mr. Tennant asked bluntly.

"I'll pay for all of the drones you buy from Tate Industries," Elliot responded.

Mr. Tennant narrowed his eyes, then asked, "Are you here to make a donation, or to look for Avery Tate?"

"I'm here to make a donation, but I'm also here for Avery Tate," Elliot said honestly. "Can you take me to her? I have something to say to her."

"You should've come earlier," said Mr. Tennant regretfully. "She went out for a walk in the afternoon and hasn't come back yet."

Terror flashed across Elliot's eyes. He stood his rigid body up and said, "Where did she go? I'll go look for her right now!"

Mr. Tennant led Elliot out of his office and toward the woods.

The sun had not set completely, but the woods were much darker than its surroundings.

There was a warning sign outside the woods that read: Danger! Landmines!

"We've looked everywhere apart from this minefield, Mr. Foster."

Mr. Tennant then turned to Elliot and asked, "Do you have the guts to go in and look for her?"

Chapter 506

Minefield was self-explanatory. There were landmines buried in those woods.

If one were to accidentally step on one, they would be blown to pieces.

Thus, Sean's words carried a double meaning: was he willing to enter the dark woods to look for her, and was he willing to die for her.

Elliot looked toward the dark forest.

He had made his decision in a matter of seconds. He strode into the forest.

Avery was feeling antsy as she waited in Sean's house. Sean had said that he would help her test Elliot.

Half an hour had passed. "Why are they not done yet?" she wondered. She did not know what Sean was doing. Elliot had a strange temperament. "Would there be friction between them?"

she wondered.

Emily stared at Avery. She noticed that Avery's brows had been tightly knit with worry the entire time she had been here. "Don't worry Miss Tate. Sean always does things within reason. He would surely bring him here later," said Emily in an attempt to comfort Avery.

Avery nodded. "It gets dark quite early here."

"Yes. The weather here is quite different from Avonsville," Emily said and changed the topic, "The child in you is his, isn't it?"

Avery was a little stunned.

"Haha! You're so worried for him, I saw through you immediately." Emily held Avery's hand and said, "If he came all the way here because of you, he still cares for you. In any case, Sean's tactics tend to be more intimidating than the regular ones, so I'm a little more worried that he might not be able to withstand that. If it does not go well, it does not mean that he does not love you. It could just mean that he has a little more self-preservation."

When Avery heard what Emily said, she immediately jumped up from the sofa. She thought back to the time when Elliot had abducted her and taken her to the mansion in the woods. She remembered when she had been so terrified by his men that she had run into a wall.

Avery did not want such terrifying things to repeat themselves again! Whether it was to her or Elliot, she did not want such things happening to them!

Avery furrowed her brows and strode outside.

“Miss Tate, wait up! I’ll go with you! I roughly know where they are.” Emily was afraid that something might happen to Avery. She immediately chased after Avery.

Outside the forest, Sean was discussing having a discussion with Hunter. They were discussing whether they should accept the donation or not. Elliot’s would be donating a considerable amount of money.

“Since you want to accept his donations, why are you making things difficult for him?” Hunter asked.

“How is this making things difficult? This is not a minefield. I’m just scaring him.” Sean crossed his arms over his chest.

“Didn’t you see how troubled Miss Tate looked just now! That man has done something bad to her. I’m just helping Miss Tate out!”

“They’re a couple. They fight. Why are you worrying about them for nothing?”

“What do you mean by worrying for nothing? Once they are here. It is our matter,”

“Hahaha! Be careful! Don’t end up aggravating him or he might decide not to make the donation!”

“Even if he does not make a donation, it’s not like we are starved for money. We’ll be fine! Furthermore, Miss Tate is selling the drones to us at production cost.”

“Then, we should accept Elliot’s donation! We shouldn’t let Miss Tate charge production cost. We should allow her to profit from Elliot.”

“Hahaha!”

They chatted in delight failing to notice Avery’s and Emily’s approach.

“Miss Tate, do you see the forest in front of you? The minefield sign is a fake. The forest isn’t a minefield,” Emily said. “Elliot should be inside!”

When Avery heard what Emily said, she immediately walked into the forest. Before Sean and Hunter could react, Avery had already entered the forest, The sky was completely dark.

Avery switched on the torchlight on her phone and quickly headed deeper into the forest.

“Elliot!”

After five or six minutes of yelling out his name, all she could hear is her voice reverberating through the forest.

Chapter 507

Suddenly, she saw a ray of light.

When she saw the light, her tensed heart relaxed instantly.

“Avery!” Elliot yelled out her name even louder than when she had yelled out his name.

Hearing his familiar voice, Avery felt a burn in her nose and eyes.

“Avery, don’t move! You’re in a minefield!” Elliot had seen the light from her phone. He reminded her of the fact that they were in danger after he had made sure that it was her.

Avery began to cry. If this was truly a minefield, would Sean have allowed him to risk himself? Did he leave his brain at home that day? Furthermore, if this was truly a minefield, she would not have entered to begin with!

If she remembered correctly, Elliot was a smart man, yet why was he behaving so foolishly at the moment?

“We’re not in a minefield!” croaked Avery. “Come here quickly!”

Upon hearing Avery’s words, Elliot immediately ran toward her. Avery’s vision was blurry from the tears. She only saw the light getting brighter as he ran toward her. She seemed to be able to feel the heat of his breath.

Avery raised her hand and quickly wiped away her⁸⁷ tears.

A moment later, he was in front of her.

“Avery, they said that you were lost. You didn’t get lost, did you?” Elliot’s breathing was rather heavy. He grabbed her shoulders a tightly.

“I’m not a three-year-old child. How could I have gotten lost?” She shrugged his hands away and looked at him.

“Since when did you become so gullible?”

“I’m here to apologize.” Elliot did not care that he had been tricked. All he cared about was that he got to see her. “Avery, did you come here because you were trying to avoid me?”

His gaze burned into her.

Though there was barely any light, he could see the tears that stained her face.

“You know why I’m here, so why did you come?” She looked down, not daring to meet his eyes. She was afraid that the moment she saw his face, all her principles and determination would vanish.

“Mike said that you came alone. I was worried.” His palms slowly slid down her arms until he held her hands tightly. “Let’s get out first.”

Elliot picked her up in his arms!

Avery was stunned. Then, she punched his shoulder. “Let me down! I can walk!”

“It’s hard to walk here. What if you fall?” He looked at the pathway that lay before him. Every step he took was stable and firm.

Avery was silent. No matter what feud or resentment she had, it could be settled after they left the forest.

Five minutes later, they emerged from the forest. She squirmed and got down from his arms.

Her expression was dark as she walked back to her quarters in silence.

Elliot followed her calmly.

“Why are you following me?” said Avery as she looked over her shoulder.

“Aren’t you here to make a donation?”

She could see his handsome face in the dim light of dusk.

“I came here to find you.” His tone was firm.

“That day, I had taken Shea to see a doctor called Frederick Lock. Zoe introduced him to me. She said that he could cure Shea.”

Avery took a deep breath. Her eyes were red. “Frederick Lock can’t cure Shea! Stop getting tricked!”

Elliot’s lips hardened into a thin line. He said nothing. “Stop getting tricked. Did that mean that Zoe has tricked me before?” he wondered.

“What happened? Continue!” Avery gritted her teeth and pushed his chest.

“At four thirty in the afternoon, we were about to head back, and Zoe asked for a ride back,” said Elliot. He was being absolutely honest.

“So, you gave her a ride?” Avery sneered. Tears fell from her eyes.

“You gave her a ride just because she asked you to. You’re so obedient. Do you still have feelings for her?!”

Chapter 508

Looking at how heartbroken Avery was, Elliot held her hand tightly and placed it on his heart.

“Avery, it’s not what you think.” Elliot looked into her eyes and said, “I only agreed to give her a ride because she had treated Shea.”

“Zoe treated Shea?” Avery could hear the sarcastic laughter in her heart.

From Elliot's point of view, Zoe was Shea's savior. If not, he would not have given Zoe three hundred million dollars.

Avery struggled and broke free from Elliot's grip.

"Since Zoe could treat Shea, why did you break up with her?" Avery asked coldly.

"Because of you," Elliot said without even thinking.

Avery's heart skipped a beat. She felt like she had tripped over something.

"Did Elliot say that he broke up with Zoe because of me?" she thought.

"Although Shea has not fully recovered, I am already very satisfied with her current situation," said Elliot, explaining himself.

"I can't force myself to be with her any longer, nor could I continue lying to myself that I did not care for⁸⁷ you."

When Avery heard Elliot's explanations, she did not feel lighter. On the contrary, she felt exhausted.

"Where are you staying tonight?" she asked Elliot as she looked at her accommodation.

"I don't know." Elliot looked around and asked, "Where are you staying?"

"Don't tell me you're thinking of staying with me? You can dream on!" Avery saw how Elliot

"I'll rest at your place for a little while. I'm a little tired." The exhaustion on his face was obvious. Other than running around the entire day, Elliot had only had time to have breakfast. Not only was he exhausted, but he was also famished.

Just when Avery was deliberating as to whether to allow him to stay with her, Elliot's stomach let out a loud rumble.

She had never seen Elliot in such a wretched state.

If he had not come here for her, he would have been in his luxurious mansion, enjoying a scrumptious feast prepared by his servants.

“Go back tomorrow morning.” Avery led Elliot toward her place. “This place is rather tough for a spoiled master like you.”

“Come back with me,” Elliot said stubbornly.

“If you’re not leaving, I won’t leave either.”

“I’m here for work, not play.” Avery glared at him before grabbing her key and pushing it into the keyhole.

“If you’re not leaving, so be it. Do you think you can threaten me?”

After the door to the room was open, Elliot entered first. The room was rather simple. Other than a bed, desk, and chair, there was nothing else. Apart from the washroom.

Elliot headed to the washroom. As there was a public bathhouse, the suite did not have a shower.

Elliot looked at the simple facilities in the washroom and thought deeply.

Avery saw how Elliot was standing by the washroom. She teased, “Do you want to leave? Did your bodyguard come with you? Get him to pick you up! If your bodyguards did not come with you, then call your men right now. Get them to pick you up by plane! I know you have a plane.”

Elliot heard Avery’s jabs. He did not retaliate. If mocking him made her happy, then he would allow her to do so.

“I’m not leaving.” Elliot looked at her.

“Oh, then I’ll call Mr. Tennant to arrange a room for you.” Avery took her phone out and was about to call Sean.

The moment she unlocked her phone, Mike video called her. Avery answered the call without knowing why.

“Avery, what’s going on over there right now? Have you seen Elliot already?”

Mike asked.

Avery held onto her phone. She glanced at Elliot with her eyes, silently commanding him to stay in the washroom. Elliot was rather reluctant, but he obeyed and remained in the washroom.

Chapter 509

“I met him.” Avery picked up her phone and quickly changed the topic.

“Where are Hayden and Layla?”

Mike looked sad. He sighed. “They won’t be able to talk to you tonight.

Hayden cried today.”

In the washroom, Elliot had clearly heard what Mike said.

“Why did Hayden cry?” he wondered.

Elliot walked out of the washroom. He looked at Avery with darkened eyes.

Avery did not have the time to deal with him at that moment. She was even more stunned than he was.

Hayden was a child who rarely showed any emotions. He was so calm and often did not act like a child.

“What happened to him? Did he get bullied in school? Did you look for his teacher?” Avery said quickly. She wanted to return home and comfort her son.

“They had a pop quiz today. Someone scored higher than him. He could not take it.” Mike shrugged.

“He can’t accept that there are people smarter than him.” Avery sighed in relief, but she still felt bad.

Hayden had always been living in his own world. In his world, he was the best.

“He is the youngest in his class. It’s acceptable that he is not as good as someone else, but he refused to listen. The more I comforted him, the sadder he became.” Mike thought back to the situation that night. His head hurt.

“This is the first time I saw him losing it!”

“I’ll head back tomorrow,” Avery said.

“Hmm. I suspect that Wanda has planted a mole in our company. When you left on your business trip to the Border Security Force today, coincidentally she left for the slums on her business trip! She even took a team of photographers with her. Hahaha!” Mike’s laughter rang out throughout the entire room.

Upon hearing Wanda’s name, Avery lost in talking to him. She looked at Elliot, who standing by the washroom door, from the corner of her eyes and said to Mike, “I’ll see you tomorrow.”

“Hmm. Send me your flight details once you book your flight. I’ll pick you up from the airport tomorrow.”

“Okay.”

After hanging up, Avery began searching for a flight that left the next day.

Elliot carried a basin of hot water and placed it by her feet.

“Are you booking flight tickets?” He looked at the screen of her phone. “Book one for me too. We’ll go back together.”

Avery glanced at him coldly. “Can’t you do that yourself?”

“My phone ran out of battery.” Elliot bent down in front of her. He grabbed her foot with his slender fingers.

Avery was stunned. She immediately pulled her foot back.

“Elliot, what are you doing!”

Elliot grabbed her foot tightly and took her socks off. He looked at her.

“Book a flight ticket for me.”

His eyes clearly told her that he was going to wash her feet as she booked their flight.

Avery had goosebumps.

“Let go of my feet! I’ll book one for you!” His hand was wrapped tightly around her foot. She felt warm.

Elliot placed her foot in the basin. He did not let her go.

Avery was a little annoyed. She was not used to him being so sappy.

“Where the hell did you learn this from?”

“Let me stay here tonight,” Elliot demanded hoarsely.

“I’m worried about you staying alone. If you’re not willing to share the bed with me, I’ll sleep on the table.”

Avery was speechless. He stared at her with his dark onyx eyes. Her mind was a mess.

Her lips moved. She wanted to say something when a rumble came from outside the window. It started pouring!

Rain pelted her window. The sound was deafening.

Avery furrowed her brows.

She wondered whether the flights the next day would be canceled because of the heavy rain.

What really ruined her mood, however, was the fact that she would be unable to refuse Elliot’s request.

Elliot calmly washed Avery's feet and then gently wiped them dry with a tissue. He took his time.

Avery was blushing. She tried to retract her feet back a few times, but Elliot stopped her from doing so.

The tingling in her feet that bloomed with every caress of his hands traveled to her heart.

"Do you think the flights will be canceled tomorrow?" Elliot finally let her go.

"Don't jinx it!" Avery was desperate to return at that moment.

Elliot picked up the basin and went over to the washroom to pour out the dirty water. When he went back to her, he saw that she looked gloomy and "Are the flights canceled?" He guessed.

"Hmm." Avery placed her phone down, feeling depressed. "There are fruits and snacks in the bag, have some."

Although Elliot was hungry, his appetite had vanished when he saw her in that state.

Avery was holding onto a kettle, intending to boil some water. Elliot took the kettle and said, "Go and lie down."

She listlessly walked over to the side of the bed and sat down. All she could think about was Hayden.

Before Hayden had turned one, he was just like any other kid. He would occasionally cry and throw tantrums. However, once he had turned one, all the crying and tantrums had ceased.

Avery could not even imagine what her son would look like if he were to cry.

Hayden was willing to stay in the elite class because the elite class was not as rigid as the ordinary class.

The elite class was taught using a curriculum that was tailored for child geniuses – which all the students were.

Geniuses exceeded the intellect of an average person. They were usually more self-absorbed, and they rarely paid attention to other people. This was the other reason why Hayden had decided to stay on with the school after the first day.

Avery was initially happy that Hayden had found a suitable place, but she had forgotten the pressure that he would face when placed in such an environment.

“Are you worried about Hayden?” After plugging in the kettle, Elliot looked at her. “Don’t worry, he will learn how to handle the stress.”

Avery looked at him, stunned. “How do you know?”

Elliot pursed his lips. Instantly, a thousand thoughts ran through his mind.

“How do I know? I know because Hayden is my son,” he thought.

Hyden’s temperament was just like his. He was always hard on himself. If he failed to achieve something, he would sink into self-denial and depression.

However, his failure would only serve to motivate him to work harder to achieve his goal.

“Because he is your son, I believe in him,” Elliot said while looking at her deeply.

Avery’s heart skipped a beat. She staggered and lay down in bed.

Elliot strode over to the bed and tucked her in.

“Avery, can I have a look at your tummy?” Elliot sat down on the side of the bed. His eyes pleaded for her to allow him this one request.

Avery’s face felt hot. “Why do you want to look at it?”

He felt as if a ball of fire was stuck in his throat. He said hoarsely, “I want to look at our child.”

“You can’t see it now,” said Avery, turning down his request.

“Oh, then how much longer?” When he asked this question, he felt extremely bitter.

Five years ago, she had stayed with him till she was about to give birth to Hayden.

He wanted to know how her pregnancy had escaped his notice? Did her stomach not grow bigger?

Avery did not know that Elliot knew that Hayden was his son, so she did not think much about his question.

“About five to six months!”

Avery had deliberately eaten less when she was pregnant with her children. This enabled her to maintain her weight and better allowed her to hide her pregnancy.

However, with this pregnancy, she did not control her food intake. She guessed that in five or six months, she would begin to show.

Elliot’s eyes filled with tears. He sighed and said, “Avery, you are right. I’m the world’s stupidest man.”

“Have I ever said such a thing?” Avery looked at him, taken aback. She did not know why he had suddenly said that.

“You said it before.” Elliot felt helpless beneath Avery’s gaze. He turned away.

“I’ve never really been willing to admit my mistakes, but this is a mistake.”

“Everyone makes mistakes.” Avery looked at his handsome side profile. She could not help but lower her voice a little.

Chapter 511

The topic was a little heavy, and Avery found it hard to clear her thoughts at that moment, so she changed the topic. "Could you please wash an apple for me? Thank you."

Elliot immediately washed an apple and passed it to her.

"Have some too," Avery said awkwardly. She sat up with the apple in her hand. "Hmm."

It was pouring outside but silent indoors.

After Avery finished the apple, she lay in bed. She was still conflicted as to whether she should allow him to share the bed with her.

The rain caused the temperature to drop significantly. The room lacked a radiator. If he were to sleep on the desk, he would catch a cold.

However, Avery could not find it in her to share her bed with him. A moment later, Elliot came out of the washroom after his shower. He asked her whether she wanted to switch off the lights.

Avery responded and Elliot switched off the lights.

Instantly, the room was plunged into darkness. Avery waited for him to come over, but... Elliot walked over to the desk instead. It looked like he was planning to spend the night on the desk.

"You have never cared about my feelings before? Why are you pretending to be a gentleman now?" Avery could not hide the anger in her voice. "Are you trying to freeze to death!"

Elliot did not expect Avery to suddenly get angry. He turned on the lights. Avery was blinded by the light. She immediately pulled the covers over her head.

Elliot strode over to her bed and pulled the covers away, exposing her flushed face.

“Avery, you hate me because I ignored your feelings. I don’t want to continue making the same mistakes.”

Avery was a little bewildered. “W-Why aren't you wearing any clothes?”

“I didn’t bring any.”

“Then, don’t take a shower!” Avery was so furious she felt dizzy. “What are you still waiting for? Get in bed!”

Avery had suspected that Elliot had intentionally not brought any clothes with him. It was his way of gaining her pity.

Elliot lay next to her in bed. She was warmed by his heat.

She reacted. This was not only a ruse, it was also seduction!

They arrived at Avonsville Airport two days later.

Mike and Chad picked them up. Elliot was carrying Avery’s bag in one hand while his other arm was draped around her. He was afraid that someone would bump into her. There were many people who were disembarking.

The four of them came out of the airport.

After Elliot placed her bag in the trunk of Mike’s car, Avery said, “Go home.”

“I’ll see you tomorrow?”

Their voices were low and soft, but Chad and Mike heard them clearly.

“What the hell!” They silently swore.

Only three days had passed, and they were already at this point in their relationship? Before they had left, they were enemies torturing each other!

After getting in their cars, the two cars drove in different directions.

“Avery, is there anything you want to tell me?” said Mike. “Why are you so weak?! You had almost died the last time, and you were furious with him, and yet, it only took him three days to wear you down and win you over?!”

Avery rubbed her temples.

“Nothing happened between him and me.”

“You agreed to let him come to our place tomorrow! How could you call this nothing? You never let him enter our house!” Mike said loudly.

“Bloody hell! Don’t tell me that you two are planning to get remarried tomorrow?”

Avery was stunned by Mike’s reply. “I never thought about getting remarried.”

Avery picked up a bottle, twisted the cap off, and took a sip. She said calmly,

“Although he has been good to me for the past few days, who knows if it is because of the child in me?”

Chapter 512

“You’re right! You have to observe him until the child is born.” Mike was suddenly delighted. “Who knows how long his good-person act can last.”

Avery watched him take delight in her misfortune. She said, “He is coming over to cook for us tomorrow.”

“What?” Mike thought he had misheard. “Does he know how to cook? Are you sure he is coming to cook and not to poison us all?”

Avery did not know how to respond to Mike. It was Elliot who had insisted on coming over and cooking..

He screwed up with the Children’s Day dinner, so he wanted to make amends.

He felt that he had to cook a meal to express his apology.

Once they arrived home, Layla ran to Avery and gave her a hug. Layla had skipped school because she wanted to see Avery.

“Baby, I miss you!” Avery did not care that she was pregnant. She bent down and lifted Layla.

“Avery, watch out!” Mike warned her. “Have you forgotten that you’re pregnant?”

Avery immediately placed her daughter down.

“Layla, do you miss me?”

“I do! I miss you very much every day!” Layla said and pouted as if she was about to cry.

” Mommy, don’t ever leave us again, please?”

“Baby, don’t cry! I won’t leave without telling you next time.” Avery was feeling very guilty.

” Shall we go pick Hayden up later?”

“Hmm! Mommy, Hayden cried two days ago,” said Layla.

She looked heartbroken. “If Hayden was as stupid as me, he wouldn’t have such troubles! Woo woo!”

Avery did not know whether to laugh or cry. “Layla, you’re not stupid!”

“I asked Uncle Mike to send me to the elite class, but he said that they wouldn’t take me in,” Layla said, aggrieved.

“Do you really want to go to the elite class?”

“Yes! Hayden was bullied! I’m going to avenge him!” Layla clenched her fists.

Anger burned in her eyes.

Avery was moved by the bond the siblings shared, but Layla still had to improve on her perception of right and wrong.

In the afternoon, Avery took Layla along with her to Central University to pick Hayden up.

When the gates opened, the students came rushing out. Layla could not help but take a few steps forward. She cocked her head, looking for Hayden.

The instant Hayden appeared, Layla immediately yelled and ran over to him!

“Hayden!”

When Hayden heard Layla’s voice, he astutely lifted his head. A few seconds later, Layla pounced into his arms, hugging him tightly!

“Hayden! I’m here to pick you up! Are you happy?!”

The students around Hayden were his classmates from the elite class.

Everyone looked at them. They were all stunned by Layla’s pretty face.

“Hayden, is this your younger sister?” A bespectacled boy asked Hayden.

Hayden held onto Layla’s hand and gave a gloomy nod.

The bespectacled boy said with a blush, “Hayden, I’ll let you win next time.”

Hayden snapped, “I don’t need you to let me win!”

When Layla saw how Hayden got angry, she chimed in, “Hayden doesn’t need your pity! Don’t you dare let him win! He is amazing!”

Avery did not know whether to laugh or cry. She walked over and held their hands.

“Mommy.” Hayden looked at her. His expression was more tender than it was before she left.” You’re finally back.”

“Hmm.”

Once they got in the car, Avery started the car and drove away.

“Hayden, you and Layla will always be the most important people to me. So, when you are feeling down and unhappy, I hope that you remember that we are here for you, okay?”

“Hmm.” Hayden had already collected his emotions a few days ago.

“Darlings, I have something I need to discuss with you.” Avery cleared her throat. She was a little worried.

“Last Children’s Day, Elliot could not come because of some issues. He felt very sorry, so he has decided to come to make us dinner tomorrow.” The two children's expressions froze as if someone had cast a magic spell on them.

Chapter 513

"If the two of you don't want him in our house, it's fine. I'll just call him later and tell him not to come," Avery immediately added.

Judging by their reactions, it was evident that they did not want him there.

"Is he coming over to do house chores?" Layla suddenly came to her senses.

She yelled excitedly, "If so, get him to come over! Make him do all the chores!

Let him die of exhaustion!

Avery knew that Layla did not mean that.

Layla had been heartbroken when Elliot passed out in front of her. She had cried.

"Is there anything you two feel like eating? Let me know, and I'll get him to make it for you tomorrow," Avery said gently.

Layla was a food lover, and she immediately started thinking about what she wanted to eat.

Hayden, on the other hand, had a dark expression on his face.

"Mommy, are you back together with him again?"

"No," Avery patiently explained, "He wanted to make up for his past mistakes.

This is the first time he has admitted his mistake to me."

In their numerous past fights, Avery had never allowed herself to cower before him when he was in the wrong. To her, if he was wrong, he was wrong. No matter how much she loved him, it could not wipe away the mistakes that he made!

When Hayden heard what Avery said, he pursed his lips and said nothing. He would not be able to forgive Elliot, but he did not want to disappoint Avery.

It was seven thirty in the morning when Avery woke up. She walked to the window and pulled back the curtains to let in some fresh air. What she saw was a black luxurious car parked outside her gates.

She thought she was hallucinating. She rubbed her eyes and looked out once again.

It was Elliot's car.

She saw his familiar standing by the trunk. He looked to be instructing his bodyguards to remove some bags from the trunk.

Avery quickly walked over to her bed and picked up her phone to look at the time.

"What the hell!" she thought.

"Did we not agree on dinner? It's barely eight in the morning? Why is he here?" she thought.

"Even if he does not know how to cook, he does not need to prepare so early, right?"

Avery quickly rushed into the washroom, splashed some cold water on her face, and rushed downstairs.

When she went downstairs, the children heard the commotion and followed her downstairs too.

"Elliot, why are you here so early? You bought so many groceries! Did you get up before the sun? Even roosters don't wake up this early!" Avery walked over to her gate and opened the small door.

It was the weekend, and most people saw it as the best time to sleep in.

They had been sleeping on the same one-and-a-half-meter-long bed for the past three days they were in Zirconia. She did not know if Elliot had slept well, but she had not.

“Go back to sleep. I was just going to get Mike to open the door for me,” said Elliot, not realizing how inconsiderate he was being.

“I’m used to being prepared for whatever I’m about to do,” he said patiently.

Avery looked at Elliot and his bodyguard carrying a bunch of things in. She wanted to get angry at him, but at the same time, she could not bare be angry with him.

When the two children inside saw that Elliot had come, they were utterly shocked.

Avery had told them that he was coming over to make dinner. It was definitely too early for dinner! “Is he about to make us all three meals?” they wondered.

Avery was still sleepy, so she headed upstairs and continued to rest.

Hayden was also about to head upstairs, but Layla pulled him back, making him stay with her to “supervise”.

“I don’t want to see him. Get Uncle Mike to stay with you,” Hayden coldheartedly rejected his sister’s request before heading upstairs.

Layla pouted. She stared at Elliot with her huge beautiful eyes.

Elliot could feel her gaze. He immediately walked over to her.

“Layla, you and your brother are twins, right?” Elliot bent down in front of her.

He had not slept the entire night because he had been plagued by this issue.

Chapter 514

Although Elliot had not done a paternity test, he knew Hayden’s character and he saw Hayden. There was no denying that Hayden looked and behaved like him. There was no denying that Hayden was his son.
